And again, he is the rightful disposer of all these things; or perhaps I should say, dispenser of these purchased blessings. Things in heaven, things on earth, and things under the earth are under his control. Of these, in the sense of control, he is called Lord. This lordship he exercises sometimes as an ecclesiastical head or lord, sometimes as a civil head or sovereign, and sometimes as a paternal lord or father. This is the more general headship, and therefore more suited to all his children in all their relations.

All then who in any relation would enjoy a real blessing with a true right must be born again, else they will not pray aright, and cannot enjoy aright. Christ's children may legitimately sustain relations to both church and state, when these are organized and administered in subordination to his authority and will. And it is not likely that either church or state will be so organized and administered unless it is done by those who are his children.

But this suggests other questions, namely, Are those who are now sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, children of Christ? and, Is he the Father in this new and gracious relation? And may those in it be distinguished from those only in relation to God as sons by the method of creation and not by regeneration? To all these questions I answer affirmatively, for Christ is the "Everlasting Father" spoken of by Isaiah. Because while the children by creation fell by sin, the children by regeneration which Christ effects by the spirit are of an "incorruptible seed that liveth and abideth forever." It is then of Christ's will that we are begotten again, and he is therefore our Father if we are in him.

The purchase of all things for his children by Christ was as a priest who gave his life a ransom and the procurement was for his sake. But the dispensation of them is by Christ as a king, or lord, or father, or shepherd, or brother, or husband, for he sustains all these relations to his people.

It is then a misapprehension of the method of providence to suppose that the first person of the Godhead dispenses by the intercession of Christ as a priest. Christ as a priest has secured for our enjoyment "the fullness of the Godhead" by the one offering he made of himself and is now the sovereign dispenser; and hence he has taught us in prayer to come to him, and that in all relations; hence the paternal is used as the base of them all, and we are taught to pray to him as "Our Father" who gives us out of his fullness "our daily bread" and all things we need to enjoy.

It is then in harmony with the whole Word of of God and the forms of prayer given therein, and especially with the form of prayer that Christ taught his disciples to recognize Christ as "the hearer of prayer" and the Father of those who pray; who knows how to bestow good gifts and will not withhold from those who love him. Thus though a lodge prayer was in the very words of the Lord's Prayer, without this idea and acknowledgment of Christ's gracious paternity it would not be scriptural nor acceptable. Otherwise it would of necessity be deistical and infidel; for Christ is either the Our Father of the Lord's Prayer, or he is not included in it. He is either in it as a priest or as a lord. I hold it is as a Paternal Lord. Yours for Christ and truth, J. S. T. Milligan.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

Scribner's Magazine for April, catering to public taste, is clothed in Easter garb. The illustrations are finely executed on the best paper, but are conventional rather than natural; suited to the subject rather than beautiful. President Andrews' "History of the Last Quarter-Century in the United States" sustains the great popular interest of the first installment. This chapter deals particularly with the Greeley campaign, with some very interesting pictures of the notable men who made the Tribune—one of them a group of Dana, Hicks and Curtis taken more than forty years ago. Other episodes are the Geneva Arbitration, the Credit-Mobilier scandal, and the anarchy in Louisiana during the Pinchback troubles. Some of the historical drawings in this issue are striking reproductions of scenes that have not heretofore appeared in pictures. This history is proving of the most intense interest to those who are old enough to have lived through the scenes, and also to those who are so young that they have only heard of them as familiar facts without understanding them. The publishers believe that it will score the greatest success of any of their magazine enterprises. Robert Grant's series on "The Art of Living," which has been so much discussed in the newspapers, deals this month with the subject of "Education," touching in a very practical way the advantages of the public schools as compared with private schools; and also making some very pertinent suggestions in regard to what shall be done with the daughters of the family. While the publishers consider the fiction of the April number one of its strongest features, the Cynosure cannot recommend it. While we do not labor through—nor advise our readers to—the long stories, one of the short ones is, we think, injurious in its moral effect. Andrew Lang writes of "Prince Charles Stuart," whom he calls "The last prince of romance, the last who woke the ancient loyalty of the Highlands." The sketch embraces a great deal of material never before published. A short article, "In Northern Waters," by T. C. Evans, is an example of unusual picturesqueness in prose description. A poem by Pitts Duffield, "To a Greek Victory," reproduces the old classic spirit in verse.

BOOKLETS

A neat pamphlet of 32 pages, entitled "Horse Racing, The Beginnings of Gambling, The Lottery." By Josiah W. Leeds, 528 Walnut St., Philadelphia. This booklet is issued "just in the nick of time." Our Senate has passed recently a bill to permit race-track gambling. This little book shows clearly how that must follow if Christian and professedly moral people lead up to that by practices which are of the same nature. The following definition of gambling is given, taken from a decision of Judge Trunkey, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania: "Anything," he says, "which induces men to risk their money or property without any other hope of return than to get for nothing any given amount from another, is gambling, and demoralizing to the community. All gambling is immoral." While the title sufficiently indicates that the gambling evil is comprehensively treated, it may also be well to say that the subject is handled in an altogether non-sensational way, the first intent being to warn against gambling in its beginnings, against the formation of the card-playing habit, even in connection with what we speak of as "innocent games of cards," and against what ex President Bascom terms the sporting temper. Race-track gambling, progressive euchre and lotteries for alleged good objects are shown to be unhealthy growths from the one evil root several confirmatory judicial opinions being quoted. Election wagering, stock speculations, newspaper encouragement of lotteries, ball game betting, corners in food and grain come in for treatment. As so competent an observer as Chauncey Depew is cited as singling out the gambling vice as that one which is making most pronounced progress the world over, it would seem to be in order to bestir ourselves to wisely check this evil growth in its varied tempers and manifestations. There is a good table of contents and the matter is interestly paragraphed. The booklet will be supplied, expressage or postage prepaid, at the low price of $3 50 per hundred copies. A sample copy, four cents in stamps.

"Not Knowing." This beautiful hymn, by Miss M. G. Brainard; also "Not Changed but Glorified," "Baby's Stockings" and "A Four-leafed Clover," are printed in a simple and attractive form, with red-letter headings. They are published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York. Price, 20 cents.

How to Make Marrow Toast.

Marrow toast is a cheap and appetizing dish. Get from your butcher a lot of marrow bones, from which remove the marrow as unbroken as possible. Cut it into bits and boil for just a minute in salted water, which must be boiling when the marrow is put in. Drain, place in a saucepan, with salt, popper, chopped parsley and the juice of a lomon. Keep this hot and spread it on sliees of toast mado fresh.

How to Treat Toothache.

It is hard to cure a bad toothache of several days' continuance. A hypodermic of morphino only postpones tho evil day, and usually the patient is respectfully referred to the dentist. The tooth should not bo extracted while the jaws and gums aro inflamed and the latter swollen, and it is the physician's duty to treat the caso until the above conditions are romoved.

Always keep a small vial containing the following mixture: Chloroform, gtt. x.; glycerin, gtt. x.; sat. sol. ac. carbol, gtt. x.; morphine, gr. j., with a small wad of absorbent cotton. If the offending tooth has a cavity or decayed surface, saturate a small pellet of cotton with the above mixture and put into the cavity or against the deeayed surface, as the case may be. Never pack the cotton in, or tho greater will be the trouble, but have the pellet small enough to enter without crowding. In most cases this will end the trouble. When the gums are swollen and tender, paint two or three times, two minutes apart, with a 4 per cent solution of coeaine.

Tho patient may have been eating a good deal of fruit. The tongue and mucous membrane of the mouth are pale, with sour stomach, and the next day the toothache will return.

Give ten grains of subcarbonate of bismuth and ten grains of phenacatine at once, and a similar dose before each of the three following meals, with a laxative, if needed, and stop all fruit for a few days, and it will not return. The same powder every two hours, with cessation of fruit eating, will stop the persistent, tormenting neuralgias.

How to Cream Butter and Sugar.

When using a spoon or whisk for beating, take long upward strokes, the more rapid the better. The spoon should touch the bottom of the bowl each time, and the motion must be regular. Another way to beat it is to use a circular motion. In this case the side of the spoon is kept close to the side of the bowl. The spoon is moved rapidly in a circle, carrying with it a portion of the ingredients. This kind of beating can be applied only to a very thick mixture. It is the best method for creaming butter and sugar.

How to Care For the Deciduous Teeth.

The child receives its first temporary tooth about the fifth month after birth, the dentition being completed at the age of 2 years. These teeth should be cleaned with a soft brush and warm water. Tho child usually retains these teeth until the eruption of the permanent set, the first permanent tooth appearing about the sixth year. The deciduous teeth should be carefully watched, and when a tooth shows decay consult your dentist and have it filled. At this stage the filling is not expensive and will save the ehild much pain and trouble from an aching tooth. Tho early extraction of the deciduous teeth often causes the irregularities of the permanent set. They should be retained until the jaw has fully expanded to receive the permanent teeth. Teach the child the neeessity of keeping the teeth elean and pure. The early use of the toothbrush will establish a habit that will, in after years be considered a necessity to health and personal cleanliness.

In cases where dandruff, scalp diseases, falling and grayness of the hair appear, do not neglect them, but apply a proper remedy and tonic like Hall's Hair Renewer.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

The Christian Cynosure.

WM. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1895.

Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain: so the Lord shall make bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.—Zech. 10:1.

Owing to the sickness and death of the father of Miss E. E. Flagg, we miss our interesting New England letters. Let us not forget to pray for our correspondent in this hour of trial.

For the paper "Shall Christians Join Secret Insurance Societies" by Rev. C. C. Foster we would ask a careful reading. It is a good paper on an important subject. The Cynosure will be glad to hear from Bro. Foster again. Are there not others, too, who have information or ideas that they will give to the world through the Cynosure, remembering "he who lights another's torch loses no light." Some who used to write frequently do not write now. God has taken to himself many who were once helpful and faithful. Are there not some who read the Cynosure now who would like to aid the cause it represents by an occasional article? Especially will not each member of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association "lend a hand?"

"YE OBSERVE DAYS . . . . I AM AFRAID OF YOU."

The season of Lent draws to a close. Good Friday, Easter,—and then a season of unrestrained or ill-restrained gaiety and worldliness follows. This is so of necessity, for in the moral as in the physical world "action and re-action are equal and in an opposite direction," except when reaction is prevented by the command and power of Christ.

As long ago, we think, as 1892 the Union Signal, a paper that goes to the best homes in our land, said editorially, "We (the children of the Puritans) have come to feel that we need these Lenten seasons." About the same time the Catholic News said, "Now a Sunday-school convention, representing of course many Calvanistic bodies, has resolved to have special services on Christmas, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost and Good Friday. What would the old Scotchmen who fought so bravely against the introduction of a bag of pipes, as they called an organ, think of all this? Moreover, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Baptists and others, are adopting or adapting the Episcopal marriage and funeral service. The tendency all along the line is to Canossa." Bishop McIlvain said of such things: "They do not put us on the road to Rome; they have taken us there."

Of course the Signal makes Christmas and Easter appear good and attractive to the multitudes of children in those homes, by special stories for those days.

The Puritans received that name because they were "resolved to purify the churches, by reducing their doctrines, rites and government to the simple standard of God's Word."

The heathen origin of the Easter festival is thus very clearly set forth in the Catholic News: "In those primitive times, before the light of Christianity was flashed upon them by St. Patrick, the Irish were not common idol-worshipers; they worshiped the stars; and where they did worship material objects, the mountains and hills were the sanctums of their gods. It was forbidden to light a fire on Easter Saturday while the light of the fire in honor of Baal, the sun god, was still shining."

The extract below is from an article by Rev. R. B. Patton, in the United Presbyterian:

Easter, the festival of our Lord's resurrection, is the most widely observed of all the so-called Christian holidays. Strangely enough, it is the only feast of the many in the Roman calendar that the Protestant churches religiously commemorate.

The name of this holiday is a modification of that of the Saxon divinity, Ostara, the goddess of spring. "Easter" is not a Biblical word. It is improperly employed in Acts 12:4, of our version, as a translation of pascha, where it should be translated "passover." In every other instance pascha is translated passover save in this. This singular and inconsistent departure from an otherwise uniform rule of translation is undoubtedly traceable to Episcopal influence. The Sabbath immediately following the fourteenth day of the so-called paschal moon, which happens on or first after the general equinox, was declared by the Council of Nice in 325 to be Easter. From that time to the present the observance of Easter, whether by Protestant or Romanist, has been in obedience to the decree of this Roman Catholic council.

It is, therefore, a pure Roman Catholic day, all but the name, and that is heathen. It is in no sense a Bible day. The plain truth is, the Bible appoints only one day to be observed—the Sabbath. If we observe any other, we must not look to the Scriptures for our authority. Christmas, Good Friday, Easter and Lent are purely Roman Catholic days, and man's making. The inconsistency of observing these days is not so great with the Catholic church as with the Protestant, for Catholics do not believe the Scriptures contain all the rules of faith and practice, but Protestants do. But if we are to obey Rome's decree in the observance of Easter, why not obey her and observe Good Friday, the Feast of the Assumption, and other days in the sacred calendar? Why stop with Easter?

Less than a year ago a young man in the United States army was court-martialed for refusing to engage in rifle practice on the Sabbath. To-day the Cynosure receives the U. S. Army Visitor, and the whole first page is taken up with an "Easter service arranged for U. S. soldiers where there is no chaplain."

Christ's last command to his disciples was to teach all nations "whatsoever I have commanded you," and the promise following is, "and lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

But it is actually a fact that missionaries in some instances are teaching the heathen to observe these man-appointed days. What must the harvest be?

If they, if we are not careful to obey the command, can we with a simple faith claim the promise? Having let the precious perfume of faith escape, shall we not be left to bow before the empty vase that held it?

FREEMASONRY AND THE CHURCH.

There are many members of the Masonic order who deny that the lodge is in any respect a rival or antagonist of the Christian church. It is probable that many of those who thus say, believe their statements to be true. Some of them are professed Christians and would not, we trust, knowingly do anything to dishonor the Saviour or injure the church which he purchased with his blood. To such persons we commend the following extracts from an oration recently delivered at the laying of the corner-stone of a church by a Masonic lodge. The orator said:

"The order of Freemasonry and the church of Christ unite in laying the corner-stone of a house which is to be consecrated to eternal truth—which is to be used as the outward dwelling-place of the Most High. We rejoice that the principles of our order are thus allied with the truths of the Christian church, that the spirit of their teaching and the benevolence of their practice are one and the same. We rejoice that we acknowledge the same Great Master, that the daily conduct of our members is regulated by the same divine precepts, that we are taught to erect our spiritual building agreeably to the rules and designs laid down by the Supreme Architect of the universe in the great book of nature and revelation, the Bible."

Then speaking of the origin and principles of the lodge, the orator proceeds:

"The manifold duties of this three-fold relation of the Mason—are they not the same as those enjoined upon the Christian church? The Scriptures enjoin supreme love to God and universal benevolence to mankind; Freemasonry impresses these lessons on the heart as the Mason's first duties. The Scriptures urge the exercise of brotherly love and a due regard for the welfare of our neighbor; Freemasonry considers the whole human family as brethren, and enjoins mutual friendship and affection. The Scriptures emphasize the religious observance of the Sabbath as a day of holy rest; Freemasonry is equally emphatic in its teachings to keep the day holy. The Scriptures enjoin submission and obedience to the temporal powers; Freemasonry enforces the same lesson upon its members. The Scriptures teach the duty of charity; Freemasonry obligates its members to Christian charity and benevolence. The Scriptures and Freemasonry alike forbid the indulgence in anger, intemperance, hatred, slander, and every vice which corrupts virtue and disturbs society; they alike enjoin a strict observance of the moral law.

"With such principles in common, let no one believe the slanderous report that Freemasonry is the enemy of the church, or even its rival. If it holds the same principles and inculcates the same lessons, it is because it is trying to make men good and true in all their relations in life, to satisfy the deepest needs of their soul and help them to attain their loftiest aspirations; it is because it is trying to have men know the truths which are the common heritage of us all, and in the practice of those truths to live a noble and useful life. Freemasonry is thus the handmaid of the church: it is helping her to fulfill the purposes of the Divine Master in the establishment of the kingdom of righteousness."

Now we would respectfully ask how any sane man who believes this orator could possibly care to unite with a Christian church. It would be as foolish as for a man to wish to become a member of two Christian churches in the same town at the same time. Of course these claims are false, Freemasonry is in all its principles hostile to the church of Jesus Christ, but men believe them. They say that the lodge is all the church they need, and the result is that the church is weakened while they are destroyed.

ECHOES FROM NEBRASKA.

The convention that was held in Humboldt, Neb., the 2nd of February last, roused the lodge spirit and was the occasion of bitter and untruthful comments in the papers. We print Pres. Blanchard's letter to the Humboldt Standard on account of the important truth it contains in regard to secret societies and the duty of Christians respecting them.

Editor Standard:—I have received from friends in your city clippings from several papers mentioning the series of addresses which I had the privilege of giving recently before your fellow citizens. I shall be glad to say a few words respecting them; and first I wish to remind all friends in Humboldt that the meetings which were held were free to such as chose to attend. There was no money required from anyone; those who were interested in the work and chose to give freely toward it were welcome to do so. Others were freely offered whatever we were able to give, "without money and without price."

Second, secret societies are now so numerous and there are so many men connected with them, so much money paid out for them, that they are certainly matters of public interest. If they are lifting society higher, strengthening the church, and promoting the stability of civil government, they should be befriended by all good citizens; if they are not so doing then they are certainly injurious; and all good citizens should abandon them if now connected with them, and should remain separate from them if not so connected.

Third, this duty of information, while it rests upon all persons who desire to be intelligent, is specially incumbent upon Christians; they are commanded to prove all things and hold fast what is good; to let their light shine that men seeing their good works may glorify their Father which is in heaven. The Christian church is interested in everything which concerns men; the Christian church must consider matters of great public interest and matters which affect the daily lives of men. If lodges are helping men, the churches should help lodges, and if the lodges are injuring men, the church should oppose lodges. There is no reason for criticism about so plain and simple a matter as this. Every honest man must admit that this is the duty of the church, the duty of the ministry.

Fourth, the arguments against secret societies which were used in the meetings recently held may be very foolish, but certainly they can be shown to be foolish if they are so. General statements that meetings are failures or that arguments are foolish are scarcely sufficient. Is it true that members of lodges are not usually members of churches, and that when they are members of churches they are frequently absent from prayer meetings and somewhat unspiritual? This is a simple question of fact, and merely calling names will not answer it. Of course different towns may differ somewhat in this particular, but in general I think it unquestionably true that men who are interested much in lodges are not usually interested in churches, and that men who are deeply interested in churches are not likely to be interested in lodges. The question whether or not the lodges tend to dissipation among members is again a question of fact, and here again there will be differences; but it is known in general that lodge assemblies are oftentimes frequented by those who love and use intoxicating drinks. It is true that in the lodge meetings in this country at this time drinking is not common, but that after lodges are over, many lodge members frequent drinking places is known to all persons who have studied the question in hand.

The ceremonies and obligations of Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, etc., are all known to any intelligent person who wishes to inform himself. The only question respecting these ceremonies and obligations is what their effect is, not what they are. There is no member of the orders in Humboldt who denied that the ceremonies and obligations were substantially as stated. The question then is whether or not Christian people should take part in organizations which have them. I have no wish to set up my conscience as a standard for other men, but the Bible is a standard for us all, and the Bible condemns such penalties as throat-cutting, tongue tearing out, dividing of the body or smiting off of the skull. The Bible does not justify swearing men to be honest with certain classes of men, to be pure with certain classes of persons, and does not justify persons in taking obligations to do anything which is not known to them at the time of making the promise. We are required by the Word of God to obligate ourselves in truth and judgment. It is obvious that the poor, blinded soul, frightened half out of his wits by lodge ceremonies, is in no condition to take a life-long obligation of any kind. The relation of lodge oaths to civil duty also seems quite clear. Should a man who is under secret obligations to a portion of the community, hold an office which requires him to deal with the rights of the whole community? Should a judge preside in cases where brother lodgemen are concerned? or should a jury have charge of a brother lodgeman convicted of crime? I understand well that there are men who put their civil obligations above their lodge relations. It is equally well known that there are lodgemen of another type, and it is further evident that we cannot tell to which class any given lodgeman belongs, until we learn how he does. On the whole it is plain that those who desire the best of homes, churches and communities should favor open, not secret, organizations.

The kind and charitable acts which are mentioned as an excuse for secret societies do not require secrecy; persons are free to perform them at all times and are honored if they do. The church of Jesus Christ is the divine institution for the recovery of happiness to men for the life that now is, and the safety and blessedness for them in the life that is to come.

Why should not all men who love the Christian salvation and who have been ensnared by the pretension of some secret society, simply come out from it and take Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour and the church of Jesus Christ as an institution through which they shall endeavor to bless their fellow-men?

Concluding this note, allow me to say here what I was glad to say in my addresses, that the kind reception which was accorded me by the citizens of Humboldt was an occasion of gratitude, and that I was thankful especially to the ministry and others, who having been themselves members of secret associations, declared their belief that such associations were inconsistent with the prosperity of the church and with the progress of the community in the line of a Christian civilization. For these kind and helpful words I was and am grateful.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mrs. Margaret Stubbs, Vermillion, Ill., renews her Cynosure subscription and adds a kind word. "Kind words can never die."

—John Shuh, an aged servant of God, sends a contribution for the Cynosure and National Christian Association, with an earnest prayer on its behalf. Such contributions are doubly blessed, both to the giver and to those receiving.

—A good letter from Bro. T. H. Acheson, Hopkinton, Ia., in regard to the position of the Covenanter church with reference to secret societies, comes too late for this issue. It bears a good testimony for the truth, and will appear (D. V.) next week.

—Isaac Flagg passed quietly to his reward, resting upon the bosom of his Saviour, at two o'clock Wednesday, March 27. He had just entered his ninetieth year. An account of his useful life will probably be given to the Cynosure readers later.

—R. A. McCoy writes from Nashville, Tenn.: "I never met a man strongly spiritual who was a lodge man," and sends the name of an evangelist who wishes to know more of the truth. We are always glad to know of those who need and are willing to receive the light.

—Bro. A. J. Millard renews his subscription and says, "I am working for the cause of righteousness and truth in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Since all unrighteousness is sin, the whole den of the secret empire is sin, and will end in everlasting destruction."

—Mrs. M. L. Chapin, of Bruning, Neb., subscribes for the Cynosure and writes, "I feel of all reforms none is more necessary than anti-secrecy. Secret societies rob homes of happiness, parents of the confidence of their children, and the church of Christ of its male membership and of its financial support, and God of his glory. It is time that every Christian should put on the whole armor of God and help defeat this system of wickedness."

—Bro. Thomas Hodge, many years a resident of Canada, brings the Cynosure an article on the state of affairs in Manitoba which our readers shall hold in expectation until our next paper. Mr. Hodge feels a lively interest in the discussion, due in part to the fact that the scene of conflict was once his home.

—Geo. W. Pritts, Scotdale, Pa., with his renewal, sends the following encouraging word: "I think the Cynosure is one of the best papers in the United States. It keeps up with the times in exposing the secret orders in every shape—one of the greatest evils in our land—in addition to pulverizing the rum traffic. May its shadow never grow less."

—We are glad to learn from the Firebrand of the safe arrival in India of Victor and Vivian Gladwin, sons of our friend and brother, Wallace J. Gladwin, of Bombay, India. Bro. W. J. Gladwin is well known to the Cynosure readers. He brought his two sons to America some six or eight years ago to be educated; they now return to their father to assist him in his arduous labor of love.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The Lodge Lamp sent to Cynosure subscribers last week had as a chief object the witnessing for our Lord and Master before a much larger audience than we are now doing.

This can be done in two ways. The National Christian Association offers you a weekly paper, the Christian Cynosure, and a monthly, the Lodge Lamp. Hence every one who feels his responsibility to God to do all that is possible for his neighbor has an opportunity to use some of his benevolences in helping to warn against the altars of Cain set up in the secret lodges of our country.

The first proposition is to anyone who sends $3 to this office before the first of May next, with the names of two new subscribers for the Cynosure and five names for the Lodge Lamp—making seven yearly subscriptions—the Association will send the above papers for one year.

The second proposition is to anyone who will send $3 to this office before the first of next May with names of three subscribers for the New York Tribune and twenty names for the Lodge Lamp—making twenty-three yearly subscriptions—the papers named will be sent for one year.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Good Citizenship Day.—Rev. W. Ratcliffe and salary.—Congregational Club —Free home for poor children.—Monetary conference.—Other matters.

The general observance of last Sunday as "Good Citizenship Day," by the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Union, is believed to have been the first of its kind. Special services were held, either in the morning or evening, appropriate to the day in Emory chapel, Keller Memorial Lutheran, Memorial Lutheran, Ryland M. E., First M. P., Mount Tabor M. P., Garfield Memorial Christian, Ninth Street Christian, Eastern Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, Metropolitan Presbyterian, Peck Memorial Presbyterian, Sixth Presbyterian, Maryland Avenue Baptist, E. Street Baptist, Anacostia Baptist, and the United Brethren churches. But the greatest interest was centered in the mass meeting held in the afternoon in the First Congregational church, which, large as it is, could not accommodate all who desired to attend. Every available standing space was utilized, but many had to be turned away. Very appropriately the church decorations consisted largely of the American flag displayed in various artistic and pleasing designs, and the program included "America" sung by the Moody choir, the entire congregation joining in the chorus. The principal address was made by Dr. F. E. Clark (affectionately called "Father Clark" by many Endeavorers), president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and founder of the movement, who had in the morning preached from the same pulpit a strong sermon on "Good Citizenship." He was strikingly introduced by Judge Taylor, who presided, and who, after mentioning that Dr. Clark was born in Canada, resided in Maine when the C. E. movement was born, and now in Boston, said: "Behold our leader." His address contained some cheering news of the growth of the movement, particularly in Germany, where he had at first almost despaired of success, but where the movement is now rapidly spreading.

This week the vacancy caused by the retirement of Dr. Bartlett from the pastorate of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church was filled by the extension of a unanimous call to Dr. Wallace Ratcliffe of Detroit, Michigan. Dr. Ratcliffe will have the expenses of his removal to Washington paid, and will receive a salary of $6,000 a year, with two months' vacation, free rent of parsonage, and $1,000 for the salary of his secretary and stenographer. Although Dr. Ratcliffe's formal acceptance of the call has not yet been received, there is no doubt of its acceptance. He was visited by the committee before the call was extended.

The annual meeting of the Washington Congregational Club was this week presided over for the last time by Justice Brewer, of the U. S. Supreme Court, who positively declined a re election as president of the club. Rev. S. M. Newman, pastor of the First Congregational church, was elected president, and directly after the dinner, which is always a feature of the club's annual meeting, there was an animated discussion of "The Benefits and Perils to Religion, Charity and Social Reform in the Multiplication of Societies and Organizations." Only one member of the club died during the last year.

The Junior Union of Christian Endeavor will, during the coming summer, maintain a free country home for poor children. A house has been leased in Virginia, a few miles from Washington, and Rev. Philip S. Steele has been selected as superintendent of the home. The plan was to keep ten children for two weeks at a time.

There is much disappointment at the announced intention of the President not to appoint delegates to the proposed Monetary conference, nor to commission those selected by Congress, on the ground that the wording of the amendment to the Sundry Civil appropriation bill which provides for the appointment is such that they could only take part in a conference to consider the ratio, and the free coinage of silver. There is a general law under which the President could, if so disposed, accept an invitation to the United States from a foreign country to participate in a monetary conference, and appoint delegates or commissioners thereto; but the impression appears to prevail in government circles that there is little probability of this country being represented at the proposed Monetary conference, even if it be held, of which many seem to be doubtful.

Mrs. J. E. Gilbert, wife of the Secretary of the American Society of Religious Education, gave an interesting Bible talk at the monthly woman's foreign missionary meeting held in Metropolitan M. E. church this morning.

The Washington Conference of the M. E. church (South) convened in Mt. Vernon Place church to-day. *

"The Boys' Brigade might be characterized as men's measures for manufacturing boy murderers by wholesale. The Sunday-schools are being made recruiting stations for the Dagon of War."

REVISE THE CREEDS.

EXPLICIT STATEMENT OF BELIEFS AND PURPOSES NEEDED.

Rev. Madison C. Peters Says Existing Creeds Include Too Much Detail and Are Arbitrary—No Sympathy With New Fangled Doctrines—Religion Wrongly Advertised.

Creeds, written statements of belief, are necessary, whether in politics or religion. No progress can be made unless an explicit statement of beliefs and purposes is put before the people. Show me a man who has no creed, either written or unwritten, and I will show you an idiot. But our creeds embody much that is objectionable, if not false, and that is one reason why so many men and women do not make a public profession of religion. The creeds of our churches are too inclusive of detail in doctrine and Scriptural interpretation and too exacting and arbitrary in their terminology, so that people cannot give unqualified assent to them. Why should we be led in our theological thinking by men who lived centuries ago?

For instance, the Westminster divines met in 1648. They were appointed as a commission by the parliament to get together some sort of codification to compose the distracted thought of the time. They met. They were grand Christian men, good men as ever lived before them, good men as have lived since. They did their work as well as they could. And yet that assembly was divided. There were hot discussions, and the things that they carried were carried by a mere majority, with strong protest against them. Shall what they did constitute the spectacles through which we are to look upon our Bible today?

Through the shadow of the globe
We sweep into the younger day.

We have better methods of investigation and ought to have a better knowledge of the facts of revelation than our predecessors had, and as we acquire a more accurate knowledge of facts and laws a rectification of theories must be brought about. But, on the other hand, I have no sympathy with the new fangled doctrines which some restless teachers of this age would force down our throats, and which are not worth a dog's dying for them, much less a man's.

I am no more a fool than my contemporaries, and if I could see anything better than the old gospel I would willingly grasp it. God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of Christ! I will stand by it as long as I live. Return unto thy rest, O my soul! All I ask is that our creeds be revised, abbreviated, simplified; that the doctrines of the churches be brought up to the level of present needs and present enlightenment on the great question of man's relation to God. And if "revision" did not hurt the Bible surely creeds, which are only human, would not be hurt by being revised. It is true, our creeds are not imposed on our members. No one joining our churches is required to subscribe to our articles. Why not have a creed so simple that our members can subscribe to it?

Religion Wrongly Advertised.

Religion is advertised wrongly. Religion is not a sullen stoicism, nor a sour pharisaism. It does not consist in length of face, in a few melancholy passions, in some dejected looks or depressions of mind. It is a cold, cheerless, heartless asceticism and not the Christian religion which gives man an unnatural and forbidding appearance. Many a man imagines himself very pious who has nothing more than dyspepsia. This twisting and perverting God's word into unnecessary rules for the abridgment of Christian liberty and conduct have done much to drive the liberal minded, large hearted, independent and the young people from the church. We want more joy to be brought out of the world by Christians. The brighter and the merrier the Christian's face the better for the cause of Christ.

We want more joy in our religion. It is high time we cease singing:

Look how we grovel here below,
Fond of these trifling toys.
Our souls can neither fly nor go
To reach eternal joys.

Is Christianity the refrain of a lost cause? Or is it not the proclamation of a grand triumph?

Aimless Women.

The greatest defect in our social system is the aimless way in which girls are brought up. Nine-tenths of them are prepared in neither body nor mind for the lofty duties and serious responsibilities which marriage implies, and marriage in consequence has been brought down to a low, sensual plane. Let our girls be brought up to have their regular daily domestic duties, let idleness be forbidden them and let every woman be clothed with the dignity of a useful life. The great secret of domestic tranquillity lies in a good square meal. Owen Meredith says:

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience; we may live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books,
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love—what is passion but repining?
But where is the man that can live without dining?

With Dr. Holland we believe that there is but one cure for many of our social evils, and that is "universal housekeeping." No hotel or boarding house, however pleasant, can supply the want created by an instinctive heart longing for some place, "be it ever so lowly," which can be called—our home.

A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there,
Which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 7. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Things to be consecrated.—Ezra iii, 1-7.

The children of Israel have returned 42,000 strong from the captivity of Babylon. Their first concern was to build for themselves houses, or to rebuild dilapidated buildings to make them fit for habitation. This done, they lost no time in repairing as one man to Jerusalem to re-establish their ancient worship and to offer sacrifices to their God, to consecrate themselves and their all to Him again as in the days of old. Let us learn from the topic:

1. All things should be consecrated to God. This is certainly the teaching of Ez. iii, 1-7. The people observed all the feasts and offerings that God had consecrated or enjoined, each one typifying the consecration of something to God. They also gave of their money that the temple might be rebuilt and of their substance for the same purpose. All things should be consecrated to God. Entire consecration is the only acceptable sacrifice that can be made unto Him. Our bodies, our souls, our possessions, our time, our talents, God requires and expects them all of us.

2. The reasonableness of entire consecration. It is reasonable because we ourselves and all that we have belong to God, and in requiring them of us He asks only what is His own. Justice gives to all their own. It is the doctrine of the Bible throughout that all things belong to God. This is applied to ourselves. "Ye are not your own," says Paul to the Corinthians, "for ye are bought with a price. Therefore glorify God in your body and your spirit, which are God's." Our money and our possessions are God's. "The gold is mine, the silver is mine, saith the Lord." "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof." Talents and abilities and positions belong to God, for He gave them to us. It is He that maketh one an apostle, another a prophet, another a pastor or an evangelist. It is He also that exalteth men to positions of honor and influence. All these things are God's. We are simply His stewards, holding them in trust. To consecrate them entirely to Him, therefore, is simply paying back to Him what belongs to Him, which all must admit to be just and reasonable.

3. Some characteristics of entire consecration. The sacrifices were voluntary. It was unrestrained, spontaneous and from the prompting of their inward piety. Thus we should consecrate all things to God willingly and voluntarily. It was also a continual and regular sacrifice. Entire consecration should be once for all. If we were perfect, it could be, but taking our imperfect natures into consideration it is necessary for us to rededicate and reconsecrate ourselves to God.

Entire consecration is the sum and substance of Christianity. It is for us to live and yet not live, but for Christ to live in us. When we can say that of ourselves, we are consecrated to God. Can we say it?

Bible Readings.—Gen. xxviii, 20-22; Lev. xxvii, 30; I Chron. xxix, 5-7; II Chron. xxxi, 5, 6; Mal. iii, 8-12; Prov. iii, 9, 10; Mic. iv, 13; Math. xxv, 14-30; Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. vi, 20; II Cor. viii, 5; ix, 6-8; Gal. ii, 20; Eph. v, 15, 16; Phil. i, 21.

No Sunday Sessions.

The coming international Christian Endeavor convention will close on Monday, July 15, instead of Sunday, July 14. Instead of making Sunday, as heretofore, the great closing day, it has been decided to close Mechanics' hall and the two tents upon that day, and the convention as a convention will not be in session at all upon that Sabbath day.

The pulpits of Boston and suburbs will no doubt be occupied by visiting clergymen and laymen. The regular church services, the Sunday schools, the missions and the Endeavor prayer meetings will be the great rallying points for all visiting and resident delegates. Please note the change. Upon Monday night the closing meetings will be held with the great consecration meetings.

This we believe is a wise plan, and the various state and district Christian Endeavor conventions will very many of them adopt the plan which will be inaugurated for the first time at any international convention. The dates of the Boston convention are July 10 to 15, without sessions on Sunday, the 14th.—J. Willis Baer.

Brooklyn Women and Their Ways.

"The women of Brooklyn," said Miss Emma Trapper, the well known author and lecturer of that city, "are to be compared with those of Philadelphia rather than those of New York. Like the former, the population is strongly American, while the latter is a polyglot of a very extraordinary character. In their intellectual development they have steered a half way course between the two. They take their tone from a very numerous and important social element composed of graduates from women's colleges and other institutes of learning rather than from leaders whose chief claim to consideration is the possession of great wealth.

"They have clubs, study classes and lecture entertainments in great numbers. Nearly all of their organizations may be safely styled studious, literary and intellectual, even where they are not profoundly learned. Their health association displays great political ability, social tact and a deep knowledge of all the principles which make a room, a house or even a city safe and habitable.

"Their woman's club, which has long been a feature of its social life, is largely composed of accomplished women and is run upon an intellectual basis of which anybody might be proud. Their views in regard to modern education are reflected by the management of the Pratt institute, the Brooklyn institute and other smaller organizations. There is hardly a topic of great scientific, artistic or political interest but what is the subject of study by some club or society."

Great Danger of Damp Linen.

Damp linen is sufficient to account for frequent colds, consumption and premature death of a whole family, and where the mischief does not take that direction it is developed in the form of a rheumatism, which once set in from that cause is generally incurable. All body linen, shortly before putting on, should be made dry by a good fire. Whenever that is impossible it is a good plan to put the linen between the blankets of your bed all night in a position to get plenty of heat. Those who have experienced no signal evidence of the mischief of damp linen are apt to be careless on the subject, but the carelessness will inevitably entail its punishment, which is likely to accumulate insidiously until it is too late.

One Noble Woman's Work.

The wife of Charles Stedman Hanks of Manchester, Mass., was Miss Clarine Shumway of Cincinnati. Mrs. Hanks inherited a large fortune from her mother, a goodly portion of which she devotes to charity. It will be remembered that it was she who founded the Visiting Nurses' association of Chicago. Mrs. Hanks has a "home for convalescent children" on the grounds of her beautiful home at Manchester-by-the-Sea, where the little ones are cared for by the best trained nurses and have all the comforts and pleasures of wholesome country life.

Watch the Outgo.

The first step toward keeping clear of debt is to know what one's income is. The next is to plan one's expenditures so that they will also fall within the amount of the income. It has been so frequently observed that not large fortunes, but modest wants, constituted prosperity that the remark is a trifle wearisome. Nevertheless, old as it is, the statement deserves more respect than that usually accorded to antiquities of literature. A woman with an income of $50 a week who spends $55 is poorer than a woman who, receiving $8, lives on $6.

Mustard For Children.

A mustard footbath for children is made by the addition of a tablespoonful of mustard to every gallon of hot water. The water should reach to the knee, and both the tub and patient should be well covered with a blanket. The immersion should last from five to ten minutes, according to the effects desired. When the necessary time has elapsed, withdraw one foot, dry it and envelop it in a dry blanket; then treat the other in the same way. Next replace the clothing, wrap the child in a blanket and put him to bed.

Club Women In London.

Women's club life in London is very luxurious. The Green Park is the most exclusive, admitting as its members only those ladies who may attend her majesty's drawing room. The Albermarle and the Alexandria also draw the social line quite sharply. The Writers' club, the Association of Women Journalists and the University club are for the use of the learned set, who are many of them active workers, either in literature or for philantropy. These are far less expensive clubs to belong to than the others.

To Clean the Chandelier.

I once saw a friend of mine trying to clean a gas chandelier with soap and water. She had spent a long time in doing so, but it seemed very little better for the labor. I suggested to her to go over it again with a bit of cloth soaked in parraffin oil. The result surprised her, as the chandelier looked quite new again. Paraffin readily dissolves the sticky matter deposited on the gas pendants without injuring the lacquer. Of course it ought to be wiped dry afterward with a clean cloth.

Simple Justice.

Not long before the decease of the late Phillips Brooks the worthy bishop signed a petition for woman suffrage. Some of his friends were disturbed when they heard of it and asked if it were so. "Yes," he said, with great earnestness, "I did sign that petition, and I should be glad to sign such a petition every day of my life." His definition of the claim of women to be permitted to vote puts the whole case in a form as true as brief. "It is," said he, "justice—simple justice."—Salem Observer.

Ascendancy of the Young Married Woman.

Among the social phenomena which Mrs. Van Rensselaer observes is the recognition of the ascendancy which the young married woman has gained in point of social popularity over her debutante sister. This has operated for good in more than one way, Mrs. Van Rensselaer thinks. "Nay, the youthful matron has actually captured the girl's right to the first place in society, and she does not yield what she has achieved even when the adjective no longer fits her. Of course there is a great gain in this, for social talents, like other gifts, must be developed as well as born, and a reflex part of the gain already shows in the improvement of the girl herself. Her manners have greatly bettered; she dresses more attractively than ever, because more appropriately; she thinks more about her mind and her intellectual tastes—indeed, just now her ambition in this respect hardly takes enough account of the boundaries prescribed by her sex and age, and, as was not formerly the ease, she continues to improve as she grows older."

Talk at Dinner.

"Talk at dinner, the one enduring element of the ceremony," said an English writer not long ago, "can never reach its full radiance without women. A womanless dinner may not be quite so dismal as a night without stars or a desert without water, but it may fairly be compared to a tree without leaves, to a sea without ships or to a meadow without buttercups."

Is It So?

"One very big reason why country girls grow old faster than city ones, despite all their advantages, is because they are so much more in the habit of washing the face with cold water. That hardens and roughens the skin. It has the effect that any exposure has upon almost any surface." So spoke an able dermatologist.

Christian Endeavor Jottings.

The Brooklyn Navy Yard society recently observed its second anniversary. Nearly 200 sailors were present.

The Admiral Foote Floating society has been organized at the naval training station at Newport, R. I.

At the meeting of the national Christian Endeavor body at Leicester, England, the badge banner was unfurled for the first time on an English platform.

Christian Endeavor is making vigorous advances in Great Britain. One thousand and sixty-seven societies are now registered.

The Methodist New Connection, England, has greatly complimented its Endeavor societies by calling upon them to raise £1,000 for foreign missions as their centenary gift, this church being 100 years old in 1897.

Active steps have been taken to secure the amalgamation of the Christian Endeavor societies and the Epworth leagues in China, with every prospect of success.

It is expected that the 1895 New York state convention to be held in Brooklyn will be the largest yet held by the state union and may equal the international convention at St. Louis.

A Young People's church in Los Angeles is the aim of the societies among the United Brethren in Christ.

The Juniors of the Point St. Charles Congregational society of Montreal are frequently taken in delegations to visit the sick and poor of the city by the district Bible women. Then the Juniors report their experiences to the society.

They who count themselves too holy to do common work in the Master's kingdom ought to be disrobed in disgrace.

An office for the sale of Christian Endeavor literature has been opened in Sydney.

A good name for the Christian Endeavor pledge is "Our Touchstone."

The Reformed Church society (German) of Cleveland has taken a share in the stock company that has sent Rev. S. S. Snyder to Japan as a missionary and is supporting him there.

Rev. J. E. Newell, the Christian Endeavor superintendent of the South Sea islands, writes that as yet the Samoan societies are not united.

In the Tokelau islands, in the South seas, there is a flourishing society on the island of Takaofo. It numbers 56 members, the entire population being only 264.

The Trinity Reformed society, York, Pa., recently raised $50 for mission work in Japan at one meeting.

There are 77 societies in Alabama, 9 being juniors.

There are now 507 societies in the colony of Victoria, N. S. W., with about 16,038 members. These are divided among ten denominations, the Wesleyans leading with more than twice the number of societies in any other church.

A Methodist Protestant Endeavorer of a certain town in Pennsylvania, being thoroughly in earnest, recently made a gift to his society of the money he had saved by shaving himself.

THE DRINK PROBLEM.

Investigation Now In Progress by Prominent Scientists.

The committee of 50 prominent scientists, associated in February, 1893, under the Sociological society of New York city, for scientific investigation of problems relative to the liquor question, is now engaged in active work. The chairman is Seth Low, president of Columbia college; vice president, Charles Dudley Warner; secretary, Professor F. G. Peabody, D. D., of Harvard university. Subcommittees are organized as follows: On the physiological and pathological aspect of the drink problem, Dr. J. S. Billings of the United States Medical library, Washington, chairman; on the legislative aspect, President C. W. Eliot, LL. D., of Harvard university, chairman; on the ethical aspect, Colonel Jacob L. Greene of Hartford, chairman; on the relations to economic conditions, poverty and crime, General Francis A. Walker, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, chairman; on finance, William Bayard Cutting of New York, chairman. Some of the most prominent professors, clergymen and economists of the country are on this committee. The work is purely voluntary and carried on at the expense of the members.

Circulars have been sent to men prominent in business, philanthropy, finance, arts, science and pedagogy and to 500 conspicuous brain workers for confidential replies to the following questions:

1. Age. 2. Occupation. 3. Are you a total abstainer? 4. If so, have you always been so? 5. Do you drink spirits, wine or beer occasionally as a social function, but not daily? 6. Do you drink spirits, wine or beer every day as a matter of habit? If so, please state the kind and amount of liquor thus consumed. (If affirmative answers are given to either of the last two questions, please state whether any particular form of alcoholic drink is in your case found to be specially desirable or undesirable.) 7. Are you aware of any chronic disturbance of your health, and, if so, what is its nature? 8. Give any facts derived from your personal experience which will throw light on the problems under investigation.

The report of the general committee is expected about the end of the year. —New York Voice.

DIMINISHES WILL POWER.

One of the Effects of Alcoholic Poison on the Human System.

"There goes a Christian" is what the Mohammedan says when he sees a drunken man. This is natural, because no true follower of the faith of Mohammed ever uses alcohol in any form.

And yet what a reflection this is on a great Christian nation! Very few people realize that the people of the United States spend enough money every year for intoxicating liquors, which simply deprive them of their manhood and intellect, to pay all of the expenses of the goverment without a cent of taxation. Why is this? Simply because the people who use intoxicating liquors or any malt beverages fail to appreciate the fact that they contain the poison alcohol. It is the gradual introduction of this insidious poison into the system which gives a man an uncontrollable appetite for its effects, and every man will have it if he uses alcohol in any form long enough or often enough. The alcohol will change the type of his nerve cells, and he will suffer from alcoholism, a disease which is marked by an appetite for stimulants and a diminished will power. And then when the man wants to stop he can't, because he is in the power of the disease.—Kansas City Times.

Alcohol Is Not a Food.

Dr. L. A. Klein, a French staff surgeon, in lecturing on the effects of the use of alcohol during the siege of Paris by the Germans, is reported in Gustafson's work as saying:

"We drank because we had nothing to eat. We found most decidedly that alcohol was no substitute for bread and meat. We also found that it was not a substitute for coals. We had plenty of alcohol, but it did not make us warm. Let me tell you there is nothing will make you feel the cold more, nothing that will make you feel the dreadful sense of hunger more, than alcohol."

Dr. W. Richardson, in his "Ten Lectures on Alcohol," says:

"All the evidence of a general kind which can be gathered points to the uselessness, for man, of such an artificial agent as alcohol."

Alcohol Perverts the Moral Sense.

Dr. Norman Kerr relates the following incident in proof of his assertion that alcohol perverts the moral sense and develops a narcomaniac mendacity: She was a strong minded, energetic woman, aged 69, active in body and highly intellectual in her tastes and studies. She was the widow of a medical man and was the possessor of ample means. She never had a child, but a relative resided with her as companion. She partook of but one glass of port at dinner. At the conclusion of that meal she retired to her room and did not appear until the following noon. She always declared that she was most abstemious, but regularly every night she was drunk, drinking 1½ pints of brandy. This was not discovered till, on an alarm causing her to turn out very late one night, her condition was apparent.

Alcohol's Evil Influence.

The more constantly alcohol is present in the system the more quickly does it ruin the nervous system, the liver, kidneys, bladder, blood vessels and heart. The man who drinks two or three quarts of beer or wine a day, but is never "under the influence of liquor" in his whole life, is much more certain to feel the evil influence of alcohol upon his system than he who does not touch liquor for two or three months and then gets upon "a whisky drunk" which lasts for several days or weeks. Occasional excess in anything injurious is not so detrimental as constant indulgence.—Dr. Frank H. Wade.

Intoxicating liquor has been tabooed at Toynbee Hall, University settlement, in London.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 14.

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. xv, 3-14 (An Easter Lesson)—Memory Verses, 12-14. Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

3. "For I delivered unto you, first of all, that which I also received—how that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures." Various sections of this epistle are easily recognized by the words "now concerning" or "now as touching" (chapters vii, 1; viii, 1; xii, 1; xvi, 1). The section in which we find our lesson begins with xii, 1, and concerns the diversities of gifts which exist in the one body of Christ, the church, showing the supremacy of love and exhorting to be "always abounding in the work of the Lord (xv, 58).

4. "And that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures." The death and burial and resurrection of Christ, which constitute the consummation of His finished work and may be summarized by the phrase "His blood," were plainly foretold and may be readily seen by anointed eyes in Ps. xvi and xxiii, Isa. lviii and elsewhere.

5. "And that He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve." On resurrection day He was seen on five different occasions—first by Mary Magdalene, then by the other women, after that by the two who walked to Emmaus, also by Peter, and in the evening by the twelve, as they were called, but that evening Thomas was not present, and Judas Iscariot had gone to his own place. See Luke xxiv, 33, 34; John xx, 24. That He should honor Peter with a special appearance, and also with a special message (Mark xvi, 7), should be a matter of special interest to any one who may have, through temptation, wandered away.

6. "After that He was seen of above 500 brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep." This must have been the largest number to which He appeared at one time and may have been in Galilee or on the mount of the ascension, probably the former. If two or three witnesses could establish a matter, such a company ought to make it very sure. We have no record of His ever appearing after the resurrection and before the ascension to any but brethren—that is, believers—and when He comes again, as believers only saw Him ascend, so only believers will meet Him on His way (I Thess. iv, 16, 17).

7. "After that He was seen of James, then of all the apostles." We would not have known of this special appearance to James if Paul had not told us, and it may be that both Peter and James talked with Paul of these special appearings when he saw them during his visit to Jerusalem (Gal. i, 18, 19). There were at least 10 or 11 appearances, including the one at the ascension; then after the ascension He was seen by Stephen and Paul and John. That He rose from the dead and is now at the right hand of the Father is a fact well established.

8. "And, last of all, He was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time." This was the last appearance up to Paul's time, for the appearance to John in Patmos was full 30 years later. I wonder why Paul did not mention the appearance to Stephen. Perhaps it was too sore a recollection. Paul speaks of his conversion when the Lord appeared to him as a birth before the time, and also a pattern of those who should hereafter believe (I Tim. i, 16), for the conversion of the nation of Israel will be when they look upon Him at His coming in glory. We are now saved by looking to Him, not upon Him. Compare Isa. xlv, 22, and Zech. xii, 10.

9. "For I am the least of the apostles that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God." Paul's growth in his own estimation was true growth in grace. It was very lowly to call himself "least of the apostles." It was more lowly, at a later period, to speak of himself as "less than the least of all saints" (Eph. iii, 8), but it was lowest of all, at a still later period, to call himself "the chief of sinners" (I Tim. i, 15). This is the work of the Spirit to magnify the Lord in all His loveliness and to increasingly expose the hideousness of the natural man. May we all grow thus.

10. "But by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace, which was bestowed upon me, was not in vain, but I labored more abundantly than they all, yet not I, but the grace of God, which was with me." Paul was forever magnifying the grace of God, by which we are saved, in which we stand, which is yet to be more fully revealed, and which Paul felt was in his case "exceeding abundant" (Eph. ii, 8; Rom. v, 2; I Pet. i, 13; I Tim. i, 14). This abundant grace constrained him to abundant labors, but he wholly renounces all thought of his doing anything, and, as in Gal. ii, 20, emphasizes his "not I, but Christ," "not I, but the grace of God."

11. "Therefore, whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed." Whether it was Paul or Apollos or Cephas, they were only ministers by whom the Lord wrought (I Cor. iii, 5-7), so that the members cannot and must not glory, only in the Lord, for no flesh shall glory in His presence. Let us glory only in the Lord.

12. "Now, if Christ be preached that He rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" The Sadducees did not believe in any resurrection (Luke xx, 27). Some gentiles mocked at the idea (Acts xvii, 32); but, worse still, some professing Christians of our time say that at death we get our resurrection body, and they have no further use for the body that is laid in the grave. Yet it is plainly written that all that are in their graves shall come forth. They that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, and when Jesus rose from the dead many bodies of the saints which slept arose and came out of the graves and went into the holy city and appeared unto many (John v, 28, 29; Dan. xii, 2; Math. xxvii, 52, 53).

13. "But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen." This verse, I think, gives the key to verse 29, which perplexes many. The question which Paul is arguing is, Has Christ risen? Now, all believers were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, but if He is a dead Christ, and not risen, why baptize for the dead? Why baptize any one in the name of a dead Christ?

14. "And if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." He goes on to add that if Christ be not risen all preachers are false witnesses, and all living believers are still in their sins, and all dead believers have perished. The great fact of the resurrection of Christ is not a truth merely for Easter, but for every Lord's day. His life and death would be of no avail to us had He not risen again, but He is risen (verse 20), and thus with power declared to be the Son of God (Rom. i, 4).

MASCOT FOR AH SIN.

FANATIC WHO DOSED LI HUNG WITH COLD LEAD.

Results from the Assault on the Chinese Envoy—A Shot That Was Heard to Important Effect by the Mikado—War in the Orient to Cease.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The white wings of peace are unfolding themselves over the oriental scene of strife and Japan has accorded an armistice which will stop the clash of arms and the slaughter of Chinese that has been going on so long. This is official. The Japanese legation here has a telegram from the home government conveying the news. China made the offer of the armistice and the peace plenipotentiaries of Japan were empowered by the emperor to accept it without condition. This was done in view of the "unexpected event" that happened, viz: the attempted assassination of Li Hung Chang. The armistice, Minister Kurino, of the Japanese legation, said, will be effective until the peace negotiations are concluded. After a meeting of the peace ambassadors had been decided on China requested the declaration of an armistice, but this request had not been acted upon favorably by Japan.

The Jap Is Suspicious of Ah Sin.

His government, Minister Kurino said, had not been inclined to stop warlike operations except on certain conditions. These conditions are not known, but it is suggested that probably the occupation, of Taku might have been one, Japan wishing something as a guarantee of the willingness and earnestness of the Chinese for an amicable settlement of the war. China evidently could not arrive at a conclusion to agree to the stipulations demanded by Japan, and the attempt on the life of the Chinese peace ambassador solved the problem for the time being and hostilities will be suspended. There will be no withdrawal of the Japanese troops from Chinese territory, however.

The power of the Japanese government to execute the armistice will now be put to a critical test. The military power of Japan, in the judgment of intelligent observers, has almost outstripped the civil power during the war. This has caused serious concern, and it has been feared that the military element, backed by the war spirit among the people, would not submit to an armistice, even if the civil authorities ordered one. To meet this emergency a change of army commanders was recently made. There had been three army corps, operating in different campaigns, and each under a general of supreme authority over his particular campaign.

Opportunity of Komatsu's Life.

About three weeks ago, in anticipation of the armistice, Prince Komatsu was created commander-in-chief of all the armies. The purpose of this step was to concentrate authority in one man in close touch with the imperial household, who could thus execute an armistice by a simultaneous cessation of hostilities by the three armies. It now remains to be seen whether Prince Komatsu can execute the important commission given to him. Prince Komatsu has to contend against a war spirit inflamed by many victories. It has been stated that an armistice would be so unpopular among the people and soldiery that it would assure the political retirement of Japan's two chief statesmen—Count Ito and Mr. Matsin—who have served as peace envoys.

The declaration of an armistice was most welcome news to the Chinese legation, although it was accepted with the stolidity and passive dignity which is characteristic of the race. The first word of the armistice reached the legation through the Associated Press. Mr. Yang Yu had received no official communication from China, nor from the state department. Under these circumstances he asked to be excused from discussing the situation.

Will Be a Difficult Task.

The numerous members of the legation were evidently glad that the tedious and discouraging struggle was at an end. It is felt that the arrangement of peace terms will still be a difficult task. The feeling in the interior of China, where the direct effects of the war have not been felt, is very strong against a cession of territory. Moreover, the payment of a cash indemnity will necessitate the imposition of heavy taxes on the people and consequent depression.

The full text of the cable received at the Japanese legation regarding the armistice is as follows: "On the opening of the negotiations the Chinese plenipotentiary proposed an armistice, which Japan was willing to accept on certain conditions. While this negotiation was going on the outward event happened on the person of the Chinese plenipotentiary. His majesty the emperor, in view of this unhappy occurrence, commanded the Japanese plenipotentiaries to consent to temporary armistice without conditions. This was communicated to the Chinese plenipotentiary."

SHIMONOSEKI, April 1.—Koyama Rokunseki, the young Japanese who attempted to assassinate Li Hung Chang, has been sentenced to penal servitude for life. The armistice established by the order of the mikado extends to April 20, but it will terminate if the pour parlers are broken in off the meantime. According to the terms of the armistice the movement of troops and the transportation of contraband of war by sea is forbidden. The new distribution of troops not intended to augment the armies in the field is allowed.

The armistice does not embrace the island of Formosa, the reason being that when a claim of territory is to be made it is international law that the victorious belligerent must have actual possession of the enemy's territory.

Casualties of the China-Japan War.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Mr. Matsui, of the Japanese legation, has received advices from which he has compiled a statement of the number killed, wounded and taken prisoners in the several battles of the China-Japan war. In some cases the killed and wounded are not given separately. The figures are as follows: Japanese killed, 553; wounded, 1,837; killed and wounded (where figures are not given separately), 359. Chinese killed, 7,693; Chinese prisoners taken, 1,459; killed and wounded (not given separately), 100. There is no record of the Chinese lost in the naval battle at Hai Yang To, nor in one of the land engagements. The number of Chinese wounded is not known.

SMALLPOX IN THE COUNTRY.

Only 373 Deaths from That Disease in the United States Last Winter.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The abstract of sanitary reports as made by the surgeon general shows the presence of smallpox in twenty-one states of the Union Of the cities, Milwaukee has suffered most from this disease during the winter, recording 524 cases and 164 deaths; Philadelphia had 224 cases and twenty-six deaths; Chicago, 240 cases and 44 deaths; Hot Springs, Ark., 118 cases and 27 deaths; Washington, 51 cases and 9 deaths; Detroit, 81 cases and 26 deaths; St. Louis, 105 cases and 35 deaths; New York, 55 cases and 10 deaths There appears to have been all told 373 deaths from smallpox in the United States during the winter

PREVENTION VS. CURE.

Most people are quick to see the need of medical aid when disease has fastened itself upon them, or when they are prostrated by some epidemic. It is not everyone, however, who realizes the importance of keeping the body in such a state of health that it will be able at all times to resist the attacks of disease. It is when the system is weakened by overwork or worry, causing loss of appetite, etc., when it is greatly debilitated, or "all run down," that the danger of serious sickness and heavy doctor's bills is to be feared. On the other hand, if perfect health can be maintained, the blood kept pure, and the circulation good, the appetite normal and the spirits cheerful, there will be no occasion to fear the grip, pneumonia, diphtheria or any similar ailment. As a means of keeping the body in just this condition of health, no better agent has yet been found than that great blood purifier and strength builder, Hood's Sarsaparilla. While it is true that "Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures," it is equally true that Hood's Sarsaparilla prevents sickness, and this truth is of supreme importance to all. Mrs. C. C. Roles, of Wauregan, Conn., writing to the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, stated the case most concisely when she said: "We don't wait until we are sick, but take Hood's Sarsaparilla to prevent sickness." Certainly, prevention is far better than cure.

MISS FLAGG'S LATEST NEW BOOK!

"A Prisoner of Hope."

COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.

Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

What the Senators and Representatives Are Doing for the Benefit of Their Constituents—Bills and Resolutions Introduced—Other News of General Interest.

SPRINGFIELD, March 27.—The senate passed the following bills: To conform school law to general statutes regarding the rate of interest on school funds; establishing free scholarships in the Illinois State university; appropriating $28,000 annually for the State Normal school at Normal; appropriating $422,000 to the Illinois university at Champaign and $175,000 to the southern penitentiary; allowing the drainage district to issue and register bonds to the extent of 90 per cent of the assessment; providing for the inspection of military shoots. The house passed the bill providing for kindergarten schools by popular vote and the anti-truck store bill. The following nominations were sent to the senate by Governor Altgeld appointing trustees for the Industrial Home for the Blind: Henry Cushing, of Champaign county; Henry C. Zuttermeister, Charles E. Simmons, Edward Tilden and Belle Hyman, of Cook county.

SPRINGFIELD, March 28.—The senate adopted a resolution that when senate adjourned Friday May 2 it stand adjourned sine die. The bill to tax gifts, legacies and inheritances was advanced to third reading. Aspinwall's pool selling bill was postponed for three weeks. A large number of bills were introduced, including one by Littler appropriating $325,000 to erect a new building for the state fair at Springfield. A resolution was adopted for adjournment from Friday until next Wednesday. In the house Jones, of Cook county, arraigned Auditor Gore for sending out a circular calling on building and loan associations to protest against the passage of the Jones bill to establish a separate department for their regulation. He offered a resolution to investigate Gore's administration of his office, but permission to read it was refused. The senate resolution to adjourn from Friday to Wednesday was adopted and the senate bill providing that county boards may divide an election precinct containing more than 350 legal voters was passed.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., March 29.—The senate postponed Bartley's dental bill for two weeks. The valued policy bill was sent to third reading; so was the bill for street car safeguards. The Torrens laud bill was defeated, but a motion to reconsider was filed. House resolution to improve the outlet at Spriug Lake to the Illinois river was concurred in. Bills passed: Fixing salaries of legislators at $850 per session, and $5 per day for special sessions; house bill limiting the time for will contests. In the house the bill appropriating $35,000 to repair the Lincoln monument passed unanimously. A number of minor bills were read a second time and advanced.

SPRINGFIELD, March 30.—In the state senate a resolution was offered for the report of a bill redistricting the state for supreme court election purposes and fixing judges' salaries at $9,000 a year; referred. Resolutions were adopted to investigate the conduct of the Industrial Home for the Blind. Another resolution was adopted to investigate the St. Louis bridge compauies on charges of forming trusts and extortion. The bill to allow coal companies to combine for the purpose of paying better wages was postponed for a week. A bill was introduced to prevent betting on horse races. In the house the speaker struck from the payrolls all committee clerks and janitors not absolutely necessary. The committee that counted the ballots in the Wilson-McKinlay coutest says the result favors McKinlay. Both houses adjourned to Wednesday.

Charged with Attempted Murder.

DECATUR, Ills., March 29.—A sensation was caused here by the arrest of Frank Marsh on a warrant sworn out by Wabash Detective Applegate, charging attempted murder during the railroad strike. The charge is knocking Engineer Kater out of his cab with a stone during the strike last summer.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with a l my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character buildiug.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F B Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of Today. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Papery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D, Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

FARM AND GARDEN

THE NEW FODDER PLANT.

A Consensus of the Published Opinions on the Vegetable Wonder, Sacaline.

The latest aspirant for high rank among forage plants is sacaline. And it has indorsements from men whose word may not be gainsaid. Professor L. H. Bailey, the conservative botanist and horticulturist at the Cornell university experiment station, "believes that it will be a good thing for some parts of the country." Professor J. L. Budd of the Iowa Agricultural college considers it as "very valuable in the dry west as a forage plant." London Garden says that "cattle are exceedingly fond of it," and that "as a forage plant it has an assured future." Its analysis compares favorably with clover and alfalfa. The various other English, French and German horticultural journals praise it highly. Professor L. H. Pammel of the Iowa Agricultural college writes as follows in Garden and Forest:

"It is not only perfectly hardy in central Iowa, as far as cold is concerned, but it stands the dry weather remarkably well. We have had no rain to speak of since the latter part of July, but this plant is as green at the end of September as it was early in July. The root stock of this plant is sent out in all directions. The original plant has been in a dry place for many years, but in all this time it has not onoe been killed back. It is a remarkable grower. Early in June stalks were 14 feet high. What is needed in the west is a plant that can be used in August and September when pastures are nearly always short. If the first and second crops could be used for the silo (it is said they can), the crop in August and September would be excellent for immediate use."

A TYPICAL PLANT OF SACALINE.

This plant is a perennial, hardy and vigorous, with the reputation of bearing with equal indifference extremes of heat and cold. The favorite because the quickest means of propagation is by setting the young plant, but it can be grown from seed. The illustration of polygonum sachalinense, or, as the French call it, sacaline, is reproduced from The Irrigation Age.

The foregoing makes it apparent that sacaline is worthy of trial in a small way—what, by the way, is the only wise way with any new thing. As the plants quickly fill the soil, and, according to some correspondents, are as hard to eradioate as the Canada thistle, this feature ought to be taken into account.

Odds and Ends.

A Wisoonsin farmer says that timothy has no place in a permanent pasture. He also says that no permanent pasture should be without white clover.

It is told in a bulletin from the Utah station that sowing lucern, timothy or clover in a young orchard should be discouraged.

The rapidity with which croup develops calls for instant treatment; and yet few households are prepared for its visits. An admirable remedy for this disease is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It has saved hundreds of lives and should be in every home where there are young children.

Spring Medicine

Is so important that you should be sure to get THE BEST. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven its unequalled merit by its thousands of remarkable cures, and the fact that it has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier shows the great confidence the people have in it. In fact it is the Spring Medicine. It cures all blood diseases, builds up the nerves and gives such strength to the whole system that, as one lady puts it, "It seemed to make me anew."

If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for your Spring Medicine do not buy any substitute. Be sure to get

"I was all broken down in health, so weak and nervous I was hardly able to be up. I had severe pains in my side, and headache. I would often have to stop when going up-stairs on account of palpitation of the heart. I had no appetite and a distressed feeling in my stomach. I resolved to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles and have not had a spell of sick headache for four months, feel well, work all day and eat heartily. My friends remark how well I am looking. I think all nervous, run-down people ought to take it, especially nursing mothers." MRS. S. ASHWORTH, Eaton, Ohio.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly subscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. FLAMES AT MILWAUKEE SWEEP AWAY MUCH PROPERTY.

Public Library with Its 80,000 Volumes Has a Close Call, But Is Saved by Hard Work with the Two Top Floors Ruined —Lists of the Sufferers.

Milwaukee, March 27.—Grand avenue, where the heart of the wholesale and retail commerce of the west side throbs, was the scene early this morning of one of the most serious conflagrations in the history of the city. Some of the leading mercantile institutions of Milwaukee are in ruins; the splendid Y. M. C. A. bnilding, one of the finest and best eqnipped in the country is gone; the public library, with its 90,000 volnmes, some of which can could never be replaced, has had a narrow escape. The fire is the most disastrons since the Third ward conflagration of Oct. 28, 1892, and the pecuniary loss will exceed $1,000,000. It furnished a magnificent spectacle for the thonsands that filled the avenue and watched it from surronnding buildings.

The principal losses are as follows: Plankinton estate on bnildings occupied by Landanr & Co. and Tanner & Co. and public library building, $250,000; Landanr & Co., wholesale dry goods, $40,000; Tanner & Co., furniture, etc., $100,000; Reliance Storage company, $50,000; Barling & Wambold, retail clothiers, $90,000; Columbia Clothing company, $25,000; Y. M. C. A. building, $75,000; other losses, $75,000; total, $1,065,000. Before 1 o'clock the flames had crossed Fonrth street and were feeding on the Y. M. C. A. bnilding and twenty minutes later the two npper floors of the library block were a seething mass of fire.

Firebrands Scattered Broadcast.

About the time the department under Chief Foley's direction had begnn its work to save the library and the three or four clothing and dry goods stores it contains the fnry of the blaze had spent itself on the sonth side of the avenue, after having reduced the Plankinton estates' block, occnpied by Landanr & Co. and Tanner & Co., to ashes. There was now danger from the surrounding property on the west side of Fonrth street, near the Y. M. C. A. building, and from the firebrands scattered broadcast by the flames in the upper portion of the library block.

Library Building Was Saved.

At 2 o'clock the Morgan store had been possibly saved from all damage except the upper floor, the library block snffering damage no more than one-eighth of its total cost. The firebrands leaped across to the north side of the avenue, ruining the art store of Roebel & Reinhart, two or three little saloons and lodging houses and cheap ramshacklo buildings. The public library bnilding at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Fourth was saved by hard work. The loss on the bnilding is believed to be confined to the fonrth and fifth floors, occupied respectively by Meyer's bnsiness college and the Germania society.

Life Saved by a Cool Head.

The Foster building at the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Fourth street, contained fourteen or fifteen suites, all of which were occupied by families. Many of the occupants owe their lives to Luke McCormick, a clerk in the postoffice. Passing the building during the fiercest of the fire in the Tanner building he ran up-stairs and aroused the unsuspecting sleepers. There was barely time to escape before the bnilding caught fire. Many of the women were frantic with terror and in great excitement to save everything of value among their belongings.

OUR UNRIVALED WEATHER.

Rain Gladdens the Hearts of Northwestern People—Snow in Colorado.

Chicago, April 1.—Rain began falling here yesterday morning and kept it up all day and most of the night. The same sort of weather has visited the northwest as far as South Dakota, and people are standing in it and enjoying it, so long has it been since there was a rainfall. Farmers in the northwest had plowed their lands and sowed their wheat in the dust, and this rain is a godsend. It is reported at Sioux Falls, S. D.; Des Moines, Ia.; Lacon, Ills.; Marshalltown, Ia.; Paris, Mo., and in southern Minnesota.

While this grateful sort of weather prevails in the region noted Colorado has experienced a snow storm of great severity, tho fall being eighteen inches in some places and railway traffic embarrassed in every direction. Rain or snow has fallen in nearly every conntry in eastern and northern Nebraska.

RECEIPTS DO NOT EVEN UP.

National Deficit Likely to Reach $42,000,000 on May 1.

Washington, April 1.—Contrary to the expectations of the officials the treasnry receipts for the month of March will again fall below the expenditures. The amonnt, however, is only about $234,000. The excess of expenditnres over receipts for the nine months of the present fiscal year is over $36,500,000, and this amount will almost certainly be increased by $5 0 0,000 or more during April, which will leave a deficit of about $42,000,000 on May 1. This may be decreased by the income tax to $25,000,000.

The New Rating of Pensions.

Washington, March 29.—All necessary steps for putting into effect the recent legislation raising all pensions below $6 to that rating have been taken by the pension bureau. Low rate pensioners whose names are borne on the rolls of the Buffalo, Chicago, Concord, Des Moines, Milwankee and Pittsbnrg agencies will receive the $6 rating on April 4 and all like pensions in other jnrisdictions will be advanced at the next payment in their district. The change will add about $1,500,000 to the pension expenditnres.

Trolley Car Accident.

Jeansville, Pa., April 1.—The worst accident in the history of the trolley roads in this region and one that was thrilling in the extreme resulted in the death of three persons, the fatal wounding probably of two others and the severe injnry of several more, and the fatality was dnc in part to a panic among the passengers, who crowded about the condnctor and motorman of the nnmanageable train.

BEACON FIRES BLAZE.

All Germany Turns Out in Honor of Her Old Chancellor.

Berlin, April 1.—The Bismarck celebration is in full swing at this writing and every day seems to add to the enthusiasm displayed by the German people over the 80th anniversary of the birth of the old chancellor. Telegrams are ponring in from all parts of the empire announcing that Bismarckian fetes have been commenced with great spirit. There was a specially interesting gathering at the national monnment of Germania in the Niederwald, whither thousands traveled from all parts of the Rhineland. Among those present were representatives of thirty-six cities in the Rhenish district. Professor Aucken, of Giessen nniversity, delivered an oration at the foot of the monument. In Munich, tho Bavarian capital, a musicale in honor of the occasion was given in the Odeon.

Throughout Germany joy fires are burning on the highest mountain peaks and hills from the Baltic to the North sea and tho Russian frontier on the east to the frontiers of France, Belgium and the Netherlands on the west. Never beforo in the history of the empire has there been such a heartfelt and spontaneous exhibition of love by the German people. Today all the schools and most of the civic and state offices are closed in honor of him to whom the empire owes its existence.

At Hamburg all the public and a majority of the private bnildings in the city are decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the occasion. Last night there was a general illnmination on a scale that had not been attempted before in a quarter of a century. In the window of every shop there was displayed either a wreathed portrait or bust of the great "reichskanzler." The streets were thronged with strangers, and everywhere can be seen the varied colored caps of the students, with whom there is no greater favorite than Bismarck.

The view of the city last night from the aussen alster and Binnen alster was a Beautifnl one. The Tombards bridge, which spans the connection between these two bodies of water, was a chain of glowing lights. The Nener jnngfernstieg, Alsterdamm and the wide streets fronting the Binnen alster were ablaze with myriad lights, while back of them the city lay like a gigantic fire opal, red, green and other colored lights flashing in every direction. All the shipping in the harbor and the small boats on the canals of Hamburg were also illuminated.

Ice Breaking Up at Menominee.

Menominee, Mich., March 30.—The wind is blowing a gale from the northeast, and the ice twenty miles north is rapidly breaking up.

That Davis Will Case Settled.

Butte, Mont., March 28.—The great Davis will contest involving a $7,000,000 estate has, perhaps, been ended by mutual agreement between the heirs. The John A. Davis will was admitted to probate and a decree of distribution entered subject to revision in the event of further contest within one year by claiment not parties to the present agreement.

Famous Mastiff Dead.

Janesville, Wis., March 28.—C. C. McLean's famous mastiff Media is dead. She was valned at $1,500, was 8 years old, and the winner of many prizes. She was known all over the United States as one of the most valuablo dogs in the country. Her pups have sold for $1,500.

San Jose, Cal., April 1.—Three men held np and robbed William Dowdigan, a merchant. In the fight which followed he stabbed one of the men, who was later found dead in a vacant lot where he had bled to death.

Arbor Day in Illinois.

Springfield, Ills., March 26.—The governor has issned a proclamation naming Friday April 19 as Arbor day and a legal holiday.

Notes of the State.

A Chicago congregation after hearing Dr. Henson's condemnatory sermon rose enmasse in support of resolntions against the pending Illinois racing bill.

The city council of Hillsboro, Ill., passed an ordinance prohibiting screens in saloons.

Grace, 12-year-old daughter of William Stanley of Dixon, Ills., was burned to death while playing with fire in the woods.

Ben Miller, aged 17, of Ladd, Ills., pleaded guilty to larceny at Princeton and was sentenced to the reform school.

A. M. Everly, president of the trades assembly at Galesburg, Ills., is charged with a shortage of $600 while treasurer of the cigarmakers' union.

Another case of smallpox is reported at Mattoon, Ills., making six in all.

Professor T. J. Rodgers of the state normal school at Jacksonville, Ills., and Miss Eleanor Perrette were married at Jeffersonville, Ind. Both are deaf and dumb.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 8th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Wednesday, May 8th, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., at 221 West Madison street, for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

JOSEPH E. ROY, President.

MRS. M. C. BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

While there is much to deprecate in the acts and in the non-action of the recently-retired Congress, every true patriot may rejoice at the passage of the "Lodge liquor investigating law." Such a law has passed the Senate and then been lost in the House again and again. At last, however, the Department of Labor is required "to use its statistical experts to ascertain the influence of the liquor traffic and drinking usages upon society." Mr. Carroll D. Wright, the chief of the department, asserts that with full power the investigation will begin before long. The silence of the press in regard to the passage of the bill is phenomenal.

Our law-makers at Springfield are in perplexity as to what disposition to make of a bill which is intended to repeal the "acts of 1845 and 1861, making the Catholic bishop of Chicago a corporation sole with power to acquire and hold real estate for charitable and religious purposes." It would seem that this were no easy matter to decide. Would the idea of thus giving such absolute power in the hands of any other man, say a Methodist bishop or the secretary of the American Board, be entertained for a moment? But it is feared that if the bill is passed the Catholics will be offended and withdraw their Republican vote; and if they reject the bill the American Protective Association will vote vengeance. Col. Merriman, who introduced the bill, claims that he is not opposed to Catholics; he simply wants to prevent one man from controlling such an enormous amount of property as is now in the hands of the bishop of Chicago. The fear of man bringeth a snare. Our legislators need to "learn what this meaneth," "if thine eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light."

School Commissioner Lockhart, of the State of South Dakota, presented the register of the land office at Mitchell, S. D., fees amounting to about $500, hoping to get about 50,000 acres of land belonging to the Yankton Indian Reservation, recorded as belonging to South Dakota "for school purposes." The register refused to receive the money. The government agent for the reservation, Mr. J. H. Smith, has telegraphed to the Interior Department, complaining that white settlers are taking possession of land on the reservation and refuse to leave when ordered off. The treaty rights of the Indians are to be respected, however, and the encroachments of the whites are to be restrained, if necesary, by force. On the Winnebago Indian Reservation white men have leased land from the Indians, which they are loathed to leave. These white men are summoned to appear at Omaha, April 22, in the United States Circuit Court, and show why a mandatory injuction, forbidding them to occupy such lands longer, should not issue. Thus it appears that a more healthy moral tone prevails in regard to the rights of the Indians than formerly.

It is true that men cannot be made good by law; but good laws when enforced are a safeguard to the weak and a restraint to the wicked. The National Postoffice Department has dealt its first telling blow at the lottery gamblers under the new law. It has issued an order to intercept all mail directed to E. J. Demeras in Honduras, or to him in care of any one at Tampa, Fla. Demeras is the head of the Honduras Lottery, which is only another name for the old Louisiana Lottery. Under the old law the lottery company used the mails for sending their circulars and received their returns by the express companies, the common way having been to buy express money orders and send them through the mail in sealed envelopes. This business has been effectually stopped, however. As the law can also be applied to the express companies, the government will get after them if they are found violating it. Notwithstanding the expose of this lottery swindle, it is stated that enormous quantities of mail have been received at Tampa and that the express companies have been doing a big business in money orders, all of which goes to show how many people are willing to be gulled.

While the Christian may always confidently rest upon Christ's promise: "Every plant which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up," knowing that his word cannot fail: one cannot but rejoice to see his word is being fulfilled, and to note how God rules and overrules in the councils of men. At the City Council, Chicago, on the evening of April 3, Hon. John J. Coughlin introduced an order directing the chief of police to stop two prize-fights which were to come off on two nights mentioned at the Regiment Armory specifically, "and all fighting contests generally." This was passed almost unanimously. At about the same time, in his message to the Legislature, Gov. Mitchell of Florida, in strong terms recommended that "prize-fights or glove-contests be made felonies by statute, with such penalties attached as will cause thugs to respect law, and to respect law-abiding, God-fearing people of the State in pursuit of all their rights as citizens." According to the governor's view, the new law should authorize sheriffs to enter a house or inclosure and arrest on suspicion of a fight, and it should also make persons present at the fight guilty of a felony, and upon conviction be punished the same as the principals.

An ex-priest, Slatterly by name, has been lecturing on Romanism in Savannah, Ga. As is common on such occasions, the members of the Romish church made a great outcry and threatened mob violence. They went, or others for them, to the mayor of the city and asked him to prohibit the speaking of the ex-priest, on the ground that it was calculated to make a public disturbance. The mayor proved to be a manly man, not one of the weak-kneed sort who so commonly get into such positions, and he told the persons who threatened lawlessness that if they did not wish to hear Mr. Slatterly they were free to stay away; that if they did go to hear him they must be orderly; that he would protect him with the police power of the city, and, if need be, call upon the militia. The result was, as Mr. Slatterly said, that he spoke to crowded audiences who were widely demonstrative, and that his wife addressed congregations composed of hundreds of women. Under such circumstances, consider the following expression which was used by this Mr. Slatterly: "Get the A. P. A. or the Junior Order of the United Americans here and you will have no more such demonstrations against free speech. We must meet the new order of the Hibernians with the A. P. A. and show them that it is not necessary to get their permission to have a lecture in Savannah." That is, this man, who was seeking to hold a meeting for the purpose of denouncing an order which he had left and who was protected by the civil authorities so that he acquired popularity and found his enemies powerless, now has the impudence to say that there must be some secret lodges organized there in order to secure free speech. It seems almost a pity that such a man could not be left to the violence which his language invites. Let all Americans understand the principles of secret lodges; consciously or unconsciously they do not believe in the government of law; they believe in the government of lodges. The natural result of their teaching is found in Mexico, where the Romish church on the one hand and two lodges of Freemasonry on the other, the York and the Scottish rite, have kept the ignorant and debased people in turmoil. If secret societies succeed in overriding civil government in the United States, we shall become another Mexico.

LIGHT.

BY BISHOP WM. DILLON, D. D.

The apostolic tent-maker of Tarsus, with unexcelled definitive skill, asserted that "Whatsoever doth make manifest is light." The reverse would be, whatsoever conceals is darkness. One greater, who came down from heaven to give light to every man coming into the world, affirmed that "He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." That "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved." To complete a trinity of testimony for the light, John declares that "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth."

With these directory guides to pioneer our way in measuring conduct, let us advance in the line of investigation to know the truth and shun error. The saloon paints its windows and screens its doors, to protect its patrons and business alike from public inspection. The thief takes shelter under the cover of night to escape detection and arrest. The libertine wants blinded windows to shut out the light. The bungler wants no inspection of his work. "Unsight, unseen" is the motto of the dishonest trader. Ill deeds court darkness as a cover. Honest accounts are ready for the auditor's review and inspection. The church of Christ is open as the sun; it uncovers itself to view, and seeks publicity, with naught to lose by being gazed on by the beholder's eye.

Where shall the secret lodge system be classed? In what list does it belong? The same rule must apply in testing it, as other things. Does the lodge swear, or otherwise bind men, to "Always conceal and never reveal?" Does it guard its doors from the entrance of the "profane," the "cowan," or the honest investigators? Does it show hands, disclose its obligations and inner workings, before initiation and entrance? The plain answer must give it classification. This determined, the duty of every Christian and honorable worldly man is plain, to have "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." To obey the injunction of Paul, "Ye were sometime darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light," would march every true Christian out of the lodge into the open plain of daylight and consequent usefulness. Different parts of the Scriptures serve their several purposes, completing a perfect whole. The consecration and separation portions are John 15, 2 Cor. 6, and Ephesians 5. Submission to these is separation from the lodge, as an invariable rule.

Light is the enemy of secrecy and the friend of honesty; the simile is found in the upturning of the flat stone from the field, when every bug and beetle runs at the approach of light. The first fruit of the fall in Adam was a disposition to hide himself. Sin is the mainspring and motive of secrecy. Redemption removes this depravity, and restores the light of honesty, openness and frankness. Where this effect is not realized the defect is manifest. "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart." May it spring up with an illuminating brilliancy which will disperse the lodge gloom and plant piety in the effulgent light of zenith noonday.

THE TWO RELIGIONS OF THE BIBLE.

BY REV. C. POWERS.

I appeal to the friends of the true God, to believers in the divine authenticity of the sacred Scriptures, to those who profess faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as the only begotten Son of God who "gave himself a ransom," and died for sinners, is the only name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved; I appeal to you, to come to the rescue, and help deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the spoiler; to lend a helping hand to break the spell of awful nightmare of this wonderful delusion. Do not let the fact of there being some good things in the lectures and essays in Masonry hide from your view the real character of its religion. Know and consider that Satan knows how to use those good baits to put along with the most fatal lies; fatal when believed. Consider that no lie can be more fatal—when followed—than that which promises eternal life by means of ceremonies and human methods simply, while ignoring Jesus Christ, the only way to God. Hold fast and proclaim this truth everywhere: "Christ is the only way to God; no other can be found."

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Also Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

In Masonic ceremonies and quotations of Scripture no passages like the above are quoted. Satan don't care how many good things are taught if only the doctrine of the atonement and faith in Christ is left out. Satan hates Jesus Christ and the doctrine of the cross as only such an arch fiend as he can hate. And his cool calculation and masterly cunning is doubtless all brought into use to foil, as far as possible, the Son of God in his attempt "to destroy the works of the devil." Take the alarm, then. Satan has many devices, and is sometimes transformed into an angel of light." His masterpiece of deception is in putting on such saintly airs in Bible quoting, and praying and extolling some virtues, and using truth to give credence to the lie that Masonic religion will save men, which it claims to do by prominent Masonic authors, who tell us in unequivocal language the essential character of the religion of Masonry, and what it will do for its votaries.

If you are an adhering Freemason, you are giving your support to its lying pretensions, even if in your heart you repudiate the whole thing. Oh, then, by God's help, have the moral courage to utter your convictions, as you would stand acquitted before God when he shall judge all men by that same Jesus who calls for your testimony against the lodge, and in his favor.

"Call no man your master, for one is your master, even Christ." How, then, can you consent to the lodge phrase or title of "Worshipful Master," and swear to obey him. Consider, it must be abhorrent to the Son of God to have you do so. Let those who have not been ensnared know that profane oaths, with cut-throat penalties, are assumed behind tyled doors; and the command of the Son of God, "Swear not all," is ignored.

The claim that the religion of Masonry is older than that of Christ, is false and foolish. Adam and Abel worshiped God by faith in a promised Messiah. Of Abraham, Jesus said he "saw my day and was glad." Let those who ignore the name of Jesus now remember that they must soon meet him in judgment, "For we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ."

THE IMPENDING TROUBLE IN CANADA.

BY THOMAS HODGE.

Like ourselves, the Canadians are in some difficulty over the separate school question, but to a greater degree than we are. It is in reality the question of the union of church and state, under another name, in Canada as well as in our own country; and in both Madam Rome is now the leader. Such a union would not be openly proposed in the United States, because it would violate our national principle; and equally true it is that no church and state union principle is held by the government there since her rebellion in 1837, the immediate outburst of which was caused by the fifty-seven rectories being established upon the clergy reserves, afterwards appropriated to the education of the people.

In the Dominion the principle is as well established as in the United States, with this difference, that Rome has yet a little more power there than here; and therefore it is understood that each province can, if it choose, teach religion in its public schools, as Quebec does and Manitoba did at first, but by and by changed the practice; and this has caused the rumpus.

My sentiments were ever with the reformers in Canada, as opposed to church and state connexion, having been taught that the Lord Jesus Christ had said his kingdom was not of this world, and had ordered his people to earn money and pay taxes to the civil government, whose duty it is to protect its citizens from wrongdoers by its police and soldiers, jails and hangmen. The kingdom of Christ has no sword of steel. "The Word of God is the sword of the Spirit," and its "armor" is truth, righteousness, the gospel of peace, faith, all to be used under Christ, the great Captain of our salvation.

This great fundamental truth it is which animates the masses of the Dissenters in the United Kingdom against the corrupt and corrupting connection of any church of Christ with the successors of the Herods and Cæsars, and of the scribes and Pharisees; i. e., all the civil and ecclesiastic powers. Their progenitors, nearly 1900 years ago, by their union and false accusers crucified the "King of the Jews," the Son of the living God. History confirms the persecuting character of such connection as alike injurious to the truly separate functions of church and state. The one is for the secular affairs of the present life. The other, whilst loyal to the civil authority, has its first duty to conscience and Christ and the life beyond the grave. Rome has usurped this authority and misled her followers.

Well, but how does this apply to Canada and her present trouble over the school question? I have said her rebellion was prompted in a great measure by the attempt to use the clergy reserve lands to establish Protestant churches. The reformers were a unit against this attempt, and in favor of a change in the system of government which deprived the people of their lawful influence over the executive administration. The change took place after the rebellion under the name of "Responsible Government," by which the sentiments of the people, as expressed through their representatives, have the power to change the ministry.

Since the rebellion in 1837, no state church can be proposed in Canada any more than in our United States. The man would be laughed at who would propose it. But educate the children so as to become good citizens; train them up in the right way. Yes, says Madam Rome, that is right. The public schools are godless in our eyes; therefore, give us our share of the taxes and we will teach our religion in our separate schools, and (she whispers to her people) we will support the state if it supports us.

Is this the church and state principle? No doubt it is. And the answer is that the teaching in the public schools is to train up the young to be good citizens, and therefore no taxes can be used to teach creeds of any church.

The case at present in Canada is simply this: Manitoba was a territory given over pro. tem. to the lower Canada French Catholics by the late premier and great tactician, Sir John A. McDonald. The Catholic priesthood, of course, have never had any other idea than that it was the duty of every state and government to enrich the church indirectly if not directly. Thus the Catholics got for their schools a full share of the people's taxes. But in a few years emigration left the French and Romanism in a minority, and the people changed the separate schools into private schools by withholding any share of the public taxes.

The Catholics declared themselves wronged, and boldly enlisted all their powers of and in church and state in Manitoba, in the Dominion, and we may say in the domain of Queen Victoria, to restore to their schools their state pay. The premier and legislature of Manitoba have boldly declared they will not change the law so as to re-establish the payments of public money to the separate schools.

ROMANISM AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

In your issue of March 14 is an editorial on the recent interdict by the papal church of certain secret societies, the probable reasons for such interdict and the remissness of that church on the temperance question. I am not a defender of the wisdom or expediency of papal edicts, but it is always wise to give to all the credit that is their due, and to attach blame only so far as it is deserved. That the Church of Rome has been exceedingly derelict on the question of temperance is abundantly evident, but so also have the Protestant churches. So long as members of evangelical churches buy, sell and use intoxicating drinks, and so long as the great majority of them consent to the license system, it will hardly be in order to cast stor- at their fellow-sinners in the Church of Rome. we have made somewhat more progress on t. question, let us be thankful, but let us not forget that the papal church is also advancing. Her position on secret societies is held in common with a number of Protestant denominations. She has not singled out the orders specified as the only ones that are prohibited, but Freemasonry especially has been under the ban for more than a century. The secrecy of these orders is not the sole, nor is it the main, reason why many Christians protest against them. The special reason is that most, if not all of them, maintain a religious worship that is not Christian worship. This is especially true of Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and the Knights of Pythias. There is one essential characteristic of Christian worship that is always wanting in the rituals of these orders. Christian worship always recognizes Jesus Christ as a divine mediator, and is always made in his name. Now all the forms of prayer that are provided in the rituals of these orders always omit any mention of Christ. Nor do they recognize either the Holy Spirit, the need of repentance, or any atoning sacrifice for sin. Freemasonry even mutilates the Word of God by excluding Christ's name from its Scripture readings. This is true of the degrees of the Blue Lodge and chapter. In the nature of the case, these orders cannot have a Christian worship, since they are made up of persons who may be Jews, Christians, or those of no religion, and all such are expected to unite in the common prayer. The law of Freemasonry, as laid down by Dr. Robert Morris, in his Digest of Masonic Law, is thus stated. After saying that Jews and Mohammedans, as well as Christians, may be members of Masonic lodges, he adds: "Prayer in a Masonic lodge should always be of a general character, and should contain nothing offensive to any conscientious Mason. In theory, the whole Masonic world is assembled in every lodge, and prayer and religious instruction should be directed accordingly." The forms of prayer laid down for use in Odd-fellow lodges are the same in this respect, and repeated decisions of Grand Lodges have declared that, if objection is made, the name of Christ may not be used in the worship of the lodge. Doubtless, truly Christian prayers are sometimes made in the lodge, but we hold the orders responsible for what they profess and provide.

As to secrecy, I do not see how any church can, with due self-respect, permit any of its members to belong to organizations of questionable character, and into whose esoteric character it is not permitted to inquire. When Dr. Leonard Bacon was asked whether it was proper to admit to membership in the church those who belonged to oath-bound secret societies, he said, "Ask them what oaths they have taken." If they answer correctly, you can judge whether the taking and keeping of such oaths is consistent with Christian character; but if they will not answer, they may and ought to be ruled out for contumacy." If the Church of Rome has sometimes tithed mint and rue, and neglected judgment and mercy, let us remember that "these things ought ye to have done, and not to have left the others undone."—H. H. Hinman, in the Sabbath Recorder.

SECRECY.

Secrecy and treachery are the bane of society, they overthrow churches, and occasion the downfall of nations. They wear a slimy, snakish appearance; and hence a secret organization cannot exist without affording at least a pretext for evil surmising; while we are exhorted, by the great apostle, to abstain from all appearance, or from every form of evil.

It is admitted that national institutions and official positions are greatly controlled by secret organizations, by which the wheels of government are retarded, and even churches are trammeled in their influence for good by the same means.

It is evident that secret organizations partake, more or less, of the nature and character of a conspiracy, grasping for governing power, and claiming special allegiance, and have somewhat similar modes of operation, though ranging from treasonable associations down to the latest and most lax of secret societies. Claiming to be oppressed, they take the world's plan of trying to beat their oppressors at their own game, in place of overcoming evil with good. Although the object may be a good one, the end does not justify the means; even as in taking carnal weapons to defend a good cause, the loss may be greater than the gain.

The early promoters of Christianity had the fiercest opposition to meet in attaining their great end, in the midst of a wicked and gainsaying world; yet the openness of their work was their great boast. "The king knoweth of these things," said Paul, "before whom also I speak freely; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him, for this thing was not done in a corner."

Our Saviour expressly declares, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing." Nowhere do we find an apostolic example of secrecy; Judas being excepted. Hence all secret organizations are without Gospel foundation, and lead to strife, divisions, and often to the downfall of things which they profess to build up. Frankness, openness and manliness, are better than craft and guile and secrecy.—Light and Life.

TRUE MANHOOD.

In the fabled court of King Arthur
Every knight was sworn to be strong,
To be pure in life, to be true to his king,
To be spent in the righting of wrong.
Lo, simple is life to the hero!
He does what is given him to do,
No planning for self, no seeking for fame,
No strife save the strife to be true.

We sing not in vain their high praises
Who teach us what manhood may be;
Lives great in devotion to duty
Are boons priceless to you and to me.
For the human is near to the human;
He teaches who talks not, but strives;
The tongue speaks to the ear, but heart answers to heart,
And 'tis lives that tell upon lives.

God's man will be great where God puts him.
A man still, though placed on a throne.
He is true to life's manifold duties
Who is true to his manhood alone.
What mean these various honors we pay?
Narrow lives are no part of God's plan,
A soldier, a patriot, a statesman, we say;
We mean that he was a man.

True foundations will hold what is needful;
Our part is preparing the way;
He takes wisest thought for the morrow
Who takes much thought for to-day.
Then sing, and sing it forever,
Theme worthy of prophet and bard,
No place is too high for the hero
For whom no place is too hard.

That your years might glide on smoothly
And their growing numbers swell,
That your path might be bright and pleasant,
And the world might use you well;
Were a kindly thing to wish you,
A kindly wish and true,
If you were a child who could suffer,
With, alas! no power to do.

But I have a dream of a manhood,
Which makes the years as they roll;
Which is itself a part of God's world,
A part of its marrow and soul;
Which is glad of its share of the burdens
That must be borne by the strong,
Which takes no pleasure in pleasure,
When it might be righting a wrong;

Whose gladness is not at the mercy
Of either "the world" or the fates,
Which joys in all good, but most in its power
To help guard 'gainst evil the gates.
Rejoice then, in spite of earth's sharpest ills,
Be gladsome and free as you can!
But be to your God-given mission true;
Be what you were made for—a man.

THE TRUE MISSION OF WOMAN.

The Rev. Charles Parkhurst, in writing of "The True Mission of Woman," says: "The greatest thing a woman can do is to do the thing that she was specifically ordained to do, and that is to bear children and train them for the uses and service of the world they are born into; and only such women as are morally or intellectually incompetent to appreciate the full denotement of this, or who have greater ambition for aggressiveness or conspicuity than they have for fulfilling their mission, will be inclined to resent this statement of the case as an indignity. I have yet to be convinced that any very considerable number of the sex are disposed to resist nature's intentions for them, but the actuating impulse of those who do is doubtless a passion for some sort of celebrity and an impatience at the seclusion and restraints which femininity, so construed, imposes upon them. They are not content to be known only in their children, and that is one great reason why their children are so little known.

If Jochebed had had her head full of theories about an enlarged sphere for women, and had gone about Egypt stumping for female enfranchisement, the little hero of the bulrushes would probably have shared the fate of the other male children of the period, and the law-giver of Israel never have been heard of. So if Hannah, instead of devoting herself to the little incipient prophet, had plotted to make a great name for Hannah, Samuel, it is natural to suppose, would never have heard the voice of the Lord nor have initiated the prophetic period of Israel. What the world admires in the princess of women, the Virgin Mary, is simply that she made possible the infant of Bethlehem and the man of Galilee. Any woman who calls it intrusive limitation to be held to the paths of these three mothers in Israel lacks the true genius of her sex and is a feminine mistake.

The substance of Christian living is to convert one's self into effects; and nature has indicated to woman that the particular effect into which she is to convert herself is her own nurtured boys and girls. It is a much greater thing to try to be a power than it is to try to achieve the reputation of being a power.—Ladies' Home Journal.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL.

The attacks we have made in these columns at various times on college football, and which we have sent to the presidents of all American colleges north of Mexico, suggesting, among other plans, that there should be at once established "departments of pugilism" with "competent instructors in gambling," have brought us many editorial and other commendations, and some letters of a different kind.

We are glad to find in the annual report of President Eliot of Harvard, just published, the following:

"The game of football grows worse and worse as regards foul and violent play, and the number and gravity of the injuries which the players suffer. It has become perfectly clear that the game as now played is unfit for college use. It should be distinctly understood, however, that the players themselves have little real responsibility for the evils of the game. They are swayed by a tyrannical public opinion—partly ignorant and partly barbarous—to the formation of which graduates and undergraduates, fathers, mothers, and sisters, leaders of society, and the veriest gamblers and rowdies all contribute. The state of mind of the spectators at a hard-fought football match at Springfield, New York, or Philadelphia, cannot but suggest the query how far these assemblages differ at heart from the throngs which enjoy the prize fight, cock fight or bull fight, or which in other centuries delighted in the sports of the Roman arena? Several fatal accidents have happened this year to schoolboys and college students on the football field; and in every strenuous game now played, whether for practice or in an intercollegiate or other competition, there is the ever-present liability to death on the field."—Our Dumb Animals.

"SINK LIKE A MAN!"

In an article in the Strand Magazine on Sir Andrew Clark, the following incident is recorded as an illustration of the attitude the eminent physician took in regard to the use of stimulants:

"A clergyman complained to him of feeling low and depressed, unable to face his work, and was tempted to rely on stimulants. Sir Andrew saw that the position was a perilous one, and that it was a crisis in the man's life. He dealt with the case, and forbade the resort to stimulants, when the patient declared that he would be unequal to his work and ready to sink. "Then," said Sir Andrew, " 'sink like a man!' "—Classmate.

There is a difference between bringing our religion into our business, and bringing our business into our religion.

THE UNITY OF SATAN'S KINGDOM.

Archbishop Ireland has recently removed the ban from all secret societies except Freemasonry, and his people are allowed to unite with all the other lodges at will. We shall look to see the real or supposed ban removed from Masonry as well. The devil is too shrewd a tactician to suffer his kingdom to be divided or continue so. Our Lord credited Satan with being too skillful to divide his forces in his day, and is he likely to commit the blunder now? "Divide and conquer" is a maxim too well known to Satan. It has been too often practiced successfully by him on those he would destroy, to give any countenance to the idea that he will try it on his own kingdom at this late day. If Roman Catholicism is anti-Christ, and who will deny that it is; if oath-bound secret orders are anti-Christ, and who can maintain anything else, then they must all belong to the kingdom of Satan, for "he that is not with me is against me." We need not expect secret societies, not even Masonry and Catholicism, to fall on each others' necks in mortal combat. There is no danger of them doing one another serious harm. The lion and the lamb cannot lie down together with any safety to the lamb. The lion and tiger might keep company together without either being in any particular danger, especially after they had become a little acquainted. They might show signs of hostility when they should first meet as entire strangers, but this feeling would soon wear away. It is true that the lion and the tiger may not have any very close affinity. When running wild in their native jungle they do not herd together; neither do they declare a war of extermination against each other. Whoever heard of a lion killing a tiger and making a dinner of him? But both are decided enemies of the antelope. The lion and the tiger are both of the feline tribe, and are not liable to interfere very much with each other. Masonry and Catholicism may not love each other very much, but they will not inflict serious injury on one another. They may not be companions, but they belong to the same tribe, and are in no danger of being devoured the one by the other. And the same may be said of the opposition of the lesser secret orders to Catholicism, such as the A. P. A., etc.; they may profess a great deal of hostility to Rome, and may think they feel very rapacious, but they are of the same tribe as Rome, and Rome knows she is in no danger of being eaten by them. A cat might feel very belligerent toward a lion, and bristle up for fight, but when it came to the fight he would not feel nearly so much like it; much less would he feel like making a meal of the lion. Rome is just about in as much danger from the A. P. A. as the lion is from the cat, and no more.—Christian Nation.

It is certainly a strange coincidence that an imperial decree is issued by the Czar of Russia, abolishing the use of the Knout for offenses committed by the peasantry; at the same time that a proposal for the re-establishment of the whipping post is pending in the New York Legislature!

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Liquor legislation.—City census.—Methodist conferences.—Protest against military drill in public schools.

There are sixteen bills on liquor legislation now pending in the Legislature. Eight are for the improvement of the present laws, and look toward greater restriction or better enforcement. Eight are in the interests of the liquor traffic, and look toward larger license and the placing of additional obstacles in the way of conviction for violation of the laws. All of these last eight are for Sunday opening and seven of them have that for their specific end and purpose, while the other contains a provision for it. There is some divergence, however, as to details. All of them also are agreed, with but one exception, on another point; viz.: that if the privilege of Sunday selling be granted, no one from the outside shall be able to see who stands at the bar to drink. This fact alone is enough to condemn them. What other business on earth ever asked that it should be compelled by law to lock front doors and draw curtains and screens where it was being carried on, compelling its patrons to skulk in by side entrances?

The authors and advocates of these bills show a curious inconsistency. They claim that the present Sunday laws are a dead letter, and that they are not and cannot be enforced. This position was taken by a representative of the liquor interests of New York City, who appeared before the Assembly Committee on Excise and presented resolutions which he said had been adopted by 120 organizations in New York representing 106,000 citizens. Why is it that these organizations waste their time, energy and money in trying to kill that which they vociferously claim is already dead? Their actions belie their words. As a matter of fact the Sunday laws are very much alive, and are exciting a wholesome check on the lawless and criminal classes.

Eleven hundred and forty-one policemen began to take the census of the city last Thursday morning. A special feature of the counting will be the enumeration of children of school age, whether they attend school or not. Owing to the fact that 300 vacancies exist at present on the police force, to say nothing of the thirteen suspended captains, the labor of census-taking is unusually hard. Policemen who have been climbing stairs and asking questions from eight o'clock in the morning to six o'clock in the evening are not fit to go on patrol duty at night. As about one-half of the actual working force are engaged in taking the census, it follows that the posts to be patrolled at night are twice as large as usual, and it has been feared that the criminal classes would take advantage of this fact and that for two or three weeks that may be occupied in the taking of the census, there would be a corresponding increase of crime.

The Methodist Episcopal conferences are to be held this week, beginning Wednesday. The three conferences that are to assemble are the New York, New York East and the Newark. The New York conference will be presided over by Bishop Newman, the New York East by Bishop Warren, and the Newark by Bishop Hurst. There are about 675 clergymen in these three conferences, but owing to the present five-year limit of pastorates, the average length of the Methodist pastorate is no shorter than the average length of other denominations outside of the large cities.

A protest is being circulated in the city against the McMahon bill now before the Legislature to establish military drill in the public schools. It reads as follows: "A bill now before the Legislature of this State, entitled 'An act to provide and encourage military instruction in the public schools', is designed to further the movements for the general adoption in our public schools of a system of military drill, and appropriates $100,000 for the purpose. Believing that the introduction of military tactics as a part of the education of the youth of this country is unwise, unnecessary and harmful, we protest against the passage of the McMahon bill, and to ask all those opposing it to write to the representatives urging them to vote against the measure. The attempt to encourage in America the growth of the spirit of militarism which has done so much to hamper the civilization and prosperity of Europe, is a menace to freedom. The claim that military drill is required because of its beneficial physical effects, is set aside by the fact that better results can be secured by a suitable system of calisthenics." This protest is meeting with encouraging support, and is signed by such distinguished names as Felix Adler, Ernest Howard Crosby, W. D. Howells, Josephine Shaw Lowell, Bolton Hall and Henry George. The prestige of such names as these ought to go far in commending the protest to the public mind as both reasonable and timely.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

A Christian nation.—Methodist week.—Dr. Sites' Memorial.—Temperance.—Patents.

"This is a Christian nation" was the positive assertion of Rev. Dr. Edward Thompson, general manager of the Sunday League of America, in a strong sermon preached in the Metropolitan Presbyterian church. And Dr. Thompson proved by citing numerous historical facts that the makers of the United States intended it to be a Christian nation, notwithstanding the constant repetition in certain quarters, of the hackneyed assertion that the absence of the name of God from the Constitution was the result of deliberate intention on the part of its framers. Among the proofs cited by Dr. Thompson were the following: That although there was no national flag during the first two years of the Revolution, Gen. Putnam used one on which was inscribed: "An Appeal to Heaven"; that when Washington was sought to lead the armies, he was found on his knees praying to God for the success of our arms; that the men, women and children of the colonies constantly prayed to God for success; that when Washington tendered his resignation he commended the country "to the protection of Almighty God"; that Washington said those who made the Constitution borrowed none of the principles of law from Solon, Lycurgus or Numa, but from Moses and Christ, and that "It was the first constitution to recognize the brotherhood of man"; that the Constitution recognizes a Sunday law by saying that the President shall have "ten days, Sundays excepted, in which to consider each bill"; that Justice Story said there could have been no successful attempt to abolish legislation as to Sabbath observance; that the chief executive takes the oath of office on the Bible; that Congress in 1812 spoke of the "God of battles"; that the judiciary requires men to swear or affirm "by the help of God"; that Judge Cooley in an important decision affirmed that the religion of the United States was Christian, a decision afterwards confirmed by Justice Brewer, who said: "This is a Christian nation", and that the government stamps on its coins: "In God we trust." Surely this was evidence enough, if evidence were required, to prove that this is a Christian nation.

In church circles the seven days just ended might appropriately be referred to as Methodist week. The Baltimore conference (inadvertently called the Washington conference in last week's letter) of Southern Methodists, came to a close to-day. Its ministers have filled many Washington pulpits during their stay, and all of them have added new friends and admirers to the old ones they had in this city. The reports showed all the churches in this conference to be in a fairly prosperous condition notwithstanding the "hard times." There was much talk before the conference met of the probability of an attempt being made to have the conference substitute the Epworth League for the Christian Endeavor Societies in the Southern Methodist churches and considerable feeling was aroused in connection therewith, but no such attempt was made, and so far as can be learned, none was ever contemplated. The Epworth Leaguers do want their organization to be represented in this conference and steps have been taken by which they hope to accomplish that purpose, but they say they are not seeking compulsory members.

A memorial service in honor of the late Rev. Nathan Sites, D. D., who was for thirty-four years a missionary of the M. E. church at Foochow, China, was held in Metropolitan M. E. church Sunday afternoon, with Bishop Hurst presiding. Dr. Baldwin, of New York, who was for nearly twenty-two years associated with Dr. Sites in Chinese missionary work, made the principal address, and Bishop Ninde, of Detroit, who preached a powerful sermon on faith from the same pulpit in the morning, and who has just returned from China, where he spent last Christmas day with Dr. Sites, paid a glowing tribute to his work among the Chinese. The family of Dr. Sites are and have been for many years members of the church in which the memorial service was held. During the service Dr. Johnson, pastor of the church, read letters of condolence from Bishop Andrews, Bishop Mallalieu, Dr. A. B. Leonard, the missionary secretary, George Lansing Taylor, the poet, and others.

The Anti-Saloon League is making a strong effort to interest the colored people in the work of the league, and one of the ways it proposes to do it is to hold mass meetings in the colored churches and have them addressed by our best temperance orators. The first of these meetings is to be held on the afternoon of Sunday, April 21, in Zion Baptist church, which is in a locality where temperance work is needed among the colored people very badly.

The young man who just takes an occasional glass of beer should take a warning from the experience of several young men of Washington who are now in jail awaiting trial for highway robbery, just because of the bad company they got into by taking an occasional glass of beer.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. EASTON.

Washington, D. C., April 4, 1895.

Rev. Dr. Easton, Pastor Eastern Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C.,

Dear Sir:—Having heard of your professions of sanctification and divine healing, and being desirous of what knowledge I could obtain regarding the secret lodge system, I was among those who responded to your invitation to listen to the discourse you gave Sabbath evening, March 31, on "The Genius of Freemasonry." Naturally, I expected one of your profession to give the Gospel trumpet no uncertain sound. Instead of presenting Gospel truth, you made certain assertions and set forth certain doctrines which you said were Masonic, with no seeming attempt to reconcile them with the teaching of Him "who ever spake openly to the world and in secret said nothing." Your text (Amos 7: 7, 8, 9) evidently condemns the kind of worship you set forth as Masonic. You stated that "Jew and Gentile can fraternize in Masonry," and said that you "have often sat by a Jewish clergyman in the lodge."

When Jeroboam practiced such idolatrous worship, God spake in wrath and brought severe punishment upon his chosen people. He said in the words of your text, "Behold, I will set a plumbline in the midst of my people Israel, and the high places of Isaac shall be desolate, and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste; and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword." After reading such a text as this, what kind of a sermon did you preach? Oh, think of it! Instead of explaining your text, you said, "This is suggestive of moral Masonry." "The word plumbline is used but once in the Scripture in designating the work of the great Architect of the universe." After giving the manner in which you thought man's character should be builded step by step, you asserted "that who ever would understand a system should go to the very core of it." This is the "genius." You then professedly gave the elements of Masonry in the following language (I quote the wording as published in the Washington Times):

"The fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of the race, and the sovereignty of individual manhood, with their practical development of character and conduct, bringing out on the spiritual side of our nature reverence toward the Supreme Being, and on the rational side of our nature unfaltering obedience to the rightfully-constituted authorities, are the great elements of Free and Accepted Masonry."

Now, doctor, do you suppose there was an individual in your audience knew what you meant by such a jumble of words? To guess at it, I should say you intended by this to convey the idea that every Mason should do as he pleases. (The individual man is sovereign.) This will lead to a belief in the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of the race, practically develop his character and conduct, bring out reverence toward the Supreme Being and rightly-constituted authority. Do you believe any such stuff as that? If not, why do you laud the institution that you claim teaches such stuff?

You say that persons under twenty-one years of age, together with women, are excluded from the order; that all who unite must do so of their own free will and accord; and that considering these requirements, it is surprising that there are so many Masons. Would it not have been well in that connection to have quoted the clause in the Master Mason's obligation, giving those who will not be received. It is: "Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not be at the initiating of an old man in dotage, a young man in nonage, an atheist, madman, fool or woman." Again, you said: "We solemnly vow at the altar to preserve chastity in the home." Whose home? The following is the vow you took at the altar: "Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife, mother, sister or daughter, I knowing them to be such." Would you regard such a vow absolutely necessary for a Presbyterian clergyman like yourself? Would you not think such a vow sufficient for the Jewish clergyman that you say sits beside you in the lodge?

Colonel Breckinridge said he did not know Madaline Pollard was the daughter of a brother Mason. Should not your lodge have a list of the names of those who are to have this special Masonic care printed for the convenience of lodge brethren, that no mistakes occur? Could you not arrange to make it out at the Masonic dance that is being held each night, from ten o'clock on, in the Masonic Temple in this city? Why did you bring that company of men into your church, wearing white aprons, and explain to the audience that these aprons were emblems of purity? Would anyone have suspected their lives were pure without such an emblem? If you wish to know of homes cursed by husbands being led astray through the influence of men belonging to Myron M. Parker Lodge (the lodge you so lauded), I am prepared to cite you to such homes. Why did you say, "We pledge our sacred honor to stand by the men we receive for life; they may go where they will, they will yet find the hand of help there." Was this not to try and please those you were advertising in this wholesale way, and to seek to draw into their lodge the aspiring young men who might listen to your advertisement?

Did you forget the horrible swearing you did as you passed through the degrees, that you could thus unblushingly advertise such an institution? Let me remind you. In the Entered Apprentice degree you swore you would not tell the truth about Masonry to anyone outside the lodge, "under no less penalty than having your throat cut and your tongue torn out by the roots." In the Fellow Craft, "under no less penalty than having your left breast torn open, your heart and vitals taken from thence," etc. In the Master Mason's degree, "under no less penalty than having your body severed in twain, your bowels taken from thence and burned to ashes, the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven," etc.

How horrible! But I am informed that this is but the beginning of your swearing, as you have taken many more degrees with penalties as barbarous. Oh, how dare you prostitute your decency, honor and manhood, to say nothing of Christianity, in this manner? Did you believe your audience to be dead to all spirituality, that they could not detect the wolf under the "lamb-skin apron" with which your "beloved brother" of the lodge was clothed? Did you think that wife whose husband has been made a sot by attending Masonic banquets and balls would feel any more reconciled to her fate by what you said?

Rev. Stephen Merritt, at one time Master of the largest Masonic lodge in New York City, said: "They used to lead me about blindfolded in the lodge. It was the blind leading the blind into the ditch."

May God open your eyes and help you, if possible, to undo what you are doing in leading souls astray. W. B. Stoddard.

P. S —Should you feel called on to further advocate Masonry, I should be glad to meet you at any suitable time and place in public discussion.

REFORM NEWS.

IN EASTERN WASHINGTON.

Portland, Oregon, April 1, 1895.

Dear Cynosure:—I was conveyed from Lone Pine to Oaksdale by Bro. Clarke through a snowstorm almost equal to a Nebraska blizzard. I found that Bro. Whealdon had everything arranged for me to speak. Having failed to secure a church, he hired a hall at four dollars, put in a stove, and seated it himself. I spoke here two nights to good congregations, notwithstanding the very inclement weather. The lodges were well represented. Some could not endure the truth, so they got out. Among the first to show the "white feather" was the Liberal U. B. pastor, who tries to make the people believe that the church is divided on the holiness question. He preaches holiness and courts the lodge, the most unholy institution in all the land. After the lectures quite a number expressed their sympathy for our cause. A few signed the constitution, and two took the paper.

On Saturday night I spoke to a very good crowd at Elberton. Again the lodges were represented in the congregation to a good degree. They held their position and kept their jewel well. I think much good was done for the cause of reform here. The Methodist Episcopal pastor heard me through. He seems to be free from lodge connection. I heard him preach on Sabbath morning, and he struck about all the popular sins of the age except the lodge, which he may have avoided for prudential reasons.

We have some warm friends here. Uncle Henry Kerns, as the elder is called, has raised a large family of boys and one daughter. They are not only free from the lodge, but are opposed to it. They are all Christians save one, and he treated your agent with such great kindness we shall never cease our prayers for him that he may be saved.

Elder J. A. Kenoyer and wife came in not only to see and hear us, but to assist us in our work. They are friends of the N. C. A. at all times. The Lord be praised for his goodness.

After resting a little I shall plan another trip to Puget Sound. P. B. Williams.

Men who care little for temperance will at length see that the saloon, because of its lawlessness, to say nothing of its liquor, must be blotted out.—Our Day.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST.

Goshen, Ind., April 1, 1895.

Editor Cynosure:—I enclose a couple of clippings from the Goshen Daily Times, which clearly demonstrate the onward march and progress of secret societies. It seems in this city as if almost everybody belongs to some one or more of the orders.

Religion has no better educator than the principles of fraternity espoused by the secret organizations, and there ought to be no conflict of sentiment between the two, except, perhaps, an effort to see which can do the greatest good.

What an educator religion has in secret fraternities! I don't think there is any conflict between secret societies and that churchism that looks to the secret fraternities to educate it. The second clipping says:

With the present unusual growth of fraternal organizations, the principles of the brotherhood of man are receiving a wonderful impetus throughout the land. After all, there is no influence so far reaching which conduces to the peace of the world as the honest friendship of fraternity.

This evidently counts out the religion of Jesus Christ, or I don't know what can. All the world has gone after the beast and his image. God bless the Cynosure, in defense of the truth.

Joel H. Austin.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Bloomington, Ill., April 1, 1895.

Editor Cynosure:—The story of the quarrel between the kite and the hawk as to which should protect (dominate) the dove cote, has been exemplified in our city during the last fortnight. The A. P. A.—self-appointed guardians of our public school system—and other like conspirators, have locked horns over the matter, and the outside public have been amused and interested, if not instructed. You're a ———, and you're another, has passed quite freely back and forth, and the public has responded, Amen! go on brethren, free your minds; you are both telling the truth.

Now, although secret societies are usually too good to talk about, especially to criticise, by these gentlemen publicity has come in this case through our leading daily paper, which is reputed to be of Roman Catholic proclivities and leans to their views on public instruction. Secret society dialect, manners and tactics have been quite freely criticised incidentally, and as freely condemned in this instance.

It seems that the editor of the Public School

Journal is also publisher of text books for schools, and he has become restive under A. P. A. dictation of our school board, it may be as affecting his interests as publisher; and he has gone into print in opposition to their plans for our board election, which occurs to-day. He has made it quite warm for the fraternity on their record of the past year; shown their manipulation quite plainly, and made some strong points against secret societies which intermeddle with political or public interests; all the time, however, carefully excepting such social, fraternal and beneficiary societies as the Masons and Odd-fellows.

The public, however, easily understand that what is pernicious in the special case cannot be so very innocent in the abstract, as he would teach. The stereotyped defense of the A. P. A. is the same as the other lodges, and shows the same paternity. "You don't know anything about it" (say they) "unless you belong;" and if any one has seceded, he is a "perjured villain," and unworthy of belief. The same kind of misleading statements are used by them as in other lodges, having a word or syllable to creep out on, showing the same kind of craft.

On the other side, the well known facility of lodge-men, for taking both sides of a question, is shown. A Rev. Father Burk of our city is quoted in a speech, from which it would seem that the Catholic priesthood were the center support, promoters, and special friends and advocates of our public schools as now conducted. This, with the published condemnatory utterances of other priests, and the diabolical sentiments attributed to them by the A. P. A., leave the public somewhat bewildered as to statements which come from occult sources.

To-day there is great excitement in our city over offices to which there are no salaries or fees attached. Both sides have candidates, and money is being spent in the canvass. Where this comes from and how the givers are to be reimbursed does not appear. Great is the secret empire!

THE POSITION OF THE COVENANTERS.

Editor Cynosure:—In your issue of March 21st you say that Bro. M. A. Gault's article on "Secret Societies and the Covenanter Church," published at that date, "will be read with interest," but we must confess that we have read with more pleasurable interest many other articles from the pen of the same writer. Bro. Gault is a friend of ours, is a brother in the ministry, and has had a larger public experience than we have had; but the writer was born and reared in the Covenanter church, and has been preaching in it for about ten years. In our opinion Bro. Gault's article may do harm. It may discourage anti-secret friends who thought they had a stronger ally in the Covenanter church than he represents her to be. It is not calculated to encourage his own brethren. Bro. Gault recognizes much of what our church has done in the cause of anti-secrecy, but he should give her more honor. She is worthy of it. We will not deny that it would seem wise to have secretism discussed at the international convention of Covenanters, and we will not take issue with what he says of the trans-Atlantic Reformed Presbyterians. We are not informed as to the exact state of the anti-secret question among them. But we do claim to have considerable knowledge of the proper state of things among our people at home; and we assert that the day has not come for any one to write apologetically about the position of the American Covenanter church concerning secret orders. Moreover, I am sorry that Bro. Gault has gone with his doubts and fears to a journal outside of our own denomination. The Reformed Presbyterian church is "in position to be outspoken on this subject;" and Bro. Gault may still "cherish the hope" that his "beloved Covenanter denomination is in a position to speak out." Secrecy, as well as other evils, for the millennium is not here yet, may worm itself here and there into the Covenanter church; but that denomination stands on this great question substantially straight and pure. What are the facts? I think it can be said with entire safety that not a single minister belongs to any secret oath-bound society. Non-membership in such orders is a term of communion; and it is enforced. Secret society men may be in our church, but they are rara avis. I have never certainly known a single member of our church (not speaking of the case referred to below) to belong to the Masonic order; and have very seldom heard assertions to that effect, or that they belonged to any secret order. Every year at its annual assembly the Covenanter church presents a strong report (always published afterwards) on the subject of secret societies. The secret empire has no "grip" on our church.

Bro. Gault says: "One of our missionaries we sent recently to a foreign field had to be recalled, because it was found on his arrival that he was a Freemason." We had not understood exactly the reason why he was recalled. But to how many similar instances of connection with Freemasonry, or with any secret order, can Bro. Gault point, among either ministers or missionaries, within the past fifty years? And does he not say the missionary was "recalled" because he was a Freemason? What more could the board do? Did they know he was a Freemason when they appointed him? Certainly not; or he never would have gone!

Moreover, Bro. Gault says that no less than half-a-dozen of our ministers who graduated at the Indiana State University were members of college secret societies. This remark, with the quotation following it, certainly puts those ministers in an unfortunate position. They are bad, and they can't get over it. It would not be strange if a good many more than half-a-dozen of our ministers were somewhat crooked in college days; but we should be thankful that Paul can become trustworthy, even if in earlier days he has been Saul.

Certain ministers in different churches have, no doubt, been intemperate in college days. Without excusing such conduct for a moment, can it not be asked if, because of it, their position now on the temperance question must be a matter of suspicion?

The Covenanter church is not perfect. She may be at fault in a number of instances on the secret society question. She should be on her guard. She should be yet more active in this great reform. Yet on this subject she can challenge investigation, and her record and present condition will bear scrutiny. T. H. Acheson.

[Yea, what clearing of yourselves. . . . ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter. 2 Cor. 7: 11.]

THE HUMPHRY BILL DEAD.

Springfield, Ill., March 29,
(Christian Citizenship Headquarters.)

Editor Cynosure:—Upon the passage of the Humphry race bill by the Senate last week our league sent requests and petitions all over the State, to the effect that the representatives be requested to vote against the Humphry and Aspinwall bills. As a result, the members of the House have been deluged with letters and petitions to vote against the bills, until they are fairly sick on the subject. In addition, ministerial societies have sent in petitions to the same effect. There is no doubt that the Humphry bill and any similar is as dead as a door nail.

The "Third House" (lobby) represents nearly every bill that is before the Legislature excepting reform bills, and the members seem surprised at our efforts because they are new. Nevertheless they are very friendly, and with proper attention, we can accomplish much good at this point.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

The Century for April has almost as much variety in topic as in the number of its articles. Military warfare is represented by Prof. Sloane's Napoleon Life, naval warfare by Molly Elliot Seawell's article on Paul Jones, invention by T. C. Martin's paper on Tesla's recent work, the drama by a note on Mme. Rejane, with portrait, music by Henry T. Finck's biographical sketch of Stavenhagen, also with a portrait, statesmanship by Noah Brooks's article on Lincoln's re election, art by a beautiful example of Cole's engraving in his Old Dutch Master Series, religious and educational interests by an article by Lyman Abbott on "Religious Teaching in the Public Schools," travel by a paper by Miss Preston on a new field of travel "Beyond the Adriatic," fiction by Mr. Crawford's and Mrs. Harrison's serials, and by three short stories, public questions by various articles in the departments, and poetry by contributions from Florence Earle Coates, Maurice Francis Egan, Henry A. Beers, Louise Chandler Moulton, Robert Underwood Johnson and others. Mr. Cole's engraving is a portrait of a man by Ferdinand Bol, which the engraver has treated in a large manner. The pictures in the number include original work by Kemble, Pyle, Castaigne, George Wharton Edwards, Pape, Ogden and Thulstrup, among the Americans, and reproductions by engraving or by half-tone of pictures illustrating the Life of Napoleon from originals by Gros, Raffet, Desoria, Gerard, Delort, Chartier, Le Comte, Courboin, Detaille, Bellange and Myrbach, among the French. There is also a striking drawing of Mme. Rejane by Krohg, a Scandinavian artist, and in an article on Tesla's recent electrical inventions some remarkable photographs of the inventor and of Mark Twain, Joseph Jefferson and Marion Crawford. It is evident that the Century has spared no expense in the illustration of the Napoleon history. We quote from Lyman Abbott's excellent article on "Religious Teaching in the Public Schools": "This nation has a corporate personality. . . . If a free State has a right to exist, it has a right to do whatever is necessary to maintain its existence. Self-preservation is a fundamental right and a fundamental duty; and popular education is essential to the preservation and perpetuity of a free State. Ignorant and immoral men are not competent to take care of themselves, still less to direct the destinies of a great empire. . . . The public school system of America is not a public charity. . . . The free State assumes the responsibility for free popular education, because universal education is necessary to universal suffrage. The men who are to determine what are the rights and duties of the State in dealing with other States, what are the rights and duties of the individual citizens in dealing with one another, what is the nature, penalty and cure of crime, and what is the moral quality of the corporate and co-operative acts of the community, are to determine moral questions, and must be educated to perceive moral distinctions, and to see that moral considerations always outweigh considerations of mere expediency or apparent self-interest. Otherwise the State will be an immoral State, and the representatives of the State, whether on the bench, in the executive chair, or in the legislative chambers, will be immoral men. If it is the primary right and duty of the State to give whatever education is necessary for good citizenship, it is self-evident that it is its primary right and duty to give education in moral principles, and training to the moral impulses and the will."

The Preacher's Magazine for April contains an excellent sermon by Hugh Price Hughes on "Lukewarmness." We are sorry to see that this magazine falls in with the popular tendency to observe days not appointed by Christ, as Good Friday, Easter, etc. "In vain do ye worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

BOOKS.

"Pebbles From the Path of a Pilgrim." This is a book of facts, not of fancies; a simple narrative of events as they occurred years ago and are recalled. The experiences recorded in the first chapter, of the fatherless girl in the hands of a designing and cruel man, enlist the sympathy of the reader at the start; but as we follow the narrative to its close, the pity for the little child gives place to a stronger loving sympathy for one who, like Jesus, "went about doing good." The book is attractively bound and finely illustrated; cover is blue silk with silver trimmings; size 6x8 inches; 320 pages. Price $1.50. H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston.

HOW TO MAKE PEA SOUP.

A Delightful Dish Easily Made and at a Trifling Cost.

Use half a pint, or 7 ounces, of dried peas for every 2 quarts of soup you want. Put them in 3 quarts of cold water after washing them well. Bring them slowly to a boil. Add a bone or bit of ham, a turnip and a carrot, peeled, an onion stuck with 3 cloves, and simmer 3 hours, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. Then pass the soup through a sieve with the aid of a potato masher, and if it shows any sign of settling stir into it a teaspoonful each of butter and flour mixed together dry. This will prevent settling. Meantime fry some dice of stale bread, about 2 slices, cut half an inch square, in hot fat, drain them on a sieve and put them in the bottom of the soup tureen in which the pea soup is served, or cut some bits of very hard stale bread or dry toast to use instead of fried bread. By the time the soup is done it will be boiled down to 2 quarts and will be very thick and good. This recipe will cost you about 10 cents.

How to Make "Brown Betty."

To each cupful of finely chopped sour apples add a cupful of fine bread crumbs, 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little cinnamon, grated lemon rind or nutmeg and a tablespoonful of butter. Spread the apples upon the bottom of a buttered pudding dish, then a little sugar and flavoring and a few bits of butter, then bread crumbs, then apples again, and so on until all is used, crumbs being placed on top. If the apples are not juicy, add 3 tablespoonfuls of water. Cover the dish and bake three-quarters of an hour. Then uncover and bake 15 minutes longer and send to table in the same dish.

How to Make Skeleton Leaves.

Skeleton leaves may be made by steeping leaves in rainwater in an open vessel exposed to the air and sun. Water must occasionally be added to compensate loss by evaporation. The leaves will putrefy, and their membranes will begin to open; then lay them on a clean white plate filled with fresh water, and with gentle touches take off the external membranes, separating them cautiously near the middle rib. This process requires a great deal of patience, as ample time must be given for the vegetable tissue to decay and separate. The following is a quicker way: A tablespoonful of chloride of lime in a liquid state, mixed with a quart of pure water. Leaves of plants to be soaked in the mixture for about four hours, then taken out and well washed in a basin filled with fresh water, after which left to dry with free exposure to light and air.

How to Use Lemons on the Hair.

A lemon cut in half, or, better still, in quarters, so that the pulp can easily be applied to the roots of the hair, will stop any ordinary case of falling out. It is an agreeable remedy. Besides being cool and pleasant to the skin, the scent, unlike that left by the petroleum cure, is distinctly refreshing, and it also has the merit of cheapness.

How to Keep Lace Veils Smooth.

The best way to keep lace veils smooth and in good order is to roll them up when they are taken off, keeping the edges flat and well stretched apart during the process. This method will make a veil last longer and keep it looking fresher than any veil case, however dainty in design.

FREE TO DYSPEPSIA SUFFERERS.

The Christian Cynosure.

WM. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1895.

My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him. He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence; I shall not be moved. Ps. 62: 5, 6.

Members of the National Christian Association and friends of the cause of Christ are especially requested to think and plan and pray for the annual meeting which occurs so soon. A full attendance is desired. If arrangements can be made there will be held in connection with the annual meeting a conference at some church in the city, to discuss the Duty of the Christian Church with reference to the lodge.

We insert on the editorial page of this Cynosure this week an article "The Masonic Conspiracy," which was written by Jonathan Blanchard. The article needs no apology. Cynosure readers know that as a writer, on this and kindred subjects, Pres. Blanchard was unsurpassed; and while the Cynosure aims to be new and "up to date," we may occasionally insert without comment something from his inimitable pen.

The fact that the use of the City Hall in St. Paul, Minnesota, warmed, lighted and free of expense, was tendered the friends who met to hold the State meeting there last month, is encouraging, and should not fail to inspire feelings of gratitude to God, and faith for such favors. Such meetings generally are held in hired halls, and sometimes it has been necessary to hire officers to keep the lodgemen quiet; and cases are on record when violence was done in spite of policemen to those attending such meetings.

ARMENIA AND THE TURKS.

The investigations which have been made in regard to the alleged atrocities committed by Turks in Armenia show that the first reports fell short of the truth in regard to the wanton cruelty practiced. Cold murder is bad enough; but the deliberate unprovoked torture of men, women and children by men (or incarnate fiends) which was indulged in by the Turks and Kurds upon communities of Armenians, is too revolting to contemplate.

The Christian religion was introduced into Armenia during the second century, and the Bible was translated into the Armenian language during the fifth century. A state church was formed similar to the Greek church. For many years the American Board has been carrying on a successful work among these nominal Christians with good results. The Turks, who are for the most part Mohammedans, have never been friendly, and whenever they dare, are hostile to all efforts to Christianize this inoffensive people.

What American might do in the matter is indicated or suggested in Our Day, to which we are indebted for an account of a reception given recently by the great Boston lecturer and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cook, to Rev. J. K. Greene of Constantinople and Mrs. J. H. W. Stuckenburg, recently of Berlin. About two hundred invited guests were present, some of them persons who are well known for their missionary and philanthropic labors.

Mr. Green read a paper on American Treaty Rights in Turkey, after which the subject was discussed somewhat by the company. The Turkish authorities, Dr. Greene said, simply ignored the work of the Christian missionaries for many years; and even now the Turkish government in its year-book gives an account of every community, even the Armenian and Jewish, but contains no mention of the large Christian gatherings.

"After the Crimean war" (we quote from Mr. Greene) "the Turkish government acted as if it recognized Christians and meant to enforce religious liberty;" but since 1864, when it was seen that Christianity was spreading rapidly, "Christians have been maltreated and made to pay a special tax to live.

"Despite the treaties, and in the face of such facts as these, the European powers have refused to demand the enforcement of religious liberty. In 1893 there were six well-equipped colleges for men and three for young women, twenty-three high schools for boys and sixteen for girls, having a total of 73,000 scholars. Besides these there are over twenty common schools. These are patronized by families who are not members of the Protestant community. Almost the entire higher education is in the hands of the Protestant missions. A Christian education means an awakening from the stagnation of centuries; it means thought; and while it does not mean disloyalty, and does not mean revolution, it is nevertheless true that those minds affected by it will naturally desire the reform of certain methods of the government. And the Turkish government is doing its best to restrict and control these branches of education.

"The chief printing bureaus are in the hands of the missionaries, and are looked upon with hostile eyes. Every book is examined by the censors, and taxed; these examinations and taxes are repeated in every province. A man is liable to imprisonment at any moment, for weeks, without accusation or conviction, only to be discharged, with neither an explanation nor an apology.

"The truth of the matter is that the Turkish government, deeply regretting that it did not end, sixty years ago, all attempts to Christianize their country, is doing all it can to hamper and ruin the religious and educational work of the American missions." The tardiness of the American authorities to recognize or rectify wrongs done to American citizens was mentioned, and several instances were given.

After the reading of Dr. Greene's paper, Dr. Hamlin spoke of the intrigues of Russia as, in his opinion, lying at the bottom of many disturbances in the Turkish Empire. Prof. Stuckenburg showed how closely the Armenian question concerns the complicated interests of the great powers of Europe, and that the United States is better fitted to interfere by moral pressure in Turkish affairs without provoking war than is any European power. The following propositions were unanimously adopted:

"That in consequence of existing treaties between the United States and Turkey, it lies within the power of the United States government to exercise its influence and authority to protect the interests of American citizens resident in Turkey.

"That it is the duty of our government to utter its protest against the atrocities that have shocked the civilized world.

"That we appeal to citizens throughout the United States to use all possible influence with the government at Washington, by petition and otherwise, to obtain indemnity for the past and security for the future.

"That we suggest to all ministers of the Gospel throughout the country to bring to the attention of their people, on the last Sunday in April, the facts in regard to the Armenian atrocities and the violations of our rights."

It seems to us that such meetings are, in their outcome, calculated to maintain our national honor and prosperity far more than a resort to arms in regard to disputed territory. In the strength of God let us "wage our peaceful war."

SILVER.

Just now this precious metal is all unconsciously a subject of universal comment. Even the tariff question which, in regard to how high or low it should be, so long served as the dividing line between the two great Republican and Democratic parties, has given place in a large measure to the questions of free coining of silver and bimetalism. England as well as America, and the other Eastern nations as well as England, are discussing the advisability of a double metal money standard, which will make silver as well as gold legal tender for national and other debts.

As a nation and as individuals to a great extent we have, instead of keeping to the rule "Owe no man anything," borrowed all we could when there seemed a probability that we could make money or gain a temporary advantage by the transaction.

For instance, men would borrow money to invest in land or stocks or real estate, hoping to reap dividends on the property which would enable them to pay the interest on the debt as it came due and finally to pay the principal, after which they could stop working and live at ease on the income.

Our national debt at one time within the last ten or fifteen years was so small that there was a great cry made, and the G. A. R. kindly came forward and offered to relieve the overstocked vaults of the U. S. treasury.

One hundred and sixty-three members of the Illinois Legislature have given answers to the following questions:

1. What is the prevailing sentiment of the people of your district on the financial issue, especially with reference to the question of free silver coinage?
2. Are you in favor of the free coinage of silver by the government of the United States at the present ratio in the absence of an international arrangement on the subject?
3. What candidate of your party do you favor for the Presidential nomination next year?

This indicates the fact that the parties now expect to make silver and not any moral issue foremost in the coming election. The leaders among the "silvermen" so-called, say "The gulf between the gold monopoly and the shrinking fortunes, penury and want, of the masses grows wider every year. The impossibility of converting the gold leaders of the two old parties to bimetalism is becoming more apparent every day." From the Chicago Times Herald we take the following:

The fact is that each party relies solely upon the misconduct of the other, and in the past fifteen years each side has been able to make unlimited capital from the shortcomings of the party in power. But there is going to be another element in the next campaign. The people are tired of the two old parties, disgusted with their shortcomings, enraged at their failure to legislate for the people and in favor of the money of the Constitution. The people will unite in 1896, and such a union means the restoration of the government to the people for whom it was ordained.

This indicates that on the principle that "when rogues fall out, honest men get their dues," we will have better times. But "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things that he possesseth." We have yet to learn as a nation that to be right is better than to be rich. "Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right."

FRIENDS TO THE FRONT.

"At a meeting of Friends held in Philadelphia the fifteenth of the third month, 1895, attention was called to the fact that some of our young men seem not sufficiently informed as to the testimony which our yearly meeting has borne against our members joining secret societies. It is recommended to the monthly meetings to circulate among their members an extract from the discipline on this subject, so that they be preserved from this snare." The following good testimony was sent out in response to this recommendation:

"It is the judgment of this meeting that our members ought not to join Masonic lodges or other secret organizations. While some of these societies are less objectionable than others, yet wherever the obligation to secrecy is attached to them, they should be shunned by our members. If serious reputable citizens join the less objectionable of these societies, their example tends to encourage others to become members of those whose influence is still more pernicious. Secret societies are capable of producing much evil, and are incapable of producing any good which might not be effected by safe and open means. Believing that membership in them will be detrimental to their religious welfare, we earnestly exhort all our members to keep clear of the whole system, and if any of them have become entangled in this snare, overseers and other concerned Friends should endeavor to convince them that their course is repugnant to our religious principles and testimonies."

THE MASONIC CONSPIRACY.

Our indictment of this Masonic mischief is universal. It is not only hostility to our government and religion, but "a conspiracy against God and the human race." Of course this term, Masonic, is here to be taken in its broad sense, including not only the London Blue Lodge of 1717 and its derivatives, but the Masonry whose "name is legion:" scientific in the college, beneficial in the society, infidel in the club, political in the circle, reformatory in temperance; benevolent, charitable, social or patriotic, pagan or Christian; the Purrow in Africa, the Jesuits, with their "Monita Secreta," and the papacy at Rome, the mother of them all, secret from confessional to inquisition; whatever the hollow pretense set up for show, these deluges of darkness pour along all our channels of life like the flood from the mouth of the dragon, diverse, yet the same:

"Distinct like the billows, yet one like the sea."

Let us see whether these societies have a common nature, and what that common nature is, and whether, in any just sense, it is conspiracy against God. There can be but one moral system of the universe, whose author and executive is God: and for this plain reason, that a second Infinite, if distinct, must displace the first. And the badge and binding-force of this moral system, the very bottom on which right and wrong rest, is WORSHIP, which binds mind to the God of mind. Now the one point which we make is that these secret societies, by substituting another worship for the true, in effect displace God from his own moral system, and so destroy it; that in short, horrible as it may seem, there is no obligatory right and wrong in a lodge!

Upon the ground question, whether there exists a conspiracy against God, it is sufficient to receivers of the Scriptures that they declare there is such a conspiracy; that there is such a person as Satan, "the god of this world" and king of its evils, warring against God and goodness. And even infidels and atheists, if they are honest ones, one would think, must admit that the evils of this world, if not the result of conspiracy, are yet managed with craft.

But are secret societies part and parcel of that conspiracy? Do they belong to that dark movement which makes the heathen nations heathen; incapable of moral order and good government; "without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful." And though we should acquit the masses of secretism on the score of their ignorance or delusion, are the leaders of these secret movements conscious or unconscious conspirators against God and mankind?

I shall bring some proofs that they are such conspirators, from three sources, viz.: Authority, Facts, and the Scriptures.

A volume might easily be filled with quotations from Masonic writers who declare, substantially, that Freemasonry is derived from the pagan religions and mysteries. Indeed this is implied in the general declaration of their standard Lexicon (Mackey) that "the religion of Masonry is that in which mankind are agreed," for that certainly is not the religion of Christ.

Arnold, a respectable Masonic writer, page 10, of his "Philosophical History Freemasonry," says: "The Masonic order stands pre-eminent, not only because it is, 'in a degree,' the successor of the Egyptian and Grecian mysteries, ... but also it was the source whence all the secret fraternities have proceeded." If this be true, then secret fraternities are all, "in a degree," copied from the heathen mysteries.

The author of "The Ancient Scottish Rite," says of Masonic baptism of infants, that it is not a rival of the baptism practiced by Christian churches, but "has descended from the religion which existed before the Pyramids;" that is, Egyptian heathenism.

But there is a statement by Emanuel Rebold, in his "General History of Freemasonry in Europe," page 392, which settles the point, so far as Masonic authority goes, that our common Blue Lodge Masonry is actually the heathenism of the nations. Rebold says:

"A very limited knowledge of the history of primitive worship and mysteries is necessary to enable any person to recognize in the Master Mason, Hiram, the Osiris of the Egyptians, the Mithras of the Persian, the Bacchus of the Greeks, and the Atys of the Phrygians, of whom these people celebrated the passion, death, and resurrection, as Christians celebrate to-day that of Jesus Christ."

Here we have an explicit, Masonic, authoritative declaration that Freemasonry is a copy of the old heathenism, and that Hiram Abiff represents, or rather is a reproduction, of several of their principal gods, who were, it seems, killed and raised from the dead, as caricatures of Christ. If then heathenism is conspiracy against God and man, Freemasonry is.

Let us turn from Masonic authorities to Christian.

MacKnight, Adam Clark, Warburton, and other learned commentators, tell us that the "unfruitful works of darkness" which Paul commands Christians to disfellowship (Eph. 5: 11) were these very heathen mysteries with which Freemasons now declare the spiritual identity of their lodge. MacKnight gives us an analysis of those mysteries, including the "terror infused into the minds of the initiated," and bringing him from darkness to light, thus showing the moral and literal indentity of Masonry and those mysteries which the apostle commanded to be disfellowshiped, turned out of the Ephesian churches. Adam Clark paraphrases Paul thus: "Have no religious connection whatever with heathen or their worship. The apostle warns them not to be deceived by the 'vain words' by which the mystagogues of that day covered and justified their abominations, adding: 'Because of these things the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience.'" Eph. 5: 6.

This testimony from authority is sufficient, and sufficiently explicit, that Freemasonry is but an expansion and continuance in our day of that dark system of mystic paganism which the apostles disfellowshiped as conspiracy against God.

"But," one says, "we are a practical people. give us proof from facts." Well, these are facts:

1. Secret socicties all practice more or less human substitutes for the worship of God. This is conspiracy to displace him.

2. Freemasons, by what law or rule I know not, but I know the fact, commonly destroy books and writings which contain facts and reasoning against the lodge. This is conspiracy against truth and the God of truth.

3. Freemasonry separates husbands from wives by a life-long oath of silence, and that in matters of mutual concern, as both wife and husband are certainly concerned in paying lodge dues. This is conspiracy to change marriage so that it will no more symbolize the union of Christ and souls.

4. For a like reason, Christ, even in Christian countries, is omitted from the creed and prayers of the Blue Lodge or fundamental Masonry. And though the dangling additions to Masonry called Templar degrees, recognize Christ, they insult him by brutal rites and blasphemous oaths in which, while the Templar seems to recognize Christ in the Commandery he swears fealty to his exclusion from the Blue Lodge below. This is conspiracy, blasphemy, and insult combined.

5. Freemasonry repeals, by implication, the laws of God. That against adultery by limiting its prohibitions to the female relatives of Masons. That against fraud, by forbidding to wrong a member of the lodge. And the law against murder, by perpetually repeated illegal penalties of death. It thus repeals general laws by special limitations; impiously thrusts itself into the seat of the Universal Law-giver, and by localizing and limiting morals, destroys them! Is not this conspiracy against God?

6. Then the lodge, in all its published prayers, calls its unknown god "The Grand Architect of the Universe;" whereas Christ, the Bible tells us, "made the world," and is therefore the "Supreme Architect," but he is excluded from the creed at the door of the lodge.

Such facts might be multiplied; but these are sufficient, and anyone who will, may satisfy himself of their truth. And just so truly as we know they are true, just so truly do we know that Freemasonry is conspiracy against God and man.

JONATHAN BLANCHARD.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—S. F. Proctor, Stout, Texas, writes: "I am still in the battle against sin, working with my hands through the week and on Sunday preaching justification by repentance and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ."

—Rev. M. A. Gault preached on the 7th inst. at Princeton, Indiana, and is now on his way to Sparta, Ill., where he expects to assist Bro. Farris next Sabbath. We trust that Bro. Gault's health is being confirmed.

—Mr. Robert Gorely sends an encouraging word from Tyrone, Nebraska: "I have long felt a close relationship to all the Cynosure company. I cannot do without the Cynosure while I am able to pay for it. I endorse its reform principles."

—Our friend and brother, Timothy Hudson, calls at the Cynosure office to leave the assurance of his continued interest in the success of Christ's cause, on his way home to Kalamazoo, from Denver, Colorado, where he has been spending the winter.

—Charles Louis Loos, President of Kentucky University, expresses his cordial sympathy with the principles and work of the National Christian Association. In regard to the college fraternities, his opinion is valuable. He says: "These fraternities are a curse rather than a blessing to collegiate institutions. They boast especially of 'inculcating the highest sentiments of honor,' while they lead young men—good young men—to violate the solemn pledge of their matriculation, to respect and obey the laws of the University."

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, in lieu of a report of his work, sends an open letter to the Cynosure, and in a personal note he says: "The Masons and Knights of Pythias are both having Easter festivals and dances to raise money for their orders here. Our work is gaining, and friends are in good heart."

—Bro. H. H. Hinman writes from Oberlin that his health is better than it has been. His daughter, Miss Susie Hinman, who went to China less than a year ago, "can understand about everything that is said in Chinese, and can speak, but with effort." She speaks of some earnest Christians among the native Chinese.

—Mr. Charles Follet, who was one of the first to subscribe to the fund which secured the Carpenter building to the National Christian Association, called at the Cynosure office on his way South. He is thinking of joining a colony which Gen. Howard and Mr. Wilson of the Farm, Field and Stockman are sending to North Carolina.

—Mr. B. Tunnicliffe, who has been for some years an active worker in anti-secret reform at Schuyler's Lake, N. Y., writes of revivals in his vicinity. He says a revival in Cooperstown resulted in two hundred and fifty conversions; and the one in Schuyler's Lake resulted in the reviving or conversion of about one-third of the population. As is frequently the case, the lodge spirit was roused and there was opposition.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The Lodge Lamp sent to Cynosure subscribers last week had as a chief object the witnessing for our Lord and Master before a much larger audience than we are now doing.

This can be done in two ways. The National Christian Association offers you a weekly paper, the Christian Cynosure, and a monthly, the Lodge Lamp. Hence every one who feels his responsibility to God to do all that is possible for his neighbor has an opportunity to use some of his benevolences in helping to warn against the altars of Cain set up in the secret lodges of our country.

The first proposition is to anyone who sends $3 to this office before the first of May next, with the names of two new subscribers for the Cynosure and five names for the Lodge Lamp—making seven yearly subscriptions—the Association will send the above papers for one year.

The second proposition is to anyone who will send $3 to this office before the first of next May with names of three subscribers for the New York Tribune and twenty names for the Lodge Lamp—making twenty-three yearly subscriptions—the papers named will be sent for one year.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.—The Cook County Sunday-school Association, at its regular monthly meeting held March 26, strongly recommended all Sunday-school officials in other cities and at country points to send word to some church or Sunday-school officer in the vicinity to which their members move when coming to this city. If this is done, the hand of welcome will be at once extended, and strangers will feel at home and be helped in various ways.

Commenting on the result of the election of the day before, Lincoln said, with great solemnity: "I should be the veriest shallow and self-conceited blockhead upon the footstool, if, in my discharge of the duties that are put upon me in this place, I should hope to get along without the wisdom that comes from God, and not from men." Noah Brooks, in the Century for April.

"Mrs. Jane Coward of Claysburg, is not so easily intimidated as her name implies. Although warned fourteen times by White Caps to move from the neighborhood where she resided, she paid no attention to them. As a result of her defiance she is now without a home, her residence having been destroyed by fire. No cause is known for the outrage."

LOOKING FOR A MAN.

REV. MADISON C. PETERS DIFFERS WITH PHILOSOPHERS.

Does Not Believe That All True and Honest Men Are Dead—A Few Remarks on Swindling Monopolies—Advises Young Men to Remain In the Country.

Three thousand years ago the Prophet Jeremiah said, "Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now and know and seek in the broad places thereof if ye can find a man." But Jeremiah was "the weeping prophet." Philosophers in all ages have complained that human creatures are plentiful, but men are scarce. But philosophers made their ideal too high, their conception of what man ought to be too lofty. I have no sympathy with the cynic of whom history informs us that, being ordered to summon the good men of the city before the Roman censor, proceeded immediately to the graveyard, called to the dead below, saying he knew not where to find a good man alive, or that gloomy sage, that prince of grumblers, Thomas Carlyle, who described the population of his country as consisting of so many millions, "mostly fools," and who could speak in praise of no one but himself and Mrs. Carlyle, the latter deserving all the praise she got for enduring him so long. When any one complains, as the famous Diogenes did, that he has to hunt the streets with candles at noonday to find an honest man, we are apt to think that his nearest neighbor would have quite as much difficulty as himself in making the discovery. If you think there is not a true man living, you had better, for appearance, put off saying it until you are dead yourself.

What Religion Is Not.

Religion is not churchgoing. It is not going to a particular church; it is not singing out of a particular hymnbook; it is not being orthodox and going among men as orthodox and sending the people to perdition who do not believe as you do. Instead of making more noise in the world about our orthodoxy than the Master ever did, and elaborate and ostentatious prayers, as to be troublesome to our neighbor, let us fear God and do righteousness from Sunday to Sunday, and from Monday to Monday. He is the true believer who is the subject of high and divine inspirations, so deep and profound that he cannot utter them and not he who is loaded and clogged with the mere theories of dead men on the subject, that leave no scope for anything else.

'Tis not the wise phylactery,
Nor stubborn taste, nor stated prayer,
That makes us saints. We judge the tree
By what it bears.

Swindling Monopolies.

By a monopoly I mean rich men buying up all competitors and crushing them out of existence—getting control of some commodity, crushing out all fair competition, which is the life of trade, and dictating the price. Any set of men who, by any combination or action, compel us to pay more than the nominal prices for what we eat and drink and wear are guilty of highway robbery. The swindling of these wholesale robbers is called percentage; their wrong heartedness, long headedness; their duplicity, shrewdness.

Our Gifts Multiplied.

The beautiful law of Christian love, life and truth is that the more we give of our own capital the more that capital increases. The widow's cruse of oil and barrel of meal increased as she distributed them, and a Christian's sunshine and happiness, faith and hope will be invigorated and multiplied in proportion as he tries to make others hopeful, trustful and happy.—John Cumming.

Think Before Leaving the Country.

Young man, be sure you can better yourself in the city before you leave your comfortable home or place in the country. The chances are, if you come to the city, you will wish yourself back again in the country before the year is over. It is hard for the country boy to do well in the city now, as our cities are overcrowded. The greatest slave on earth is the average city clerk. With proper care and effort, country life can be made as enjoyable and profitable as city life. Spend in the country towns and villages the same amount for concerts, lectures, etc., that you would if you came to the city, and you will have almost equal advantages. Farmers should settle in colonies. Let them live in villages.

Gads.

A man said to his wife, "Double up your whip." He meant keep your tongue quiet. It must be a terrible thing to be living with a whip that is always lashing you. A blind man, having a shrew for a wife, was told by one of his friends that she was a rose. He replied, "I do not doubt it, sir, for I feel the thorns daily." There is nothing grander than a bright and contented disposition.

Living Christians Needed.

The great want of the present ago is not so much arguments sustaining Christianity as living Christians illustrating and exemplifying it. There is a plenty of sounding brass, and tinkling cymbals are not hard to find. There is hypocrisy enough in the world, and there is no need that Christians should increase it by empty talk and vain profession. They best answer the power of Christ's gospel who in their lives exemplify and demonstrate it. Conduct is the great profession. What a man does tells us what he is. A covetous professor, a quarreling church, a renegade preacher, a dishonest and tricky church official, a corrupt religious corporation, a praying defaulter, a sanctimonious robber of widows and orphans, does more to make men infidels and keep them away from the church than the most blatant barroom talker or the most polished infidel lecturer. The translation of the Bible most needed today is its translation into flesh and blood, into the daily walk, works and words of men, and the world will not be able to resist the evidence of the divine mission of our Lord. Let the light of the knowledge of the glory of God blaze out in the lives of his children, and an astonished world will mark the change and seek in some way to account for a revelation so wonderful so transforming.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 14. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Risen with Christ—from what?—Rom. vi, 1-12; 20-23. (An Easter meeting.)

The practical lessons from the resurrection of Christ are many and important. In this twelfth chapter of Romans Paul deals principally with the question of holiness, of sanctification, illustrating and enforcing the necessity of dying unto sin and living unto God, by the resurrection of Christ, who died unto sin and now ever more liveth unto God. The topical references emphasize two ideas—first, that with Christ we die unto sin, and, second, with him we live unto God.

1. With Christ we die unto sin. "In that he died, He died unto sin" (verse 10). Christ died unto sin. This may mean several things—that He died for the destruction of sin; that He died for its expiation or on account of sin. In any sense it means that Christ separated Himself, by His death, for the burden of man's sin, which He had willingly assumed. With Christ believers also die to sin, but in an entirely different sin. It is personal, indwelling sin to which they die, or from which they separate themselves. But Christ not only died to sin, but died to it once for all. By His death He threw off the burden of sin forever. So the Christian must die once for all to sin. There must be no return or no continuance in sin after we have once separated ourselves from it. It is true that the greater the sin the greater is the grace of God in forgiving it, and yet we are not to sin that grace may the more abound. It cannot be. It is self contradictory. Death and life are antagonistic, and therefore if we are dead to sin we cannot be alive to sin. To live in sin would be therefore an evidence that we have not died to sin with Christ.

2. With Christ we live unto God. "In that He liveth, He liveth unto God" (verse 10). Others who were raised from the grave arose to live as before, but Christ arose to live unto God, not, though, that He had not lived unto God before His death. In Him the believer also rises to live unto God. "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord" (verse 11). To die unto sin is only half the story. We must live unto God. We must not only put off the old man, but put on the new. We must not only cease to do evil, but learn to do well. Repentance includes a turning from sin and a turning to God. Sanctification includes a dying unto sin and a living unto God. We rise with Christ Jesus from sin that we may live with Him unto God. This is the object of the Christian's life, not to yield himself unto sin, but to yield himself entirely unto God. We are freed from sin and become the servants of God that we may have fruit unto holiness and the end everlasting life. "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ."

Bible Readings.—Ps. xvii, 15; Isa. xxvi, 19; Math. xxii, 31, 32; Luke xx, 37, 38; Rom. vii, 4-6; viii, 11; I Cor. vi, 14; xv, 14-20; II Cor. xiii, 4; Gal. ii, 20; Eph. ii, 4-6; Phil. iii, 10-14; Col. ii, 12; iii, 1-4; I Thess. iv, 13, 14; II Tim. ii, 11, 12; I John iii, 2.

A Sweet Temper Makes a Clean Heart.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And any one who has experienced this feeling knows that it cannot be shaken off, but must be prayed off.—Presbyterian Banner.

Junior Committees.

In small Junior societies it has sometimes been found best not to divide the society into committees, but to appoint simply the chairmen of the usual committees, requesting each chairman to consider the entire society his committee for the accomplishment of the work ordinarily assigned to him. When the missionary committee, for example, would have work to do, the chairman of that committee calls a meeting of the entire society, and so with all the other committees.—Exchange.

Loyal to the Church.

The editor of The Lutheran Evangelist takes occasion, in a recent number, to praise in high terms the loyalty of his Endeavorers to the church to which he ministers. "A larger per cent of them," he says, "sustain the second service on the Lord's day and the midweek service than of the older church members."

The Spirit of Endeavor.

Our brethren in the antipodes fully understand the genius of the Christian Endeavor Society, says The Golden Rule. How better could a vital principle of organization be stated than in the following words, delivered before a meeting of the New South Wales union? "The pre-eminent test of our Endeavor is service. Pledged to serve; pledged to serve God; pledged to serve Christ; pledged to serve truth. Blazon it on every banner; weave it in every fiber of your national life; write it in living deeds. Serve, serve. We are among you as those who serve."

Woman's Tact.

Women, as a rule, are much more tactful than men. That quality of intuition which they possess and which often serves them better than purely logical processes serve the sterner sex seems to teach them what to attack and what to avoid. If they are densely ignorant of a subject, they will taek around it, express deep interest in it and seem devoured with the desire for information, while the poor man creature will purr like a cat whose fur is stroked the right way. Woman need never make a formal demand for what the emancipated call their rights so long as the sex retains that great but undefinable quality of tact which seems to be its special prerogative. The law may not put women on the same plane with men, but the greater law, that of nature, will always allow women to attain by the adroitness, skill and tact natural to their sex all that crude and man made legislation might undertake to deny them.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Oil to Cleanse the Face.

Oil, not water, should be used when you really want to clean your face. Learn a lesson from the actresses. If an actress tried to wash with soap and water her nightly makeup from her face, she would have no skin to speak of left in a week, to say nothing about a complexion. She never makes any such mistake. She removes her makeup with oil, usually and preferably cocoa oil. And she learns by experience to do the same thing when she wants to get rid of the grime of travel. Oil cleans the skin more thoroughly than soap and water, as you can thoroughly demonstrate after a journey or any such soiling experience. If you don't mind the abuse of your skin for once, just wash your face after the old fashion as well as you can, then cover it with oil and remove the oil with a soft cloth. One look at the cloth will prove that the soap and water did not get it clean.—New York News.

Children's Clothing.

None of the clothing worn by children should bind any portion of the body so that it will not have perfectly free action.

The fashion of pinning a baby's legs in a bowknot in its "pinning blanket" is the cause of weakkneed, bow legged children, and the whipping post would be fair penance for such gross ignorance on the part of parents. The child whose limbs are free to exercise and kick will have a fair chance at growing vigorous, even though handicapped by heredltary defects.

The minute a baby shows a desire to "kick out of its clothes," as some mothers complain, take off its long, heavy skirts and put it in dresses where its legs will have a chance to assert themselves, but keep your floors warm and clean for the child to tumble about in its own way, and it will get over its crossness and probably grow up with modcrately straight legs.—Exchange.

To Remove Creases From Skirts.

One is pretty sure to get the skirts of gowns wrinkled in traveling, no matter how carefully they may be packed. If this happens, have them hung out on the clothesline, stretched out to their extremest width. Every crease will be taken out as entirely as if they had been ironed.

Guide the Pen Carefully.

A hardworking dressmaker had laid by a little money. She fell in love with a boy of 19, consumptive and entirely penniless, and married him, largely to take care of him. Soon his health failed completely, and finding himself about to die he expressed a wish to make a will. This seemed but the curious fancy of a dying man, as he had absolutely nothing to leave and no money even to pay for making a will. To humor him, however, the hardworking wife sent for a lawyer and paid him to draw up her husband's will. The husband died, and some months later a baby was born. When the baby was but a few months old, strangers came to the mother armed with the husband's will. They proved that he had bequeathed the child to his parents in Michigan and took the baby away with them. The mother had no redress.—Philadelphia Press.

Three Good Rules.

There are three things that give a woman perfect form, movement and disposition. Resolved into rules, they are as follows: Don't fret, keep clean, and finally keep supple. To keep supple a woman must begin by breathing right, then she must walk with her muscles instead of her bones, and lastly she must exercise regularly.

The best way to keep clean is to rub a nice soft cream into your skin before taking a bath and then take that hath just as hot as possible. The cream feeds the skin, and the hot water cleanses and softens it.

The way to keep from fretting is to put your thoughts upon something else than yourself, and, above all, to have an interest or object in life. No woman need fear old age if she has lived up to these rules.

Conserves of Flowers.

Women can make for themselves some dainty conserves of flowers that are specially recommended as giving a dainty perfume to the breath and lips. They are made from violets, or very highly perfumed roses, or carnation pinks. Take half a pound of loaf sugar and moisten with rose-water, melt the sugar slowly till it reaches the boiling point, have your violet or rose or carnation petals ready and stir them quickly in the liquid, then pour the whole into shallow dishes or pans.

To Make Crusty Bread.

Housekeepers whose families are fond of crusty bread can please them, according to an ingenious person, by using a section of stovepipe as a bread pan. The 4 inch pipe is a good sort for the purpose, and any tinsmith will cut off a piece the required length. The edges should be bent a little that the hands may not be cut, but the ends are left open and the loaves made a little shorter than the pan.

Broken china may be mended by making a light paste of the white of an egg and flour, cleaning the broken edges from dust, spreading them with the paste and holding the parts together while wet. Wipe off all that oozes out.

Do not moisten the fingers when turning the leaves of a book, nor permit children to put anything in the mouth, nor to exchange books, papers or pencils, as all these things may be the carriers of germs of disease.

Some one has said that the secret of success, if one is a woman, is to let no man know how much one likes him, and no woman how much one dislikes her. There may be something in the idea.

Wear well fitting shoes when doing housework. They will be less fatiguing than loose, untidy slippers that are supposed to be worn for comfort.

For starching gingham and calico dissolve a piece of alum the size of a hazelnut in a pint of starch. This will keep the colors bright for a long time.

Women real estate agents have already been successful in several places, and it is somewhat surprising that more women do not go into a business for which many of them seem so well fitted.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox says that she owes a good deal to corsets, for she feels so much better after she has taken them off that it is certainly a pleasure to wear them.

Put a teaspoonful of borax in your rinsing water. It will whiten the clothes and also remove the yellow cast on garments that have been laid aside for two or three years.

The latest figures of enrollment of the English societies reach the glorious number 2,150.

There is now in Philadelphia an Episcopal Christian Endeavor society, the first formed in that denomination in the Quaker City.

New Hampshiro has gained nine new societies since the last state convention.

Freeburg (Pa.) Young People's society sent a barrel of clothing to the western sufferers.

During a recent series of services in the Christian Endeavorer church at Malmo, Neb., 30 persons took a stand for Christ.

Seventeen members of South Australian societies are now endeavoring in foreign missionary lands.

Queensland union, Australia, has issued a booklet containing a plan for a year's systematic Bible reading.

Miss Newton of Fuchau writes, "I have seldom seen such marked cases of conviction of sin in China or such joy in the reception of the Holy Spirit." Pray for China, that her millions may be led to own the Messiahship of Jesus.

The island of Jamaica now boasts of 43 societies with 2,933 members, an increase of seven societies and 700 members over last year.

Rev. S. H. Doyle, for so long a time president of the West Virginia Christian Endeavor union, now has a pastorate in Philadelphia.

Christian Endeavor has gained a strong foothold in Liberia and is spreading rapidly. A society has been formed in connection with the Grange mission, Johnsonville, and another among the students of Liberia college. Other places are asking for information concerning Christian Endeavor.

HIS APPETITE FOR WHISKY.

After Twenty Years' Total Abstinence It Is Almost Irresistible.

Chauncey M. Depew tells the following story as an illustration of the strength of the acquired drinking habit: I was talking one day with the leading citizens of a thriving town with whose people I was very familiar and in which I had some property interests. He was president of the village, the engineer and motive power of every improvement and every enterprise calculated to increase the prosperity and wealth of the place. He was accustomed to sit all day at a table in his store where the light was best for the manipulation and inspection of his goods. He asked me one day if I could possibly remove a saloon which had been established immediately across the street. I said, "Why that more than any of the many others that there are in the town?" Then he told his story:

"I was a popular and entertaining young man, the life of every social gathering. At 21 the drink habit was firmly fixed. Then I married, my wife believing, as romantic girls often do, that she could save me. She had a fearful time with poverty and mortification for some years. I wanted to resist the habit as much as she desired that I should, but I could not, to save my life, resist an invitation to enter a barroom and take a drink, and that was the beginning of the end until I was carried home.

"One night she carried me to a revival meeting in her church. I became interested and converted. The minister and the members of the church gathered about me and supplemented my good wife's efforts. The power which I received there enabled me to resist temptation, until finally I could go anywhere and refuse to take a drink.

"In the 20 years following I have greatly prospered, have accumulated much property and have become the leading man of this neighborhood, but as I sit here and see those bottles in the window of that saloon and the men going in and out it seems sometimes, although 20 years have elapsed, as if I would surrender my wife, my children, my store and my position to go over there and get drunk."

More Than $165,000,000 Received For Licenses to Make and Sell Liquors.

The following figures show the exact extent of the liquor traffic in Great Britain for 1894 and earlier years, according to government reports compiled by The Alliance News. From the annual parliamentary returns recently issued it appears that for the year ending March 31, 1894, the total customs revenue for liquors was £5,550,935 ($227,013,625), and the internal revenue £28,464,764 ($138,523,774), making a total revenue on liquors from all sources of £34,015,699 ($165,537,399).

The total amount of spirits taxed was 39,126,235 imperial gallons, equivalent to 46,963,220 American gallons. Accepting the estimates of our government that the population of Great Britain is 38,109,000, this makes a per capita of 1.23 gallons of spirits. The 32,182,821 barrels of beer upon which tax was paid, at 36 imperial gallons to the barrel, are equivalent to 1,390,645,442 American gallons, or 36.49 gallons per capita.

Besides the 91,076 publican, 31,075 beer and 4,892 beer and wine licenses for consumption on the premises, there were 392 wine licenses and 49 cider and perry, making a total of 127,484 "on" licenses. There were in addition 18,860 "off" licenses, including 113 issued for table beer, also 19,709 licenses for the grocery and bottle trade and 2,385 miscellaneous, making in all 168,438 retail licenses. To these must be added 420 distillers' and rectifiers of spirits', and 9,337 brewers', a grand total of 178,195 licenses issued for the manufacture and sale of liquors during the year ending March 31, 1894.

Opinion of an Expert.

The great curse of alcoholic liquors is that their use creates a morbid appetite —a constantly increasing desire for more—in many cases. Many men who began to use alcoholic liquors in great moderation find themselves gradually craving larger and larger quantities. Liquor drinking is one of those things of which it may truly be said that "increase of appetite grows by what it feeds on." Since this is unquestionably the case, may it not be exceedingly probable that the greater the percentage of alcohol contained in any particular kind of liquor the more rapidly will a morbid appetite for stimulation be cultivated? I must therefore give it as my opinion that the least injurious of all alcoholic liquors, and therefore the one that is the safest and the best for men to drink, is the one which contains the smallest percentage of alcohol.—Dr. William H. Hammond.

No Liquor For Canadian Indians.

The government of Canada has prohibited the sale of intoxicants among the Indians of Hudson Bay territory and punishes severely any violation of this law. For instance, one vender had his illicit goods confiscated and was jailed for three years. The government is determined to prevent the debasement of the Indians in its care.

Don't Ask Me to Drink.

Backward, turn backward, O time, in your flight.
Make me a boy again, happy and bright.
Experience would teach me the pitfalls to shun
In the new life race that I would then run,
The transient enjoyment with convivial friends
And all the mock pleasures the social glass lends
I would shun ere they led to insanity's brink.
Don't ask me to drink, brother; don't ask me to drink.

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years.
Sink in oblivion the past with its tears,
The lost opportunities, mental anguish and pain—
Take them, and let them live over again.
Take them—redeem all the losses sustained,
By some great boom in the new life regained,
Then let me, oh, let me from temptation shrink;
Don't ask me to drink, brother; don't ask me to drink.

Five out of the 17 large fortunes offered for probate in England last year were left by brewers, and one by a wine merchant. The total sworn value of the 17 was over $66,000,000.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 21.

Text of the Lesson, Math. xxiv, 42-51—Memory Verses, 44-46—Golden Text, Mark xiii, 33—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

42. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." During [redacted] is eventful week, upon which we entered two or three lessons ago, He taught them many things from day to day in the temple, the record of which, with the events of the week, occupies nearly a third of each of the gospels. One of these days, as He departed from the temple, His disciples called His attention to the great stones and buildings, upon which, to their great amazement, He told them that the whole thing was to be thrown down. They then inquired somewhat confusedly as to when this should be and what would be the sign of His coming and of the end of the age. In Mark xiii, 3, we find that it was four of the disciples who asked Him privately of these things as He sat upon the mount of Olives. If, in reading the three parallel accounts in Math. xxiv, Mark xiii and Luke xxi, we distinguish between the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple and the end of the age at His coming, all will be quite plain. The Old Testament everywhere teaches that He will come to build up, not destroy, Jerusalem, as in Ps. cii, 16; Isa. xv, 9, 10; lxii, 11; Zech. xiv, 3, 4, 8, 9, so that we must never confound the Lord's coming with the destruction of Jerusalem, but always associate it with the rebuilding of Zion.

43. "But know this—that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come he would have watched and would not have suffered his house to be broken up." The coming of the Lord is associated with vengeance upon His enemies, and the redemption of His people Israel, as in Isa. xxxiv, 8; xxxv, 4; lxiii, 4, and He will come upon those enemies as a thief, suddenly and unexpectedly, for their destruction (II Thess. [illegible], 7-9), but children of light will not be thus overtaken, for they are supposed to be continually watching for Him who loved them and redeemed them by His blood that they might reign with Him (Rev. v, 9, 10; I Thess. v, 4-6).

44. "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." We only wait for the completion of the elect body, the church, before that body shall meet Him in the air (I Thess iv, 16-18), and inasmuch as He only knows when the last member of that body shall be gathered we keep on bearing testimony, expecting any hour to be gone to meet our Lord, saved by His blood, serving in the power of the Spirit and waiting for Himself.

45. "Who, then, is a faithful and wise servant whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?" The virgins of the next chapter tell us how to be wise, and the parable of the talents teaches us how to be faithful. Results and success He will see to. Wise and faithful is our part. The only good and nourishing meat and bread for the household is found only in the king's larder, the "all Scripture," which is all sufficient for all His people (II Tim. iii, 16, 17).

46. "Blessed is that servant whom His Lord, when He cometh, shall find so doing." Blessed is the man who has learned for himself to dwell continually in Jerusalem and eat at the King's table (II Sam. ix, 13). Even though he be lame on both feet, happy and peaceful and satisfied shall he be. He will be sure to be telling others of the abundant and invigorating food which the King supplies day by day without fail (Jer. lii, 33, 34; Ez. vi, 9), and thus He shall minister meat in due season to the glory of the King and the joy of His people. I can testify that the people are hungry for and receive greedily the food which the King provides without any of the accompaniments of the fixings and devisings of man.

47. "Verily I say unto you that He shall make him ruler over all His goods." As Eliezer had control of all the goods of Isaac, which his father had given unto him, that he might obtain a bride for Isaac, so the Father, having given all things unto the Son, has sent the Spirit with full control over all to complete the bride of Christ, and he who is filled with the Spirit has control of all as the human instrument through whom the Spirit works. "All are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's" (I Cor. iii, 22, 23).

48. "But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My Lord delayeth His coming." If not wise, with lamps filled and brightly burning and vessels full also and faithfully using the talents and the pounds, occupying till He come, then it looks as if we must be evil servants. If not constantly expecting Him, but saying or acting as if we said, He will not come in my day, He cannot come for a long time yet, such and such things must happen before He can come, is there not a danger of being classed with the evil servants?

49. "And shall begin to smite his fellow servants and to eat and drink with the drunken." To eat and drink with the drunken is suggestive of all those, professedly the Lord's, who find their joys and satisfying portions with the people of the world, who are intoxicated with its pleasures and pursuits, its aims and ambitions, its fashions and follies. They may be moral and temperate in the eyes of the world—yes, even teetotalers, so called—yet in the eyes of the Lord drunken and blinded with the transient vanities of this present life.

50. "The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for Him and in an hour that he is not aware of." Let all tremble to say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" (II Peter iii, 4) lest sudden destruction come, from which there shall be no escape (I Thess. v, 3). Rather let us see to it that we so abide in Him that when He shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before Him at His coming (I John ii, 28).

51. "And shall cut him asunder and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." It is impossible for any of Christ's sheep to be lost (John x, 27-29), for any true servant of His to perish. Such may have their works burned up and they themselves saved as by fire (I Cor. iii, 14, 15). But there are many both in the pulpit and in the pews who, being hypocrites, shall have to share the hypocrites' portion. The Lord only knows who they are. It is not for us to judge each other, but rather to judge nothing before the time until the Lord come (I Cor. iv, 5). If we judge ourselves as in His sight, it will leave us neither time nor inclination to judge others. Our business is to be wise and faithful servants, and by the Spirit help others to be the same. Wherever weeping or wailing and gnashing of teeth is mentioned it is always for those who profess to be what they are not.

STATE LAWMAKERS.

SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

What the Senators and Representatives Are Doing for the Benefit of Their Constituents—Bills and Resolutions Introduced—Other News of General Interest.

SPRINGFIELD, April 4.—The Illinois legislature is again at work. The senate passed the Torrens land title bill on reconsideration, with only three dissenting votes—Campbell of Hamilton, Crawford and Howell. Bills were passed appropriating $50,000 to pay the employes of the Thirty-ninth general assembly; appropriating money to purchase missing volumes of the supreme court records in Cumberland, Jersey, and Fulton counties, and fixing the time of holding the circuit court in other counties than Cook. A large number of bills were advanced on the calendar. The house took up house bills on second reading and continued on that order till adjournment. A large number were advanced. The house committee on license killed the bill providing for local option in cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

SPRINGFIELD, April 5.—The senate passed the bills to tax legacies, making 25 per cent. of wages subject to garnishee, and placing the military schools of the state under state inspection. The bill to allow coal companies to combine in order to raise wages was postponed. Many bills were advanced on the calendar, among them one appropriating $25,000 for a statue to Marquette. The house agreed to a military bill appropriating $62,000 to uniform and equip the militia. The bill to assess the stock of building and loan associations was advanced to third readidg. Many petitions against the pool bills were filed. The house revenue committee ordered a favorable report on the bill to repeal the laws enabling Roman Catholic bishops to hold real estate as a corporation sole. It was stated that the bishop of Chicago holds $65,000,000 in property in this state.

SPRINGFIELD, April 6.—In the senate the bill providing for the incorporation and regulation of pawner's societies and limiting the rate of interest on pledges was postponed one week. After advancing several bills on calendar the senate adjourned till Monday. In the house a report was made recommending the passage of the so-called "anti-Catholic" bill. It was recommitted to the committee on education. After advancing several bills on the calendar the house adjourned till Monday. Merriam, the author of the bill, was indignant at the action on the "anti-Catholic" bill. He said there was nothing sectarian in the measure. He would oppose any such control of property as Roman bishops held by any church official.

APPORTIONMENT CASE DECIDED.

Illinois Legislature Can Divide the State as It Pleases.

SPRINGFIELD, April 3.—The Supreme court of Illinois has handed down an opinion in the Lee county apportionment case entitled "The people ex rel. against James H. Thompson, county clerk of Lee county," sustaining the validity of the senatorial apportionment law of 1893. The opinion contains 10,000 words and is by Justice Carter. He states that legislative power is vested in the general assembly. Whether the power to apportion the state into senatorial districts is deemed legislative or not it is expressly vested in the legislative department by the constitution of the state and must so remain.

The opinion says near the close: "As much as the disposition of the legislative majority to obtain undue partisan advantage by senatorial apportionments is to be deprecated, the evil cannot be remedied by the courts, and if it were a question upon legal principles and decided cases it is gravely doubtful whether the act of 1893 could be by the courts held unconstitutional or not; the contemporaneous construction by the legislature, acquiesced in by the other departments and by the people for nearly a quarter of a century, would be entitled to great weight in sustaining the validity of the statute. * * * The definite limitations fixed by the constitution show an intention to circumscribe the legislative discretion, but not to take it away altogether."

An opinion was also announced in the case of Sanner against Patton, appealed from Shelby county. Twenty-five ballots upon which the name of a candidate had been written were thrown out by judges of election, and sustained by the lower courts. The supreme court holds the voter has a legal right to write the name of the candidate upon the ballot, and such ballot must be counted.

HEAVY POSTOFFICE ROBBERY.

Eight Thousand Dollars Worth of Stamps Stolen at Springfield, Ills.

SPRINGFIELD, April 4.—The Springfield postoffice was mysteriously robbed of stamps of various denominations aggregating about $8,000 in value. The robbery was probably committed about 1 o'clock, but was not discovered until 5 o'clock. The stamps were taken from a vault in the private room of Postmaster Ridgely during his absence to dinner, and what makes it appear so mysterious is the fact that the door leading to the room, the inner door of the vault from which the stamps were taken and both windows of the room were locked and no violence was used.

SHOT IT FULL OF HOLES.

But on General Principles the Income Tax Law Is Sustained.

CHICAGO, April 6.—The Tribune has a Washington special which says: The United States supreme court has shot the income tax law full of holes. The decision has been completed and put in type, and only awaits formal ratification at the consultation to be held at noon today. The decision of the lower court is reversed, but the income tax as a whole is upheld, but only by a divided court.

Under the decision to be handed down by the court probably next Monday, but possibly later, all incomes derived from rents are exempted from taxation by the federal government, and all incomes derived from state and municipal bonds are similarly exempted. In other respects the income tax stands as it was passed last August.

BUCKEYE STATE WOMEN VOTE.

And Generally Cast Their Ballots for Those of Their Own Sex.

CINCINNATI, April 2.—Although the weather was generally inclement there was much interest taken in the municipal elections, especially by the women in the suburban places and smaller cities. In proportion to their number of candidates it is estimated that more women were elected members of boards of education than men. The women did not oppose each other. They defeated men. There was no election in this city, but in the suburbs the women did well. At Akron two women were elected, and a majority of the places elected one.

Returns show the following results: Republican—Lima; 200 women voted and elected Mrs. Carey to the school board. Alliance; 911 women voted for Populist and independent women candidates—all beaten. Cadiz: 75 women voted, and two women elected to the school board. London; 483 women voted; two women elected. Warren; 200 women voted; no women elected. Cleveland; woman candidate runs behind, but is elected. Toledo; Republican candidate for mayor has but 21 majority; Republican last fall by 3,822. Sandusky; Democrats gain two members of the council. Massillon; Carl Browne defeated; three women elected; two Populists elected to the council. Chillicothe, Washington Court House, Steubenville, Springfield, Portsmouth, Akron, Zanesville (complete overturn), all went Republican. Women voted everywhere.

Democrats carried Mansfield, Hamilton, Columbus, and Bucyrus. Generally the Republicans were successful.

Mrs. John Coventry, wife of the leading hardware merchant of Shelbyville, Ills. cut her throat with a pocket knife.

HOW DO WE ESCAPE?

"As uncomfortable as a fish out of water," and the fish cannot long survive such a change. Earth, air and water swarm with germs of disease, so the scientists tell us, germs of tuberculosis, of typhoid fever, of diphtheria, of many others. Assailed by this deadly host that scientific research exposes to our view, how do any of us escape? For the same reason that the fish cannot live out of water, its normal element. These germs flourish only in their appropriate medium. If your tissues are healthy you afford no harbor for these pests. If your blood is pure the tissues will be healthy and repel invasion. If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla your blood will be pure.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!
"A Prisoner of Hope."
COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.
Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

STATE ELECTIONS.

THE WOMEN OF THE BUCKEYE STATE GO TO THE POLLS.

Vote Freely and Elect a Number of Their Own Sex to School Boards—Michigan People Choose a Supreme Court Justice and University Regents.

DETROIT, Aptil 2.—In the election of a justice of the supreme court and two regents of the university Michigan Republicans were again easily victorious. The vote was very light throughout the state, not to exceed half the vote of last fall being polled. The indications at a late hour are that Moore (Rep.) defeated McGrath (Dem.), the present incumbent, by 25,000. The Republican candidates for regents are elected by about similar pluralities. Reports from the city and township elections thus far show that the Republicans have held their own for the most part. The women's ticket shows no increase.

Milnes Elected to Congress.

In the Third district, where an election was held to fill a congressional vacancy, Milnes, Republican, is successful by 3,000. Smith, Republican, was elected state senator from the Tenth district, to succeed Watts, deceased. Saginaw gives the state ticket a majority of about 600, and Republicans carried the municipal election at Muskegon. At Jackson the Republicans elect mayor and Democrats recorder and treasurer. The council is Republican. Negaunee elects the entire Republican ticket, state and municipal. In this city the Republicans elected the police justice by 3,476.

Other Figures on State Officers.

ISHPEMING, Mich., April 2.—Returns from nine out of ten wards are in with results for state ticket as follows: Justice of the supreme court, James B. Moore (Rep.), 821; J. W. McGrath (Dem.), 123; Robbins B. Taylor (Pop.), 200; Myron H. Walker (Pro.), 84. For regents of the university—Roger W. Butterfield (Rep.), 803; Charles H. Haskley (Rep.), 805; Stratton D. Brooks (Dem.), 138; Varnum J. Bowers (Pop.), 257; Delavan B. Reed (Pro.), 113.

ALPENA, Mich., April 5.—The Republican state ticket was elected by 375 majority. Republicans elect the entire city ticket by 200 to 300 mojority and have an easy working majority in the board of supervisors, board of aldermen, and board of education.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 2.—Charles W. Watkins, Republican nominee for mayor, opposed Senator Patton, of this city, and helped to elect Julius Cæsar Burrows, for United States senator which many Repulicans opposed his election for mayor. He is defeated by Charles D. Stebbins (Dem.), by 1,200 plurality, while the rest of the Republican city ticket is elected.

Returns on Municipal Tickets.

NILES, Mich., April 2.—The Republicans elected Edward Woodcock mayor; treasurer, Brown; recorder, Cooper; two supervisors and two aldermen. The Democrats elected two supervisors and two aldermen. The council will be Republican. Berrien county goes largely Republican.

MARQUETTE, Mich., April 2.—J. H. Jacobs was elected mayor of Marquette by 450 majority. He is non-partisan. W. H. Johnston, Republican, was elected mayor of Ishpeming by 250 majority.

LANSING, Mich., April 2.—The Republicans made a clean sweep of the city with the exception of one justice of the peace. Turney (Rep. and free silver) received 904 plurality against a Republican plurality of 113 last year. Other pluralities ranged from 200 to 350.

MANISTEE, Mich., April 2.—The Democrats elected Robert R. Blacker mayor by 123 majority over Aaron V. McAlvay, Republican. They also elected city clerk, treasurer, justice, seven aldermen and four supervisors.

ILLINOIS ELECTIONS.

Swift Elected Mayor of Chicago by 41,000 Plurality.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Official figures on the vote at the city election show that Swift is elected mayor by a plurality of 41,110. Of the other candidates James R. B. Van Cleave, clerk-elect, received the greatest plurality, being given 44,643 votes over the Democratic candidate. The Republicans elect all the other officers and 28 members of the council, the Democrats electing 5. Faank Lawler, Independent, is also elected.

CHICAGO, April 3.—The municipal campaign in this city closed with an election rarely surpassed for the intense interest taken in it by the people and the press. The result is, as to mayor, a very decisive victory for the Republican candidate, George B. Swift. The other two important issues of the fight were the council and the civil service reform law. This law, which provides the merit system for all appointive offices in cities and towns, has to be adopted by a popular vote in each city before it can be law in said city. There seems no doubt of its adoption here by a good majority.

MOLINE, April 3.—W. C. Bennett (Rep.), re-nominated, was defeated by Gustaf Swennson (Pop.) for mayor by 362. The Populists elect six out of eight aldermen and the balance of the ticket.

ROCK ISLAND, April 3.—B. F. Knox (Rep.) was elected mayor by over 1,200 majority. The Republicans elect attorney, treasurer, two supervisors, collector and five aldermen. Democrats elect clerk and two aldermen.

GALESBURG, April 3.—In the election J. J. Tunnicliff (Cit.) was elected mayor over Nels Nelson (Rep.) by 400 plurality. The rest of the Citizens' ticket is probably elected.

Fairly jumped into success—Pearline. Right from the very start. Notwithstanding all these hundreds of years of precedence behind that old-fashioned, back-breaking way of washing with soap, too.

Now, why was it? Why is it that hundreds of millions of packages of Pearline have been used in the few years since this washing-compound was invented? Just do your washing and cleaning with Pearline for a month, and you'll see.

It takes away the rubbing, but without any risk of harm. That puts it at the head of every known aid for washing. 461

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with a l my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

Weak Nerves

Indicate as surely as any physical symptom shows anything, that the organs and tissues of the body are not satisfied with their nourishment.

They draw their sustenance from the blood, and if the blood is thin, impure or insufficient, they are in a state of revolt. Their complaints are made to the brain, the king of the body, through the nervous system, and the result of the general dissatisfaction is what we call Nervousness.

This is a concise, reasonable explanation of the whole matter.

The cure for Nervousness, then, is simple. Purify and enrich your blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the nerves, tissues and organs will have the healthful nourishment they crave. Nervousness and Weakness will then give way to strength and health.

That this is not theory but fact is proven by the voluntary statements of thousands cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read the next column.

"With pleasure I will state that Hood's Sarsaparilla has helped me wonderfully. For several months I could not lie down to sleep on account of heart trouble and also Prostration of the Nerves.

For three years I had been doctoring, but could not get cured. I received relief for a while, but not permanent. Soon after beginning to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there was a change for the better. In a short time I was feeling splendidly. I now rest well and am able to do work of whatever kind. If I had not tried Hood's Sarsaparilla I do not know what would have become of me. I keep it in my house all the time, and other members of the family take it, and all say there is

Nothing Like Hood's

Sarsaparilla. I have highly recommended it and one of my neighbors has commenced taking it. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla at every opportunity." Mrs. S. Braddock, 404 Erie Av., Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Be sure to get

For a Three Horse Team.

In some three horse eveners the swing is so great that one horse can lag and throw most of the weight on the other two. In others this is overcome by fastening the whiffletrees to a rigid bar, which is also objectionable. Rural New Yorker calls attention to the plan illustrated, in which the whiffletrees have considerable play, yet a single horse cannot take advantage of this to lag behind, for the chains connected with rods in the wheels and with the harness and shafts hold them where they belong. The picture is simple enough for any one to understand. Notice how the reins are fastened.

Lawn Grass Mixtures.

Professor Beal, recognized authority on grasses, says: In land not likely to suffer from dry weather and exposed to sunlight, sow June grass alone or brown bent alone, or, better still, sow a mixture of the two. For land not likely to suffer from dry weather at certain times where exposed to sunlight, sow or plant a mixture of June grass and Bermuda grass. For rather thin soil or for any soil much shaded by trees, I have never seen anything to be compared with the red fescues. The foregoing is for those who can appreciate a fine thing and can wait a little for it. But for those who are impatient for results and want a good display of green in the shortest possible space of time, sow perennial rye grass, orchard grass, timothy, or even oats or rye, or almost any other grasses to be found in the market. To be sure, they will look bunchy and patchy, some starting quicker than others after mowing, but the lawn will be thick and green.

It is proposed in Kansas to adopt the plan of subirrigation as far as practical.

There are about 80 species of honeysuckle, and many of them are desirable for hedge purposes.

Pofessor Bailey of Missouri is said to have obtained more than 1,000 types of pumpkins by orossing the flowers of one kind with the pollen of another.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayer's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen prefer it to any other dressing.

Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers can be applied when at home, and is uniformly successful in coloring a brown or black. Hence its great popularity.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly ubscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers. 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

INSTANT DEATH FOR FOUR PEOPLE IN OHIO.

Two Others Fatally Wounded—A Trestle Gives Way, Letting the Train Into the Chasm—Freight Wreck Near Alton, Ills. —Eight Fatal Casualties.

Somerfield, O., April 6.—The morning passenger train No. 538 on the Bellaire, Zanesville and Cincinnati railroad, consisting of engine, baggage car and passenger coach, left here on time and moved along nicely until the train reached trestle No. 98, near Whigville, when the coach jumped the track, ran a short distance into the trestle and turned over, drawing the engine and baggage car down with the trestle. The engine turned end-for-end and the coach turned bottom up with sides crushed in. There were four killed outright as follows: Will Lucas, engineer, Somerfield, O.; Henry Brown, passenger, Bealsville, O.; Mrs. Nathan Young and little daughter, Somerfield, O.

Two Persons Fatally Hurt.

The injured are as follows: Jesse Jones, fatally injured, Sommerfield, O.; Nathan Young, fatally injured, Sommerfield, O.; Joseph Denoon, seriously injured, Barnesville, O.; Frank Holland, baggagemaster, leg broken, Sommerfield, O. The fireman, Jesse Jones, was pinioned beneath the overturned engine and was badly cut and scalded when found. He cannot live. Nathan Young was rescued from the coach, but he cannot live. No examination was made of his injuries, as he is in a precarious condition. The four killed were killed outright. The engine and cars are a total wreck and also the trestle. The trestle over which the train overturned was about forty feet high.

Details of the Accident.

The road is a narrow-gauge and does but little business, being just able to meet running expenses. The trestle is a double-decked one, fully forty feet high, and consists of seventeen bents crossing a stream. It is built on a curve, so that after dragging the coach more than half way across the structure the engine, too, was pulled from the track and both car and engine toppled into the ravine below, carrying down three bents of the trestle. The car was smashed to kindling wood.

Both Jones and Engineer Lucas could have saved themselves by jumping, as no great speed is attained by the small engines in service on the road, but they choose rather to remain at their posts. Jones was a foundling reared in one of the infirmaries along the line of the road. He showed a disposition to get on in the and was also a favorite on the road.

WILL BE THE DEATH OF EIGHT.

Four Killed and Four Fatally Wounded in a Wreck in Illinois.

Alton, April 6.—A freight train was wrecked on the Alton road at Wood River bridge, three miles east of Alton. On the train were sixty laberers and tramps, most of whom had just quit work on the drainage canal near Chicago. The killed are: David Hefly, Watertown, Wis.; Frank Harreman, Philadelphia; Charles Bell, Springfield, Ills., and Henry Blitz, New Orleans. Fatally injured: John Moran, Springfield, Mass., terribly cut and bruised, totally paralyzed; Thomas Cotts, has no home, right arm broken, head badly cut and chest crushed; C. W. Schroeder, Argentine, Kan., right arm broken, also both legs, internal injuries; Henry Glass, Pennsylvania, jaw broken, shoulder dislocated, collar-bone broken, and head badly cut.

The other injured are; Martin Pickens, Chicago, back sprained, cuts on head; John Carrs, Cincinnati, scalp cut; Harry Williams, Toledo, leg crushed; Theodore Hunt, no home, ankle crushed; Will Willet, Dallas, Tex., head and shoulders hurt; James Hart, no home, head, legs and back cut; Charles Custer, Lima, O., hip broken, back cut; Robert Seal, New York city, ankle crushed and kneecap dislocated; Otto Schdet, no home, internal injuries, seriously hurt.

The accident occurred on Wood river bridge, which is an open structure, seventy-five feet above the water. There is a down grade here and the engineer applied air brakes to the front cars as is customary.

In the middle of the train was an empty flat car, and back of this a number of heavily laden box cars. When the air was applied the heavy cars forced the flat car off the track, and in an instant fourteen cars went over the bridge. The scene following was one of heartrending distress. It was yet dark and chaos reigned. The injured were brought to the hospital here. The wreck is on the "cut-off," so that the trains were not delayed. None of the train crew was hurt, as the middle cars only went over the bridge.

The Explosion at New Orleans.

New Orleans, April 6.—At this writing but four bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the explosion which took place from some unknown cause at the corner of Deeatur and Ursuline streets, in a two-story brick building containing two stores and rooms on the ground floor. One of these was occupied by Emile Boulet as a drinking saloon; the other by Charles Salathe, who keeps a grocery and ship chandlery. The bodies found are those of Charles Salathe and his wife, Felix Rigot, a barkeeper, and James Edwards, employe of a fish stand.

The last body recovered was that of the babe of Salathe. Two other children were slightly hurt, but it seems that none else was injured. The cause was accidental.

Discovered a Shortage of $50,000.

Chicago, April 3.—It has been discovered that F. W. Griffin, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National bank of this city, is a defaulter to the extent of $50,000, and he has been arrested and has confessed. The Northwestern is a bank of ample means, with capital and resources amounting to $1,500,000 and one of the most conservative institutions in Chicago. Griffin's shortage will in no way effect the standing of the bank.

One Hundred Ballots for Senator.

Dover, Del., April 3.—The century mark has been reached in balloting for a successor to ex-United States Senator Higgins. The 100th ballot resulted as follows: Higgins 9, Addicks 4, Massey 3, Ridely 9, Pennewill 1, Tunnell 1.

Shot by a Quarantine Guard.

Ridgeway, Ills., April 3.—Captain W. H. Stiles while entering this town was shot twice and seriously wounded by a "quarantine" guard named Henry Rollman for failing to halt when ordered. The wounds are not fatal.

ON THE FIELD OF SHILOH.

Exercises Commemorating the Great Battle Held in the Memorial Church.

Shiloh, Tenn, April 8.—A cloudless sky greeted the thousands of the blue and gray who assembled at the little church of Shiloh at the thirty-third anniversary of that bloody battle. A new frame memorial church stands where the little log church stood on that memorable day when 80,000 men strove for the mastery. The grand stand erected for the occasion was canopied by the nation's flag. "Welcome to the Blue and the Gray" was painted on the front of the staud, while within, on a blue background, were the memorable words of President Grant: "Let us Have Peace."

There were present Generals Prentiss, Buell, Joe Wheeler and A. P. Stewart. General McClernand and Senator Harris were absent on account of sickness. The exercises opened with a short speech by General Prentiss, the hero of "The Hornet's Nest," the hottest contested part of the battle. Generals Wheeler and Stewart and Captain Paine, who had been assigned to the duty by a meeting of the Confederate veterans, welcomed the boys in blue.

After a prayer by Rev. L. S. Bailey, of Iowa, Generals Buell and Prentiss entertained the veterans with reminiscenes of the battle, going into the details of the fight and in conclusion congratulating all upon the good-feeling that was everywhere manifested. The crowd present numbers about 10,000 people.

Eight Gotham Officials Indicted.

New York, April 8.—The extraordinary grand jury has indicted ex-Park Commissioners G. C. Causen, Nathan Straus and A. B. Tappen for conspiring to spend the amount appropriated by the board of estimate and apportionment in 1894; Police Captain Killihea, for receiving a bribe of a piano; Thomas J. Brady, ex-superintendent of the building department, for receiving a bribe of a piano from J. J. Smith, a builder, and Patrolmen Hugh Cassidy, Edward F. Miley and John M. Thall for arresting Hans Beattie, commissioner of street cleaning. They all appeared and were required to give bail in sums varying from $1,500 to $10,000.

MISSOURI ELECTION RETURNS.

St. Louis Elects a Colored Man—Republicans Win at Sedalia.

St. Louis, April 3.—Returns indicate the election of the six Republican members of the city council who are voted for at large by a majority of from 10,000 to 15,000. Two-thirds of the members of the house of delegates, who are voted for by wards, will probably be Republican. The vote was very light. Moses Craven was elected in the Fifteenth ward. He will be the first colored man to sit in the municipal government.

Later.—The total vote in this city gives the Republicans an average majority of 13,000. The city council is wholly Republican; the house of delegates is 23 Republicans and 5 Democrats. Outside of St. Louis the Democrats have about held their own in the Missouri municipal elections.

Winslow's Majority Increases.

Milwaukee, April 5.—Reports on the supreme court election indicate gains on the part of Winslow over Clementson that will give the former a majority of from 4,000 to 5,000.

The Republicans have elected mayors in the following Wisconsin cities: Ashland, River Falls, Delavan, Columbus, Marshfield, Mauston, Sparta, Wanpaca, Black River Falls, Manitowoc, Hudson, Whitewater, Lake Geneva, Hartford, Centralia and Watertown. Democrats in Mineral Point, Plymouth, Durand, Prairie du Chien, Alma, Madisen, Chilton, Kenosha, Berlin, Ripan, Fox Lake, Shawano and Beaver Dam.

Notes of the State.

C. P. Anderson of Batavia, Ills., arose from his sick bed and committed suicide by cutting his throat.

George Perry, a barber, while watching an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" car on a siding at Mattoon, Ills., was struck by an incoming freight train on the Big Four road and fatally mangled, dying in half an hour.

Near Macomb, Ills., Miss Hattie Davidson was shot and seriously wounded by Lewis Anderson because she refused to marry him.

Suicides: At Turner, Ills., Charles Johnson: at Goshen, Ind., Sylvester Heaton; at Waterloo, Wis., Mrs. Sarah Leary; at Fairbury, Ills., Mrs. Mary Oltman; at Shelbyville, Ills., Mrs. John Coventry.

At Decatur, Ills., Z. Hollingsworth lost nine head of valuable horses by fire, besides a lot of other property, on which there was no insurance.

How would such a notice as this look in a church? "During the period when serious business occupies the attention of the brethren, you must not leave your seat or engage in conversation with your neighbor—not even in whispers; neither should you move the chair in which you are seated or make any noise to disturb the N. G. or his officers in the orderly execution of their respective duties. Silence is the leading characteristic of a well-regulated lodge."—Guide.

As stated last week, a Christian Conference on the Secret Lodge System, with reference especially to its anti-Christian character, will be held in connection with the Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association, and under its auspices. The conference will meet in Bennett Hall, corner of Ravenswood Park and Wilson Ave. The first session will be on the evening of May 8, and the last session on the following evening. There will be four sessions, two or three addresses each session. Program next week.

If there were no reasons of a moral character, one would think that in these times of financial stringency, economy would lead men to let the lodge go. The Ancient Order of United Workmen, in drought-stricken Nebraska, is agitated over the question whether the Grand Lodge shall hold a meeting this year. It costs about $9,000 to hold this meeting. Of course this sum of money must be wrung from the almost starving people. The 304 subordinate lodges voted not to hold the session this year, and to devote the money saved to the drought sufferers of the State. What a mercy it would be if each year this nine thousand dollars plus the much larger amount swallowed by the 304 subordinate lodges could be used for the education and moral training and home comforts for those on the frontier! But no, the lodge must have its "pound of flesh" if little children do go hungry! A dissatisfied element has secured an order from the Lancaster district court requiring the Grand Lodge to convene as usual. They allege some of the grand officers are technically guilty of embezzlement. The matter will go to the court of last resort to establish a precedent.

The Chicago Mail favors a law in Illinois providing for the treatment of indigent inebriates. It says: "That the appetite for alcoholic liquor becomes a chronic disease after certain stages have been passed in the career of the drinker is now a well-known scientific fact. The State should lend a helping hand to this most needy class as it has cheerfully done for other unfortunates." This sounds well, but a question of policy comes in here, would it not be a good plan for the State to stop manufacturing "indigent inebriates" first? Is it good business policy to run saloons and then attempt to cure the victims? Is it really kind to knock a man down and then help him to his feet again, and with a patronizing air say, see how kind and friendly I am?

Now that the Bible is not allowed to be read or even quoted in the Chicago schools, it is generally understood that the schools are unsectarian. However that may be, a Chicago daily announces that "Friday the 12th being Good Friday," the public schools will be closed; and it is further stated "no especial action" (in the matter) "was taken by the board of education." That the Chicago schools can be closed on a regular school day without action of the board, is hardly more wonderful than the next item of news, that permission is given the G. A. R. "to participate in the school exercises incident to Memorial day." The same spirit that takes the Word of God away from the children, turns them over to the mock religious ceremonies of the lodge.

The presentation of a copy of the New Testament to the Empress Dowager by the Christian women of the Chinese empire, has been followed by an order from the Emperor for a copy of both the Old and New Testaments. The Bible has at least gained an entrance into the palace; may this not be the means of the Word of God gaining an entrance into the heart of the heathen Emperor? "As the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it." Isaiah 55: 10, 11.

The Union Signal, April 4, has an article against war from the pen of Josiah W. Leeds, a Friend well known for his opposition to evil and his willingness to help every good cause. We insert one paragraph of the article which shows what a broad view of the subject is taken. "That doctrine of the sword which was of Constantine and Charlemagne, Paul the apostle never knew, for in leaving off the 'old man,' Saul, when he breathed out threatenings and slaughter,' became transformed thence into the 'new man in Christ Jesus,' breathing the word of peace to his brethren,' 'Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good.' This is the revived evangel which the professing church needs to learn anew, and what if it be proclaimed by them who in times past have been called no preachers, but who now may say, 'The Lord gave the word; the women who published it were a great host.' What such as these are striving to do is to slay those evil spirits still unmortified by the state, the liquor devil, the tobacco fiend, the unclean spirit of impurity, the gambling and lottery demons, the giants of brutality and animalism, that hidden shape which shuns the light of heaven, the oath-bound secret lodge. These, the enemies of our peace, are the allies of the world, and they it is that make war, for the Apostle James, making inquisition of this very matter, says: 'From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?'"

The Cynosure was glad last week to notice the fact that the Chicago City Council almost unanimously passed an order directing the chief of police to prevent two prize fights which were appointed, "and all fighting contests generally." But with prize fights as with liquor, "prohibition does not prohibit" unless there are good men to carry it out. Only a week after the passage of the above, in a crowded thoroughfare where policemen are in sight most of the time, we saw a notice in large, neat characters, "COME AND SEE THE PRIZE FIGHT, Tickets only 5 Cents." The Chicago Record gives an item that gives a hint at least as to why the order of the City Council is ineffectual. "Chief of Police Badenoch and Assistant Chief Ross locked arms and strolled down the levee last night. It was the chief's A B C in police work. The officials entered a saloon at Clark and Harrison streets. Detectives Tierney and McGrath were coming out. Recognitions passed and both parties looked surprised. 'Have a drink, boys,' said the chief. 'We never disobey orders,' said McGrath, and both men marched up to the bar. It was four beers. At the Armory station Capt. Hartnett took the visitors below. The hour was propitious for slummers, as the Civic Federation had just ended a raid. Sixty women in cells chattered and laughed, screamed and sung lustily. Other cells were well filled, some even crowded. 'Plain drunks,' disorderly cases, thieves, pickpockets, suspects and alleged violators of all manner of ordinances were like sardines in separate cells. 'Hello Ash! what're you doing here?' the assistant chief said to a prisoner peeking from behind the bars. 'They say I was drunk about 9 o'clock this morning, sir.' 'Kill anybody?' 'Not to speak of.' 'Steal anything?' 'Nop.' 'Nothing but booze?' 'Booze mixed—that's all.' 'Then you can go out for fresh air,' said Assistant Chief Ross." The appointment of such a man by the new mayor does not speak well for his judgment or morals. What may the city expect if the chief of police begins his work by going to the saloon and ordering drinks for himself and companions, and stands by and says nothing while his assistant turns loose a man who has been arrested, on the strength of the culprit's plea that he was only drunk?

THE ORANGEMEN.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

[For most of the historical facts in the following article I am indebted to McClintuck and Strong's Cyclopedia of Biblical and Theological Literature.]

Among the many outgrowths of Freemasonry which, with spurious pretensions to piety and patriotism, have beguiled and demoralized great multitudes of English-speaking people, perhaps none has been more remarkable than the association known as "Orangemen." It grew out of the chronic animosities of the Protestants and Roman Catholics of the north of Ireland. It took its name from the Prince of Orange, William III. Its gala day is the 12th of July, the anniversary of the battle of Boyne, fought July 12, 1690, in which the English king gained a great victory over the Romanists.

The first regular lodge was organized in the county of Armaugh, Sept. 21, 1795, though previous to that time there had been an organization of similar import known as the "Peep o' Days." It was closely patterned after Freemasonry, both in the form of its organization and the character of its obligations. It has its system of grand and subordinate lodges. Each lodge had a master, deputy master, secretary, committee and chaplain. The conditions of membership were that the candidate should be a male Protestant, and eighteen years of age. The author of the history says: "The organization of this strange association was most complete and extensive. Emissaries were sent out to organize lodges in Wales, Scotland, Canada and the colonies of the Mediterranean. But the most formidable part of this zealous propagandism was its introduction into the army. No fewer than thirty-two regiments had received warrants for holding lodges in Ireland, and the English Grand Lodge had granted thirty-seven warrants for a similar purpose. In 1835 the association numbered twenty grand lodges, eighty district lodges, 1,500 private lodges, and about 220,000 members. From 1785, when a pitched battle was fought, attended with much bloodshed, the county of Armaugh seems to have been the scene of continual strife. Ten years later a series of outrages were committed on the Catholics, by which a large number were ejected from their homes and farms and their buildings wrecked. This led to what was known as the battle of the Diamond. The association began among the ignorant, but soon included a more intelligent if not a more scrupulous class; and in 1827 the Duke of Cumberland became its Grand Master. There is good reason to believe that in this instance, as in Freemasonry, the assumption of authority in the association by a member of the royal family was a matter of precaution against conspiracy against the government. Nevertheless there was at one time much reason to think that a conspiracy had been formed to alter the succession to the crown in favor of the Duke of Cumberland. This led to an extensive parliamentary inquiry in 1835, which, together with a very shocking outrage perpetrated on a procession in Ireland, did much to awaken the public mind and discredit the association. But strange to say, like Freemasonry, it has survived its dishonor and still holds its dark sway over the public mind.

"The worst result of Orange association was the constant incentive which it supplied to party animosities and deeds of violence. In the north of Ireland party displays and processions were an ever-recurring source of disorder and even bloodshed, and the spirit of fraternity that pervaded its members was a standing obstacle to the administration of law. It was known or believed that an Orange culprit was perfectly safe in the hands of an Orange jury; and all confidence in the local administration of justice by the magistrates was destroyed. So great was the popular distrust of the administration of justice in party questions, that for several years the Lord Chancellor laid down a rule by which no member of an Orange association was admitted to the commission of peace."

Of the colonial offshoots of the Orange association, those of Canada have been the most active and flourishing. The Canadian Orangemen have been largely Irish emigrants that carried with them all the bitterness of their domestic feud with the Roman Catholics. Outrages directed against churches and convents have been of frequent occurrence until recently.

In the United States the organizations have been less prevalent, but still quite numerous in our large cities. The great riot of July 12, 1871, in the city of New York, was a conflict between Orangemen and Irish Catholics. It required the calling out of the military for its suppression and resulted in the death of over sixty persons, most of whom were Irish Catholics. It is not known, nor is there reason to believe, that this organization has ever resulted in the conversion of a single Romanist, while it has tended greatly to promote exasperation and hostility to Protestants. Nor is there any more reason to think that the Knownothing movement of 1850 to 1855, or the A. P. A. of to-day, will do more than to promote bitterness, exasperation and violence. The truth is that no true reformation, either in doctrine or in morals, can be reasonably hoped for except by the presentation of truth in the spirit of meekness and of love. All secret associations will invariably be regarded with suspicion, and, as experience has abundantly shown, are sure to degenerate into occasions for violence and crime.

Oberlin, O.

LODGE FOLLY.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY J. S. THOMPSON, AT THE OHIO STATE CONVENTION.

"Wisdom excelleth folly as far as light excelleth darkness." It is unnecessary to dwell on the superior excellency of light over darkness; that is apparent to every one. Neither is it necessary to dwell on the superior excellency of wisdom over folly; that also is apparent to every one. I am asked to address you on the subject of Lodge Folly. The assigning of such a subject is in itself an indictment of the lodge. It is a charge that their works are not the works of light, but the works of darkness. If their works be the works of darkness, it is because they are evil, and hate the light, and come not to the light, lest their deeds be made manifest, that they are not of God. "He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought of God."

But can this indictment of folly which is made against the lodge be sustained? If so, then folly is chargeable against every one who becomes identified with the lodge, or in any way supports it. I believe that the indictment can be amply sustained; hence that every man that is identified with the lodge, or is a supporter of it, is not wise.

1. Their claims of secrecy are folly. These lodges all claim to be possessed of valuable secrets which will be revealed to the initiated, and which can only be known by the initiated. These secrets they guard with the greatest care, and the initiated is bound by strong bonds "ever to conceal and never to reveal" any of them. But with all their care to guard their secrets they are known, and as well known by those who have never been in the lodge as by those who are in it. It is the greatest of folly for men to suppose that they can band themselves together, no matter how strong the bonds may be that bind them, and keep secret their deeds. It is a common proverb that "murder will out," and we may apply it to the secrets of the lodge; they will out, for "there is nothing secret that shall not be revealed; there is nothing hidden which shall not be made manifest." Lodgemen may tell you that their secrets cannot be known, but the fact remains, and they know that it is true, that all their secrets are as well known by men who are not in the lodge, and who never have been in it, as by those who are in it. And this fact is also well known, they possess no secrets that will make men better, or will bless the world, or will be of any value to any one. They have their passwords, signs, grips, work of initiation, and a few magic words which they communicate with the greatest show of importance, but which when received are simply foolishness, and cannot possibly do any one any good.

And now this being so, what do you think of the man who pays a large initiation fee, submits to the indignities of initiation, pays large lodge dues, spends night after night in the lodge, and yet gets nothing in return but what is known by plenty who have never submitted to these things; gets nothing that will be of any value to him in any way? Is he a man profoundly wise? Has he pursued a course which commends itself to persons of good sense and judgment? All this claim that their so-called secrets are not known to the uninitiated, and cannot be known by the uninitiated, is folly; they are known, and can be known by every one who desires to know them. And to pay large initiation fees, regular lodge dues, submit to the indignities of initiation, squander precious time, and get no more in return than is gotten by those who enter the lodge, is supreme folly.

2. Their claims to antiquity are folly. It is true, many of the minor secret orders do not lay claim to great antiquity; but there is the one order, which is the fruitful parent of the whole brood, and which does set up a most ridiculous claim to antiquity. This institution arrogates to itself the title, "Ancient and Honorable," and its members call themselves, "The Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons." Masonic authorities claim for their order that in its principles it is coeval with the creation. The claim is very generally made that Solomon was a Grand Master of the lodge, and some even have the temerity to claim for Adam that he was a member of that "Ancient and Honorable Order." One authority says, "From the commencement of the world we may trace the foundation of Masonry. Ever since symmetry began and harmony displayed her charms our order has had a being." Again we read, "A belief in the antiquity of Masonry is the first requisite of a good teacher. The dignity of the institution depends mainly upon its age, and to disguise its gray hairs is to expose it to a contemptuous comparison with every society of modern date." Mackey says, "In its organization as a peculiar institution, such as it now exists, we dare not trace it further back than the building of Solomon's Temple." Again from Masonic authority we quote the following: "That branch of Masonry which comprises the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason, may justly claim an antiquity surpassing that of all other societies. The historian discovers its traces as an organization here and there as far back as the times of King Solomon, and in a different form more than a thousand years beyond that period." And we hear the claim of its antiquity constantly set up and it is paraded before us as that "Ancient and Honorable Order," and doubtless many are simple enough to believe these stories of antiquity are true.

But what are the real facts as regards its antiquity? Doubtless Adam was the first man to wear an apron; but so far from being the badge of innocency, it was the emblem of "deception, selfishness and sin." Cain was the first to rise up and kill his brother, but certainly it was not because Abel refused to give him the secret of a Master Mason. It is very true that their lodge worship, for Masonry is a religious institution, is borrowed from the ancient heathen mysteries. But to claim for the institution any such antiquity as to say that Solomon was a Most Excellent Grand Master of the lodge, or that our ancient brethren dedicated their lodges to King Solomon because he was the first Most Excellent Grand Master, is the most ridiculous folly. Speculative Masonry, Masonry as it exists and is known, never existed prior to 1717. There did exist prior to that time lodges of operative masons, but they were trade organizations. On the 24th of June, 1717, four lodges of working masons met in London, at the Apple Tree Tavern, and formed the first Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. That is the true origin of Masonry as it now exists, and it has no claim to any greater antiquity than this. These facts rest on undoubted evidence and cannot be disapproved. In the face of this, is it not the most ridiculous folly to talk about that "Ancient and Honorable Order;" to claim for it an antiquity greater than that of any society in existence; to talk about St. John the Divine, or Solomon the King, or Enoch the Translated, or Adam the father of the race, having been members of this ancient and honorable order? Does not the man who struts about, wearing his lambskin apron, and claiming to be a member of that ancient and honorable order—less than two hundred years old—appear in such a position as may well excite the merriment of well-informed persons? What folly in their claim to antiquity!

3 Their initiation ceremonies are exceedingly foolish. And indeed they are not alone foolish; they are sinful, blasphemous and sacrilegious.

Imagine a man of self-respect and dignity, taken into the preparation room, stripped of his clothing—all except his shirt, and if that happens to fasten behind it is taken off and put on wrong side before—having instead of his own clothing a pair of drawers which fasten with strings so that they may be accommodated to the physical demands of the candidate, and which are worn by every candidate who is initiated,—be he the most fastidious in tastes, or the most slovenly and careless in personal habits—one leg of these rolled above the knee—or both, according to the degree he may be taking—one breast bare, or both, as the case may be, a small cord called a cable tow about his neck or body, according to the degree that he is receiving, a hoodwink over his eyes, in this condition led about the lodge-room, struck in the head with the setting maul, and pretending to be dead, buried with the acacia planted at the head of the grave, raised from the dead on the five points of Masonry after the body has become so far decomposed that all are holding their nostrils because of the stench, and the body has become so far decomposed that the skin and flesh peel from the hand when an effort is made to raise him, kneeling at the altar and taking a horrible oath. And yet no man is made a Master Mason without submitting to these and similar indignities; these are the things done when men are being initiated into this ancient and honorable order! Imagine again three men connected together with a cable tow wound seven times around their bodies, with coats off, led about the lodge-room, stumbling over chairs and other articles piled in their way—the rough and rugged way; think of a man personating Moses and another the Almighty at the burning bush; or mimicking the miracles of Moses before Pharaoh; imagine these candidates lowered into a pit beneath the lodge-room, and pretending to be hunting among the rubbish of the Temple for the ark of the covenant, that sacred article upon which not even the high priest dared to look, but which must be clouded from his vision by the ascending incense, when on the one only day of the year he entered the Most Holy place; finding what they pretend to be the sacred ark and bringing it from the pit. And yet no man ever is made a Royal Arch Mason without going through these foolish, sinful, blasphemous and sacrilegious acts. Think again of a man in his right senses drinking a libation of wine from a human skull, and invoking upon himself, in addition to his own sins, those of the one from whose skull he drinks the wine if he proves unfaithful to his obligation as a Knight Templar. And yet no man is made a Knight Templar who does not drink wine from a human skull and call down these imprecations upon himself. Do I use too strong language when I call it not alone folly, but blasphemy and sacrilege?

If I had time I might dwell upon the various oaths that are taken by the candidate with such penalties as that his throat be cut from ear to ear, his tongue torn out, his body severed in twain and his bowels taken thence and burned to ashes and scattered to the four winds of heaven. These are horrible, to say nothing of being foolish, yet every man who is made a Master Mason must have taken these oaths and invoked these penalties. And these oaths bind him to shield a brother, at last reaching that place where not even murder and treason are excepted. Is it not folly for men to talk about being loyal American citizens when bound by such oaths as these? And what do you think of the man, who before he enters the lodge, before anything has been revealed to him, solemnly swears that he will "ever conceal and never reveal" anything that may be communicated to him? If it is something that will bless the world and make men better, is it right for him to swear that he will never communicate it to those who may be in such urgent need of it? If it is something treasonable or criminal that is to be revealed to him, can he innocently swear that he will ever shield and protect the criminal by refusing to divulge the secret? Are not their initiation ceremonies the supremest folly?

What I have said applies to the Masonic order, but she is the mother of the whole brood, and while her children may not have attained to the same degree of folly, it is folly of precisely the same kind. In all of them the candidate is called upon to forswear himself, by swearing or promising ever to conceal and never to reveal what may be communicated to him. An exceedingly foolish bond for any one ever to place himself under. And many of the follies of Masonry are found in the initiation ceremonies of these lesser orders. The universal rule is that the candidate is taken with a hoodwink over his eyes. I suppose that as in Masonry he is seeking light, an exceedingly strange place to seek for light where such strenuous efforts are made to exclude the light, and conceal from the light. In Odd-fellowship the candidate has chains put upon his body, and the suggestion is made of binding him to the stake; he has the blindfold removed to find himself confronted with a corpse, or skeleton, or the imitation of one, that he may be taught the lesson of mortality; and in the midst of this he takes the oath never to make known their secrets. In the Knights of Pythias the candidate has the hoodwink removed, to find himself kneeling over a coffin containing a skeleton or the imitation of one, in which position he takes the obligation. In many of them tests of bravery are applied, such as jumping on spikes, which prove to be rubber, or jumping into a supposed lake of fire, etc. But I might spend more time than is at my command on this one point of the follies of initiation. But enough has been said to support the indictment against the lodge of folly, if there were nothing more to be said than what I have already presented on this one point, the follies of initiation.

(Concluded next week.)

BISHOP NINDE'S VISIT TO KUCHENG, CHINA.

BY REV. M. C. WILCOX, PRESIDING ELDER.

This city and district have just enjoyed a rare treat. For a number of years we have tried to secure a visit from one of our chief pastors. In 1892 Bishop Mallalieu's plans would not permit so long a stay in the Foo-kien province, and last year the state of Bishop Foster's health made it impossible for him to undertake such a journey into the interior. But this year the cherished wish of missionaries and native workers has been fulfilled, despite fightings without and fears of uprisings within.

Our conference closed at Foochow Thanksgiving evening, and we started Dec. 4 in two house-boats for Kucheng. Our party consisted of Bishop Ninde and his sons, George and Fred, Mrs. Ninde and her little grandson Henry Lacy (son of Rev. W. H. Lacy of the Foochow mission); Rev. N. J. Plumb, P. E. of Hok-chiang district; Miss Willma H. Rouse, returning to Kucheng, and the writer.

The first seventy miles of our journey was up the Min river; the remaining thirty miles by sedan chairs across the country. Having a fair wind, the first stage was finished in about two days and a half. The overland part took about a day and a half. The hundred miles consumed nearly as much time as the distance between New York and San Francisco.

About a mile from the West Gate, Kucheng City, the bishop was received by the preachers, students, etc., with much of the pomp and ceremony usually accorded to high officials. All the preachers wore mandarin hats, and the master of ceremonies a full mandarin suit. Soon after reaching my house the entire party, with about twenty native preachers and others prominent in church work, sat down to a feast in Chinese style, which lasted from 2:30 to 5:30 P. M., and was followed by addresses from the bishop and Mrs. Ninde.

Sabbath was a blessed day for us all. In the forenoon the bishop—with Bro. Plumb as interpreter—preached a soul-feeding sermon from Titus 2: 14. In the afternoon Mrs. Ninde preached a sermon of the same kind on Isaiah 63: 1, "Mighty to Save," the writer interpreting. Bro. Plumb preached another helpful sermon in the evening on "The Wrestling of Jacob."

Monday forenoon was devoted to the schools and the hospital, with which the visitors expressed themselves highly pleased, as they did with all the work they saw. After another union dinner, the missionaries and guests repaired to the church, which was again crowded. Brief good-by addresses by the bishop and Mrs. Ninde were briefly responded to, when our guests left for Foochow, being escorted a mile or more by a large company, who returned to the city rejoicing in the hope of a meeting never to break up and a Sabbath never to end.

I would ask the reader to pray habitually for Kucheng district and all its workers—native and foreign—that continued prosperity may attend their labors. During the last seven years the members and probationers on this district more than trebled, increasing from 372 to 1,143, which is more than double the average increase for China, thus showing that this part of the great field is "white indeed unto harvest." Special contributions kindly sent from America have enabled me to enter some of the "open doors." But if I had more means, I could appoint workers to many other villages on Kucheng and Tong-bing districts, which are in my charge. Allow me to state that any amount from $1.00 up, sent to Rev. A. B. Leonard, D. D., Missionary Secretary, 150 Fifth Ave., New York, and simply designated for my work, will be welcome and can be used advantageously to support workers, or to rent and furnish buildings for church or school purposes. I will carefully report how the money of each contributor is expended.

Any individual, Sunday-school or Epworth League that will send me (as above) $15 to support for one year a pastor-teacher, $10 towards the support of a preacher or a teacher, or $8 to aid a needy student in the Kucheng high school, will receive a sketch (with translation) of the person supported, and when possible, his photograph.

It is often very important that a worker should have his wife with him in order to work successfully among the women. In such cases I would need $25 a year for a pastor-teacher and $20 for a preacher or a teacher. Please do not allow your special contribution to lessen your regular offering to our missionary society. Help us if you can. Write me if you want more information and I will gladly answer. My address is "Foochow, China, via San Francisco."

The sitting of the last Congress and transaction of business by it through most of the hours of the holy Sabbath, furnishes another strong argument for the religious amendment of the Constitution. If that amendment were a part of the fundamental law of the land, such desecration of the Sabbath by the nation's representatives could not occur. The figment of a continuous session through Saturday and Sabbath in order to make legal the business done on the Lord's day is understood by every one. It does not change the character of the action, or make it any the less illegal in the sight of God. Not only was Congress guilty in this matter, but because it was in session the Chief Magistrate and his advisers had to be at work during the day. The Constitution exempts the President from labor on the Sabbath, but Congress put the temptation in his way and made it seem necessary for him to work. The nation, judging from the tone of the secular press, has lifted no voice in condemnation of this violation of God's law. There has been no repentance. Will the great Judge of the nations thus pass the matter by? Because judgment is not executed speedily men may think so, the nation may think so; but men and the nation will sooner or later find that they were mistaken.—Christian Instructor.

Taking the country as a whole, the Sunday train is doing more than all other agencies combined to break down the Sabbath of the Lord our God. "In it," the commandment reads, "thou shalt not do any work, thou . . . nor thy man-servant." Who is the "man-servant" of the American public, if not the army employed on its railroads? A recent Advance speaks of the probable ultimate breaking down of our "American Sabbath." I cannot believe that such a catastrophe is before the nation. God and his law will be vindicated as in the old anti-slavery days. Let us pray that the vindication come not as then, "with garments rolled in blood." It is a fearful thought that the responsibility of it all rests with God's own people. I would commend to all in places of influence or authority—and who is not there?—one sentence in the paragraph referred to. It is worth repeating. "Our Rest Day is too hallowed to be trifled with, and it is in too much peril at the present time to permit of the justification of any act by anybody which increases the peril."—Selected.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Labor legislation.—Fifth Avenue sentimentalism.—Croton water.—Easter flowers.—School farms.—City farms.

The Ainsworth bill now pending in the Legislature is much discussed by merchants at present, and their many employes. The bill requires that no woman under twenty-one and no boy under eighteen shall work more than ten hours a day, and that under no consideration shall they work before 6 o'clock in the morning or after 9 at night. The prevalent impression is that the restrictions are arbitrary, unwise and absurd. Bloomingdale Bros., who have 1,576 employes, 500 of whom are cash girls, and a great part of the others are women also, say that there is no provision in the bill that is not already complied with. They are afraid that an unwarrantable espionage will be established over their affairs, which are closely watched now under existing laws. The board of health looks after the sanitary conditions, the board of education looks after the truancy law, which prevents the employment of any child under 14 years of age, and the Gerry society sees that the children are properly treated. Other large merchants criticise the bill and attribute it to the zeal of the reformer which has been burning so fiercely of late.

The proposition to build a cable road on Fifth avenue from 23d street to Washington Square, and from thence to the Battery, parallel to Broadway, has caused the usual outburst about "vandalism" and "desecration." There was the most vehement opposition against putting cars on Broadway; but very shortly after they had been put on, everybody was wondering how it had ever been possible to get along without them. Fifth avenue below 23d street is now nothing but a commercial highway. The owners of the stately old mansions have turned them into shops or else replaced them with immense business structures. The exigencies of trade will soon make a surface road a necessity. For many blocks above 23d street nearly to 42nd, shops have driven out the families, which have been fleeing northward steadily, and the time may shortly come when Fifth avenue from Central Park to Washington Square will be merely a trading thoroughfare, rivalling Sixth avenue and Broadway.

A recent inspection of the Croton district by some of the commissioners is not reassuring as to the present sanitary condition of the water supply. About a year ago a raid was made on the district and some buildings condemned and burned as sources of contamination. Further inspection may necessitate another raid. The city water for the past year has been very good. In some months the death rate from typhoid fever has been lower than in Albany, with its 100,000 inhabitants. There ought to be some system of filtration, however, of all the water admitted to the main pipes. No adequate protection seems possible without this, and the sooner it is understood and provided for the better it will be for the public health.

Roses by the thousand are coming into New York every day, more plentifully than ever before. One wholesale florist sells 20,000 roses every morning, and the day before Easter he will have on hand 50,000 violets, 30,000 roses, and the same number of calla lillies. Flowers are very cheap just now but will go up at Easter, and after that they will be cheaper than ever. Those who desire a special flower have to pay well for it, and the other day a man paid $60 for two dozen roses of a particular kind.

Out in the Kensico district a farm school has recently been inaugurated where poor homeless boys from the city may be sent for a few months to receive training in farm work before being sent West for adoption by farmers. In this way those are sifted out who dislike the occupation and are not likely to succeed. Out of 87 who have served a three months' probation, 50 have been selected as suitable and promising candidates. This idea was originated several years ago, but only recently has the farm been bought and stocked. It cannot fail to do a most useful work, benefiting not only the boys but also the farmers who shall adopt them and make farmers of them.

The New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor has undertaken relief work for the unemployed, by the cultivation of vacant lots in the city and vicinity. Holders of unoccupied land are invited to co-operate in the scheme, and about 800 acres of land have already been secured. The plan of the committee is to secure a free use of the land and then raise a fund to provide for the expense of ploughing, fertilizing and planting. For the most part potatoes will be cultivated, as they are regarded as the most profitable crop that can be planted on land adjacent to New York. Each applicant will be expected to provide his own hoe and spade, and do all the work of cultivation on a certain plat of ground throughout the season. At the end of the season the crop will be given him free. It is estimated that each acre will produce on an average from 400 to 500 bushels of potatoes, which sold at an average price of 60 cents a bushel, will net an average of $300 an acre. Several instructors will be provided, so that even those entirely ignorant of farming will be able to take advantage of the enterprise. The committee expect to expend $10 or $15 an acre for seed, ploughing and fertilizing, with the intention that the money shall be paid back at the end of the season, when the cultivators are able to realize on their crops, thus excluding from the work the element of a mere charitable relief scheme. Temporary shelter will be provided for those unable to pay for lodging or the necessary car or ferry fares, and arrangements will be made so that the transportation companies will give reduced rates.

THE PRESENT MOMENT.

The present moment is divinely sent;
The present duty is thy Master's will;
Oh, thou who longed for some more noble work,
Do thou this hour the given task fulfill.
And thou shalt find, though small at first it seemed,
It is the work of which thou oft hast dreamed.

Oh, think not if thou art not called to work
In mission fields of some far distant clime,
That thine is no grand mission. Every deed
That comes to thee in God's allotted time
Is just the greatest deed that thine could be,
Since God's high will appointed it to thee.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Income tax.—Anti-saloon League.—Three good sermons.—Manual labor honorable.—Patents.

Although its advance publication somewhat lessened interest in the income-tax decision by the Supreme Court, it is still the pricipal topic of conversation in official circles. Members of the administration, including the President, do not hesitate to express their disappointment at the nature of the decision, which they believe will add many difficulties to the collection of the tax upon incomes not specifically exempted. Both President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle say, however, that there is nothing in sight which indicates that the decision of the court will make the calling of an extra session of Congress necessary. The generally expressed opinion is that the decision pronounced the doom of the income tax. The exemption of incomes from rents and from municipal bonds will make many new enemies for the tax, and the fact that the law stands at all only because of an equal division of the court upon its constitutionality will be made the most of by those who will work for the repeal of the law at the next session of Congress. Meanwhile the Treasury Department has instructed the collectors of internal revenue to revise their previous instructions in accordance with the court's decision.

The Anti saloon League is preparing a surprise for some of those who have stood in the way of the work of the league, but its nature is a secret not to be divulged at this time. The leaguers were much disappointed by the refusal of the Assistant District Attorney, who is in charge of police court prosecutions, to issue warrants asked for by the league against a number of saloonkeepers whose application for license had been rejected, some as long ago as last November, but who are still running their saloons upon permits given by the excise board. The league maintains that the excise board has no right to issue such permits, claiming the law to be mandatory as to the time within which a saloon must cease to do business after the rejection of an application for a license for it. The officials seemingly hold to the contrary. The matter will be heard from again.

The semi-annual meeting of the Washington Presbytery was held this week, the retiring Moderator, Rev. Dr. W. C. Alexander, preaching the sermon. Dr. Alexander's topic was "Christianity Not a Failure," and his text was from Acts 5: 38, 39: "For if this counsel or this work be of man, it will come to naught; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it." The sermon was a strong one, and some of the word painting sublime. For instance, this: "Christianity to-day lights up the earth as the beautiful feet of morning upon the mountains, and the dark places of cruelty and barbarism are where its rays have not yet fallen. Wherever its banner is uplifted there are signs of progress. Christ crucified and faith in him is enough to conquer all lands. The tokens of universal triumph grow brighter and fairer. Speed thy coming, oh thou time of prophecy and promise! Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Rev. Dr. George N. Luccock was chosen Moderator for the coming term.

Prof. D. H. Clare, of Colgate University, addressed the Y. M. C. A. Sabbath afternoon, on the futility of fame and riches, basing his remarks upon the Master's words: "For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth." He told the young men among other edifying things that plenty was not a palliative for sin; not a cure for error; that abundance could not cure sorrow, although it often caused it.

Dr. Radcliffe, who has accepted the call to the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, subject to the consent of the Detroit Presbytery, preached his first sermon in Washington last Sunday, from the text: "Sir, we would see Jesus," the words of certain Greeks who sought Jesus when he was teaching the people at Bethany. The sermon made an excellent impression on those who heard it, by the thought and care apparent in its preparation as well as by the finished oratory of the speaker.

In ascordance with an amendment to the appropriation for the District of Columbia, authorizing an increase of two in the number of public school trustees and the appointment of women as the additional trustees, the commissioners have appointed two women trustees, one white and one colored, hoping by the selection of a colored woman to discover the solution of a problem that is yearly growing more troublesome—the course of instruction in the colored high school, particularly for the girls. At present there are about 300 colored girls in the high school. Of this number it is not possible for more than 100 to obtain admission to the Normal school and to graduate as teachers in the public schools. It is impossible for even a fraction of the remaining 200 to obtain such employment as the education now given them should fit them for, and, as a rule, they will not accept domestic service because they have been taught to regard that work as unsuitable for educated women. The new colored trustee is strongly in favor of teaching these girls trades, and also teaching them that manual labor is honorable.

List of patents granted to Illinois inventors this week, reported by C. A. Snow & Co., solicitors of American and foreign patents, opposite the U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.:

J. Q. Adams, Marseilles, cob-stacker; C. M. Avery, Rockford, truss-bridge; G. N. Buck, Mattoon, garment-supporter; F. O. Creager, Marseilles, self-locking cleat for electric wiring; R. J. Edwards, Galena, car-coupling; G. A. Feder, Belleville, wire-winding and distributing machine; Z. Fetters, Cheneyville, dumping-wagon; P. Frantz, Girard, wire-fence stay; F. Frey, Quincy, incubator; W. A. Hinkle, Forsyth, straw-stacker; L. Lebknecher, Belleville, stove-board; J. McPhail, Blue Island, sprocket-wheel; H. Niemeyer, Mattoon, dumping-wagon; W. D. Parr, Collinsville, adjustable vehicle-pole; C. T. Regester, Sterling, automatic windmill regulator; C. Schulze, Deer Plain, wire-stretching device; J. A. Smith, Macomb, street-sweeper; P. C. REFORM NEWS.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

ON TRAIN, April 11, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Again on the wing, passing through New Jersey, enroute for the metropolis. While at home I improved the opportuninty to hold several parlor meetings. Bro. and Sister

Powers, of 355 Penna Ave., Washington, D. C., are causing the light of truth to shine to those who may come within reach. Their "Beacon Light Mission" is open from morning until night. An attractive sign invites passers-by to "behold the things done in the lodge in secret." Some friends have sent them old copies of the Cynosure for distribution. Those who thus send may be sure their papers will do good missionary work. It was in connection with this mission that three parlor meetings were held.

Bro. Lyon, pastor of the German Baptist church, opened his heart and home and invited his neighbors to his parlor to investigate with me; and I have reason to think good was thus accomplished. A man at Bro. Lyon's stated that he was a Mason, and that he knew that Christianity was founded on Masonry. When asked for the proof he began to talk about something else, and make similar foolish assertions. He did not offer proof, for his assertions, but like the Irishman's flea, would jump round trying not to be caught.

I stopped over night at our Philadelphia headquarters, 457 North 6th street. Much good was reported as coming from our late convention there. Light is what the people are looking for. Many in lodge darkness will walk out when they see the way. I much enjoyed my flying trip through the towns where I lectured and secured Cynosure readers one year ago.

I stopped briefly at Morristown, Royersford, Bartos, Bally, Vera Cruz, Emaus and Allentown. I had planned to visit Graters Ford and other points, but decided it was best to hasten on, and push the work in New York City. I tried the hospitality of Rev. A. S. Shelly, Bally, and it proved as good as ever. After I had taken his time, horse and carriage to go with me around the country he said I should come again.

Bro. Allen Gehman wanted to know how I knew that he let his Cynosure subscription run out? He did not know that I had my eye on the friends in the field assigned to my care. I stayed with him over night and, of couse, he renewed for the Cynosure.

We count among our true friends the Dr. and Mrs. Backenstoe, of Emaus. I was pained to learn of the death of their only child, a beautiful babe that came to brighten their home. They were permitted to treasure this jewel for only five months, when the ruthless hand of death took it from their care. He who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," will surely care for his own. W. B. Stoddard.

WORK IN TENNESSEE.

McNairy, Tenn., April 8, 1895.

Dear Cynosure:—Since my last report I have used some time in Memphis finding out ministers of various denominations and privately calling their attention to the great influence of secret societies, and particularly to the bold anti-Christian character of a number of them. In several instances I was courteously received, and by some, even Masons, invited to come again. One of them who favors entire holiness, and had not yet "seen anything in Freemasonry to conflict with religion," when I mentioned the oaths, readily replied, "Well, I will except the oaths." And I said, you have learned to repeat the fact that it is the obligation that makes the Mason. He thinks much of Carradine as a preacher of holiness. So I gave him Carradine's sermon, "Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?" When I saw him again he said that he should not practice Freemasonry any more; and I am in hopes that he will be true to his convictions publicly, as also another, a pleasant Cumberland Presbyterian minister, who gave me the Masonic grip about the first time I met him. It was in a revival meeting conducted by Rev. Hugh Spencer Williams, of Chicago. When I met the young man again I said, "Bro. Davison, I might have returned that sign the other night, but I reckon we had better not use those things." He replied: "I have been thinking so myself." Since then he has used stronger language than this in favor of giving the go-by to the whole thing. He is pastor of a church in the south part of the city.

But Mr. Williams, who now preaches regularly in the First Cumberland Presbyterian church, is a bold advocate for Masonry, at least privately. He tells me that he belongs to five secret societies, yet in his preaching I have heard him repeatedly express wonder and regret that the church and ministry have no more power with God and with men.

This talented minister, as also some others in Memphis, including Rev. Mr. Sullivan of the M. E. church South, when pressed with the anti-Christian character of Freemasonry by evidence from the writings of standard Masonic authors, seem to slide out of the dilemma and justify themselves in practicing what those authors say is "Theism," "A development of the old sun-worship," and a counterpart of the ancient mysteries" or secret pagan worships.

One minister said, "I always pray in the name of Christ in the lodge as well as out of it." Another minister who at first discredited the genuineness of the little book of quotations, afterwards claimed that they were not bound by the statement of those men. Another said: "It is easy to cry Antichrist; they used to call slaveholders Antichrist." Of course I had answers to the above, but for published replies would like to turn them over to Bro. Ronayne.

I preached five times in the city, mostly on reforms; and lectured twice on Anti-masonry. The last time it was before the Lamoyne Normal Institute, Memphis. The lecture was before the normal department of one hundred and fifty students, who gave strict attention, and at the close of it cheered long and eagerly. Mr. Steel, the president of this and of the Baptist Bible and Normal Institute, and several other ministers, signed a call that I had written out, for a Christian convention to be held in Jackson, Tenn., at no distant day.

Taken quite ill with la grippe, I started for home. Coming by way of Jackson I obtained more names to the call, but was too ill to tarry longer. Have been at home a week, and am still unwell, yet with good hope for future work in this cause. Truly yours, C. Powers.

SOME KINDLY EXPRESSIONS.

Dear Cynosure:—While engaged in the great battle for reform, it is pleasing to know that we have many warm sympathizers in the work; those who remember us when they "look up" to the King. Without divine aid our efforts are fruitless. I realize this more and more each day of life. I am constantly resting on his promise, "Lo, I am with you." Among the recent words of sympathy and great encouragement, I mention the following:

Rev. A. S. Copley, pastor of the Evangelical church, Albany, Oregon, says: "My soul leaps for joy at the prospect of meeting in a convention and an interdenominational holiness meeting, such as you suggest. You can record my name as one pastor who will pledge to take up an annual collection to assist the moral reform work on the coast. My thought is to preach some Lord's-day evening on moral reform, then call for a free-will offering. May the dear Lord raise up many more great and good men like Editor Kellogg and A. J. Gordon. God is preparing a people, a separate, a peculiar, a clean-handed, a pure-hearted people for his Son. I want to be among the few chosen. Oh, for power to do all his will from the heart! My church is always open to you to preach the gospel of separation, and for meetings of moral reform."

Bro. Copley also enclosed me a letter of commendation. The following is a copy:

"Albany, Oregon, Feb. 28, 1895.—To whom it may concern: This is to certify that the bearer, P. B. Williams, has spoken several times in my hearing on moral reform, in a very interesting, impressive and instructive manner. He handles his subject plainly but not abusively; adroitly, without trick; showing love for men but hatred to all sin. Any minister will do well and honor God by granting him an open door. He preaches the gospel of complete separation. Yours for truth and right, A. S. Copley."

Rev. David Morrow always sends words of cheer. Rev. James I. Frasier, of Seattle, has recently sent his regards, and invokes the divine benedictions. Rev. Mr. Graham, of the United Presbyterian church at Oaksdale, Washington, gave us a hearty God-speed. Rev. W. H. Pruett, of Weston, Oregon, writes eight pages of his usually kind words.

While assisting in the revival meeting at Roseburg, Oregon, in January, among the converts was a very nice young man (a member of a lodge) in whom I was especially interested. I talked with him privately, preached straight publicly, urging him if he would be useful in the true sense to throw off the lodge, unite with the church, and stand with Christ in all true reform. Here are some extracts from a letter just received from him:

"Dear Bro.—I feel it is my duty to write you. Having a few spare moments I will write you now. Doubtless you have heard of the step I have taken. I gave up my lodge, have joined the U. B. church, and am resolved to live an upright Christian life. Oh, my dear brother, had I only taken up the cross years ago how much happier I would have been. I bless God that it is not too late for me to do something for my fellow-men yet. Pray for me that I may ever be loyal to Christ and the church. How I wish that I could see you and have a long talk with you. I am indebted to you and Bro. Reynolds (the pastor) more than tongue can tell. If it had not been for you I might have been out in the world and getting deeper into sin. But through your efforts I am saved, pardoned, blessed in the Lord."

Such expressions of thankfulness are worth a lifetime of hard toil. May the Father keep the young man every moment.

The following is a very peculiar letter. I give it without name or date. He must have seen the notice the Post Intelligencer gave of my lecture:

"Dear Sir:—I saw a notice in the paper the other day that you delivered a lecture in Seattle recently on 'The Evils of Secret Societies.' I wish I could have heard you, as I would be interested to know something about secret societies. I am not a member of any secret society, and have no desire to join any that I know; neither am I prejudiced against any society, because I have never given myself any concern over them and know nothing at all about them. But as you are undoubtedly informed about such matters, I shall be pleased if I can gain some information from you by correspondence. I would like to know in general what motive (excepting beneficial advantages like paying funeral expenses, sick benefits, etc.,) is first in inducing men to join secret orders. Can we assume from the fact that most of the prominent men in public life belong to some secret order that they do it for political influence or as a matter of policy? What noted thinkers (not Catholics), if any, in our own country are pronounced against secret orders? And from what standpoints? Have you any literature on the subject that you can favor me with, or can you refer me to any? Any information you may feel able to communicate to me on this subject, whether I have in this letter suggested it or not, will be much appreciated."

Dr. Barkley has sent me some encouraging words recently. He is a staunch friend at all times to our cause and to your agent. We always appreciate a letter from him.

Let us have responses to the important question, Who is willing to contribute annually any amount to assist our reform work in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho or anywhere west of the Rockies? How many pastors and churches will agree to take one collection annually to assist us?

With brotherly love, P. B. Williams.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

As I was the publisher of the Christian Cynosure from its first issue for fifteen years, I have been requested by my fellow-directors of the N. C. A. to give some reminiscences of those times.

The National Christian Association was organized at a convention held at Pittsburg, Pa., in May, 1868, at which meeting it was voted that a paper to represent the principles of the Association should be started.

The first number was issued from my office, 88 La Salle St., Chicago, in July of the same year, and the paper was issued from there fortnightly until the great fire of Oct 8th and 9th, 1871. A weekly edition of the Cynosure was also published a few months before the great fire.

I had started in the general stationery, printing and lithographing business at that number in December, 1867, and had previously made many business acquaintaces through the Northwest as solicitor for a Chicago stationery house. When I started for myself, my appeals for patronage met with a most gratifying response, and at the time the Cynosure was started, my business was already paying well. I occupied a stone front store on the Court House square; and as there was no other of the kind on the square, its situation was very advantageous.

The father of one of my Sunday-school class was chief clerk in one of the principal offices in the Court House, and was a man of much influence among his German neighbors. Soon after my stand was opened he volunteered to promise liberal patronage from his office. When he found that I was teaching his boys an anti-secrecy gospel, nothing more was said about patronage, though he allowed his boys to remain in my class till after the Cynosure was started, when he took them out of the Sunday-school entirely. He was a well-educated man, and a leader and officer of the Good Templars. He, himself, told me in a friendly conversation that he was a Freemason, and that most of the lodges of Odd-fellows and the minor secret orders were officered by Masons, which my observation has fully confirmed.

The first number of the N. C. A. organ, which bore the title, the Christian Banner (the fact that there was a paper of that name having been overlooked) was scattered widely to reach friends of reform in all sections, and as my name was on it as publisher I soon began to receive letters from my customers that contained neither orders nor remittances. They were couched in a great variety of terms from advice to threats. A few anonymous communications were also received. After the issue of other numbers of the Cynosure the number of anonymous communications was multiplied, and their tone of violence increased to a roar of vituperation and threats.

My bookkeeper received a letter from his father, who was a prominent and unusually well-educated farmer living near Lockport, Ill., stating that not only neighbors but many strangers had called and warned him that his son was in great danger; and though he could not induce them to state definitely what the danger was, he was told that his employer was fighting the secret orders and both his property and life would be sacrificed; and his son would suffer the same fate if he continued in my employ. The old farmer was plucky and would not, at least at first, advise his son to leave. Soon afterwards when he went home on a visit, he was astonished at the great attention he received not only from acquaintances but from strangers, who came a considerable distance for the purpose of persuading him to leave my employ, by means of advice, warning and dire threats.

I had seen the diabolical and treasonable operations of Freemasonry in the United States army, and tried at least to count the cost before I went into this fight with the powers of darkness. In a future article I may speak of Freemasonry in the army, if desired. Only the firm belief that God had spared my life from the dangers of the battlefield that he might use me to defend his truth and that he would sustain me, gave me the courage to become the publisher of the Cynosure. The terrific onslaught of the lodge drove me to my knees many times a day; and I never failed to find strength and, I believe, wisdom for the struggle. I had learned, both from my Bible and from my army experience, not only that a defensive warfare accomplishes little or nothing, but is really much more dangerous in many ways than a bold advance on the enemy. In a multitude of instances it was found that the fearless charge of a single regiment would rout five times their number who acted merely on the defensive; so that it was often said that the only way to meet a charge was by a counter-charge. That "there is nothing so difficult as to shoot a man who is fearlessly advancing to shoot you" has, at least in substance, passed into a proverb. I therefore, from the outset, determined never to be satisfied with a defensive campaign, much less to apologize either for right principles or right action.

Of course, my business suffered from my uncompromising position; but I believe that had I cringed in the least I would have been completely crushed. So that my business customers might know my exact position, I sent them each several copies of the Cynosure, and received some very strong denunciations for my pains. My specialty was lithographing, printing, binding, etc., for bankers, and I secured orders largely by personal solicitation. Iowa I found my best field, and Anti-masonry flourished better there than in any other State. I did not conceal my principles, and had many lively debates with customers and prospective customers, and sometimes on the cars.

One day when in the City National Bank of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the cashier, who had on a previous occasion given me an order, opened the discussion, and the following dialogue ensued, much to the interest of those present:

Cashier—"You publish a paper against secret societies, don't you, Mr. Cook?

Cook—"Yes, sir; the Christian Cynosure."

Cashier—"Well, what have you accomplished in your fight against secret societies?"

Cook—"Mr. Beaver, I have just read in last night's Chicago Evening Journal: 'The cornerstone of the Iowa State House will not be laid with Masonic ceremonies, as had been intended, there being several Anti-masons on the building committee.' We claim the credit for that."

It is perhaps needless to add that the laugh was on Mr. Beaver, and that our dialogue ended thus abruptly. But I must reserve other reminiscences for a future article, if it is deemed desirable to continue the subject.

MASONIC JUSTICE EXEMPLIFIED.

Northwood, Ia., April 1.

Dear Cynosure:—A decision in the District Court of Worth county, Iowa, has surprised many. Lawyers Barnes and Linn were indicted by the State for forgery by issuing "blue sky" notes, etc. The case was clear. Everybody was looking for an interesting case, as they knew that there would be a strong fight on the defense. Suddenly the case is dismissed, it being stated that all losses had been adjusted and everything is all right.

There is much indignation among people who like to see justice rule. Of course it happens that defendants, county attorney, sheriffs, and (if we are not mistaken) the judge, are all Masons. This explains the mystery to those who are acquainted with Masonic doctrine and practice.

No doubt this charitable act will add new recruits to the lodge. There are many here who need protection when the hand of the law takes hold of them. This act will undoubtedly help to open the eyes of many voters in the county, so that they will look out for such government. The lodge question will be an "issue" in politics before long in this county. It should have been long ago. Yours truly. O. T. Lee.

TOBACCO AND WHISKY.

Dear Cynosure:—There was a request some time ago for me to write on this subject. It is scarcely necessary to say that old brethren in the church have used tobacco long before I was a member. It is not desirable to say anything that would appear bossy; nor is it right to justify its use, because it would not please God and might offend brethren. It is not necessary to enter into a lengthy discussion to prove the filthy tobacco habit wrong. To use tobacco is setting a bad example for the young on that line; and Christians should be careful and strive to set the right example.

Even ungodly men who use tobacco forbid their children its use, and sometimes deplore their own bad example. That it is not a desirable example seems to be the decision at the bar of every intelligent conscience. A minister addicted to the habit, preached against the use of tobacco, declaring he would "hew to the line if the chips did fly" in his "own face," for every one must answer to God for the example he has set before his fellows. I repented of the sin of using tobacco and quit the habit, by the grace of God. It was the only way I could answer to God for the bad example I had set for fifteen years. I am glad I did not put it off till the judgment.

Brethren beloved, "add to your faith this virtue;" quit the tobacco habit, and Jesus will carry you through. He is "the Great Physician;" the devil is a quack.

We are informed that a man near Andove, Missouri, was made mad from drinking poor whisky. The stuff, like most whisky, was drugged, and symptoms of hydrophobia developed, and it was supposed for a time he had been bitten by a rabid dog; but he recovered.

Whisky is adulterated with water by the addition of such poisons as nux vomica and tobacco. A reliable man who worked in a still forty years ago, informed me that they put dog buttons in the vat and then put enough water in to prevent a fatal effect. I have seen a recipe for making brandy of whisky by the addition of such drugs as nitric acid. This ingredient, however, was a very small portion of the recipe. One would suppose whisky poisonous enough without the addition of anything more deadly. No wonder many who drink it have the hydrophobia, snakes in the boots, and lodgery on the brain.

LOCAL OPTION TURNED DOWN.

Springfield, Ill., April 5,
Christian Citizenship Headquarters.)

Editor Cynosure:—If every reader could have been in the House Thursday morning and seen almost every member present with a petition against the Humphry and Aspinwall bills, he would have concluded that the Christian Citizenship League has some influence in the matter of legislation.

There is no doubt but that the license committee is against us. Mr. Black appeared before it Wednesday afternoon in the advocacy of his bill, allowing local option in the counties containing no larger towns than 5,000. While he was on his feet addressing the committee, the chairman put the question and it was voted to "recommend that it do not pass." In conversation the chairman said "they"—not the committee—had talked it over and concluded to "turn it down." We will see that the next legislature has a different license committee, if God permit.

LITERATURE.

CURRENT PERIODICALS.

The April Review of Reviews contains an admirable resume of the work attempted the present season by the various municipal reform organizations in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Albany, Baltimore, Detroit, Washington and other American cities. The Review's conclusions are optimistic. It is convinced that there is a long, hard pull ahead for the reformers, but believes that they are bound to win in the end. Portraits of the leaders in the different civic reform movements accompany the article. The editor calls attention to the recent development of college oratory, and instances several notable debates held at different institutions East and West. As against certain extreme manifestations of interest in athletics, the editor cites "the genuine enthusiasm for the study of public questions, for college journalism, and particularly for competitive debating." The services of the late Samuel Dana Horton, perhaps the ablest American exponent of international bimetallism, are briefly recounted by Mr. Frederick W. Holls. Mr. Horton was born in Ohio in 1844, was graduated at Harvard in the same class with Robert T. Lincoln, afterward studied in Germany, published several works on monetary science which won a world-wide repute, and twice served this government as a representative at international monetary conferences.

HOW TO CLEAN LENSES.

Photographers and Telescope Owners Can Do It Themselves Without Danger.

Mere dust can be removed with a camel's hair brush, there being nowhere found any opinions forbidding that. But in the changes of an ordinary climate a lens will get considerably blurred with filmy accumulations, even though it may never have been touched by the hand or brought in contact with grease in any form. A practical photographer once said that if a finger mark should come upon a lens which he valued very highly he would immediately return it to its European manufacturers. He would not dare to touch it himself.

Any one may venture upon taking an objective apart and cleaning it, provided he will only do it carefully.

In the first place "do not use either fine chamois skin, tissue paper or an old silk handkerchief, or any other such material as is usually advised." Use cheesecloth. It is not the wiping material, though, that is apt to do the mischief, but the fine dust particles, which may be silicious and become attached to the glass. This is the way to begin on the objective:

Take a wooden bowl, cleaned with soap and water, then half fill it with clean water of about the same temperature as the glass and put in a teaspoonful of ammonia in half a pail of water. First wash a piece of cheesecloth thoroughly with soap and water and rinse and clean. Then place it in the bowl or pail, so that the lens won't slip. Never use the same piece of cheeseloth twice.

Mr. Brashear says that when the lens has been dusted and placed in the water he prefers to rub it with the palms of his cleaned hands, although cheesecloth is good. There seems to be absolutely no danger of scratching it when plenty of water is used. When thoroughly washed, take the glass out, lay it on a bundle of cheesecloth, and use several pieces of the same, which have been previously washed clean and dried, and dry it. Don't let it drain dry. Take up all the moisture with the cloth. Vigorous rubbing will do no harm if the surfaces have no abrading material.

An objective can be cleaned without taking it out of its cell. First dust off the particles, then use the cheesecloth with soap and water. Go over the surface gently with one piece of cloth and throw it away and take another, then a third one. When the glass is clean, take a piece of dry cloth and dry it.

Of course photographic lenses can be cleaned in the same way.

How to Launder Silk and Lace.

To launder silk handkerchiefs drop a little ammonia in water, rub carefully, rinse, and having placed a cloth on the table pin the handkerchief to it, stretching tightly until every wrinkle is gone. When dry, remove the pins, take one corner of the kerchief in one hand and draw it briskly through the other. This removes the glazed appearance, and your handkerchief is like new. No ironing is necessary.

Lace curtains are best done in the same way, except a little starch may be added to the rinse water unless the curtains are very fine. Spread a sheet—two if necessary—on the floor, and having measured the windows and allowed for draping, if it is wished, stretch carefully and pin to the sheet and carpet. Two curtains may be handled at once as well as separately, and you are sure then to stretch them the same length.

Henry Ward Beecher once informed a man who came to him complaining of gloomy and despondent feelings, that what he most needed was a good cathartic; meaning, of course, such a medicine as Ayer's Cathartic Pills, every dose being effective.

Dandruff is an exudation from the pores of the skin that spreads and dries, forming scurf and causing the hair to fall out. Hall's Hair Renewer cures it.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

The Christian Cynosure.

WM. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 18, 1895.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 8th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Wednesday, May 8th, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., at 221 West Madison street, for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

Joseph E. Roy, President.

Mrs. M. C Baker, Rec. Sec'y.

"I know that thou canst do everything." Job 42: 2.

Ezra A. Cook, the publisher and proprietor of the Cynosure for many years, and one of the senior members of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association, gives us this week the first of a series of brief reminiscences. These articles will be an attractive feature of the sixth page. Will not every other member of the Board emulate Bro. Cook's example, and take time in the midst of other important business to do his share to make the organ of the N. C. A. interesting to its readers and helpful to the world?

All friends are cordially invited, but every member of the National Christian Association is particularly requested to take time to think about and pray for the annual meeting. We read, "There was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them."

Pres. J. Blanchard used to say, "Satan gives his profound attention to those who disturb his dark realm."

The weapons of our warfare are only mighty through God. All our plans and efforts will be futile unless the Holy Spirit of God is in them, giving life and power. But we must plan and strive, for it is God that worketh in us "both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

Come, if possible; if not, write.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH FESTIVALS.

S. M. Hill, one of our Swedish friends of Augustana Synod, president of Luther Academy (a fine school with collegiate, academic and normal departments) in Wahoo, Nebraska, has written an article with the above heading, for the Cynosure, which, while we cannot print entire, we wish to notice.

Bro. Hill says "the church festivals are more related to the Jewish festivals than the pagan," and mentions a fact which had escaped our notice, that the Scandinavian languages use the Biblical term Paska, not Easter; and says: "Although the English and Germans have given that festival a pagan name, that is to be laid at the door of the language, not of the festival.

We agree with Bro. Hill that "the most popular and most heathenish of the church festivals is our Christmas and its clownish Santa Claus." And yet this festival has not a heathen name, but is heathen in the fact that it is a religious observance commanded by man. And our brother cannot but observe that as the other festivals become popular their heathen character becomes more and more apparent in the manner of their observance.

We agree heartily with Bro. Hill in this statement also: "As Christians we have different views of many things, and it is only by closer adherence to the truth that we are brought to nearer uniformity, and the very worst Catholic doctrine that we can be tainted with is the dogma of infallibility when each one sets up his own opinion as binding upon the conscience of his fellow-Christians." This is a very important truth. "We all wish to worship God according to the dictates of our own conscience, and not of somebody else's conscience."

In one thing we hope Bro. Hill is mistaken. He says: "These festivals emphasize the fundamental facts of Christianity, the incarnation and the atonement. The radical wing of the Protestants looks upon these doctrines as obsolete, and of course bewails anything that brings them to the foreground."

We hope and believe that the fundamental doctrines of incarnation and atonement will never become obsolete with true Christians. And to us it seems that setting apart one day in the year to celebrate the resurrection of our Saviour rather tends to put that event out of mind the rest of the year, which we should rejoice and thank God for every Lord's Day.

In one point we would say with all candor and friendliness, knowing that he may think the same of our position, we believe Bro. Hill is wrong. He says: "It is to early Christian usage, and not to direct Biblical authority, we have to look." Our Saviour did not say, teaching them to observe things that I have not forbidden but whatsoever I have commanded. On this point the truth can hardly be better stated than in the words of the venerated J. Blanchard:

"For insisting on what God commands, and excluding everything else from the religion and churches of Christ, reason is as imperative as Scripture.

"If children offend a parent, no human being can know and tell what those children are to do to make amends and please that parent but himself; and how much more when men have offended their 'Father in heaven,' can no one tell them what to do, but God! If the neighbor, who comes in, in your absence, and adds to or alters your directions is guilty of impertinence and folly toward yourself, as well as a fatal and terrible wrong to your children, what name shall be given to his conduct who comes in between God and us, his erring creatures, 'teaching for doctrines the commandments of men!'

"In the Christian reformatory movement of the sixteenth century, sublime as it was, if we may trust D'Aubigne, there was one dire mistake. Luther determined to leave standing in the churches whatever was not forbidden by the Scriptures, while others justly insisted on turning out of the churches everything which God had not put into them.

"The word of Luther still was, 'Where is it forbidden'? that of some less prominent reformers, 'Where is the command'? The word of Luther prevailed; and the present condition of Christian churches in Europe is the comment: the Sabbath desecrated, the churches strong, the Gospel weak, and Christ himself, the living Saviour, pushed aside by forms and rites and governments which men have instituted in his name; while 'darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people.'"

A UNIQUE FIGURE.

St. Paul has a citizen who has been prominent in her history as a successful business man; but is, in one particular probably, distinguished from every other living man. It is doubtful if there is another living representative of the LeRoy (New York) Seceders' Convention of 1828.

LeRoy was his home, and he was personally acquainted with many of those whose names are signed to the roll of seceders of that convention, and his father was one of the number who rescued David Miller from the hands of the mob. The rescue was on this wise: The afternoon of the day that Captain Wm. Morgan was taken, a Masonic lodge meeting was held at LeRoy, about ten miles from Batavia, the home of Mr. Morgan and David Miller, who had engaged to publish Morgan's book revealing Masonry. At this lodge meeting it was agreed: "That the next day, September 12, 1826, at noon, the Masons should rally, and at one o'clock march in a body to the printing-office of Mr. Miller, scatter his type, secure his person and the manuscripts and printed sheets to be found in his office."

This monstrous act was literally carried out in broad daylight; and Mr. M. was taken to LeRoy with the intention of, as he was told on the way to LeRoy, "sending him where Morgan was." The deed was done so publicly, so quickly, and in such a brazen way, that the community seemed paralyzed. No one seemed to know what to do, or to really understand what had been done. A neighbor of Mr. Miller and a Mason, who knew too well what it all meant, warned Mrs. Miller to go on the street and cry murder; telling her that "Morgan was taken off yesterday and her husband to-day, and unless they were pursued and rescued they would certainly be murdered." In a short time a hundred men with stages and wagons were in pursuit; and, by the blessing of God, they brought thim back to his wife about midnight.

Our St. Paul friend, then only thirteen years old, knew every one of the Knight Templar seceders and had a speaking acquaintance with many of the leaders of the movement, as Thurlow Weed. Seth M. Gates was his school teacher; and he spoke of the unfinished Masonic temple in Le Roy called the Round House, which later became a school-house. A Mr. May, this gentleman said, built one of the Cornell University buildings and donated to it the May's collection of Anti-masonic literature.

This witness of the generation now nearly past desires that his name be withheld from the public since he is too old to withstand attacks which might follow the disclosure. While we respect his wishes in the matter, we would be glad if he could be led to take a stand for Christ against the Christ-rejecting lodge, for the word of Christ is true, "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it," and he that confesseth me before men, "him will I also confess before my Father which is in heaven."

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

The Cynosure is in receipt of a book entitled "The Religion of Secret Societies," by Gottfried Fritschell, D.D., Professor in Wartburg Theological Seminary, Waverly, Iowa. The book is printed in German, and seems to be a valuable work on this important subject. Mr. Fritschell says:

"Secret societies are the greatest obstacle against which the Lutheran church of America has to fight. In a part of the Lutheran church to be sure, not everywhere, an earnest struggle is carried on against them.

"Frequently simple Christians are inside of secret societies who do not understand the true religious tendency of the lodge. They are deceived on entering, because they are told that the societies have not the least to do with religion, but are only provision for sickness and death."

The book refers to the boast of Freemasonry that it is the handmaid of Christian religion, and shows plainly that Masonry not only does not help, but is the deadly enemy of true religion.

The Cynosure will endeavor soon to give to its readers some parts of this excellent work. Those who understand German will do well to obtain a copy. Arrangements will be made so that orders may be obtained from the Cynosure office.

PRINCIPLES AND FACTS.

A simple statement of truth is often more helpful than a learned and lengthy argument. The following facts and resolutions, adopted with unanimity by the State Convention which met in Philadelphia not long since, carry conviction with them:

As individuals, as citizens, and as members of the church, we have the right, and it is also our duty, to consider every element and condition of society which, in our judgment, may threaten the best interests of the people in any relation of life.

In this land of free thought, free speech, a free press and free assemblage, every good cause is best served by open and above-board methods.

The present increase and multiplication of secret, oath-bound societies in this free land are subjects calculated to awaken serious apprehension and demanding careful consideration.

Minor secret orders, though less objectionable, are largely under the control of members of the greater orders, and act as training-schools for these older and more dangerous societies.

All secret, oath-bound societies are to be viewed as one complex system of secrecy, differing not in kind but in degree.

Therefore, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our divine King, whose we are and whom we serve, we bear witness against them for the following reasons:

1. The formation of secret, oath-bound societies establishes a presumption of the existence of principles and practices that will not bear the light, a presumption which the history of these societies has confirmed.

2. We cannot but testify against minor secret orders for men, women and children, however simple their forms and however good their professed purposes, since they seek their ends by such an unworthy and un-Christian-like method.

3. Secret societies affect the person who joins them unfavorably by repressing a healthful individualism, and by imposing a false and unscriptural altruism which prevents the full and proper working out of his moral mission.

4. The lodge oath comes between husband and wife, so they are no longer one in the fullest sympathy and intercommunion with regard to common interests involved in the marriage relation.

5. The lodge seeks to rival and is the masked enemy of the church in that it ignores the sovereignty of Christ, rejects salvation by grace, and teaches the sufficiency of the works of men instead of the atonement of the Son of God. Lodge duties usually conflict with church duties both in time and spirit, and the activities of the one tend to deaden the life of the other.

6. The men who render full obedience to lodge obligations are under pressure to give their support to candidates for civil office who represent their various orders, and are required, when it is deemed necessary, to incline the scales of justice in favor of their brethren.

7. Masonry and the Jesuits we regard as kindred secret, oath-bound societies that antagonize each other, because both seek absolute supremacy by clandestine methods. We are opposed alike to Romanism and to all secret methods of resisting her encroachments.

8. We would also call attention to the present movement encouraged by the G. A. R., and by so-called patriotic orders, aiming to introduce military drill into public schools, and believe it would be subversive of the purposes for which these schools were founded, and therefore a menace to our republican institutions. For similar reasons the organization of boys' brigades in the different churches is to be deprecated as being foreign to the spirit of the Gospel of the Prince of peace. —Mennonite.

THE "RED COLLAR" AGAIN.

Although the Supreme Lodge long since ruled against the use of the "red collar" in lodges, it would seem that they are still used in some places. This coming to the knowledge of Supreme Chancellor Ritchie, he has issued the following circular in relation thereto:

"Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias,
Office Supreme Chancellor,
Lima, O., Feb. 5, 1895—P. P. XXXI.

"Dear Sir and Brother.—I am surprised to find that in many instances lodges are still using the red collar. I desire to call your attention to Section 117 of the Supreme Statutes, from which I quote:

" 'During conventions of a subordinate lodge, each Page shall wear a blue collar, each Esquire shall wear a yellow collar, and every other person not occupying an official station shall wear the jewel of the highest rank or honor which he has attained, or of some lower rank or honor; except that a Deputy Supreme Chancellor or a Deputy Grand Chancellor, when making an official visit, may wear the jewel pertaining to that position.'

"Each subordinate lodge must procure sufficient jewels for its members of the rank of Knight, as the red collar is no longer part of the Pythian regalia, and must not under any circumstances be worn in a lodge-room. It is your duty to see that the law is complied with in your Grand Domain in this particular, and I trust you will immediately communicate to your subordinate lodges the requirement upon this subject, so that there may be uniformity and observance of law in all lodges."

This seems to be a case of "reductio ad absurdum," a Supreme Chancellor issuing a circular to the Grand Chancellor of the Grand Domain of —— in relation to the color of a collar! How majestic the following request sounds in connection with the momentous question under consideration:

"You will please acknowledge receipt of this circular, and advise me as to what steps you are taking in regard thereto in your Grand Domain.

"[Seal] Walter B. Ritchie,
"Attest: Supreme Chancellor.
"R. L. C. White, S. K. R. S."

LODGE FIRST, CHURCH AFTERWARD.

A writer in the last number of the Knight says: "The effect of the edict of the Pope against the orders of Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, etc., backed up by the whole line of archbishops, bishops, priests and acolytes, has had time to show. In Columbus the 'ban' has fallen flat. Not one Catholic has left either of the lodges of Odd-fellows or Knights of Pythias. Whether there are any Catholics numbered among the Sons of Temperance we are not informed. Bro. Medole, of New York City, in a letter to the Sticks, says that 'one of our French lodges in the city of New York has a membership of which 90 per cent are Roman Catholics. I am informed by a Past Grand in the lodge of that faith that none will leave the lodge in consequence of the edict of the church. In Masonry we know of many higher up in the several branches of that order who are Roman Catholics, but they do not allow one interest to interfere with the other individually.' He also says that on the 4th of February of the present year a telegram was sent to a daily in his city stating that 'A large number of influential members of Holy Trinity Catholic church, of Bucyrus, Ohio, have refused to accept the conditions of the recent papal mandate and will remain loyal to their lodges.' The president of the church council is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and when the time came to reorganize the council yesterday he refused to accept a re-election. He will sacrifice his membership in the church rather than in the lodge." This boast of the would-be handmaid of religion proves too much. It shows that all the lodge cares, is that her own coffers are filled and that, so that her members do not leave her it is no concern of hers whether the church is maintained in its purity, or at all.

"The Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Catholic, the Quaker—religionists of all kinds and shades and isms—meet and worship at the common altar. Nor is any one asked—nor is it permitted within the walls of a lodge-room to ask him to change his mode of worship of the Supreme Being." The lodge is thus glad to get Christians of any name or belief, give them a religious creed that deceives and satisfies but does not save, for Christ is excluded from the lodge and there is no salvation but in him.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Greetings sent by Bro. J. P. Stoddard, New England secretary, to the Minnesota State Convention while in session recently at St. Paul, were not delivered, The friends would have been glad to hear from Mr. Stoddard, but may congratulate themselves that communication with the throne of grace was not intercepted.

—Rev. Joseph Garn. Helena, Ohio, says: "I love the Cynosure above any paper that I ever read. Have had it twenty years. Am now in my eighty-seventh year."

—Bro. J. C. McDaniel, of Eastman, Ga., writes for more light on the dark orders. He says, "My heart is in prayer to God for you day and night." That is right, brother, "Pray without ceasing."

—Bro. H. Curtis, Kansas, writes: "I would be glad to attend the annual meeting. Have been feeble all winter. How important that we stand clear and free from the image of the beast. Oh, how mad people are to rush on in the darkness of sin to destruction!"

—From Alosta, Cal., Bro. T. A. Pursell writes, "May God bless the labors of the National Christian Association and all who are connected with it. May its lecturers be wise as serpents, brave as lions and harmless as doves, defending the right and condemning the wrong."

—Bro. John Chestnut sends his kind wishes with his renewal and says, "We would be sorry to give up the Cynosure. It is just what we like. But we do not want to be in debt. If it is God's will we must be content." "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

—Sister M. B. Park writes: "We are greatly cheered every week with the news that the dear Cynosure brings us, and we think and pray for those who stand at the helm of this reform." No one can estimate what a factor the prayers of God's people is in what is accomplished for the truth. "Pray without ceasing;" "according to your faith be it unto you."

—The Cynosure receives word this week from two persons who have taken the paper twenty years or more. Mr. John Lantz, now nearly eighty years old, has lately been delivered from the tobacco habit and says: "I feel like a boy." Keep near Christ Jesus, and consecrate your new-found strength to his service, brother; and your last days will be light with his presence, and perhaps more useful to the world than the eighty years that are gone.

—Our Southern and College agent, Bro. S. F. Porter, is preparing to go to North Dakota, where he spends his summer preaching "on the frontier." The last college he visited was Hillsdale College, Mich. The Quincy Herald, soon after his visit, had the following item: "Hillsdale students are much worked up over a pamphlet, the Lodge Lamp, freely distributed around the corridors, which details the imaginary evils of the college fraternity system". As there are seven fraternities in this institution, it is to be hoped the "worked up" condition may continue until the truth has made them free.

—Our good Friend, Josiah W. Leeds, sends us the following interesting item: "A member of the Society of Friends, not far from Philadelphia, having received an idea that it would be a good thing to join the Masons, though he had read little about the order, presented himself for initiation. Being led into a dark room and blindfolded, and with a rope around his neck and with the prospect of the oath before him, this half-entered apprentice blurted out: 'Men, look here! I'm not going into this sort of a thing blindfolded.' But that was the procedure, and that was the way it must be done. 'I don't like such foolery as this,' said the man who had been brought up in the straight and open ways of George Fox and William Penn. 'You can't be a Mason without you go through it.' 'Then I won't be a Mason!' And turning on his heel he went away to light, freedom and a clean conscience."

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The Lodge Lamp sent to Cynosure subscribers last week had as a chief object the witnessing for our Lord and Master before a much larger audience than we are now doing.

This can be done in two ways. The National Christian Association offers you a weekly paper, the Christian Cynosure, and a monthly, the Lodge Lamp. Hence every one who feels his responsibility to God to do all that is possible for his neighbor has an opportunity to use some of his benevolences in helping to warn against the altars of Cain set up in the secret lodges of our country.

The first proposition is to anyone who sends $3 to this office before the first of May next, with the names of two new subscribers for the Cynosure and five names for the Lodge Lamp—making seven yearly subscriptions—the Association will send the above papers for one year.

The second proposition is to anyone who will send $3 to this office before the first of next May with names of three subscribers for the New York Tribune and twenty names for the Lodge Lamp —making twenty-three yearly subscriptions—the papers named will be sent for one year.

The Chicago Woman's Educational Union devoted a large part of its last meeting to reminiscences suggested by the death of its beloved vice president and first secretary, Mrs. Eliza S. Miller. Her soul turned to what was good and true as with a Christian spirit. Independent, yet charitable in her impulses and convictions, she stood for principle with self-denying zeal. "A woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised."

"The Catholic church in America has sittings for 2,000,000 persons; the Presbyterians the same. Baptists 3,000,000, Methodists 6,000,000. Measuring the number of adherents by church sittings, the Protestants have about six times as many as Catholics."

MONEY MAKING ARTS.

THE CITY'S SIGHTS AND THE COUNTRY MERCHANT.

Madison C. Peters Denounces Some Business Customs—Young Men Ruined In Their Employers' Interests—Heartless Devotees of Mammon.

A few nights ago I stood in a crowd awaiting entrance to one of the public halls of New York city. I overheard a young man say to his friend: "Two of our customers are coming down from New Hampshire tomorrow. They have never been in the city before, and my house wants me to show them the sights of the town," and chuckling with fiendish glee he added, "I'll show them all the dives of the city."

I have been reliably informed, and my information has been confirmed with innumerable testimonies, that large wholesale houses have entertainers attached to their establishments whose business it is to personally conduct the unprincipled country customers through the questionable resorts of the city. I have been informed by men high in official authority that many merchants approve of the dives and the gambling hells for the sake of their country customers. The thousands of strangers who visit New York city every day contribute by far the largest share of support toward the houses of infamy and the gambling hells. The occasional visitor to New York city knows more of the dark and seamy side of our city life than New Yorkers themselves. If the people from the country who come to town wouldn't bid goodby to their religion when they leave home, New York would be quite a respectable place. I would suggest to the country parsons that they preach sermons to their merchants on how to behave themselves when they go to the city.

It may be interesting for the people of the country to know that the salesmen connected with our wholesale houses, to mature the country merchant's custom, call to their aid the social glass, but more frequently by piloting them to the scenes of vice.

This evil may be illustrated by a single example. A drummer for one of our wholesale houses was discharged for his dissipation, and he returned upon his employer the following terrible retort:

"Sir, I came into your service uncorrupt in principles and in morals, but the rules of your house required me to spend my evenings at places of public entertainment and amusement in search of customers. To accomplish my work in your service I was obliged to drink with them and join with them in their pursuit of pleasure. It was not my choice, but the rule of the house. I went with them to the theater and to the billiard table, but it was not my choice. I did not wish to go. I went in your service. It was not my pleasure so to do, but I was the conductor and companion of 'the simple ones,' void alike of understanding and of principle in their sinful pleasures and deeds of deeper darkness, that I might retain them as your customers. Your interest required it. I have added thousands of dollars to the profits of your trade, but at what expense you now see, and I know too well. You have become wealthy, but I am poor indeed. And now this cruel dismissal from your employ is the recompense I receive for a character ruined and prospects blasted in helping to make you a rich man."

It is not for me to say how far this practice prevails of which this letter speaks, but of the hundreds of young men who crowd our hotels and hang around the places of public resort as drummers for their respective houses in the busy seasons, who can doubt many of them are drawn unto destruction, encouraged by the employer, who, while he may not directly require such service, smiles approval. I take the stand between these young men and their employers, and say to the latter that you have no right in any way to countenance such arts as the letter mentions for the purpose of bringing customers to your stores. It may be true that you have never instructed your salesmen to drink with strangers, but they surely could not long engage in this practice and you not know it. There is no difference in morals between sanctioning a thing directly and winking at it. It is true that it is but common courtesy to supply the stranger in the city with a guide, but why not show the strangers the great and good things of the city. Whence your authority to send your clerks on this sightseeing business? If the stranger must see the questionable resorts of the city, why don't you go yourself or send your own son? Can there be two opinions as to the criminality of the firm mentioned in the above letter? The ruin of that young man lies at the door of that house, and hundreds of young men in this city go to destruction every year just in that way. And when they have so debauched the young men that they are no longer fit to be in their employ they consummate their iniquity by disgracing them with discharge and sending them forth to break the heart of the mother that bore them, and perhaps down to a drunkard's grave. Oh, ye heartless devotees of mammon, the blood of these young men cries to heaven for vengeance, the anguish of those broken hearted mothers pierces the ear of God, and sure as God you must some day confront your victims before that tribunal, where "the rust of your cankered gold shall be a witness against you, and shall burn your flesh as it were fire."

I wish to be charitable and want to believe that this iniquity is chargeable upon but few firms of good standing in the commercial world. But I would like to enforce this principle upon merchants of every class: Your responsibility as to your salesmen is not restricted to the time they spend at the store. Know what is going on after business hours. Interest yourself in them. Caution them against corrupting companions and vicious amusements.

DON'T FEEL ASHAMED TO BE SEEN IN WORKING ATTIRE.

A young man who had long been absent called upon two beautiful young ladies of his acquaintance. One came quickly to meet him in the neat yet not precise attire in which she was performing her household duties. The other, after a lapse of half an hour, made her stately entrance in all the primness of starch and ribbons, with which, on the announcement of his entrance, she had hastened to bedeck herself. The young man, who had long been hesitating as to his choice between the two, now hesitated no longer. The cordiality with which the first hastened to greet him and the charming carelessness of her attire entirely won his heart. She is now his wife. He was a sensible man. Take warning from this. Never be afraid to see a friend because you are in your working gown. No true gentleman will think less of you because he finds you in the performance of your duty, and he will think all the more of you if you are not ashamed to let it be known.

O young ladies, love home! Of that realm you are the queens. Fit yourselves to fulfill its divine prerogatives, for in the home is embosomed God's own trust, the glory of the state, the hope of the church and the destiny of the world. Oh, the illimitableness of which you are capable! Love home! Prize its duties! Live for it, and you will secure to yourselves such testimony as Abraham Lincoln proudly bore to his mother when he said, "All I am my mother made me," and above all you will secure the approval of God.

A Cause of Ill Assorted Marriages.

Nothing so much causes ill assorted marriages and misohievous results as making "old maid" a term of reproach. Many girls have been hurled into matrimony by the dread of being so stigmatized and have repented the step to their dying day. Many women can give more honorable reasons for living outside the temple of Hymen than their foolish sisters can for having rushed in. Some have never found their other selves. Providential circumstances may have prevented the junction of these selves, and is not a life of loneliness more honorable than a loveless marriage? Is not single blessedness preferable to double cursedness?

There are many women who laid down their hopes of wedded bliss for the sake of accomplishing some good. In such cases singleness is an honorable estate. There is a work for woman in the world, married or single, as wife, mother, sister, daughter or friend.

Profanity Impoliteness.

Cowper once wrote:

It chills my blood to hear the blest Supreme
Lightly appealed to on each trifling theme.
Maintain your rank; vulgarity despise;
To swear is neither brave, polite nor wise.

Can he who leads every sentence with an oath or a curse wear the name and garb of a gentleman? This reminds me of that incident of Abraham Lincoln, who said to a person sent to him by one of the senators and who in conversation uttered an oath: "I thought the senator had sent me a gentleman. I see I was mistaken. There is the door, and I bid you good day."

Profanity indicates low breeding. It detracts from the grace of conversation. It is an evidence of a weak brain and limited ideas. I care not what kind of clothes a man wears, what culture he boasts, what refinement he prides in, what family connections he has, how much he may restrain himself in the presence of ladies, he who fears not to rush into the presence of a thrice holy and Almighty God, with oaths upon his lips, is no gentleman. No language can be more disgustful, more grate the ear or fret the heart, than to hear the God of heaven summoned in attestation of tattle or challenged to damn and destroy.

Excuse of Nonchurchgoers.

A common excuse given by those who absent themselves from church is, "Churchgoers are no better than nonchurchgoers." Now, we will not insult you by giving you figures, but go to our penitentiaries and jails. Are there more churchgoers than nonchurchgoers there? Look at the criminals in the police courts tomorrow morning. Are they churchgoers or nonchurchgoers? Who are they who work for the elevation and purity of public morals and to ameliorate the condition of humanity? Churchgoers or nonchurchgoers? To say that the people, as a rule, who go to church are no better, as a rule, than those who do not go displays either deplorable ignorance or pitiful bigotry.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 21.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—On guard—over what; how?—Neh. iv, 6-23. (A temperance topic.)

Nehemiah and his followers in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem after their return from captivity are opposed by the allied forces of the surrounding heathen nations. They hoped to take them by surprise, but Nehemiah heard of their intentions and made preparations to meet and repulse his assailants. This may illustrate to us the necessity of being on guard against the enemies of our souls, and in the way that Nehemiah guarded himself so may we guard ourselves against the assaults of sin and satan.

1. We must be on guard over our souls. The enemies of Nehemiah were both from without and within. Without were the combined, angry, determined, wily leaders of the heathen armies about them. Within there was the opposition of the despondent and the discouraged laborers. In guarding the soul the Christian must meet the same kind of enemies. The enemies of the soul are without in the form of satan, sin, temptation, evil men, who are anxious to lead God's children astray, and in many other forms. Within are the doubts and discouragements that arise from the natural weakness of the human nature. We must keep guard over all these things if we save the soul from destruction. Then must also skill be displayed in guarding ourselves against the assaults that are made upon us. Nehemiah very carefully arranged everything to meet successfully the attack of the enemy against him. Tact and skill must be displayed in guarding ourselves against temptation and sin. We must know what are our weaknesses, that we may fortify them specially, for it is here that the most vigorous assaults will be made. We must understand ourselves; we must understand the enemy and be on constant guard.

2. How must we guard ourselves? 1. By prayer. Though Nehemiah had a strong, determined enemy against him, he was not discouraged, but first prayed unto God. Prayer is our strongest safeguard. The enemy may be numerous and strong, but God is strength both against numbers and might. He can give us strength to overcome the mightiest enemies if we but ask Him. He knows our foes. He understands our weaknesses. He desires our safety. He has promised to sustain us, and our hope should be in Him. 2. Watchfulness. The Jews not only prayed, but watched day and night. So we should habitually watch ourselves and the temptations and sins that easiest gain the victory over us. 3. Prayer and watchfulness. "Watch and pray," said Christ to His disciples. The two must be combined. Prayer aids watching, and watching aids prayer. Prayer alone is presumption; watchfulness alone is sinful self confidence. Both together insure safety and deliverance. "Watch," therefore, "unto prayer."

Bible Readings.—Ps. xli, 3; Prov. i, 10-15; iv, 23; Matt. xxiv, 42; xxvi, 41; Mark xiii, 35 37; Luke xii, 37; xxi, 36; I Cor. x, 12, 13; Eph. vi, 10-18; Col. iv, 2; I Thess. v, 6; II Tim. iv, 5; I Pet. iv, 7; v, 8, 9; Rev. iii, 2; xvi, 15.

Chicago Endeavor Uniform.

Chicago Endeavorers will attend the international convention in large numbers and will wear a distinctive uniform. The following outfit is being considered by the enterprising sisters of the western metropolis and is copied from The Endeavorer News:

White sailor hats, with ribbon band of red, white and blue, in recognition of the state colors.

White waist, navy blue skirt, red Windsor tio.

Bow of red, white and blue on left shoulder, with streamer bearing the word "Chicago" upon the white, name of division upon the blue and "Y. P. S. C. E." upon the red. For the Mothers a similar bow of purple and white, with the initials "M. S. C. E."

Navy blue skirts, white waists, with navy blue bows on shoulders, bearing on one side "Chicago, '98," and on the other "Chicago For Christ."

Pay the Debt.

Forgiveness cannot make a sinner be or feel as if he had never sinned. There must be, in addition to forgiveness, an atonement for his sin, paying of the debt, before he can feel that the burden of his guilt is removed. Hence the necessity of the atonement made by Christ not to appease the wrath of God, but to bring relief to the soul of the penitent sinner. "Jesus paid it all, all the debt I owed," are the tidings that he must hear and believe before he can stand uncondemned and self justified before God.—Religious Telescope.

Verse Names For Juniors.

Each junior in your society should be able to spell his name in Bible verses—selecting, that is, a set of Bible verses that he has made peculiarly his own, the initials of which spell his own name. The children will delight in finding these verses and committing them to memory and will enjoy hearing each other repeat them.—Selected.

The Statue of the Perfect.

Patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness, sincerity—these make up the supreme gift, the statue of the perfect.—Professor Drummond.

Infantile Convulsions.

Infantile convulsions are traceable to a great variety of causes, most of which lose their influence as the child increases in years. Among them may be mentioned intestinal irritation, whether from improper food, constipation or worms, flatulence and griping, teething, fright and cold.

As may be seen from the character of the causes, convulsions in the young child are often only transitory in their effects and pass off without involving any part of the system in disease, although this is by no means always the case.

It is also apparent that many cases of convulsions arise from a neglect of simple hygienic laws and are amenable to correspondingly simple teratment.

One of the first things to be done in a case of convulsions is to alleviate the irritation of the nervous system, which is almost always the cause of the trouble. This is best done by immersing the child in a bath of warm water, which may be made slightly stimulating if required by the addition of a teaspoonful or two of mustard

We must of course exercise due care that the child does not get chilled, and when taken from the bath he is to be wrapped in blankets immediately, no matter what the season of the year, and put to bed. He will generally fall at once into a quiet slumber.

When the cause of the convulsions is ascertained, we should lose no time in beginning treatment against it.

If the bowels are constipated, they should be relieved by proper medicine, and the diet should be so regulated that danger from this source will be lessened in the future.

Teeth that are pressing upon the gums sufficiently hard to cause them to turn blue should be helped along with the lance.

Nothing can be more efficacious than the warm bath in breaking up a cold or in soothing the nerves of a frightened child.

In children of peculiarly nervous temperament great care is sometimes necessary to ascertain the cause of the convulsions. A very slight irritation often starts a train of events which, unless we are fortunate enough to check it, may imperil the child with serious organic disorder.—Youth's Companion.

A Buried Grief.

So you are dead and gone, old Sorrow.
Only yesterday there you were,
Filling my heart with an aching care
Of grief for today and fear for tomorrow.
Now the skeleton's gone, and the cupboard's bare.

And in your stead is born, old Sorrow,
Hope, whose bright torch burns night to day
And makes winter bloom with the flowers of May Till even your memory seems to borrow
Bright hues because you have passed away.

Old grief, once I thought you could never cease.
Now I sing your requiem. Rest in peace!

GAMBLERS AND RUMSELLERS.

Successful Men In These Lines Are Usually Total Abstainers.

An investigation as to the number of saloon men, gamblers and "practical politicians" who never take a drink of liquor might furnish the temperance people with an argument which is generally overlooked.

One of the most prominent and successful of the gamblers in Chicago has not smoked a cigar or touched a drop of any kind of intoxicating liquor for 20 years.

He says he is in a business which requires cool headed attention and steady nerves, and that he learned years ago that he could not be successful if he drank.

The men who have figured most prominently as the leaders of the gambling elements in Chicago have been in the saloon business and have spent most of their time in and around barrooms, yet almost without exception they have been total abstainers or very moderate drinkers.

"If the gambler keeps sober and lets the victim do the drinking, it's an easy matter to guess who will get the money," said one of them.

It is the same with well to do saloon men.

The keeper who will take a drink of whisky over his own bar is an exception to the rule, and in many of the down town barrooms there is a regulation that any bartender who is seen taking a drink of anything alcoholic is liable to instant dismissal.—Chicago Record.

Whisky Made Them Fiends.

In Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas and other cotton states, where there is a large negro population, the suppression of the liquor traffic has been one of the necessary consequences of the race conflict. The fact has been recognized that it was liquor that converted bad negroes into fiends and was responsible for the outrages which have instigated lynching and lawlessness. The closing of saloons has been essential to the security of life and the welfare of women and children in districts where the whites were largely outnumbered by the blacks. Local option has furnished a practical method of accomplishing this object with the least possible resistance from public opinion.—Selected.

How Drunkards Are Punished In Russia.

Under the order of General Wahl, governor of St. Petersburg, all persons found upon the streets in a disorderly or intoxicated condition have their names and addresses printed on large posters and publicly displayed at certain points in the city and are also published in the official journal. No privileged person is exempt. On one of these lists of 127 names all classes in societies are found represented. As a means of "regulation" this object lesson sort of public punishment may be efficacious in the less hardened cases.—Selected.

The Unhappy Servant.

In a vineyard toiled a servant
That his master's vine might bear.
In his toil he found no pleasure,
But he found a load of care.

"These rough tools have bruised my fingers,"
To the master then he cried.
And the master told his servant
To lay the tilling tools aside.

"Thou shalt turn the mold no longer,
Trim my vine throughout thy life,"
Said the master to his servant
As he gave a pruning knife.

In a vineyard toiled a servant,
Without pleasure, without mirth.
He had heeded not his master.
With the gift he still dug earth.

A WIFE'S SAD MISTAKE.

Prevented Her Husband From Signing the Pledge, and He Became a Drunkard.

Mrs. Chapin, one of the W. C. T. U. workers, was once entertained in Mississippi at the home of a young married couple, and the wife said to her, "Now, Mrs. Chapin, I'm willing to entertain you, but I don't want you to talk temperance, for if you should convert my husband then I'd have to banish wine from our table, and all my friends would call me a crank." Mrs. Chapin spoke at the public meeting and then made her way through the audience trying to get signers to the pledge. She begged the young husband to sign, and he was reaching for the pencil to do so when his wife objected, and with a smile he shook his head and said, "No."

Six years afterward Mrs. Chapin passed through the same place. She was the guest this time of another family, but after her address was over a weeping woman and a gibbering drunken man came up to greet her. It was the same couple who had entertained her six years before. "Oh," said the wife, "try to get my husband to sign the pledge." "No," he cried, "I wanted to be saved once, but you wouldn't let me. Now no one can save me, not even God in heaven!"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Basis of the Liquors of Commerce.

To show the real character of the alcohols now made in France it is sufficient to set down from the government report for 1893 the relative proportions of the materials from which they are manufactured. First, by far, is the beet root; second, native molasses (also beet); third, farinaceous substances (grains); fourth, foreign or colonial molasses (sugar cane), and only fifth, representing less than 5 per cent of the whole, all the wines (it was a famous wine year), cider and perry, pressed grapes, lees and fruits of all kinds, which are used in the manufacture of alcohol. Yet this latter class of materials, with all due respect for the English and American belief in liquor from rye, barley and corn, is the only one likely to give an alcohol which is not directly injurious, even in light quantities, to human nerve tissue. Of course these statistics refer to alcohol proper at 100 degrees. But this is the alcoholic basis of all the spirituous liquors of commerce. It may be imagined what is the hygienic quality of the French brandies and liquors commonly sold.—New York Tribune.

How New Zealand Manages Drunkards.

A correspondent, writing from New Zealand, says the police in that colony have the power, if they think a man is injuring his own health or neglecting his family as the result of habitual drinking, to take him before a magistrate and get his drink stopped for 12 months within a radius of 20 miles. After that, any hotel keeper supplying such a man with drink and any person privately giving him drink is liable to a fine, and if a prohibited man is found the worse for drink he is to be arrested at once and sent to jail for three months' hard labor.—Tit-Bits.

Temperance First of All.

Temperance is a question of vital importance, from whatever standpoint you may consider it. Let us take the material benefits that accrue from it. Put it as a question of simple political economy. Much is said today of the material welfare of the people. It is an aim in which we strive to give to the greatest number the best share of material happiness which it is possible for them to have, and this attention to the welfare of the people is an evidence of the high civilization and Christianity of our times. In whatever state we turn we listen to discussions on labor, for the rights and betterment of labor, but at the very start of all these questions of social and political economy we must put the question of temperance.—Archbishop Ireland.

New York's Drink Arrests.

Statistics from the New York city police department for 1894 show arrests: Males, 77,535; females, 20,950; total, 98,485. Of these 21,449 were for disorderly conduct; 19,538, drunkenness; 8,623, drunk and disorderly; 8,404, violation of excise law; 5,794, assault and battery, or 63,808 arrests largely due to drink.—Exchange.

If a man is seen drunk four times in Sweden, he is deprived of his electoral vote. Such a custom tends to elevate the right of citizenship.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IV, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 28.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 12-26—Memory Verses, 22-24—Golden Text, Luke xxii, 19—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

12. As I have recently read and profited by a sermon by Rev. A. G. Brown of London upon a portion of this lesson entitled "Finding It as He Said," it is probable that some of the Spirit's suggestions to him may here be found. It is the last night before the crucifixion. The city Jerusalem, the holy city, is full of people, for only in the chosen city can the passover lambs be slain and the feast kept. Notice the disciples' question, "Where wilt thou?" Think of Saul's question, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" and let our hearts be ever saying, "Where, Lord?" "What, Lord?" and never lean to our own understanding.

13. He immediately sends two with definite instructions, and yet such as required great faith on their part. He loves to be trusted and will surely guide all who are willing to be guided (Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21; xlviii, 17). But see how it is only a step at a time, and consider the foretold events of one day in I Sam. x, 1-7. They knew the way to the city. All was plain thus far. Then of all who should pass them or meet them they were to look for a man coming toward them bearing a pitcher of water, and without hesitation they were to follow him.

14. They were not told to speak to the man with the pitcher, but simply follow him into the house and speak to the good man of the house concerning the room in which to eat the passover. The fact that they were to say to him, "The Master saith," shows that the owner of the house was a disciple. Jesus would not use the property of one who was not.

15. We would like to know more of this man and this room, between whom and the Master there seemed to be such a perfect understanding and harmony of spirit.

16. With unquestioning obedience they went forth from Him to do His bidding, and they found everything just as He had said they would. It always has been and always will be so, for whatever else may fail or change or pass away the word of the Lord is sure, and it standeth forever.

17. "And in the evening He cometh with the twelve." Never was such a passover kept before, for this immediately preceded the fulfillment of all passovers, as on the morrow "Christ, our passover, would be sacrificed for us." Have we, like the good man of this house, room for Jesus? And are all our possessions at His disposal? Are we like the two disciples looking for His guidance? And do we recognize His hand in all the events of life? If so, it is well.

18. Before Jesus announced that one of them should betray Him it would seem from John xiii that He had washed their feet and had taught them thus to do for each other. Think of His washing the feet of Judas! How near one may be to Jesus, how much He may do for one, how many privileges one may enjoy and yet be lost! It will surely be a fearful thing to have been numbered with the followers of Christ and yet not be truly His.

19. It was enough to make them sorrowful that one who had companied with them and had been apparently truly one of them should turn out to be only a traitor and hypocrite. So clever had the traitor been that it would seem that none of the others had suspected him, for no one said, "It must be Judas, just as we thought," but each said, "Is it I?" So kind had Jesus been that never by word or look or act had He even hinted that Judas was not sincere.

20. "One of the twelve that dippeth with me in the dish." Sitting near to Jesus, eating with Him, called one of His, acting as treasurer for His people, preaching in His name, perhaps permitted to work miracles in His name, and yet all the while a liar, a hypocrite, one possessed by the devil! Is it any wonder that the Spirit by Peter exhorts us to make our calling and election sure (II Peter i, 10). Let us be sure that we have forever ceased to look to or in any way trust in the flesh, but only and wholly in the merits of the Jesus Christ.

21. Scripture will be fulfilled. The conduct of Judas was all clearly written out beforehand, as in Ps. xli, 9, but that did not compel Judas to act as he did. While God knows beforehand all that will come to pass and whether men will hear or forbear (Ezek. ii, 7), and while the Spirit of God strives with all, at least all who know of God and His love, yet all are left free to accept or refuse that love.

22. The passover feast being concluded, Jesus now institutes the Lord's supper by first taking bread, and having given thanks or blessed it He gives them to eat, saying: "This is My body which is given for you. This do in remembrance of Me."

23. As He had done with the bread, so He does also with the wine, representing His blood shed for us, and when we partake of the wine we are to remember the precious blood of Christ, the price of our redemption (I Peter i, 18, 19). We are to remember that we are not our own, but that spirit, soul and body are all His, to be given wholly up to Him that He may at His pleasure use us to minister the great salvation to others, even to the shedding of our blood in His service if He requires it (I Cor. vi, 19, 20; I Thess. v, 23; II Cor. v, 15; Rev. xii, 11).

24. Without shedding of blood there is no remission of sins, and it is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul (Heb. ix, 22; Lev. xvii, 11). All the blood of sacrifices from the day when the Lord God made unto Adam and Eve coats of skins and clothed them was typical of the precious blood of Christ, which was sufficient for the sins of the whole world (I John ii, 2), but becomes efficient only for such as accept Him.

25. From beginning to end of the public ministry of the Lord Jesus He was ever speaking of a kingdom, the kingdom of God or of heaven, which will yet be set up on this earth and include the whole earth under the whole heaven (Dan. vii, 27). Then shall the meek inherit the earth, and war and strife shall be no more (Ps. xxxvii, 11; Math. v, 5; Isa. ii, 4; Mic. iv, 2, 3). Then shall both the passover and the Lord's supper have a full and final consummation (Luke xxii, 16, 18), for at every communion we show the Lord's death till He come (I Cor. xi, 26).

26. "And when they had sung an hymn they went out into the mount of Olives." The hymn was perhaps Ps. cxii to cxviii, the Great Hallal or a part of it. In connection with the hymn think of John xiv to xvii and see the heart of Christ in these last words to His apostles and to His Father on their and our behalf, words to which He may truly be said to have set the seal of His life's blood. Therefore how sure they are! Let your soul eat them until you can truly say Jer. xv, 16, and Job xxiii, 12.

TUMBLED TO PIECES.

SIX PEOPLE KILLED IN A COLLAPSE AT WHEELING.

One Building Goes to Pieces and Carries Another Down, Catching a Half-Score People, Six of Whom Lose Their Lives—Fire Follows the Crash.

Wheeling, April 10.—At twenty minutes past 8 a. m. the south wall of the four-story brick block of T. T. Hutchinson & Co., on the corner of Main street and the alley south of Twelfth, collapsed without warning. Next north of it Chapman & Son were just finishing a five-story brick block, to be used as a paint, glass and building supply store, and they already had stored in it about $14,000 worth of stock and were doing business. Hutchison & Co. deal in hardware, saddlery and wagonmakers' supplies and the building was packed full of goods. The wall on the alley first fell out, pulling with it the party wall between Hutchison and Chapman. People who were near say that the cracking of the timbers was like the rattle of musketry and that in a few seconds everything was rendered invisible by a huge cloud of dust.

Seven Men Caught in the Crash.

The crash of the falling buildings was terrific and soon drew thousands to the scene. The horror of the accident was increased by fire which broke out immediately, and as there were large quantities of oil, turpentine, and the like in Chapman & Sons' the situation was dangerous. As soon as people about the place became cool enough to think it was found that there were buried in the Hutchinson building's ruins four employes, as follows: Robert Wincher, Eugene Birch, P. J. Horan, and M. J. Ford. Charles Haller, the bookkeeper, and Adam Brum, senior partner, were penned up against the rear wall, and were released by prying the bars off the windows. They were unhurt. Hutchinson was in the second story and was badly injured, but was rescued alive, and hopes are entertained that he may recover.

One Man Taken Out Alive.

Ford was reached after hard work by a large force of men and found alive and conscious. He was taken out after an hour's work and removed to a hospital. He may get well. The other three employes are still in the ruins and doubtless dead. When the collapse came Ford was selling a bill of goods to Benjamin F. Pritchard, a wagon manufacturer of Buchannon, W. Va. Pritchard's dead body was found lying across Ford's legs. He was crushed to death. Shortly before the accident Very Rev. Father F. H. Parke, vicar general of the Catholic diocese of Wheeling, was seen to enter the alley and he was believed to be killed, and this belief was sadly confirmed at 7:30 p. m. by the recovery of his body. He was 72 years old, a distinguished clergyman.

A Western Union telegraph messenger boy, Harry Cowl, aged 14, is also thought to have been in the alley and his body has not been recovered. No others are known to be lost. There was an early report that a cab, its driver and four occupants were buried by the falling walls, but this is proved to be untrue.

More of the Chicora's Wreckage.

Chicago, April 11.—The captain of the steamer F. & P. M. No. 1, which arrived from the east shore, reports sighting a quantity of wreckage on an ice field in midlake. It appeared to consist of timbers, planks and other parts of a steamer, and is supposed to belong to the steamer Chicora. No bodies were to be seen.

TWO WRECKS ON THE RAIL

Result in the Loss of the Lives of Five Train Employes.

Bradford, Pa., April 10.—An engine and eighteen cars were demolished and three persons were killed in a wreck on the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg road near Punxsutawney. The dead are: Engineer Taylor, of Bradford; Fireman Shea, and Conductor Bruce.

The body of the engineer was found in the creek, but the body of the conductor has not yet been found. The wreck was caused by a small bridge being washed out by the high water. No passenger trains have been over the road between here and Punxsutawney since the wreck.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., April 10.—The south-bound passenger train on the Passaumpsic division of the Boston and Maine railroad collided with a large boulder on the track near Smith's mills. The locomotive was derailed and overturned and Engineer S. J. Rooney and Fireman Lewis Emerson were fatally scalded. None of the passengers were injured seriously, although considerably shaken up.

SPRING IS HERE.

And spring is the season when, more emphatically than at any other, we should build for the future. The reason why people need to take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring is based on scientific principles. The blood has become charged with impurities and has lost the richness and vitality which in a healthy condition it possesses. Therefore when the warmer weather comes there is a sensation best described as "That Tired Feeling." If nothing is done to remove the cause of this feeling, the consequences may be serious. The blood must be purified and enriched and then strength and elasticity will return. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best spring medicine because it is the best blood purifier. It removes the impurities, accelerates the circulation, and by putting the blood in a healthy condition, it creates an appetite and gives nerve, mental and bodily strength.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!

"A Prisoner of Hope."

COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.

Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

What the Senators and Representatives Are Doing for the Benefit of Their Constituents—Bills and Resolutions Introduced—Other News of General Interest.

SPRINGFIELD, April 10.—The governor sent to the senate the nomination of B. G. Claggett, of Lexington, as a member of the Soldiers' Orphans' home board to succeed Eddy. The pharmacy bill, which requires competent pharmacists in drug stores, was advanced to third reading. A bill was introduced prohibiting the manufacture or use of slot machines. The revenue bill was made special order for Thursday. The kindergarten school bill passed.

The house sent the farmers' institute bill to third reading. The reduction by the senate of the Anna insane hospital appropriation to $85,000 from $190,000 was non-concurred in and the bill sent to conference. A number of senate appropriation bills were advanced.

SPRINGFIELD, April 11.—The senate passed some Chicago park bills, including one to permit the enlargement of Lincoln park. A conference committee was appointed on the Anna asylum appropriation. The bill making Decoration Day a school holiday was passed, and a number of bills advanced to third reading. The anti-pool bill was postponed a week. The house committee on elections was addressed by a large number of women who urged the passage of a woman suffrage bill A delegation of men is working hard for a county civil service bill. The arbitration bill was amended and advanced to third reading. A state civil service bill was introduced, and a bill allowing school districts to assess a 3 per cent. school tax where necessary was passed. Both houses resolved to adjourn from this evening to next Wednesday.

SPRINGFIELD, April 12.—A bill was introduced in the senate by Hamer making it a penal offense to engage in any kind of gambling in any manner. The adjournment to next Wednesday was postponed until today in both houses. The report on the Anna asylum appropriation reducing it to $171,970 was concurred in. Bills appropriating $65,000 to mark the positions of Illinois troops at Chicamauga; to establish a home for the mothers, widows and daughters of disabled or dead veterans, and appropriating $2,532,000 for ordinary expenses of the state charitable institutions for the years 1895 and 1896 were passed. A number of bills were advanced. In the house a bill was introduced to give Cook county a separate government, making the county almost a state, governed by a senate and house. The Anna hospital report was agreed to. The resolution condemning the administration's pension policy was adopted by a party vote.

SPRINGFIELD, April 13.—According to an agreement entered into by members of the senate no business was transacted, and after receiving a message from the house the senate adjourned until next Wednesday. The members present were Swayer, Mahoney, Hamer, Wall, Kanean, Niehaus, and Leeper. The house was in session less than an hour, but during that time read a large number of bills the first time and advanced them, and then adjourned till Wednesday.

AN ELIXIR OF LIFE

T. A. Slocum Offers to Send Two Bottles Free of His Remedy to Cure Consumption.

Nothing could be fairer, more philanthropic, or carry more joy in its wake than the offer of T. A. Slocum, M. C., of 183 Pearl Street, New York. Perfectly confident that he has an absolute remedy for the cure of consumption and all pulmonary complaints, he offers through this paper to send two bottles free to any reader who is suffering from lung trouble or consumption, and will send their express and postoffice address.

The invitation is certainly worthy of the consideration of the afflicted, who, for years, have been taking nauseous nostrums without effect; who have ostracised themselves from home and friends to live in more salubrious climes, where the atmosphere is more congenial to weakened lungs, and who have fought against death with all the weapons and strength in their hands. There will be no mistake in sending for these bottles—the mistake will be in passing the invitation by.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis. (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F B Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of Today. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D. D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis. D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D, Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

FARM AND GARDEN

CUTTING AND PLANTING POTATOES.

A Successful Grower Gives a Detailed Account of His Own Method.

Simply cutting and plastering potatoes in advance of planting will not secure satisfactory results. Since a large quantity of seed and labor are required to produce a crop of potatoes, much pains should be taken to prepare the ground and cultivate it, before and after the potatoes have grown, in the best manner possible. The potato is a deep rooted plant, and therefore the ground should be prepared deeply. The tubers are formed above the seed. These two points should always be kept prominently in mind, writes a Country Gentleman correspondent, who adds: It also loves a moist, cool soil. This indicates that conservation of moisture and shade should be secured by culture. The ground should be not only thoroughly and deeply plowed, but made fine.

A most satisfactory way, where the ground is open, is to furrow deeply with a double moldboard, as seen in the upper part of the figure. Cover the potatoes by reversing the furrows, as seen in the center of the figure. After the potatoes have started a scantling or light piece of timber may be chained crosswise near the front of the harrow, and two rows may be planed down, as shown in the lower part of the figure.

In a few days the potatoes will be up and will be entirely free from weeds. This double plowing and fining and depositing of the clods and stones in the middle of the rows result not only in putting the ground in superior condition, but in saving a very large amount of after culture. The most satisfactory results that the writer ever reached have been by this method.

The Busy Bee In Early Spring.

Bees in the middle and western states begin to breed in February. In the southern states they start earlier. If the weather is mild, strong colonies will consume large quantities of their stores. In this month solid nourishment is better than liquid. The latter kind has a tendency to unduly exoite the bees, causing them to fly out of their hives and perish. It also stimulates them to breeding too extensively before the proper season.

In the absence of frames of sealed honey, which are to be preferred before anything else, two kinds of artifioial food can be used with safety. One of these kinds is called "Good Candy," the name originating from that of the inventor. It is made from pulverized granulated sugar and liquid honey. Put whatever quantity of pulverized sugar you may need into a suitable vessel; then add a sufficiency of extracted honey to make a dough. A pound or two of this can be laid on muslin perforated with holes and placed over the cluster. This can be renewed as often as necessary. The other kind is candy made from granulated sugar. Put into any quantity of sugar enough water to dissolve it. Then boil the sirup until it will become hard when dipped in water. This can be poured into patty pans and placed over the cluster, the pans being inverted with the sugar next the bees, says a correspondent in Farm Journal and authority for the foregoing.

Large quantities of beans are imported into this country annually.

That Tired Feeling

Is a certain indication of impure and impoverished blood. If your blood could always be rich and pure, full of the red corpuscles upon which its vitality depends, you would never be weak, or Nervous! Boils, pimples, scrofula, salt rheum, would never trouble you. But our mode of living, shut in all winter in poorly ventilated homes and shops, depletes the blood and there is loss of appetite, and weakness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the standard remedy for this condition. It purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, builds up the nerves and gives perfect health. Read this:

"Our daughter, Blanche, when four years of age had a humor break out on her hands and face, which our physician pronounced eczema. If the cold air reached her face or hands they would swell up, look almost purple, and headed blisters would form and break, Discharging a watery fluid, and the burning and itching would drive her nearly wild. Unless we incased her little hands she would tear patches of skin from her face and hands. We tried many doctors and many remedies and at last gave the case up as hopeless. But our daughter Cora tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, to cure a scrofulous lump near the left breast which caused her much pain and after taking 4 bottles it disappeared. Blanche, who is now eleven, had spent seven years of suffering, so I concluded to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She took 5 bottles and her face is smooth and soft as a baby's, the color of a rose petal. Her hands are soft and white, where four months ago they were blue and red and calloused nearly like leather. I cannot express my gratitude by pen or mouth. It seems a miracle and our friends are surprised." MRS. ANNA L. CLARK, 401 E. 4th St., Duluth, Minn.

Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly ubscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

WHISKY TRUST IS MORIBUND.

Its Properties To Be Sold Because It No Longer Has a Legal Existence.

Chicago, April 13.—The properties of the whisky trust will be sold to the highest bidder. Judge Showalter, of the United States circuit court, in an order issued yesterday admitted that the trust no longer had a legal existence. Its board of directors was eharged with having deserted its trusteeship; that it had no quorom, and that any election of new members of the board would not enable it to reacquire the property from the receiver.

The eourt directed that the receiver sell the property, "and that the proceeds be distributed among thoso entitled thereto." The attorneys for tbe Greenhut faction and the stoekholders eonsented to the action of the eourt. The bill upon which the order is based was an application for a receiver by Stephen D. Boyer, of New York, tbe owner of 500 shares of stock.

Receiver McNulta was aware of the purpose of bringing tbe suit and approves the course taken. The faet is that nothing else could be done. The charter of the eompany is voided, the property in the hands of the United States, and there could be but one eourse to be pursued, and that the one set out in the bill.

Blow Aimed at the Windy City.

Springfield, Ills., April 12.—After listening to arguments of eounsel and members of the Chieago drainage board on the quesvion of substitute amendments offered by the Valley people to the bill asked by the drainage board the state senate committee on drainage and waterways very unexpeetedly voted to table the bill of the drainage board and adopted the amendments and substitute bill of the Valley people. This bill is being vigorously fought by Chicago people, as it will add $8,000,000 to the eost of the canal.

Rice Mills Destroyed.

Savannah, Ga., April 12.—The Savannah riee mills on the river front, at the foot of Habersham street, a large four-story brick building, were completely destroyed by fire with tho entire stock of probably 50,000 bushels of ricc. The loss is estimated at about $125,000. On the buildings and plant there is an insurance of $60,000, and the loss by tho destruction of the riec, is about covered by insuranee.

SITUATION AT CINCINNATI MINES.

Strikers Get No Sympathy from the Citizens—Militia on Guard.

Centerville, Ia., April 13.—Affairs at Cincinnati have not materially changed in the last twenty-four hours. One company of militia, thirty-eight strong, is on duty there, but according to all accounts thero have been no offers of actual violence. The miners are all at work, and say they intend to stay at work as long as there is anything to do. Cincinnati is not situated exactly as some of tho other mining towns of the state.

Many of the working miners are native residents of the place and are all law-abiding, thrifty people. They own their own houses. In their efforts to work they have the sympathy of the entire community and not only the sympathy, but the active help. Tho eitizens are organized and assist in guarding the property and persons of the working miners. The visiting miners are by no means welcome and cannot buy a cent's worth of goods in the place.

There will be a general meeting of miners held at Centerville today, and it is expeeted that the men will mareh over to Cincinnati and make one more effort. If trouble occurs at all it will be then. Three shots were fired into the tipple of the Thistle eompany Thursday nigbt about 10:30. There was an armed guard there, but the parties who fired tbe shots ran away and no harm was doue.

The White Breast Mine, at Forbusch, and the Centerville Block eompany, whieh controls nine mines, are at work and are paying the old seale. Many of the visiting delegation at Cincinnati are working at these mines and spend their idle time trying to get the Cincinnati miners out, and there is a feeling that tbeir efforts are not entirely disinterested. They might as well spend their idle time there as any place else, as they get board free while there.

Declines the Invitation.

Chicago, April 15.—The business men and citizens of Chicago who invited President Cleveland to visit Chicago are to be disappointed. The invitation, which was beautiful gotten up and bound, was for tbe President and Mrs. Cleveland to attend a publie reception in this city as an expression of appreciation of his "statesman-like and eourageous aetion in maintaining the financial eredit of our government and your uncompromising attitude in favor of the preservation of a sound national curreney." Last evening Hon. Henry S. Robbins received a letter from the president declining the invitation, while expressing his gratification for the compliment, although his attaehment for the eause was so great that his personal inclination was strongly in favor of acceptance.

FIRE IN A STATE CAPITOL.

The Beautiful State House Building of Illinois Damaged by Flames.

Springfield, April 15.—Fire broke out Saturday in the senate wing of the state house, and fanned by a fierce gale raged for over an hour and caused a damage of $25,000—possibly more. During the fire the greatest excitement prevailed among the inmates of the state house, and owing to the high wind and the difficulty of getting at the fire, which was under the roof, it was for a time feared that the whole of the magnificent capitol would be ruined. The fire was diseovered by the janitor in the senate ehamber. The firemen and employes of the state then spent half an hour in vain search for the flames.

During the progress of the fire the officials of all the departments made haste to get all the valuable documents, trophies, etc., in their offices into the fireproof vaults where they would be safe from destruetion. Quantities of water poured through the roof leaked through the senate ceiling, causing much damage. The smoke penetrated all parts of tbe west wing, and has probably eaused much damage. Both libraries, however, escaped. There is no insurance. A large force of men was at once set to work to repair the damage.

Call for a Monetary Conference.

Springfield, Ills., April 11—Chairma n Hinriehsen of the Democratic state central committee has issued tho official call for the state convention or monetary conferencc, to be held at Springfield June 5, 1895. The basis of ropresentation is to be one delegate for every 300 votes or fraction of 150 or over cast for Bernard J. Claggett for state treasurer in 1894.

Killed by a Falling Window.

Pana, Ills., April 11.—Louis Hearts, 10 years old, lost his life here in a remarkable matter. He returned home while his mother was in a neighbor's and, finding himself loeked out, raised a window and was climbing in. The sash fell down and broko his neck, tearing apart a leader in the back of his neck and crushing the bones.

MESSAGE FROM THE LOST CHICORA.

Bottle Picked Up In the Lake Containing a Brief Communication.

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 15.—J. H. Graham, of the Graham and Morton Transportation company, recoivod a telegram last evening from Mrs. W. J. Hancock, wife of Clerk Hancock, of the Chicora, stating that a bottle picked up at Glen Pier was in her possession and would reach here by express this morning. It contains a message written by Engineer McClure, and unauthentieated reports from tbere say the message found was:

"Are lost; Stines and Clark washed overboard yesterday, engine broken down; could see land but for snow.

[Signed] "M'Clure."

The date was not given. This Mrs. Grabam believes to be genuine. The style of construction of the message leads to the belief that other messages written earlier, and some later, are afloat, and will be found before many days.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, occurs on the 8th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Wednesday, May 8th, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., at 221 West Madison street, for counsel, prayer, the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

JOSEPH E. ROY, President.
MRS. M. C BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

Will our exchanges, in their issue following the reception of this paper, kindly notice the annual meeting of the National Christian Association as above? We are planning and praying for a forward movement against the works of darkness.

Will those persons who have been appointed delegates to this meeting by various religious bodies, write to the secretary of the N. C. A., W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., stating their intention to be present? It is desired as far as possible to have such delegates take part in the conference to be held immediately after and in connection with the annual meeting.

The National Christian Association at its last annual meeting voted that all persons chosen by churches or church assemblies, co-operating with the Association, and from State auxiliary associations, as their representatives to its meetings, such delegations being limited to one from each body, shall have full privileges of membership during the period for which they are elected. In pursuance of this action some delegates have been appointed. Will not all testifying churches so far as possible who have not appointed such delegates do so now?

"Man proposes but God disposes." What the outcome of the Cuban war will be cannot be foreseen. It seems now as if God may interfere and put a stop to it. The yellow fever is said to have broken out with violence. The Cubans themselves are practically exempt from the ravages of the fever, and have therefore but little to fear in this direction. The country people and residents of the small villages in the interior are flocking to the large seaport towns for safety, and Santiago, Manzanillo, and Guantanama are crowded much beyond their capacity of caring for them, and consequently poverty, squalor, and filth abound. The mortality for the last fifteen days is probably heavier on account of the presence of 5,000 new recruits for the Spanish army. Fever did not entirely die out during the winter, and has started in anew in a malignant form, and, with the revolution on hand, the summer promises to be exceedingly unhealthy. Whatever the result of the war it is to be hoped that this priest-ridden people of foreign tongue will not be made a part of our government.

Lynching of real or supposed criminals is increasing to an alarming extent in our country; and though frequently no lodge is directly implicated, the defeating of justice by lodge interference has led men in a multitude of cases to take justice into their own hands, knowing that after long expensive trials the guilty party was likely to escape without being made an example to deter others. A case has just occurred in Greenville, Ala., where five persons charged with complicity in a murder, three of them women, were taken out of the hands of the sheriff's posse and hanged to trees by the roadside. It is claimed there was no doubt whatever of the guilt of all the victims. If the claim was true there should be no excuse for lynching, and the mob of a hundred who did the deed are all of them murderers. Those good men in the lodge who are quoted so often to prove that Masonry and other secret societies are, must be good, ought to look the matter up and see if by concealing the criminal secrets of their brethren and so defeating justice, they are not becoming responsible in a measure for the public murders that disgrace our land and make the execution of just laws almost impossible.

Official reports from China to our government bring the glad news that the Japan-China war is over. The terms of peace proposed by Japan were signed by the Chinese plenipotentiaries April 17. In the twenty engagements there have been killed on both sides not less than 8,912 soldiers, and wounded on the Japanese side alone 2,061. Eight Chinamen were killed to one Japanese, so that probably the wounded in the Chinese army was much larger. (1) China acknowledges the independence of Corea. (2) Cedes the Island of Formosa to Japan. (3) Promises to pay an indemnity of 300,000,000 taels. (4) Permits Japan to occupy Port Arthur, and (5) agrees to treat with Japan with a view to opening the interior of China to commerce. The tael is a silver coin worth in Pekin $1.33, which would make the amount of the indemnity demanded about $400,000,000 in silver. It is to be noted that this agreement is not final in all respects, but is simply a preliminary agreement, indicating on broad lines the ultimate terms of a definite treaty of peace which may not be perfected for months to come. The question of the daily papers, "If China is to be dismembered why is the United States the only great maritime power unbenefited?" is neither manly nor Christian. Rather let us ask: if China is now open to the world how shall we most effectually use this fact to advance the cause of Christ.

"The downfall of Oscar Wilde is the downfall of the pernicious modern idea that art and literature have nothing to do with morals, that æsthetics are higher than ethics, which have long been favorite phrases with the literary school to which Oscar Wilde belongs. Even 'a color sense,' he says in one of his essays, 'is more important in the development of the individual than a sense of right and wrong.' In another place he says, 'there is no sin except stupidity,' and 'an idea that is not dangerous is unworthy of being called an idea at all.' In his trial, when confronted with his books, he admitted in writing that he never concerned himself with the truth, and that the immorality of any expression or act was of no consideration with him as a literary man. What sort of literature has come from this vapid school? Oscar Wilde has never written a wholesome sentence. Poison lurks in everything that he has said. His influence on weaker minds has been as baneful as the nightshade. The English school of novelists, headed by Mrs. Grand, are but a development in another direction of the same unnatural, abnormal, pernicious, and diseased theories of literature. In a literary way we have fallen among a gang of vicious vermin and sewer crawlers. Gradually even the best minds have yielded to these influences, and even critics, who should stand up boldly for what is healthful and wholesome in literature and art, have become hash eaters in a literary way. It is to be hoped that the downfall of this dandy, who has been elevating the sign above the thing signified, art above life, and æsthetics above ethics, will serve to correct many who have allowed their tastes to become perverted and their judgments impaired. Outside of literature the downfall of Oscar Wilde ought to teach the all-important lesson that morals are still the most important things in the world. Fools vainly endeavor to set aside these laws, and seek to blur the dividing lines between right and wrong, but in the end they are crushed for their efforts. In law and order and morals there is more to appeal to the higher æsthetic sense than in lawlessness and chaos and immorality. Æsthetics without ethics is only a semi-light. It is only they who have a clear view of both who see life and art and nature in their highest beauty. And they who omit obedience to the laws of morals, sooner or later come to the ending which has overtaken Oscar Wilde. There is no escaping it. The wages of sin, whether we recognize sin in our system of life or not, is death. This is immutable and everlasting truth, in literature and art, as well as in morals."—Iowa State Register, Des Moines.

WHY?

BY A. S. COPLEY.

Is intemperance an evil? Are grab-bag, necktie, and such like socials questionable means for securing money for God's cause? Is human slavery wrong? Nearly, or quite all religious papers have very often answered an emphatic yes to these questions. Many, perhaps all of them, have a special department devoted weekly to temperance, Sabbath, and the like. So it should be.

But what of secrecy? Is it not an evil? Does it not intoxicate the minds and hearts of its devotees? Does it not enslave the will, the affections, and the purse? Are Sunday desecration and questionable socials greater curses than lodgery? It does not require much investigation to be able to answer these questions. Therefore, the writer has often wondered why our church papers say so little upon this subject. Have they never examined into the subject, or have they not sufficient time? Have contributors failed to do their duty, or have the editors cast their articles into the waste basket? Are the editors afraid that the circulation will decrease if they express themselves against the lodge system? Or do they themselves belong to the dark fraternity? There seems to be a screw loose somewhere. Come, brethren, draw up the burrs. Your periodicals are great powers for good or evil. You can by a few words keep many a young person from being entrapped by these works of darkness. We rejoice to know that there are a few journals which sound the anti-secrecy bugle loud, long and clear. The Lord raise up other strong voices against this great enemy. Our heart beats in sympathy with the National Christian Association and Cynosure. They are of God and are meeting a vast want.

During twelve years of ministerial life we have seen enough without close investigation to convince us of the evil and danger of secrecy. We have not yet met the first active lodgeman who was also an earnest, faithful Christian. The two things do not go together. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." There must be a division of time, money, interest and influence. The church almost invariably suffers the greater loss. It cannot be otherwise. The church bears long with delinquencies. The dues at lodge must be paid or membership discontinued. Oh, that the people of God would behold the selfishness, the danger, the depth of wickedness of the lodge system and come out forever! Oh, that religious editors would see their duty and opportunity, and "cry aloud and spare not" against the accursed thing! May the Lord quickly send a revival of heart-purity, individual life-purity and church-purity!

Albany, Ore.

LODGE FOLLY.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY J. S THOMPSON, AT THE OHIO STATE CONVENTION.

(Concluded)

4. Their regalia is silly and foolish. I will pass over this point with only a few remarks. If you have ever witnessed any of their public processions you are familiar with the silly regalia worn. The Masons, with their lambskin aprons, tin swords and other equally silly adornment. Not a man of you but would be ashamed to appear on the streets of this city wearing their regalia. And if one of their number were to go upon the streets dressed in their regalia except on the occasion of some public procession, he would be the laughing-stock of the town.

5. But let us examine their claims to charity and see what they amount to. To begin with, they will not admit to membership any except those who are of sound body; the very poor are excluded by the terms of initiation, which are made so high that they cannot meet them; and from most of the orders all women are excluded. Thus they shut out from the possibility of enjoying their so-called charity those who are the most likely to need it. But the church opens its doors to every one, no matter how poor he may be, no matter how weakly in body; the halt, the maimed, the blind, the diseased are all welcomed there; and sex is no barrier, except as the lodge has erected a barrier which keeps out multitudes of those who belong to what is called the stronger sex. From this point of view, which of these institutions seems to have the best grounds to claim to be a charitable institution?

But let us look from another point of view; namely, the beneficiaries in these respective cases. The lodge extends its charities, as they call it, to the members of the lodge, or their immediate families, under certain conditions. The one essential condition is that the lodge dues have been paid up. A man may have been a very good lodgeman for many years, but if for any reason he has failed to pay up his dues, the door of lodge charity is forthwith closed against him. When a case is presented, their inquiry is not as to the merits of the case, the need of aid, but what claim has the case upon the lodge, and if no claim can be shown through membership in the lodge there is no charity dispensed.

But let us look from still another point of view, that of the relative amount of benefits received to the amount payed in to the lodge. The Odd-fellows make a special claim of being a benevolent institution. But what does it amount to? Take the figures as made public in a recent annual report of the Odd-fellows of Illinois. They claim a membership of 50,000 in the State. That report shows an annual income of $457,548.88. But that expended in benevolence only $145,464. What became of the remaining $312,048? Their receipts were a little over nine dollars per member, the benefits paid less than three dollars per member. For every dollar that any man may hope that he or his family may get in benefits from the lodge, he must pay more than three dollars into the lodge. What kind of benevolence do you call that? I never heard it said of life insurance companies that they were particularly benevolent or charitable institutions. I do not think they make any pretensions to be such. But if for every dollar paid out in policies the insured must pay in three dollars in premiums, how long would they continue to do business? But the claim is made that the very best insurance a man can take is a membership in one or these lodges. In the light of these figures, what do you think of their charity or benevolence? Are not their claims to be charitable or benevolent institutions the rankest folly? Does the man show profound wisdom who joins the lodge for the sake of the benefits that himself or his family will get from it, when he ought to know that for every dollar that can be obtained in benefits more than three will have to be paid in in dues.

6. Their big-hsounding titles are foolish and silly. Listen to a few of them: Worshipful Master, Right Worshipful Master, Most Worshipful Grand Master, Thrice Illustrious Grand Master, Thrice Puissant Grand Master, High Priest, Most Excellent High Priest, Grand Elect Perfect and Sublime Mason, Most Excellent King, Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander. These are only a few samples. Christ said, "Call no man master, for one is your Master, and all ye are brethren," but they delight to employ, with many other high-sounding adjectives, this term master. Not content with calling men master, they call them priest, high priest, king, most excellent king, etc., and besides all this they add to them those attributes, sovereign, worshipful, etc., attributes which belong to God alone, and they ascribe them to men promiscuously, often to men of the most debauched and immoral lives. But I need not dwell on these high-sounding titles; you are familiar with them; you know how foolish and silly they are; not only foolish and silly, but profane and blasphemous often. Is a man wise who goes into an institution where he must pay such honors to mere men? Is a man wise who delights to strut about, wearing such titles?

7. Their funeral services are foolish and silly. First of all you will see them out with their regalia on; lambskin aprons, cocked hats, lofty plumes and other toggery. How much this must comfort the heart of the wife or mother mourning the death of a husband or son! They push themselves to the front, for this is their grand opportunity to display their order; they are burying a brother. All front seats must be reserved for "the brethren." At the grave they encircle the tomb; all others may stand aside; even the pastor of the deceased, unless he be a lodge member, must stand back. At these lodge funerals it often happens that the most profane persons perform the most sacred offices. The Bible will be carried by men who never show any interest at all in religion. Profane and godless men officiate in these ceremonies. The same funeral ritual is employed for every one. Their death is ascribed to the Grand Master of the Universe, and their destiny is always the same, the Grand Lodge above, or something of that sort. To attempt to describe their nonsense is sickening. Does any man with good sense desire to be buried with such nonsense? Does any sensible woman desire that a lodge, made up of the characters that are generally found in such associations, shall come between her and her dead husband in these last sad rites? Is it not bad enough that they have come between her and her husband in life, without intruding themselves at this moment of supreme sorrow? And what woman desires her husband to be sent to the Grand Lodge above, where she must of necessity be forever separated from him, for no woman is permitted to enter the lodge? Would she not much prefer to think of him as going to a plain heaven where she might meet with him again, and where without any lodge to come between them they might together praise the God who had redeemed them by the blood of his Son? There may be Grand Lodges below; I conceive that as that is the devil's territory it would be the proper place for them, but I am very sure that there are no Grand Lodges above. Is not all this the silliest of nonsense? What do you think of the man who joins the lodge that he may be buried with Masonic pomp and honor—I think they should say dishonor? The consummate folly of all such things!

8. I notice only one more point, though there are a number of others upon which I would like to dwell, namely: Their supreme folly lies in pretensions to prepare men for the future life. This is one of their great pretensions. How often are we told that if a man is a good Mason that is all that he needs to prepare him for the next life, and that if he lives up to his Masonic obligations he will certainly be all right. And in fact in their funeral ceremonies they pretend to send men to the place of happiness and bliss, it matters not how bad the man may have been. Did you ever hear of them refusing to bury any man who had lived up to his obligations and paid his dues, because he was too bad a man to go to the Grand Lodge above, no matter how godless or immoral he had been? I never did. But how do they profess to prepare men for a future life? It is by a way wholly apart from Christ and the church. Their religion is not Christian; they exclude Christ from the lodge; they exclude his name from their prayers; they use a mutilated Scripture. The Jew, the Mohammedan, the infidel as well as the Christian are all there, and Christ must be left out. Have they not by their mutilation of the holy Scriptures come under the condemnation of Rev. 22: 19? They pretend to give men the new birth, but it is not the regeneration of which our Lord spoke when he talked with Nicodemus. They profess to open the door of the Grand Lodge above, but Christ is not that door. But my Bible tells me that "there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved; neither is there salvation in any other."

WHAT PARTS OF THE BIBLE HAVE BEEN MOST HELPFUL TO YOU?

My answer to the question as to the helpfulness of different parts of the Bible is: All portions are helpful. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable. "In the beginning God" and in the ending, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." Thousands fail to enjoy the Old Testament because they are unacquainted with its grand characters, but I feel acquainted with Adam and Abel, Enoch and Noah, Abraham and Lot, Isaac and Jacob, Joseph and Moses.

I have an especial affection for that grand old soldier Joshua, and a great admiration for Job. As for Samuel and David, I think I shall hasten to renew my acquaintance with them as soon as I reach the other shore.

Both of them evidently believed fully in righteous citizenship, not merely as a theory but as a movement that meant business. I am sure that I should want to tell Samuel how I used to enjoy reading, "And Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the Lord in Gilgal." That movement extermination, not compromise. If Samuel did not seem impatient I think I might tell him that, when I thought of the thousands of women that had been rendered worse than childless by the tolerated and licensed lodges, saloons, gambling dens and brothels, in the town where I used to live, I wished and prayed that the movement Samuel made on the old heathen king Agag might begin forthwith in Chicago.

It seems sometimes as if I should like to assure David, that although there were some pretty good Christians in my time, who did not exactly approve of his imprecatory Psalms, and I did not understand them fully, still some of them had been a great comfort to me, and that when sore distressed and persecuted by enemies, when the Holy Spirit had prompted me to pray as in the Psalm 58: 6, "Break their teeth, oh God," I had been greatly comforted, and that God had broken their teeth, and I was unharmed; and that when I considered the fact that he (David) was a prophet, and was telling what judgments should come upon the wicked, it made the whole matter plain.

I should desire to tell Elijah how I wished some one could have got the ear of our people long enough to thunder out, "If the Lord be God follow him; and if the grand old party be your god follow it, and vote for men who neither fear God nor regard man; vile saloon-keepers to govern you, and send your sons and the sons of your neighbors to perdition on the lightning express.

Of course the New Testament characters, who had the inestimable advantage of gospel light and the teaching of Christ himself, have had an added halo; and all this halo of blessing is but a reflected light from the man Christ Jesus, in whose presence alone is fullness of joy. I am sure that I shall greatly enjoy talking with Peter and the two "sons of thunder," and with doubting Thomas, also; with the martyr Stephen, and with the evangelist Philip. And oh, how I shall enjoy visiting with that grand old hero Paul! I should like to tell him how I used to hope and pray that I might near the close of life look back and exclaim with him, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

Perhaps he will let me tell him how the doctrine of foreordination and election used to puzzle me, until I came to realize that Christ had graciously foreordained that "whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life," and had told his "beloved disciple, John, that he had foreordained that "whosoever will may take of the water of life freely," and had not only told the church to say "come," but said, "let him that heareth say come," so that every poor sinner that heard the message of salvation might come himself, and know that he was commissioned to say come. I think I should want to tell him that I did not overlook his declaration, "therefore thou art inexcusable, oh man, whosoever thou art, that judgest," or fail to tell him that I had noticed with joy that when Peter was talking to the very murderers of his Master, after convicting them of murder, he offered them salvation; and when Cornelius sent for him he was led to say, "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons."

I should want to tell Peter or Paul that I had not failed to notice, all through the prophets, the message: "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?" and that I had carefully noticed that God told Ezekiel, "Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked should turn from his way;" and that I had been greatly interested, not only in the fact that Rahab the harlot and Ruth the Moabitess were accepted as his people, but, amazing grace, I had found their names in the very genealogy of the Lord Jesus. And I am sure that I shall praise God through the ages of eternity that the Bible is one book and that God is its author—that salvation is for me and my children and for whosoever will. C.

There is much twaddle about the ministry of the church of the present day not being in sympathy with the world's progress. It is contended that the old ideas and old methods are retained with too much tenacity. As a result, it is said, the lambs run from the shepherd instead of following him. This is given us as the cause of the failure to accomplish more in the way of saving young men. But all this is representing the mass of men as wanting nothing but to be pleased. Thay are not seeking to be taught and saved. According to this theory they only desire to be carried along by nice methods. They are drowning, and know it all too well, but are only prevented being saved by the kind of man who throws the rope to them, or there is something wrong with the rope itself that is thrown. The ministers of Christ, as such, never did attract men to their Master by their efforts to shine. Their office is to present Christ Jesus, the great attraction himself. He was lifted up that he might draw all men to him. The more ministers are held up between Christ and sinners, the less the latter will be inclined to accept him. But the less they are seen and the more the attention can be drawn to the cross of Christ, the more will men be drawn unto Christ. The great trouble in Christ's own day was the dislike to Christ. "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." It is a principle that should never be forgotten as announced by Christ, "No man can come to me except the Father draw him." The great want of the ministry is the greater endowment of the Spirit and more thorough confidence in the appointed means of salvation, which must lead to a fuller use of them.—Sel.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Report of committee accepted and adopted by Synod of Reformed Presbyterian Church, July, 1894:

Our opposition to secret orders does not lie against organization, or pledges, or privacy. Efficient work demands organization; a good life is full of promises and pledges; the best interests of society demand that many things be covered from view. It is by reference to such undeniable facts as these secret orders are generally defended. Let us notice that such defence is not complimentary to these orders. It implies either the absence of discretion or the presence of much that needs to be concealed. The fundamental objection to secret societies is, that they are social bodies, organized on the principle of secrecy and for the purpose of concealment, without previous knowledge of the things to be concealed. The evil is in organized secrecy among equals. Secret societies themselves suffer from the application of their own principle. It is a well-known fact that secret orders, within secret orders, are multiplying to the injury of the common interests of the larger body. To illustrate the evil workings and principles of these orders let us suppose that a family, a church or nation is organized by solemnly pledging every member, before entering the door of such society, that he will "ever conceal and never reveal" the doings of that society. The nature and purpose of that social body cannot save it from public condemnation. That which would condemn a divine institution cannot be justified in a merely human society.

What then are the objections to organized secrecy?

I. Such a society is contrary to the spirit and letter of the religion of Jesus Christ. His words are, "In secret have I said nothing," "Let your light so shine before men," "He that doeth evil hateth the light," "He that doeth the truth cometh to the light." Christianity is a religion of love and benevolence toward all men. Secret organizations are always selfish. The grip, the password, the darkened window, the guarded door, are not Christ-like; and the Christian, especially the minister of Christ, is out of place amid such surroundings. Many of these orders boast of wisdom, of love and benevolence, but these good things are limited to their own members. Against this stands the injunction of the apostle, "As we have opportunity let us do good unto all men;" and the words of Jesus Christ, "Freely ye have received, freely give," "Go teach all nations," "Love thy neighbor as thyself." True, it is often boastingly said, that secret benevolent societies leave the church far behind in their deeds of charity. What has the church to learn from these societies? First. The church will learn to limit her deeds of love to her own members. Second. She will refuse membership to all except the able-bodied, and those that have visible means of support. Third. She will require an initiation fee of all applicants for membership. Fourth. She will require of all, without regard to ability, a stated contribution, sufficient to provide for all future needs. Fifth. Whenever any member fails to pay his annual or monthly fee he shall forfeit all interest in or claims upon help from the church. Would such a church be worthy of the name of Christ? Would the world call this benevolence or charity?

II. Organized secrecy invites suspicion. If all the workings and purposes of secret orders are good why should the light be excluded? Good men and good purposes do not need pledges of secrecy. Organized secrecy is a menace to society. It naturally leads to ends and means and invites persons that need concealment. The history of secrecy is stained with blood, and is characterized by falsehood. Secrecy trains men to lie. These things were never more evident than to-day. They are the inevitable results of hidden methods. Scarcely a year passes that does not record maiming, beating and killing by those whose plans are laid and executed in darkness. Good men in these orders may regret these things but they cannot prevent them.

III. Secrecy in organization leads to loss of time, liberty and manhood. The pledge of secrecy subjects the member to the control of others, and takes from him freedom of action. This humiliation is well represented by the "cable tow" around the neck and the sword's point at the breast. The natural and necessary result of this is the assumption, by the officers, of titles that surpass the prerogative of any human being. The titles of tyrants and oppressors are gathered from the darkest corners of the earth and from the history of the past, and the Supreme Being is robbed of his names and attributes, to find titles for the officers of these orders. The display of gaudy apparel is in imitation of the attire of oriental despots, that scorned and trampled under foot the rights of the common people. Who does not see that all this is at variance with liberty and republicanism? Whoever calls any man grand master makes himself a grand slave. No military discipline or tyrannical government surpasses the despotism of these orders. They not only lord it over their own members but undertake to dispute, on terms of death, the conduct of those outside of their organization. Just in proportion to their secrecy, so is their despotism. Is not this the explanation of the strange fact, that the inner organizations of secrecy out-Herod Herod in their obligations and titles? The Mystic Shriners, among the Masons, go to the Turkish government for their forms and titles. The new organization formed at Cincinnati last May, composed of Odd-fellows, patterned after the Russian government. Let every one that enters a secret lodge know that he parts with liberty, puts his neck under the yoke, fetters his feet, locks his lips, and puts his hands between the hands of others. He virtually says I am your "beast," drive me. I am your slave, command me. I yield my own will and judgment to others.

The multiplication of independent and dependent secret orders gives the best hope of their overthrow. They are beginning to devour one another. The mother is eating up her own offspring. The evil nature and results of organized secrecy cannot much longer escape public reprobation.

Resolved, That we continue to bear testimony, by word and deed, against this great and growing evil; that we co-operate in every practical way with all true friends of Christian love, liberty and equality; that we continue to expose the evils of each particular secret organization as it appears.

THE RELIGION OF ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

While Odd-fellowship "wars against vice in all its forms," it has no war to make on creeds or doctrines of either the church or the state. Its doors are open to persons of all manner of beliefs, religious or political, as long as they are not detrimental to the "good of the greatest number" or the welfare and stability of the governments under which it exists. A belief in a Supreme Being, good moral character and sound health are the three essential prerequisites for applicants for admission within its sacred borders. Among the millions who have held and do now hold allegiance to its mandates are votaries of every shrine and altar and of every conceivable form of political belief and social position, from president and preacher to peasant, and from the millionaire to the mumper; and the doors are still open to receive those who believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Millions have worthily crossed its threshold, and a few of the unworthy have succeeded in gaining entrance. No seeker for admission to its mysteries is asked to forswear himself. Each man's religion belongs to his own conscience. All meet upon a common level, as God created them, and there pledge fealty, devotion and brotherhood in time of sickness or distress, or when death overtakes one of their number. This is the religion of Odd-fellowship. This being true, then why should any "ban," or "prohibition," or "threat," or any other procedure, be necessary to prevent the members of any church from becoming members of such an order? The answer can be summed up in this one word—INTOLERANCE! "Only this and nothing more."—Odd-fellow Companion.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Easter.—Odd-fellows Fair.—Y. M. C. A. scandal.—An initiation adventure.—Gen. Booth's manifesto.

Good Friday was observed as a literal if not a legal holiday. Special services were held in all the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches, and largely attended. The offices of the city departments were closed, and even some of the theatres closed their doors and had no performance. The usual large number of hot-cross buns were sold and eaten. This old-world custom seems to be growing each year. One prominent caterer disposed of 50,000. The stores are filled with Easter novelties, and the last vestiges of old Puritan simplicity seem to have been swept away, and Easter Sunday now, even in Protestant churches, means only elaborate floral and musical exhibitions.

The Odd-fellows are preparing for a monster fair shortly, to be held in the Lenox Lyceum. The object of the fair is to raise funds for the erection of a Home for aged and infirm Odd-fellows, to cost $40,000. The various committees have given several months of preparation to the arrangements, and every conceivable catch-penny device will doubtless be resorted to for the purpose of extracting money from the pockets of patrons. The daily papers are giving a large amount of advertising and eulogizing—the New York Times one day devoting three columns and a-half to laudatory description, and giving twelve pictures of distinguished Odd-fellows. Whenever a Christian reform convention is held in the city, one may scan the columns of the city press in vain for the slightest allusion to the proceedings.

Much regret has been expressed in religious circles over events which occurred at the annual dinner of the Young Men's Christian Association the other day. The diners filled the air with food thrown at the waiters, banged dishes on the tables, yelled worldly songs, and some got up on the chairs and danced break-downs, and gave an altogether disgusting exhibition of rowdyism and vulgarity. The Twenty-third Street Branch is the largest in the country, and the publicity which has been given to the matter has led the directors to order an investigation. If they desire to apply a remedy they will have to go back farther than this scandalous dinner, and radically change the entire present policy of the Y. M. C. A. movement. In the earlier years of its history it accomplished a vast amount of good, but more recently it has been paying the usual penalty of prosperity. It has in many places been secularized until it has degenerated into a mere religious club, and in our cities the use of the adjectives "religious" and "Christian" savor more of satire than sincerity. While it lacks the paraphernalia of secretism, it exposes itself to certain criticisms that are deservedly given to secret societies, by adopting some of their methods and customs.

There was a lively scene in the lodge room of the Bedford Council of the Royal Arcanum last week. A certain bank clerk had applied for membership in the DeLong Council, but his friends had so worked upon his imagination with stories of the terrible ordeals he would have to pass through that he withdrew his application and sent it to another council where he thought he was unknown. He had been told that during the initiation there would come a lull in the proceedings, and then he could prepare for trouble. Everything went on smoothly enough until the predicted lull in the proceedings came. Then the candidate, who was blindfolded, and whose nerves were wrought up to the highest pitch, showed that he had followed the advice which had been given him, and that he was "prepared for trouble." Believing that something terrible was about to happen, he suddenly pulled a revolver from his pocket, and snapped the trigger several times in rapid succession. The cartridges failed to explode, but there was a general stampede for places of safety. The Royal Arcanumites, supposing that they had a lunatic on their hands, thought that discretion was the better part of valor. They tumbled over each other in their efforts to get behind desks and chairs and other barricades, and for the time being the candidate was left victor on the field. Finally some of the bolder members crawled up behind and disarmed him, and he was found to be as much scared as they were. The pistol was examined, and found only to contain blank cartridges. It seemed that he had brought the revolver to protect himself, believing he would be harshly dealt with, but had only loaded it with blank cartridges, thinking that the moral influence at least would be equal to cold lead. It was sometime before the panic subsided sufficiently for the initiation to be concluded.

Gen. Booth has issued an order, so it is reported, that all soldiers of the Salvation Army must separate themselves from secret societies, and hereafter have no connection with them. This decree is said to have been the result of his recent visit to America. He believes that no man can serve two masters, and if a soldier's time is divided and his attention distracted by lodge meetings and duties, he will be unable to serve the highest interests of the army. In this the old General displays again the hard common sense that he has always been credited with possessing.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A moral lesson from the English sparrow.—The gypsey moth.—The Daily Standard —The A. P. A.—Dr. I. J. Lansing.—Bribery in the Connecticut Legislature.—A Chinese Mason.—The Theosophical Convention.

"A mystery and a surprise"—that is what Burroughs calls the going and coming of the birds. And this very mystery, this not knowing whence they come or whither they go, makes half the charm of their brief presence—these bright beings of the air, that from their low earth nests or the blue heights of heaven above, teach us at once contentment and aspiration. The audacious English sparrow, with his air of pert impudence, is like the poor, always with us. He thrives equally in city or country, though, so far as his individual preference is concerned, it is my opinion that he is like the great bulk of other foreigners that come to our shores, and likes the city best. This ne'er do weil among the feathered tribe has been so roundly abused, and had so many crimes laid to his charge, with scarce a voice raised in his defence, that I feel disposed to take his part. I do not believe that this winged vagrant is half so bad as he is painted, and if he drives away the native birds (of which I am not sure), and they are cowardly enough to let him, what have we to say? Are we not showing a pusilanimity that is quite as great and as much more contemptible, as we reckon ourselves superior to the birds of the air? What of our abandoned farms? What of the streets that were once lined with comfortable, spacious New England homes—synonyms for intelligence, refinement, and integrity—now given up entirely to the foreign element, and made objectionable if not disreputable neighborhoods? But who is to blame? If Americans will not stand their ground they deserve to be crowded out. It is not the whisky-selling foreigner that is to blame for squeezing in whenever and wherever he gets a chance. It is the men with more dollars than patriotism who let him: who abandon the old historic landmarks for greed of gain, and move themselves into some fashionable locality up town, cordoned off from the vile traffic that they will not have near their own door while they vote to plant it next to their neighbors.

Massachusetts may fairly claim to have a gold-bug within her borders. The irrepressible gypsey moth, and how to exterminate it, is again the burning theme for discussion. The money appropriated for this object bids fair to run into the millions before the last of these little pests is given his walking ticket. Spraying with arsenic it is found, though it may result in the death of some valuable domestic animal, has no effect on the gypsey moth except to make him thrive and grow fat. As a bottomless pit to swallow up money without any proportionate return, he rivals a daily paper.

This reminds me that the new anti-Romanist paper, the Boston Daily Standard, has at last made its appearance. It is clean and bright, and if it continues to run in the same line in which it is started will undoubtedly prove a success. If so it will have the further distinction of being the first successful reform daily ever issued. The Standard has been an agreeable disappointment to many, for it is entirely free from the spirit of rant, bitterness, and gross exaggeration which characterizes most of the distinctive anti-Catholic papers. On this account it may not suit the extreme wing of the party, but it will gain enough to more than compensate in the respect of the intelligent and candid. The A. P. A. is evidently filling up more and more with men whose patriotism consists in noise, and their religion in denunciation. One of the greatest needs of the hour is that some one introduce into our Massachusetts Legislature, as well as into legislative assemblies of other States, a bill obliging every Roman Catholic institution to open its doors to official inspection. But instead of embarking in any large and radical measure like this, the A. P. A. seems content to be an invisible factor in municipal elections, stirring up heat and bitterness in the pool of local politics. Rome may be strong, but the secret empire which originated the A. P. A. is stronger, and does not mean to let the young Hercules feel his might. So she keeps him bound with the chain of secrecy, and says to him, "Thus far shalt thou go, but no farther," when he shows a dangerous disposition to break away.

The patriotic meetings in the People's church every Sunday afternoon might, if run on Gospel lines, be a great power for good. As they are run at present what good they may do is more than counterbalanced by the evil. Many good things are said at these meetings, and much intelligence and piety is represented in the throng that attends, but this element will grow less and less if the undesirable element continues to increase.

The name of Dr. I. J. Lansing has been unusually prominent in the papers since his remarks on Cleveland, at the late Methodist convention in Salem. Though based on common report and the evidence of unimpeachable witnesses it was doubtless an indiscreet utterance. But I wish we had more such men in the American pulpit—men with the John Baptist fire in their hearts and on their lips, who will not speak smooth words or pass over in smoother silence the sins of those who occupy high places. No President ever gained a reputation for drinking habits who did not do something to earn it. Why the papers should pounce on Dr. Lansing so savagely for saying in public what is so generally believed to be true, is easily answered. Dr. Lansing is the Parkhurst of Boston. There is not an evil which he has not shown himself brave to attack, and his onslaughts on Rome especially have been loaded with hot shot. Cleveland has hobnobbed with Romish prelates enough to win their active, if hidden, support, and the subservient Rome-ruled press, when the truth is told about him in public, holds up hands of holy horror. This episode cannot hurt Dr. Lansing, whose course has been manly throughout, and can only add to the respect in which he is held as one of the most fearless champions of right that the American pulpit has ever produced.

A box of Havanna cigars, with the compliments of a New York firm, was found on the desk of each member of the Connecticut Senate not long ago. This small bribe, given so openly, confirms the allegations which have been extensively made as to the extensive and systematic bribery of the legislature in the land of steady habits. Meanwhile the agitation against child insurance in Massachusetts has broken up this form of iniquity, and the insurance companies will no longer reap such enormous profits from the ignorance and poverty of parents. The business was iniquitous on its face, and flourished simply because the better class of people were ignorant of its existence.

The papers chronicle the return of Sam Wah Kee, "king of Chinatown," and adds that "there will be a great celebration at the next meeting of the Masons, as Sam is high in the order."

April 27 the American Theosophical Society is to hold a convention here. There is a big split in the society, quite equal to that in the A. P. A. Annie Besant and Col. Olcutt of India accuse the secretary, Wm. Q. Judge, of manufacturing fraudulent theosophical messages, and building up within the society a veritable Tammany Hall machine. It seems to be the way of Providence to make systems of error bite and devour one another. But the charge of fraud is a queer one to bring when it would be impossible to lay one's finger on anything in the teachings of Theosophy that is not fraud. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR AT CHURCH.

Dr. Lorimer certainly ought to know the fitness of things, and not to commit the blunder of attempting a union of discordant elements. It is fairly presumable that he has made a study of Christianity, and it would be a serious reflection upon his intelligence to admit that he would prefer the lodge to the church, as he asserted a year ago, without having weighed and compared the two. Accepting him as a competent judge, we have his decision presented in an elaborate and carefully prepared service rendered in Music Hall. As reported in the papers, an enthusiastic audience filled every available foot of space in the spacious auditorium. Among the scenic decorations upon the forum, we note the two most conspicuous actors in this Easter worship. One is a noted doctor of divinity; the other is the most extensive distiller of rum in America. The one is pastor of Tremont Temple Baptist church, Rev. Sir. Knight George C. Lorimer; the other is Right Eminent Grand Commander of Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, Samuel C. Lawrence, who sit side by side as brothers, met to conduct the impressive services.

The papers give the names of seven Eminent Sir Knights, representing De Molay Commandery, who with the Rev. Sir Knight Pastor Lorimer had prepared a program for the occasion. These exercises are not described at length, but it is said "they were impressive, as the Templars were assigned parts." The Templars' Hymn, written by the Rev. Sir. Knight Geo. C. Lorimer for the occasion, was sung; and other musical selections were rendered to enliven the occasion.

What part of the program was assigned to R. ·. E. ·. Commander Samuel C. Lawrence is not stated. Whether he presented samples of his Medford rum and dilated upon its victories over the work of the missionaries and the untutored inhabitants of the dark continent, and told of the death-freighted ships that he is sending to foreign shores, and the blood-red rivers of distilled damnation he is pouring into the cities and homes of our own land, or described the fifth libation of double damnation which is taken by every K. T. Mason, we are left to conjecture. But one thing is positively asserted, he was there "under escort, and occupied a place on the platform with his suite." With De Molay Commandery and other invited guests he had come to assist the Tremont Temple church in her Easter Sunday worship. Was it not very kind in this prince of distillers and R. ·. E. ·. commander of Sir Knights to consent to grace the occasion and render timely aid to a feeble church whose piety or discretion had so far evaporated as to require the services of a man who by virtue of his business is the enemy and destroyer of those for whom Christ died?

The principal address, as would be expected, was by Rev. Sir Knight Geo. C. Lorimer, D.D. It is briefly sketched in the Standard and the Journal, and as reported contains nothing new or of striking interest. The oft-repeated averment that "The order is not a secret society," is getting stale, and is so palpably false that the wonder is how any man who has studied the system, and is not entirely bereft of reason, can make such a statement. To all who are at any time tempted to cover the inherent wickedness, disgusting ceremonies, and horrid oaths and penalties of the lodge by asserting what they know to be false, I would commend a careful study of the 21st chapter of Revelation, especially the 8th verse.

To my brethren in all the churches that have turned aside from the divinely-authorized simplicity and services of God's house, where Christ is preached and exalted above all forms, let me ask in the words of God's prophet, Isaiah 1: 12, "When ye come to appear before me who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts."

REFORM NEWS.

THE COAST AGENT AT PORTLAND.

MR. EDITOR:—My rest (?) of a few days was devoted to moving from Philomath to Portland. After getting about half straightened up I venture to write a line to the Cynosure. It has been a busy time on other lines than moving.

On Sabbath the 31st I attended and assisted in the service at the U. B. church. On the same evening I spoke on the lodge evil at the Gospel Mission, conducted by Rev. Mr. Lambert, corner of 20th and Washington streets. Mr. L. has a finely furnished hall, and an excellent congregation. They listened to our address with marked interest. This pastor and people are not afraid to say, "we are opposed to all secret orders." The pastor is a young man of more than ordinary intelligence and promise. The hall was crowded. A few came through curiosity. Some ladies were heard to say, "I wonder what husband will think of me being out so late, and oh, if he knew where I am he would boil, for he's a Mason and Odd-fellow." "Poor creature, said I, think of the many nights your husband spends with the lodge, and you do not where he is." This lady and two others stopped wife and I on the street afterward, to ask the Masonic and Odd-fellows password. At the close of the lecture the pastor arose and commended most heartily our address and work.

On Wednesday evening following I attended the United Presbyterian Presbytery at the Grand Avenue church, Dr. H. F. Wallace, pastor. The meeting was seemingly well attended, and very enthusiastic and earnest. Addresses were made on the various subjects discussed. Rev. Little of Albany preached the annual missionary sermon for the Woman's Missionary society. This was an excellent discourse—giving an encouraging report of the work done, and a hopeful outlook for the future.

The next day I attended the Free Methodist annual conference, and heard a good discourse by Rev. J. S. Bradley; after which I visited the annual conference of the United Evangelical church and was introduced. Not being invited to speak I listened. They admitted a preacher who would not agree to administer the ordinance of baptism in but one mode, while the denomination practices all. Bishop Stanford presided with dignity. Rev. C. C. Poling was the secretary. He and Rev. Balentine of Corvallis were elected presiding elders.

The next morning I again called at the Free Methodist conference, was introduced, and by special vote was invited to address the conference. Our time being limited, the best we could do was to give a brief advertisement of what we have done and what we hoped to do—especially announcing our coming convention Sept. 25, 26. We were followed by Bishop Hart, who spoke out very plainly against all secret societies. Among other things he said, "When we as a church started out to be true to God and oppose all sin, we found the secret lodge system right in our way, so we took up the fight with them, and have never quit. We are with you." He further gave his experience in withdrawing from the Masonic lodge after he got salvation. It was the same old story of persecution. He is a true man, and "when the Lord writeth up his people he will (we believe) be found in Zion." We secured nine Cynosure subscriptions. This people is among those who have maintained the doctrines and usages of the Wesleys and the early fathers of Methodism. One thing we noticed was, "no place seeking" among them. "The offices sought the men." There was no anxiety about where they were going next year. They had seemingly "prayed right up to the hardest field in conference before they arrived," so what they received better than the hardest must have been clear gain to them. God bless these faithful men and women, and give them great success this year.

At the threshold of our quarterly meeting Saturday, as we were expecting once more to see our dear brother Barkley, we received a letter from him, earnestly requesting us to preach and hold the meeting for him—his wife having been taken suddenly ill, which prevented his coming. We took his place, preaching four times and conducting the conference—raising his salary in full for the quarter, besides about four or five dollars for a new lamp and other expenses.

On April 14 we are billed to preach at Central Addition, North Mt. Tabor. Then we will be off for the Sound country again. We are billed as follows: Ostrander, Castle Rock, Centralia, Tacoma, Puyallup, Seattle Seminary, and South Seattle.

Our plan is to put in April, May, and most of June in Washington; July, August, and September in Oregon; spending the remainder of fall and a part of the winter in California. Will brethren interested please arrange appointments accordingly? Your Bro.,

P. B. WILLIAMS.

SEATTLE ENLIGHTENED.

[Delayed Notice.]

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On March 7th I spoke in the Danish-Norwegian Lutheran church, corner of Fourth and Pine streets, Seattle, Washington, to the largest congregation I have ever addressed on the lodge question. It was estimated that fully seven hundred persons were present. The large house was filled. I think there must have been twenty-five or more pastors present. The meeting had been well announced by a notice in the leading daily of the same date.

Rev. M. L. Larson read the Scripture lesson and led in fervent prayer. Rev. Tollefson, pas-

CORRESPONDENCE.

REPORT OF STATE MEETING OF W. B. M. I.

BY C. B. K.

The report of the corresponding secretary giving items about the missionaries in the different foreign fields was intensely interesting, but can not be fully reported for lack of space.

The State treasurer's report showed a gain of about $1,000 over the receipts of the previous year.

The "communication from the board" gave an account of the needs in various mission fields. The debt of $18,289 is, of course, a serious trial to those who receive the pathetic appeals for help from self-sacrificing devoted Christians, who have found the "fields already white" but the laborers few. From Madura, India, came the most pitiful. Mrs. Coffin, who has been a faithful missionary for about twenty-five years, reports her school building burned sometime ago; since then she has had to live with seven girls in one room. Of her one hundred scholars (girls), all are too thinly clad and poorly fed, many being ill from a lack of food. They give "all they can," but a drought for two years has reduced them to want.

The question of "how to give" was considered in this connection, and it was decided that if all church members would give proportionately and systematically there would be no more debts to report for the W. B. M. I. All present were urged to try to have such a system of giving advocated by their churches.

There were four missionaries present, who gave highly interesting addresses: Col. J. D. Davis, D.D., Japan; Miss Myers, formerly of Japan, who has just withdrawn from the work of missions, being obliged to do so on account of ill-health; Mrs. M. E. Logan, of Micronesia, and Mrs. J. E. Jeffrey, of Madura, India.

Col. Davis, who fought bravely in our own country during the war of the Rebellion, gave an account of his experience during twenty-five years of mission life. He said that he believed the world was growing better, from what he saw in Oriental countries; but he was pained at the extravagance and lack of interest in religion in his own country. He said, "There are grave problems here which must be met and solved."

Mrs. Logan said no one who had not a love for God and souls of men, would choose such a life of loneliness and privation as the missionaries to Micronesia must live. Yet she hopes to return to those who were eavages, now her Christian friends, and win more souls from the hopeless darkness of heathenism to the light of Christ.

Mrs. Jeffrey, as did the other lady missionaries, especially mentioned the surprise shown by girls and women to find that Christ cared for them; that he was willing to save women, who are considered not worth saving by the heathen teachers. She said one girl remarked to her, "The people of different heathen religions have different marks—to show what their religion is—on their faces, painting them in different ways. Have the Christians any mark?" And Mrs. Jeffrey said, "Yes, we have, but not made with paint." This should be true.

Miss Myers gave a beautiful contrast between the life of Christian and heathen women and girls in Japan.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

My right hand had been terribly mutilated in the battle of Drury's Bluff, May 16th, 1864; and Aug. 22d, 1864, I was discharged because my hand was so drawn out of shape and place that it was evident I could be of no further service then as a U. S. soldier.

That fall and winter I taught school in Campaign county, my school closing with the year because the school fund of the district was exhausted. Just after the holidays I started home. I had received a letter from my father shortly before, advising me to stop in Chicago long enough to try for a situation. This was a great surprise to me, as I had always been "his right hand man" on the farm, and I supposed he was looking forward to having my help the next summer.

I, however, believed his advice wise, and after seeking earnestly the blessing and guidance of God, I set apart $10.00 as the maximum amount that I would spend for hotel accommodations while canvassing for employment; pledging that should any part of that sum be unused I would give it to the cause of Christ. I reached the city at night, and went to the Adams House, close by the Illinois Central depot. Although I would later have taken a situation in almost any honorable business where God might open a door for me, I resolved first to apply for a clerkship in the line of books and stationary.

After earnestly committing my ways unto God I claimed with a strong faith his precious promise to direct my steps, and after breakfasting, started out. I found that most of the stores were not open yet; but they soon opened, and I began my canvass, taking street after street, and stopping at every book or stationary house. About 10 o'clock I applied at a stationary store on Lake street, and was told by the bookkeeper that the head of the firm was out, but he thought if I was willing to begin at the bottom of the ladder I might secure a place there by calling again about noon. I was "on time," saw the proprietor, and was engaged, with the privilege of sleeping in the store, as the wages offered would not pay for first class lodging and board. Of course I had learned to cook in the army, and I soon found that I could prepare for myself a more satisfactory breakfast and supper than I could get at a restaurant, and at a fraction of the cost, and a lunch for dinner was good enough. I applied myself diligently to master every detail of the business, and even the proprietor soon came to appeal to me when close figuring was desired in making quotations, and later he proposed a trip "on the road." Success crowned my efforts, and the night of my return from this first trip my employer invited me to meet himself and wife at a restaurant for an oyster supper at his expense.

A few months before the end of my third year I notified my employer that I should leave his employ at the end of December. I had several opportunities to do much better financially during this last year, and at first fully intended to enter the employ of another firm. From the first I hoped eventually to go into business for myself, but I expected to serve a longer apprenticeship. As the close of the year drew near the conviction grew upon me that God wanted me to enter at once upon a business career.

I repeatedly studied over the facts and statistics, and saw that but a very small per cent even of those who started with ample capital and experience succeeded in business, and reasoned that my head must be turned with the success God had given me as solicitor; but the conviction steadily deepened until, in answer to prayer, my thoughts were established, and I obeyed the call of God. When a publisher for the Christian Cynosure was wanted I realized, in some degree at least, why he started me at that time. Shortly before this my father sold his farm at Wheaton, Ill., and moved into the city, and I was living at home again. Just before the close of my term of service on Lake street I found the store at 88 La Salle street, the finest store in the block and on Court House Square, was for rent. The owner, Hon. Thomas Hoyne, would make a heavy discount on regular rates for the four months from January to May, and charge nothing for the fraction of December, which would be a help in starting; so I rented the store, with quite a large one-story building in the rear, for 16 months.

The result has been indicated in a previous article. My father, a superannuated M. E. minister, who had had to give up service a dozen years previously on account of throat trouble, was a very cautious man in business matters, but he had faith enough in his soldier boy to help him limitedly through the first year, though with evident misgivings and fear at the first.

At the end of the first year his confidence in my success had grown, and he became my partner, with the agreement that I should manage the business. As it would sound rather unusual at least to have the firm name Ezra A. Cook and father, it was Ezra A. Cook & Co. until 1880, when my father sold his interest to me.

In another article I will attempt to tell something of the great fire and its results.

LITERATURE.

A NEW DICTIONARY.

The Standard Dictionary, published by Funk & Wagnalls Co., 30 Lafayette Place, New York, is now complete. It is handled in Chicago by the Fuller Book Co., Room 1236, 79 Dearborn street, of which Mr. G. W. Kerr is manager. It is difficult to speak adequately of this great work without seeming to be extravagant. Its beginning was doubtless owing to the expiration of the copyright on the Webster's unabridged, and the original plan was to make a moderate priced dictionary which should be somewhat of an improvement on that useful and popular book. It was thought at the beginning that a year or two would suffice to complete and put it on the market. As the work advanced its scope was widened, until now five years have been used in perfecting it; more than two hundred and forty-seven editors have been employed on it, about fifty readers have aided them by selections of illustrative quotations, almost a million dollars have been expended before the first volume has come from the press, and over three hundred thousand words are spelled, pronounced and defined, seventy-five thousand more than the largest number heretofore included in any dictionary of our language. The work has been commended in the highest possible terms by the professors in our leading educational institutions, by the critics of our leading papers, and by a host of persons distinguished in literature, science, and art.

Considered from every side we are satisfied that it will for many years be the Standard English Dictionary. Others are very valuable, but the character of the editors, the amount of work expended, and the expense incurred, entitle this to a leading place, from which it will be difficult to dislodge it for many years. We can heartily commend it to our readers as a most valuable and satisfactory work.

OBITUARY.

Boston, April 10, 1895.

Editor Cynosure:—Allusion has already been made in your paper to the decease of Isaac Flagg, but it seems due to the memory of that "just man" and to those who survive him that something more be said.

He was born March 20, 1806; was married in 1832; three children gladdened their home; his life was spent in Wellesley; he died March 27, 1895, aged 89 years and 7 days.

He was a man of noble Christian character and lived an exceptionally pure and pious life. Though never addicted to outbreaking sins, he realized, nevertheless, that he was a sinner in the sight of God. Through an experience of deep conviction, he passed into a clear and definite assurance of acceptance in the kingdom of grace and glory. His beloved and devoted wife accepted Christ as her personal Saviour near the same time, and they were together received into the fellowship of the Congregational church in 1836, where their names remained until each in turn entered the church triumphant where two of the lambs from their earthly fold had preceded them.

To Isaac Flagg home meant more than a house with convenient appointments, and the church meant more than a gathering of respectable people for a pleasant hour on the Sabbath. Both the home and the church meant to him a life of honest, earnest, unremitting activity every day in the week. His fidelity to the ordinances of God's house, his attendance at the prayer meeting, his active services in the Sabbath-school, and his devotion to the interest of the church, until compelled by bodily infirmities to relinquish his duties, fully attest his sincerity and love for the Master.

From his beloved daughter, who was the companion of his best as well as of his last days, I have learned something of his home life. Among her earliest memories she recalls the patient instructor diligently teaching his little child her letters. A little later he taught her to read God's holy Word, and associated her with him as his assistant in studying the Sabbath-school lesson, and thus the two minds and hearts were intertwined, the younger, more impressible, unconsciously taking the impress of the stronger, until the foundation of true noble womanhood was firmly laid in the very soul of one who has for years been blessing the world by the sweet, pure thoughts that flow so gracefully from her facile pen.

Outside of the home the probity of Isaac Flagg stands unchallenged, and his benevolence is confessed by all who knew him. Those who knew him best express the conviction that he was never intentionally guilty of a dishonorable act, or of withholding from the needy when in his power to give relief.

As an Abolitionist, he stood almost alone in the time of his early manhood; and he sustained the Prohibition cause by his means and his vote, as he had the cause of justice and liberty long before the war of the rebellion. As soon as his attention was called to the secret lodge system, he detected in it an enemy to the home, to the church and to the equal rights of men, and steadily opposed it until his earthly labors ceased and he entered his heavenly rest.

While his nurse and daughter watched at his side in the early morning hour, the lamp of life went out, and he "slept the sleep of the just," leaving in his example and instructions a priceless heritage, and to his only surviving child precious memories, in comparison with which, in her own words, "All Gould's millions are lighter than the dust of the balance."

NEWMAN GUILD.

Our friend and brother, Dr. Guild, of Wheaton, has been afflicted in the loss of his son Newman, who fell asleep in Jesus shortly after midnight on April 8. Mr. Guild had been sick for more than two years, and had at times been quite ill, but rallying, had seemed for awhile to gather up considerable strength. Last season he painted the home, doing the entire work himself, and seeming to find pleasure and strength in it. The disease, however, was advancing, and for the last two weeks he was apparently near to death. His religious experience during the time of his illness was deepening and widening and brightening, so that during the last days it was very pleasant indeed to be with him and see his sunny smile and hear his cheerful words.

The funeral services were held in the Baptist church, and were conducted by Rev. W. H. Chandler, pastor of the College church, and President Blanchard. The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Guild will sympathize with them in this temporary separation.

How to Make Oatmeal Bags.

Take 5 pounds of oatmeal, ground fine, a half pound of castile soap, reduced to powder, and a pound of powdered Italian orris root. Cut a yard of thin cheesecloth into bags about four inches square, sewing them on the machine and taking care not to leave any untied threads where a break may let the contents ooze out. Mix the soap, oatmeal and orris root thoroughly and fill the bags loosely. Sew up the opening in each and lay them away to be used as required. They are used as a sponge dipped in warm water, making a thick velvet lather and wonderfully softening the skin while the orris imparts a lasting fragrance.

How to Cure Mosquito Bites.

Apply spirits of hartshorn diluted with twice as much water or sal volatile or cologne. If the part is left puffy and swelled after the tingling has abated, rub it with soap liniment. A piece of raw onion is also most efficacious for bites and stings. The following is a cure and a deterrent: A paste made of the plant Pyrethrum roseoeum, mixed with spirits, diluted with twice as much water as spirits. This applied will cure the bite and prevent others, as the odor will keep away the mosquito

How to Make Shoe Dressing at Home.

A soft dressing that is less injurious than the majority of polishes found in the market is made by mixing to a smooth paste vaseline or cosmoline and lampblack. Apply a very little with a flannel cloth and rub in thoroughly. The oil fills up the pores and renders the leather almost waterproof after using it several times. This dressing does not impart a high gloss to the leather, but merely softens and colors it. Where a polish is desired the liquid dressings are preferable.

How to Care For Brushes.

A hairbrush should be washed often enough to keep it thoroughly cleansed. For this soda water or ammonia water must be used and then the wet bristles set downward—do not turn it on its back—and left in the sun to dry. A nail or tooth brush should never be left in the holder with the bristles uppermost. It stands to reason that water will soak into them in time with such treatment and that discoloration and general demoralization will follow.

How to Feed Young Plants.

Don't apply any fertilizer to your plants until they begin to grow. They do not need any until they start into active growth. They are not in a proper condition to make good use of it. In fact, they often injure a plant very much. As soon as growth sets in apply some good plant food, but be careful not to give too much of it at first. Increase the supply as the plant becomes strong and able to assimilate it.

How to Make a Baby's Rattle.

A pretty rattle for a baby is easily constructed by winding a steel or ivory ring with colored ribbon. Sew to this at regular intervals short ends of blending tints in ribbon. Attach tiny bells to the pointed ends of these ribbons.

CLEANSE YOUR BLOOD.

Cleanse the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through your skin in the form of pimples, eruptions and sores. Cleanse it when you find it obstructed or sluggish in the veins. Cleanse it when it is foul. Your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure—health of the system will surely follow. And, remember, whenever your blood needs cleansing, that Hood's Sarsaparilla, and only Hood's, must be the medicine employed. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most prominent blood purifier in the world to day—for it is the best.

"Help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude."—2 Chron. 4: 11.

OBERLIN AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

Much credit is due to Oberlin College that it has steadfastly resisted the influence of the secret college fraternities, and has borne occasional but faithful testimony against the entire secret lodge system. The testimony of the two Congregational churches against Freemasonry stands unrepealed, and is generally responded to. But we cannot but deplore the great decline, if not absolute cessation, of all aggressive opposition to secret societies which have had during the last few years a very rapid increase there. Freemasonry, Oddfellowship, Knights of Pythias, and a host of minor secret orders, including one especially designed for the children, flourish under the very shadow of the college and churches. We have been pained that for years the First church, Mr. Finney's, has been annually opened to meetings of the G. A. R., and especially that one of the professors in the Theological Seminary, and an editor of the Bibliotheca Sacra, has recently united with that organization. Aside from the tendency of the G. A. R. to promote militarism, a tendency that is manifested by the effort to get the military drill into the public schools, the fact that it is a secret order, and membership in it is an endorsement of the whole secret system, makes such membership to be greatly deplored.

RELIGION AND THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In the able article by Dr. Lyman Abbott in the April Century, on the relation of religion to public education, he lays down the following propositions which he carefully elaborates:

1. That it is the right and duty of the state to provide for general education.

2. That it is not within the scope of its obligation to teach religion. This duty is especially committed to the church. In proof he cites the apostolic commission, "Go disciple all nations, teaching them to observe whatsoever I have commanded you." As the state has no rightful jurisdiction over the church, so it has no right to take its place in religious teachings.

3. That morality is an essential element of practical education and cannot be disassociated from it with safety to the state or with due regard to the rights and interests of the individual.

4. That all true morality has its basis in religion, and hence a certain amount of religious truth must inevitably be brought into all secular instruction. Where the line is to be drawn and how much or how little of religion should come into our public schools he does not undertake to determine, but thinks that a correct adjustment will be reached by every intelligent teacher.

We could wish that so forcible a statement of principles had been a little more specific in practical details. Is it too much to say that there are elementary facts in moral science that are as well established and that commend themselves to all minds just as truly as the facts of science. The existence of God, the principle of justice, and the duty of universal benevolence are as evident as that the earth turns on its axis or that it revolves round the sun. When Balaam, the son of Beor—heathen though he was—made all human duty to consist in doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly before God (Micha 6: 8) he taught the same things that Moses and the prophets have taught. It is what the moral sense of humanity universally affirms. But these are the truths that are emphasized by Christianity and which find their best practical illustration in the life of Jesus of Nazareth. No Jew, Mohammedan, pagan or agnostic can find any fault with these principles or their practical illustration in the life of Christ. It would seem, then, to be very clear that while there is no place for dogmatism in the school-room, yet all of its teachings ought, in the higher and better sense, to be distinctively religious.

Whether the Bible should have a place in our school-rooms or be rigidly excluded, will depend on what men find to be true as to its practical influence on the mind and morals of mankind. If it has been found to be demoralizing; if the people best acquainted with its teachings and most carefully trained in its precepts are the most debased in morals and the lowest in civilization, then surely it should be counted out. If on the contrary, the very reverse of this is true; and if, confessedly, the New Testament is the best text-book of morality, then its prohibition is not only folly, it is moral suicide.

We know of no good reason why the Koran or the writings of Confucious might not be found in our school libraries. To suffer our youth to have free access to all sources of information and to require them to believe and adopt whatever they read are two very different things. Free access to all books not immoral in their tendency, is one of the best safeguards against ignorance and bigotry. But to admit Mohammed and Confucius, and to exclude Moses, David, Isaiah and Christ, is to be intolerant in the interest of error, and bigoted in opposition to truth.

FREEMASONRY AND FREE GOVERNMENT.

The unblushing way in which Masons will state things that they know are untrue, and that they know are known to be untrue, is amazing.

A friend in Salem, Mass., sends us some clippings from a new paper published there, The Standard. In reference to the one given below it is not necessary to say much, it is so self-contradicting.

The first statment "Masonry has ever encouraged loyalty to the government where that government was free"—is contradicted by the second, which is true. "A majority of the Masons in the South were opposed to the Union," and the Union was the freest government on earth. The next statement is important:

> Masonry, while non-sectarian and non-partisan, has ever encouraged loyalty to the government—where that government was free. It is true a majority of the Masons in the South, during the civil war, were opposed to the Union, but it is equally true that they were ever ready to recognize the sign, and to render all the relief in their power to a brother though a foeman.
> In view of these facts it is not a little startling to find that the captain-general of Cuba issued an order last Thursday prohibiting the meeting of Freemasons throughout the island. The inference from this is that Spain's representative in Cuba regards all Masons as Protestants, and all Protestants as in favor of the revolutionists. In this he may be right; but if he imagines that his edict will close the lodges and prevent the assembling of the order, he is doomed to disappointment. Masonry cannot be crushed out by tyrants, nor weakened by the fulminations of prelates.
> This blow at the order in Cuba will at once turn the attention of American Masons to a consideration of the condition of their brethren in the Qeeen of the Antilles, and men, hitherto indifferent to the revolution there, will at once take an interest, and side with those who have won the fear and hatred of Spain.
> Masons meet in the shadow of the Vatican, nor can all the troops of Spain stop their meeting in the lodges of Havanna.

THE MASONIC GOD.

It is universally conceded to be true that men become like the object or objects that they worship. Men who worship God in Christ become humble in heart and holy in life. Those who worship

> "Gods, implacable unjust.
> Whose attributes are rage, revenge and lust," become lustful and wicked. In the words of the Psalmist "They that make them are like unto them; so is every one that trusteth in them."

Now the god of Masonry is a lie according to their own terms. The name they give to their god is Grand Architect of the Universe, but they cast out Christ who "made the worlds." The Bible tells us that the Gentiles "sacrifice to devils and not to God." Everyone who knows anything about it knows that Egyptian worship was idolatry and Gentile worship. Yet in the Philadelphia Public Ledger we read:

"The Masonic ceremonies incident to the completion of the interior decoration of the Egyptian Hall, in the Masonic temple, were considered of such importance as to warrant the holding of an 'emergent communication' of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania.

"The Grand Master explained briefly the occasion of the emergent communication of the Grand Lodge. A great work has been accomplished here, transforming the old hall, so that it is practically a new place. We do not re-dedicate it; a building once dedicated to Masonic uses is forever dedicated; but it is proper that the Grand Lodge should thus formally take possession. And in these solemn ceremonies we should remember that these are not merely so many forms and combinations of color, copied aimlessly from Egyptian monuments, but contain Masonic teachings which should be a subject for study and source of interest for all the brethren who may meet here in the future.

"Grand Master MacCalla went on to speak of some of the leading symbols and their significance, urging his hearers never to lose sight of the thing signified by the type or sign. The massive style of the Egyptian architecture, representing the omnipotence of Deity; the cruz ansata, or winged Tau, the emblem of immortality; the winged globe, scarabæi; the hawk, etc., the varied emblems of the central luminary, the sun, Osiris; the pyramids, the embalmed bodies within, showing the ancient faith in the resurrection from the dead, and the various features of the Egyptian mythology were pointed out and their parallels in Freemasonry indicated.

"Samuel W. Wray then, on behalf of the temple committee, formally accepted the trust. The Grand Lodge may well feel proud that it owns such a grand and majestic edifice, capable of such high adornment, and also that it has brethren who have the heads to conceive and the means to execute, to such a high degree, the teachings of Freemasonry. Go on in the glorious work so well begun. Let us push forward this noble enterprise, and not rest until it is a temple indeed and in truth. May the Grand Architect of the Universe look down upon us and bless us in all our undertakings."

"Lest thou shouldst ponder the path of life, her ways are moveable;" and in Boston this same institution poses in a different way:

"A large representative body of Knights Templar, each of whom was a Freemason, and all of whom by uniform and the motto: 'In hoc signo vinces," on sword hilt and belt, showed they were believers in Christianity, assembled for religious services at Music Hall in this city. In a similar way Knights throughout the land showed by solemn devotion their reverence and respect for Easter day."

How a Latin motto on their military uniform can show that these men are believers in Christianity, is hard to see, since Christ said "put up thy sword into its sheath;" "they that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

Is not their meeting in the Christian church once in the year rather like the custom of thugs and bandits in the old world, who are in the habit of taking the sacrament before they start out on their errands of sin and death?

LODGERY—CHRISTIANITY—POPERY.

The sacred record tells of Jesus—the great sacrifice on Calvary falsely accused as a criminal—on the cross between two thieves who were guilty. The fact may be regarded as having existed in every age of the world since that all-important event, for it has been the experience of Christians to be misrepresented and persecuted even to the death by the combined powers of the popular religions of the states and their governments. Is it so to-day in our country? Many would revolt at the idea, but how shall we regard popery and lodgery when they both so grossly misrepresent the simple Gospel of the Son of God who died for our sins, and was raised for our justification—the belief of which gives peace with God, and the hope of life and immortality.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Brother H. H. Hinman, who has been an active worker in the anti-secret cause for so many years, is still at work. He is spending the time until the annual meeting in Chicago.

—I. W. Margrave, Hiawatha, Kansas, gives the Cynosure the following good word: "As long as I live and can pay for it I feel that I must have the good old Cynosure. I loved the founder so much I have his likeness on a fly leaf of my Bible. When I want to look at the face of a man that had the courage of his convictions, and was not afraid of the face of man, I turn over the leaf and take a look at Jonathan Blanchard."

—Brother Joseph Smith of Maine writes, "Please continue my paper; notwithstanding the hard times I do not know how to get along without it. God bless the forces behind it, is my prayer." The most encouraging word that we get from our correspondents is, that they pray for the success of our great and important work. Christ was and is the truth, and if we are faithful to the truth, and our readers help by their prayers, there is a great victory before us.

—M. N. Butler sends a characteristic article from his vigorous pen, which our readers shall have soon. The Catholic News reads the Cynosure, and comments on Mr. Butler's article of recent date.

—Bro. H. E. Hunter writes from Hinsdale, N. H.: "Returning home after three days out of reach of mail and papers, having read the Cynosure, and before even glancing at the daily papers, let me say that, for one, I deem it very desirable that Mr. Cook continue his reminiscences." This, we suppose, is a response to Mr. Cook's remark that if desired he would at some future time say something about the workings of Masonry in the army.

SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM OF SUBJECTS.

The following list of subjects for papers and addresses is prepared by the committee as suggestive to those invited to speak at the conference to be held in connection with the annual meeting. We insert it in the Cynosure, hoping it will suggest contributions to some of our writers who have not been heard from lately:

1. Secrecy as a Principle of Organization.
2. The Prayer Meeting and the Lodge.
3. The Theology of Freemasonry.
4. Contrast Between the Lodge and the Church.
5. Civil Government and Secret Societies.
6. Unity of the Ancient Mysteries and Freemasonry.
7. The Secret Beneficial Societies—Their Relation to Lodgeism.
8. Lodges and Revivals.
9. Present Duty of the Church Concerning Secret Societies.
10. The Holy Spirit, Our Leader.
11. The Word of God, Our Guide.
12. The Exaltation of Christ as Lord and Saviour, Our Purpose.
13. The Sabbath Question and the Lodge.
14. The Temperance Cause and Lodgeism.
15. Patriotic Societies—Should they be Secret?
16. Have our Best Men been Masons?
17. The Clan-na-Gael.
18. The Jesuit.
19. The Mormon.
20. The Highbinders.
21. College Secret Societies.
22. Secret Insurance Societies.

ISAAC FLAGG.

The following resolutions of sympathy for Miss Elizabeth E. Flagg, on the death of her father, Mr. Isaac Flagg, were adopted by the Wellesley Woman's Christian Temperance Union at their last meeting, April 9, 1895:

Whereas, Our beloved secretary, Miss Elizabeth E. Flagg, has recently met with the greatest sorrow of her life, in the loss of her venerable and revered father in his ninetieth year, therefore

Resolved, That while as a Union we enter into her deep affliction, and tenderly sympathize with her in this irreparable loss, we also rejoice in the rich consolations so abundantly hers in this sore bereavement—that her beloved father was so long spared to be the sunshine and inspiration of her "shut-in" life, and that with his translation to the blissful home above, bright beams from the resurrection morn not only light up his grave but kindly fall with sacred joy and healing upon her sorrowing heart, so that beyond her highest expectation she is comforted in his perfected happiness.

Resolved, That we, too, as a Union, feel that a pleasant earthly fellowship is for a little while broken, to be renewed in the "Father's house of many mansions"; we shall miss his kindly smile and genial words of welcome with which he used to vacate his chair and room for our occupancy, when able, and when increasing infirmities prevented, remained listening with quiet interest to our prayers and discussions. His long life of Christian integrity, Christ-like meekness, self-distrust and firm faith in God has been a most worthy example to his friends and neighbors. A good man has passed away. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Resolved, That we also extend our heartfelt sympathies to the relatives and friends who share in this bereavement, and though unknown to this Union, invoke for them the sustaining grace of God. And

Resolved. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Miss Flagg, our still absent secretary, and that they be published in the Wellesley Review, the Woman's Voice, and the Christian Cynosure.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

The Lodge Lamp sent to Cynosure subscribers last week had as a chief object the witnessing for our Lord and Master before a much larger audience than we are now doing.

This can be done in two ways. The National Christian Association offers you a weekly paper, the Christian Cynosure, and a monthly, the Lodge Lamp. Hence every one who feels his responsibility to God to do all that is possible for his neighbor has an opportunity to use some of his benevolences in helping to warn against the altars of Cain set up in the secret lodges of our country.

The first proposition is to anyone who sends $3 to this office before the first of May next, with the names of two new subscribers for the Cynosure and five names for the Lodge Lamp—making seven yearly subscriptions—the Association will send the above papers for one year.

The second proposition is to anyone who will send $3 to this office before the first of next May with names of three subscribers for the New York Tribune and twenty names for the Lodge Lamp—making twenty-three yearly subscriptions—the papers named will be sent for one year.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

A national anti saloon league.—Sabbath observance in Washington.—Southern Baptist Association.—Romanism and the Republic.—Missions.—Hall of History.—Patents.

A national anti-saloon league will soon exist, if the plans of the members of the Washington league do not miscarry. The plan as a whole—the details have not been worked out—is to take in all of the temperance organizations in the United States, and as many of the churches and religious organizations as can be persuaded to join, making a monster army, under a single head, which can be thrown solidly against the liquor traffic, thus accomplishing more than is now accomplished by all these branches working independently of each other. A meeting is to be held in May for the purpose of considering a plan for the formation of this new league, and it is expected that the plan will be adopted and that invitations will be sent to every church, temperance and reform organization in the country asking that they actively co-operate in the movement by appointing representatives to take part in the formation of local leagues which shall send delegates to a national league. The present idea is that this meeting for the organization of a national league shall be held in Washington during the next session of Congress, and that the first work of the national league shall be to try to obtain some legislation from Congress for the restriction of the liquor traffic. The local league is now trying to break up the illegal sale of liquor to minors, which it is charged at least one-half of the licensed saloons in Washington are engaged in. How difficult this task is may be judged from a statement made at the last meeting of the league, to the effect that the liquor men were given more attention and better treatment in the office of the Attorney for the District of Columbia than representatives of the league. It is to this official that the league has to look for prosecution of violators of the liquor laws.

The Churchman's League of the District of Columbia proposes waging an active campaign before Congress for needed legislation to compel a stricter observance of the Sabbath at the national capital, and it is going to have the active support of the Y. M. C. A., the W. C. T. U., the Christian Endeavorers, the Epworth League and other minor church organizations. At present nearly all of the confectionery stores, bakeries, fruit stores and cigar and tobacco stores are kept open on Sunday, and there is, according to the officials, no legal way to make them close. The Churchman's League will have a bill carefully drawn, for the cessation of all work or business on Sunday, excepting such as shall be specified as absolutely necessary. Copies of this bill will be put in the hands of every minister in the city and in the hands of the officers of all Christian organizations, inviting criticism and amendment. A meeting will then be called to perfect the bill and to agree upon a plan of campaign, which shall include the endorsement of every church and church organization in the city. When the bill goes before Congress with that united support it is believed that it can be pushed through.

Considerable talk has been caused by that call for all the churches in the Southern Baptist Association to send delegates to a convention to be held in Washington, May 9, for the avowed purpose of forming a Southern Baptist Young People's Union.

Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian church, preached to one of the largest congregations ever in that church, Sunday night, on "Romanism and the Republic," taking John 18: 36—"My kingdom is not of this world"—for his text. After the sermon the congregation unanimously adopted a series of resolutions, prepared by Dr. Easton, denouncing the proposal of the papal ablegate in this country (Mgr. Satolli) that the supremacy of the Pope shall be recognized by this government in sending an envoy to the Vatican, declaring it to be insulting to Americans, and that it is the duty of Americans to demand the expulsion of Satolli, as a plotter of treason. The resolutions were ordered to be engrossed, and a copy sent to President Cleveland.

Justice Brewer, of the Supreme Court, delivered an address at the celebration of the silver anniversary of the foreign missions committee of the Society of the Covenant, strongly supporting the Saviour's words—"Go ye into all lands and preach the Gospel to every nation," which he declared every Christian should constantly treasure in their memory.

The fund for the erection of the Hall of History of the American University took a jump of $5,000 several days ago, through the generosity of a California friend. $106,000 of the $150,000 required is now on hand, and Bishop Hurst and Dr. Beiler are hopeful that the remainder will be secured before May 22, when the semi-annual meeting of the board of trustees of the university will be held.

List of patents granted to Illinois inventors this week, reported by C. A. Snow &. Co., solicitors of American and foreign patents, opposite the U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C.:

R. H. Avery, Peoria, planter; J. A. Boehler, Carlinville, corn harvester; J. J. Callendar, Genesco, harrow; S. Fackler, Astoria, combined end-gate and shoveling-board; G. W. Furrey, Mount Morris, wire-fence stay; E. F. Gooding, Elgin, demagnetizer; C. R. Hanson, Savanna, revolving sign; H. Iwan, Streator, earth-auger; J. Levey, Aurora, tank; J. McPhail, Blue Island, wind-board adjuster; M. C. Niles, Oak Park, rail joint; H. Oldendorph, Belleville, plow; C. A. Powell, Peru, cash-register; G. B. Robbins, Hinsdale, refrigerator-car; H. D. Russell, Winslow, thill-coupling; M. Sattley, Springfield, cultivator; J. A Shimp, Ridgeville, corn-shocker; J. H. Smith, Belleville, lubricator; M. N. Tomblin, Rockford, coin-controlled vending-machine; O. J. Travis, Joliet, derailing switch; C. V. Walls, Arcola, gas engine. *

tor of the church, introduced me, and also managed the collection. The Post-Intelligencer, the leading daily of the State, had a special reporter on hand, who gave the fairest report of the meeting of any paper yet noticing my work. He gave as near an exposition of the orders as he dare. The audience was very orderly, and anyone could easily observe that the large majority were in deep sympathy with the work.

I cannot speak too highly of these Lutheran pastors who invited me to their city and church, and gave me such hearty support. They were pleased with the meeting and anxious that I should come again.

The Free Methodists and United Presbyterians, Reformed Presbyterians, Swedish Methodists and hosts of others were present to cheer us on. Rev. M. H. Nichols was in the front rank of the fight to sustain our cause. We feel sure that good was accomplished here.

I called next day on Rev. J. I. Frasier of the United Ppesbyterian church, who, with his family, showed me much kindness. I secured nine Cynosure subscribers here. I bope soon to meet any of these faithful people again.

IDLENESS AND CRIME.

ONE BEGETS THE OTHER, SAYS MADISON C. PETERS.

In England Men Who Live Without Work Are Called Gentlemen; We Call Them Tramps — Laziness Is Disgusting — The Lights of History Were All Workers.

Seme time ago I sent the following letter, which explains itself:

My Dear Sir—For the sake of the many young men whom I am able to reach from the pulpit, the platform and through the press, will you help me to point out to them the traps that are set for them in New York city? I want to get facts and opinions concerning the dangers which lie in their way. I want my views to be strengthened by the opinions of successful men, of men who have become conspicuous in the community for success by honest, upright and down square, manly dealing. The opinions of such men will have great weight with the young. So will you please tell the young men, through me, what you consider their fiercest foes—intemperance, bad companionship, gambling, etc.? I know how hard the city grinds, that you are already overburdened, and if you have not time to give reasons for your views, or any illustrations which have come under your notice, just indicate in a few words the evils which cause so many young men to fall. Yours in behalf of the young men,

Madison C. Peters.

I received replies from ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt, General Horace Porter, General O. O. Howard, Mr. John Claflin and others. The suggestions which these men of affairs give and the dangers which they have pointed out will form the foundations of our talks with young men through these columns for several months. We aim to be intensely practical and hope to help all who read this series of articles. While some of my correspondents emphasized particular dangers, which we shall especially note in separate articles, they all united in condemnation of the idler, declaring him to be a criminal prodigal, a prolific author of want and shame, a confused workshop for the devil to tinker in, a nuisance in the world who needed abatement for the public good.

An alleged European nobleman traveling in this country said to an American, "You have no gentlemen in this country." "What do you mean, sir?" replied the American. "I mean men who can live without work." "Oh, yes," said the American, "we have that kind of gentlemen in this country, but we call them tramps." Idleness is rapidly becoming an ingredient in the upper current of our society, an element which was scarcely known and never countenanced in the days of our grandfathers. We are today tolerating a numerous train of gentlemen loafers, nice, straight, polished walking sticks, who are living off the earnings of their fathers until they can find a girl who is fool enough to marry them, and then they will live off her father.

Idleness Disgraceful.

I want to impress upon the minds of the boys and young men who read these columns that idleness is disgraceful. One of the most disgusting sights of every city, town and village is the street corner caucus, the many young men hanging around with nothing to do. Oh, what a spectacle that will be when we shall be called before the judgment throne and the physician will come and say, "Lord, I went about relieving pain;" and the lawyer will say, "I righted wrongs;" and the preacher will say, "I made the world better;" and the merchant will say, "I made money that I might have the means of doing good;" and the mechanic will say, "I toiled from dewy morn to dusky eve to support my wife and children;" and Christ will show his hands, scarred with the world's redemption, and then a fine young gentleman, fashionably attired, elaborately combed and disgustingly perfumed, with his hands in his pockets, will stroll up and with impudence on his face, hard as brass, will say, "Lord, I was a loafer; I had nothing to do."

The lazy man irritates me; he hinders me; he fills me with insufferable disgust; he is a deadbeat, a sort of dead person that cannot be buried. I want you to take home to yourself what I have said. Don't try to persuade yourself that the cap doesn't fit you. Honestly acknowledge its fitness. Go, work. The secret of making men is to put them to work and keep them at it. Fathers, set your boys to work, give them trades, put the instruments of manmaking into their hands, and tell them to work out their manhood. If you want to deprive your boys of a respectable manhood, bring them up in idleness. Look about you and see the men of worth; they early buckled on the armor of labor, assumed responsibilities, pushed their way to the summit from the bottom by hard work. This is the way men are made. Men are not born; babies are born; men are made. Employment makes men. Our great and good men, the bright and shining lights of history, are earnest pleaders for industry.

Ah, little they know of true happiness, they whom satiety fills,
Who flung on the rich breast of luxury eat of the rankness that kills,
But blessed that child of humanity, happiest man among men,
Who with hammer or chisel or pencil, with rudder or plowshare or pen,
Laboreth ever and ever;
He the true ruler and conqueror, he the king of his race,
Who nerveth his arm for life's combat and looks the strong world in the face.

Learning a Trade.

It is a rule in the imperial family of Germany that every young man shall learn a trade, going through a regular apprenticeship till he is able to do good journey work. This is required because in the event of unforeseen changes it is deemed necessary to a manly independence that the heir apparent or a prince of the blood should be conscious of ability of making his own way in the world. This is an honorable custom worthy of universal American emulation. The Jews wisely held the maxim that every youth, whatever his position in life, should learn some trade. Franklin says, "He that hath a trade hath an estate."

Save Your Strength.

You are old before your time. Why? Ask somebody who follows you closely in your daily methods, and the natural answer will be, "Because you stand too much."

Women fairly "stand" themselves into a condition attended by wrinkles, gray hairs and complete mental exhaustion. It is little wonder that naturally robust constitutions are ruined long before their owners reach maturity. Nor is it surprising that two-thirds of the sisterhood look like walking ghosts.

It is distinctly a feminine fad to stand. Watch thoughtless 16 as she administers the 100 strokes night and morning which are to give her tresses the luster and fineness of rare satin. Does she draw a chair or stool up before her mirror? Not a bit of it. She stands throughout the whole operation and follows up this nerve destroying whim by standing during her toileting, from the time she puts the first hairpin into her topknot to the moment when the last glove button slips into place. Stand, stand, stand. Women there are who actually lace up their boots standing. They prop one foot on a chair, balance themselves on the other and perform the tedious task with never a thought of the vast amount of nerve force expended. It is one long stand with the average housewife, from kitchen to garret. To a certain extent it may be necessary in the performance of daily duties, but over and beyond necessity it grows to be, unconsciously, a most unhealthy habit.

"What!" asks an energetic specimen of femininity; "would you foster laziness in womankind?"

Yes, I would. I think in the long run the lazy woman gets the best of life's sweets—that is, if you call laziness an effort to treasure one's vitality so as to avoid being at 25 a complete wreck, a burden to all who are thrown in contact with you. Somebody has to pay up for these standing indiscretions in time, but usually the person most concerned is not the only sufferer. Family and friends become targets for the pettishness of a shattered system.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Brass Lacquer.

Almost every one has about the house some articles of brass that are discolored and ugly looking, but are for divers reasons retained and would be prized were it not for their unattractive appearance and the extremely unpleasant odor that attaches to anything brought in contact with them. It has been asserted by an eminent chemist that a very durable and handsome color may be put upon brass by a very simple process. Dissolve one dram each of sal ammoniac and verdigris in a quart of water. Let this stand overnight, covered from the dust, then add three pints of water and strain through a fine cloth. Clean the brass thoroughly from any greasy substance that may attach to it. This is best done in a sal soda bath, after which the piece must be rinsed in clear hot water, then dried and heated over a charcoal fire until the moistened finger will give the hissing sound so familiar to those who use laundry irons. Immediately coat the surface of the brass with the prepared liquid, laid on with a brush or a soft rag free from lint. As soon as the coating is dry apply another. It is sometimes necessary to put on 10 or 15 coats, and 20 are more desirable. This gives a beautiful brownish color not unlike gold bronze. If the coats are thoroughly dried between applications, the finish is exceedingly durable. It certainly has the merit of being inexpensive and entirely does away with the disagreeable odor. Although the application of so many coats seems tedious, yet they are put on with great rapidity when one begins, and the finished article is so handsome that it well repays the trouble. —New York Ledger.

Delicate Laundering.

The laundering of the many doilies, bureau scarfs and small draperies now so plentiful in the modern house is really quite an item. A rumbled centerpiece detracts from the beauty of the dainty lamp upon it, and thus the housewife finds another care added to the already full list of duties. Sometimes it is necessary to do this laundering one's self, and at all times it is wise to direct it carefully.

Plain white toilet cloths should be washed in a hot suds, and if badly soiled and yellowed should be boiled for two minutes. Then the cloths should be rinsed thoroughly in clean, cold water and finally dipped in slightly blued water. A rubbing board should not be used in this work, but the soiled spots may be rubbed hard in the hands. Muslin and scrim must be handled gently and be squeezed in the water rather than rubbed, even by the hands. Scrim and muslin should be stiffened by dipping them into thin, boiled starch. They should be thoroughly dried, then dampened and rolled up tightly for an hour before ironing. When scrim or muslin is ironed, be careful to pull out the edges straight, and having the flatiron clean press out the ruffles or lace edges first.

Linen and denim, whether embroidered in white or colors, do not need any starch. They should be ironed when damp and then will be sufficiently stiff. Wash them in lukewarm suds, rinse carefully and hang them where they will dry quickly, but not where the sun will pour down on them. Do not use hot water, especially when colored silks or linens have been used, and hasten the laundering as much as possible. Iron embroidered cloths on the wrong side till perfectly dry.—New York Times.

Good Word For Twin Beds.

Twin beds are a hygienic institution of the day. Especially in the nursery should this sleeping method hold good. Tuck two children beneath the same sheets, one healthy and strong, the other weak and delicate, and what is the result? The puny child feeds upon the vitality of its companion, sapping the energy of his body, until he becomes irritable, ill and enervated.

Some one has said: "The sooner single sleeping becomes an irrefragable law, the less humanity will have to regret."

Certainly manufacturers are doing their best to further this health notion by offering us the daintiest and most hygienic of beds. Heavy mahogany affairs have been replaced by light, airy looking beds in iron and brass. These enameled to harmonize with the drapery tints of the apartment carry out a peculiar color scheme to perfection.

In all well regulated households, even to the servants' room, twin bedsteads, where there are two occupants to a room, show the accepted sleeping order.

It is the family where double sleeping has not given way to later day hygienic plans whose members are marked by sallow skins, fishy eyes, devitalized limbs and brain torpor.—Exchange.

Cost of Living.

It has long been maintained that in the average American home the cost of living —that is, of the food supply—is at last 100 per cent greater than it need be. Experiment has demonstrated this time and time again, but many housekeepers, especially among those who have the greatest need to practice economy, cannot be brought to a realization of the extravagance of their manner of cooking.

In many public schools physiology is now one branch in the course of study. This affords an opportunity for the intelligent teacher to impart to our future housekeepers some knowledge of the relative values of foods, and with this knowledge as a foundation we will probably learn some day to utilize many food producers that are now wasted. The cooking schools are doing much to bring about that time, by showing us how to prepare appetizing meals from what our mothers would have thrown away, and also how, in a pinch, to serve the same article of food every day for a week, but prepared in so many entirely different ways that the head of the house does not complain of monotony.—Womankind.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 28. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Communion with Christ.—John xiv, 18-23. (Suggestion, A meeting for prayer only.)

Prayer is not only an offering up of our desires unto God for things agreeable to His will, but it is also communion and intercourse with God, and with Christ when requests may not be the subject in our thoughts. In the Old Testament dispensation God dwelt between the cherubim on the mercy seat, and there He gave audience as a prince on his throne, there He communed with the representative of the people. This typified His willingness to be reconciled to us and to keep up communion with us, in and by the mediation of Christ. Christ has come, and the shadow has passed away, and in its place we now have the reality, and not only the representative of the people, but all the people may have sweet and intimate communion, fellowship and intercourse with their divine Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

This communion with Christ is heart to heart communion between Christ and the believer. That it may be possible Christ abides in the heart of His disciples, and it is here that they hold communion with Him, as friend with friend. This mystical union between Christ and the believer is something that the world cannot understand, because it does not fulfill the conditions necessary to experience it. After the resurrection the world was not to see Him, but He was to manifest Himself unto His disciples, and this manifestation does not refer simply to His appearances after the resurrection, but to His dwelling in the heart of the believer, even after His ascension, and there manifesting Himself unto him. On earth it is Christ who makes His abode with the believer. In heaven the believer will make his abode with Christ, and thus the fellowship between them will be perpetual.

Three conditions are mentioned by Christ as necessary to be fulfilled before He will reveal Himself unto us or before He will take up His dwelling place in our souls. We must love Him; we must obey His commandments; we must be loved by His Father.

The devotee of the world does not fulfill these and does not enjoy the raptures of communion with Christ. These requirements are easy of fulfillment; they are reasonable in every way, and we should fulfill them that this great joy may be ours.

This announcement of Christ to His disciples that though absent in the body He would still be with them must have brought great joy to them. He was about to leave them, and they feared forever. What blessedness it must have been to them, therefore, to know that He would still dwell with them and commune with them! Christ is absent from us in body. Still He will dwell with us, still He will commune with us, if we will have Him. Let us open the doors of our hearts for Him. Let us constantly hold sweet and blessed communion with Him.

The Spirit of Love.

A spontaneous, glad, willing spirit of love and reverence, of trust and devotion—this is the life of all religion, as it is everywhere the life of all noble sentiments, of all worthy action, as it constitutes the sacredness of the child's obedience, the glory of the patriot's sacrifice, the inspiration of heroism and labor like that of Paul—not counting the cost.—Dr. Chapin.

Making the World Better.

As between the two methods of making the world better—that which works on the environment, and that which works for spiritual culture—we believe the latter must ever be the main dependence. Yet a wise voice seems ever to admonish us, "This ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."—Christian Register.

Work For Moravian Endeavorers.

The good work done last year by the Moravian Endeavorers has prompted the church authorities to assign to them another special field for this year—namely, the relief of the indigent Indians at and near the Ramona mission, Banning, Cal. There is great need among these Indians, and a splendid field for work is offered.

Powerless For Good.

A home where the Bible is never touched except to be dusted, where no prayer is ever voiced, where no mention is ever made of Him whose words have changed the course of empires, such a home is deserving of pity. It is nerveless and powerless for good.—D. O. Mears, D. D.

Christian Endeavor Gossip.

Since the state convention in October nearly 140 societies have joined the Pennsylvania union.

Kansas City local union is thinking of instituting noon prayer meetings in the business portion of the city.

Eight languages are regularly heard in the meetings of Chicago local societies — Welsh, Norwegian, Swedish, Dutch, German, Bohemian, Chinese and English.

One of the active members of the Presbytcrian society of Union, S. C., a young lady, made the rather remarkable record during 1894 of attending every Sunday morning service, Sunday school service, church prayer meeting and meeting of her society held during the whole year.

Scranton is already pushing its claims for the Pennsylvania state convention of 1896.

Christian Endeavor societies contributed $7,137.56 to the board of foreign missions of the Presbytorian church between May 1, 1894, to Jan. 1, 1895.

Two hundred more Junior societies, and there will be 8,000 on the rolls.

The Endeavorers aboard the Charleston are founding a seaman's mission at Nagasaki, Japan.

The Denver societies have been conducting a revival that has resulted in gracious showers of blessing to the whole city.

York, Pa., has between 20,000 and 30,000 inhabitants, and one out of every eight of these is a Christian Endeavorer.

There is a prosperous Christian Endeavor society in a Kansas insane asylum. It is composed of the officers and attendants and represents six denominations.

The Rochester local union has established a Christian Home bureau that is doing admirably in providing respectable boarding places for the young people who go to the city as strangers.

ABSTAINERS THE BEST RISKS.

Briton Life Association Reduces Premiums to Nondrinkers.

Statistical observations made in 1837 among British troops in India gave the following results: The daily percentage of invalids among the members of temperance societies was 3.65, while for the remaindor of the troops it was 10.20, or nearly three times as great. The average annual mortality in England for all ages between 15 and 70 years is about 20 per 1,000. Among insured lives it is about 11 per 1,000, while in the Temperance Provident institution, after an experience of eight years and with several lives about 70 years of age, the average mortality has been only 6 per 1,000.

The Briton Life association has made an annual reduction of 10 per cent upon the premiums of all who have been total abstainers for two years. It is a question whether an occasional spree, with entire abstinence between, would not be less injurious than to be constantly absorbing alcoholic poison in small quantities.

What are the moral and application of these facts? Just this. An order like ours should never receive into membership any who has crossed the line and who even occasionally drinks to excess. Moreover, the nearer we can come to the standard of total abstinence the better it will be. Quality is more important than quantity. Total abstainers are, other things being equal, the best risks. Total abstinence from all that intoxicates is the best rule for every one.—Irish World.

No Business Wants the Toper.

A young fellow who is rising above the level to which intoxicants early brought him and seems likely to join the ranks of useful mon ere long makes a good point in a recent letter to a friend: "I am getting strength and trying to get where in a year or two they will not look on me as a person who is not likely to stay sober, but rather as one whom they can have confidence in. A drunkard has up hill work of it in business. The fact is, no business wants him unless it is the saloon, and the saloon keeper can make so many to order that I guess he is not particular in catering to a confirmed toper. There is not so much profit in that kind of a man as in a young fellow just starting."—Watch Tower.

MAKES THE MUSCLES FEEBLE.

Athletes In Training Are Not Allowed Alcoholic Drinks.

Much has been said on the question, "Does alcohol enable one to do more work?" At first alcohol may give a slight and short renewal of strength, but it is only for the moment. It is rapidly followed by a diminished ability for work; hence, men who are in training for boat racing, baseball, foot racing and other sports, where great exertion is called for, are never allowed to use alcoholic liquors.

Instinct and experience have taught this to uncivilized people. The Indian porters of South America, when they travel on their hard journeys, with heavy loads upon their backs, are careful not to take a drop of alcohol. Experience teaches them they can do their severe work better without it.

However deceptively prepared or diluted, alcohol is always a poison, and when it enters the human system it is always on its mission of death. Scientists now tell us that in alcohol there is not a particle of nutriment nor any principle of a negative quality. Consequently, there can be no such thing as moderation in use of alcoholic beverages. Its only effect is to produce delirium by unnatural excitement of the nerves, corrosion of the mucous membrane and the tissues, and a blunting and deadening of the moral sense. This is followed by paralysis or stupor, with congestion and derangement of all the vital organs, and finally, death.—Union Signal.

SOCIAL WHISKY DRINKING.

The Workman Robs His Family For the Sake of "Good Fellowship."

The Iowa Temperance Advocate says some very practical things regarding drinking for the sake of "good fellowship." The following is an extract: If you are indulging in the use of liquors out of good fellowship, just stop and think what a good fellow you are. By the sweat of your brow six days in the week you accumulate a certain sum of money. A half dozen of your colaborers each indulge in a like number of days of brow moisture for the same purpose and with the same result—a given amount of the coin of the realm in each pocket.

Together you visit the gilded rum palace of the fellow who doesn't earn any bread in the way you have done. He hasn't a commodity to sell that can possibly do one of you a particle of good. You rob yourselves, each other and your families by your interchange of treating favors under the plea of good fellowship. That is the worst good fellowship known, but you have shown your good fellowship for the saloon keepor; you have helped him to pay his mulct and corporation tax; you have helped to build his elegant home and to clothe his dependent ones in silks and satins. Your good fellowship has put him and his family beyond the line of worry. What about your own "Betsy and the baby?" What has been taken from them in the deal and given to the others?

How Alcohol Warms.

A patient was arguing with his doctor on the necessity of his taking a stimulant. He urged that he was weak and needed it. Said he: "But, doctor, I must have some kind of a stimulant. I am cold, and it warms me."

"Precisely," came the doctor's crusty answer. "See here. This stick is cold," taking up a stick of wood from the box beside the hearth and tossing it into the fire. "Now it is warm, but is the stick benofited?"

The sick man watched the wood first send out little puffs of smoke and then burst into a flame and replied: "Of course not. It is burning itself."

"And so are you when you warm yourself with alcohol—you are literally burning up the delicate tissues of your stomach and brain."—Selected.

Indian Outbreaks Due to Drink.

During the last 30 years there has not been a single Apache Indian outbreak in Arizona territory which was not the direct result of intoxicating drink.—Governor L. S. Hughes of Arizona.

The Salvation Army in Sweden has just purchased the Sodertelge beer garden. They will transform the theater into a barracks, and the garden will be utilized as a Salvation Army rendezvous.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON V, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 5.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 32-42—Memory Verses, 34-36—Golden Text, John xviii, 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

32. "And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane, and He saith to His disciples, Sit ye here while I shall pray." On their way to the mount of Olives He told them that, according to the Scriptures, He would be smitten and they would forsake Him. He said also that Peter would deny Him, upon which Peter and all the others said that they would never do such a thing (verses 27 to 31). They then come to Gethsemane, which signifies an oil press, suggestive of the bruising which He was here to undergo that He might give to us the anointing of the Holy Spirit. For the trials of Gethsemane special strength was needed, concerning which He must talk with His Father, but into this and many other communions His disciples cannot enter, so He goes alone to pray.

33. "And He taketh with Him Peter and James and John and began to be sore amazed and to be very heavy." Matthew says "sorrowful and very heavy." It could not be anything He did not know about beforehand, for He knew all things, but the powers of darkness were about to do their worst, the great crisis to which He had looked forward from eternity was at hand, and it might be said that satan was about to engage Him in a hand to hand conflict.

34. "And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death. Tarry ye here and watch." In Math. xxvi, 28, it is, "Watch with Me." His humanity craved their sympathy, but how little He found! He was truly the lonely man as well as the man of sorrows, and even the favored three, of whom the beloved John was nearest to Him, could not enter into His experiences. If ever a sense of heaviness and darkness comes over you in your Christian life, when you know in your heart that you desire above all things to serve the Lord and do only His will, think upon Isa. 1, 10, and praise God for fellowship with His Son Jesus Christ.

35. "And He went forward a little and fell on the greund and prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass from Him." He seems to have left eight of the disciples just inside the garden, to have taken the three a little farther, and then to have gone alone about a stone's cast (Luke xxii, 41), and to have kneeled down, then fallen upon His face. He certainly did not shrink from the cross and the atonement which He came to make, but a careful study of Heb. v, 7, will shew that the agony was so great that He feared lest He might die under it and not reach the cross to finish the great atonement.

36. "And He said: Abba, Father, all things are possible unto Thee. Take away this cup from me. Nevertheless not what I will, but what Thou wilt." We read elsewhere that He prayed earnestly, with strong crying and tears, and sweat as it were drops of blood, and that an angel strengthened Him. He was willing to die in the garden and leave His great work unfinished if it should please the Father to have it so, but the passage in Hebrews says that He was heard, and therefore delivered from this premature death. This is the best light I have upon it, and present it as such, but let each search for himself in reliance upon the Holy Spirit. There are mysteries in the atonement which we cannot comprehend.

37. "And He cometh and findeth them sleeping and saith unto Peter: Simon, sleepest thou? Couldst not thou watch one hour?" The great glory of the Transfiguration as well as the great sorrow of Gethsemane was too much for the flesh, for they seem to have slept in the former (Luke ix, 32) as well as in the latter.

38. "Watch ye and pray lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak." Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him, for He knoweth our frame (Ps. ciii, 13). What a comfort it is! But let us not pity ourselves as satan through Peter advised Jesus to do (Math. xvi, 22, margin). Though our Lord recognizes and pities our weakness, He Himself has provided that He will be our strength so that we may sing, "The Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song" (Isa. xii, 2). We are to realize our weakness and never to rely upon ourselves, for His strength is made perfect in weakness, and to them that have no might He increaseth strength (II Cor. xii, 9; Isa. xl, 29).

39. "And again He went away and prayed and spake the same words." We need not fear the repetition of the same words in our prayers provided they are from the heart, nor need we fear to ask many times for the same thing, for Paul also besought the Lord thrice to remove his thorn in the flesh, and Jesus Himself has taught us to be importunate in prayer (II Cor. xii, 8; Luke xi, 8). At the same time He has put us on our guard against vain repetitions for the sake of much speaking (Math. vi, 7).

40. "And when He returned He found them asleep again (for their eyes were heavy). Neither wist they what to answer Him." We think of the ten virgins going out to meet the bridegroom, yet all slumbered and slept. We think of Jonah asleep in the storm, while the sailors called upon their gods and put forth every effort. We think of the multitudes of Christians who now seem to be asleep through one or other of satan's many soporific doses, and of the preachers who seem to be asleep, too, and cry peace to the people when they ought to sound an alarm because of the great apostasy and the manifest nearness of the end of this age.

41. "And He cometh the third time and saith unto them: Sleep on now and take your rest. It is enough. The hour is come. Behold the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners." He had gone away the third time and prayed, saying the same words (Math. xxvi, 44), and returning finds them still asleep. Then He says these words. Contrast the rest which He here calls "your rest," as He thus addresses them, and the rest which He has provided by these very sufferings of His (Math. xi, 28), but to which the majority of believers are so indifferent, for they seem to know nothing of it. They will not cease from their own works either as to salvation or service (Heb. iv, 1; x, 11; Rom. iv, 5; Eph. ii, 10), and therefore cannot know His rest.

42. "Rise up. Let us go. Lo, he that betrayeth Me is at hand." And so, being strengthened, He goes forth to meet His enemies and to give Himself into their hands, for His hour to die had come, and He was ready for the sacrifice. No man took His life from Him. He laid it down of Himself (John x, 18).

DOWN ON THE G. A. R.

COLONEL WARRING'S INTERVIEW WITH DR. GIBBS.

Expresses Himself Freely Regarding the Law Requiring the Employment of Old Soldiers and Says the Grand Army is a Lot of "Pension Bummers."

NEW YORK, April 22.—Colonel George E. Waring, the commissioner of street cleaning, has become involved in a bitter quarrel with a Grand Army veteran, and incidentally has brought the wrath of the entire organization on his head. In a conversation with Dr. John Wilson Gibbs, formerly of the health department and commander of the E. D. Morgan Grand Army post, the matter of employing veterans in his department came up. Colonel Waring became excited, and in a report of the conversation is said to have called the G. A. R. veteraus a "lot of drunken bums." Dr. Gibbs was exceedingly angry and threatened to call the colonel publicly to account. Colonel Waring says he did not call the veterans drunken bums, but admits in a card that he did say he regarded "the G. A. R. as a lot of pension bummers," which will be pretty nearly as bad for him so far as the vets are concerned.

The Interview with Dr. Gibbs.

In his card the colonel says that Gibbs called on him, told him, that he (Gibbs) had had a bill passed by the legislature compelling the employment of Union veterans, and then and there made "application for a $1,200 place, and he demanded his appointment. * * * Dr. Gibbs said that he was a captain of cavalry and that he took John Morgan. The official certificate of veteranship on which he bases his application for a position shows that he was discharged from the service in January, 1866, as a sergeant of infantry and that he had entered as an enlisted man in April, 1865." The colonel then said to Gibbs that such legislation was an injury to veterans; he (the colonel) never appointed a veteran without telling him he did so with regret because of the difficulty of getting rid of him should he prove unsatisfactory.

He told Gibbs he (the colonel) was not a Grand Army man and would not be. The colonel then closes as follows: "To avoid the necessity for recurring to this subject, I may as well say that my statement concerning the Grand Army of the Republic was deliberately made; that organization has, in my judgment, sold itself for cash to the claim agents of Washington. Because of its nefarious action the workingmen of this country are now paying annually $100,000,000 more in pensions than they ought to be paying."

Comments of Gen. Sickles.

General Daniel E. Sickles was seen at his home at 23 Fifth avenue. He expressed himself as follows: "Colonel Waring ought to be ashamed of himself for using such language. It is a shame that such a creature should hold office in New York. Although he is called a colonel, his language would indicate that he has never been a soldier. At any rate, he does not seem to have any of the instincts of a brave soldier. There is not anything in the street cleaning department or anywhere else too good for the men he slanders. The policy he spits upon is part of the laws of the United States and of the state of New York. He has taken an oath to support those laws and to administer his department in accordance with them. Let him do so and shut his mouth."

VETERANS SHOULD BE CAREFUL.

Warning Regarding the Proposed Settlement of Old Soldiers in Georgia.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 22.—A telegram from Baltimore says: "Ex-Governor Northen, who is at the head of the Georgia bureau of immigration, telegraphs The Manufacturers' Record, of this city, that he has secured a site for a settlement of 14,000 veterans of the late war and their families in southern Georgia. This colony has been organized by P. H. Fitzgerald and others, of Indianapolis, and will comprise old soldiers from various sections. It is called the Soldiers' Colony club and embraces farmers, mechanics, and men in the various professions. A large proportion of the people will locate on small farms in the territory selected, while the balance will found a new city."

At the recent encampment of the Georgia Grand Army a statement was adopted in reference to the immigration of old soldiers to that state, which says that having heard that large numbers of old soldiers are contemplating going to Georgia to find homes the Georgia G. A. R. deems it a duty to call attention to certain facts, which are, in brief, that there are large tracts of land in Georgia which are held under fraudulent grants; that the traffic in these fraudulent titles and the efforts to unload them upon innocent parties has been so great and widespread that Secretary of State Cook, of Georgia, has felt it his duty to issue a circular calling special attention to these frauds. It is urged that those contemplating going to Georgia for homes read this circular carefully, and a copy of it is made part of the statement. Old soldiers are informed, however, that there is a hearty welcome to all who go to Georgia.

The statement emphasizes the possible dangers comrades may incur in becoming freeholders of the state of Georgia, and assures the veterans that there is desirable land in Georgia sufficient in quantity to furnish a great army of old soldiers with good farms, the titles of which are perfect. Mr. Fitzgerald said that this circular was the work of an agent through whom the sale was not made. He said the purchase was subject to a good and sufficient title which is yet subject to the approval of attorneys specially selected to pass on it.

Killed by a Collapsing Building.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., April 17.—The walls of the nearly completed Tretz building collapsed owing to defective foundation. Two painters of Johnstown, Adam and Washington Veeder, were buried in the ruins, and two plumbers were badly injured. Dwelling houses on either side of the block had their roofs crushed, but the the tenants escaped injury.

MISS FLAGG'S LATEST NEW BOOK!

"A Prisoner of Hope."

COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.

Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, April 18.—Both houses of the legislature have adopted resolutions expressing sorrow at the death of James W. Scott, of the Chicago Herald. Salomon, of the department stores committee, reported to the senate that two Chicago department store men had refused to answer questions of the committee, and asked the senate to force them to answer. The matter was sent to the judiciary committee. The bill to repeal the trust law so that miners can get better wages was made special order for next Wednesday. The bill to prevent trains from obstructing highways longer than ten minuces at a time was passed. A number of bills were advanced. In the house the bill for a state board of arbitration was passed with an emergency clause. The bill declaring express companies common carriers was also passed. The bill to increase the number of state mine inspectors from five to ten, all to be paid by mine owners, failed to pass, and notice of reconsideration was given.

SPRINGFIELD, April 19.—The senate confirmed the nominations for trustees of the Southern Illinois Normal, state board of education and Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' home. The report of the election committee in favor of McKinley was adopted unanimously. The Valley people's drainage canal bill was reported favorably and it was made special order for Wednesday. Littler's revenue bill was partly considered and made special order for next Thursday, as was Green's bill revising the insurance laws. The bill to pension retired school teachers was reported favorably. In the house the committee that investigated the home for juvenile offenders at Chicago reported that the home had been mismanaged and is a failure that should receive no more appropriations and be closed. The weekly payment bill was ordered to second reading. Bills were passed: Making inspectors of mines inspectors of weights and measures: making sixty-eight pounds of corn a bushel; to include in judgments for wages the services of horses and teams; reducing the rate of interest on redemptions to 6 per cent.

SPRINGFIELD, April 20.—The governor sent to the senate the nomination of S. S. Page, of Cook, for trustee of the Eye and Ear Infirmary, vice Daniel Goodwin. The bill to pension retired teachers was advanced to third reading. The arbitration bill was read the first time and advanced to second reading. The bill relating to building associations was passed. In the house a resolution was introduced to investigate the charges that assessors collusively undervalue property of certain individuals. A memorial was presented from labor unions protesting against the purchase of machinery for penitentiaries. The bill to reduce interest on school funds to 7 per cent. was passed. Both houses adjourned to Monday.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F. B Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of To-day. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D. D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D, Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

Situation of Incubators.

Success with artificial incubators depends more than the average person supposes on the situation of the machine. Country Gentleman quotes a correspondent who insists that the machine be situated where there will be the least possible fluctuation in temperature. An incubator should never be where the sun can shine directly upon it or in direct drafts of air, both of which tend to cause variations in the temperature, and the latter of which may extinguish the lamp. A second important requisite of situation is that it be where fresh air can be constantly furnished without subjecting the machine to a draft.

To meet these two requisites it is advisable that the incubator be placed in some underground or partially underground room, like a cellar or basement. Here the temperature changes slowly. Here, too, fresh air in sufficient quantity can be admitted without causing a draft. And here also the machine can be placed out of the rays of the sun.

Drying Stove Wood.

Ohio Farmer gives an illustration of drying green stove wood in winter. It simply consists in piling the wood "cob-house" fashion, the sticks being piled in pentagon or hexagon form, the latter being the best, the piles being built as high as one can reach. The piles may be in a double rank, with corners just touching, so as to give mutual support, and wide boards may be placed on top of each row slanting outward so as to shed the rain away from the wood. Bark may be used or the top of each pile finished with wood laid close with a rapid slope toward the outer side of the pile. Even without covor wood laid up in such piles dries very rapidly, wind, sun and air as well as frost having full chance at each stick. Piled as illustrated, all the drying forces of nature except oxtreme heat have full sway, and it is possible to have tolerably dry wood in March even if not split until the leisure of December.

FREE TO DYSPEPSIA SUFFERERS.

Pure Blood

Is absolutely necessary in order to have good health. The greatest affliction of the human race is impure blood.

There are about 2400 disorders incident to the human frame, the large majority arising from the impure or poisonous condition of the blood.

The best remedy for all blood diseases is found in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Its remarkable cures are its loudest praise. It is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

No remedy has ever had so marked success, or won such enormous sales.

Scrofula in its severest forms yields to its potent powers, blood poisoning and salt rheum and many other diseases are permanently cured by it. For a general Spring Medicine to remove those impurities which have accumulated during the winter, or to overcome That Tired Feeling, nothing equals

"I wish to say that 3 years ago we had a beautiful boy born to us. At the age of 11 months he breathed his last, a victim to impure blood. On Aug. 4, 1891, another boy was born, who at the age of two months became afflicted with the same disease. We believed the trouble was constitutional, and not common sore mouth. I procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and commenced to give it regularly to both mother and baby. Improvement began at once. We have succeed in eradicating the scrofulous blood from the system and today we are blessed with a nice, fat baby boy, 18 months old—the very all life and full of mischief—thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am a minister in the Methodist Protestant church, and it affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all as a safe, sure remedy. Even my wife, after taking Hood's, became healthy and fleshy and has the bloom of girlhood again." REV. J. M. PATE, Brookline Station, Missouri.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

ASSAULT ON MRS. PARNELL.

Mother of the Irish Leader Brutally Beaten and Robbed.

Bordentown, N. J., April 20.—Mrs. Delia Parnell, the aged mother of Charles Stewart Parnell, the late Irish leader, was assaulted on her way home, beaten, robbed and left unconscious in a field, where she was found later by a passer-by. She was carried to a farmer's house near at hand, but did not regain consciousness until eveuing, when she was unable to throw any light on the affair. Dr. Shipps found her still suffering from the effects of concussion of the brain and shock, but no symptoms have yet developed pointing to fracture of the skull. In view of her advanced age and the loss of blood it is impossible to foresee the outcome of the case.

It has been learned that the old lady, while in this city, visited the hardware store of Samuel E. Burr and tendered a $10 check in payment of a bill of about $2. After receiving her change she left for home, walking along the railroad tracks, where the assault was doubtless made. Two tramps giving the names of John Devine, of Philadelphia, and John Brennan, of Newark, were arrested on suspicion They were discovered loitering about Ironsides, the home of Mrs. Parnell, but as they proved to know nothing of the assault they were released.

GREENHUT DEPOSED.

He Then Serves Papers in Eleven Libel Suits of $50,000 Each.

Peoria, Ills., April 18.—The whisky trust reorganization committee carried the annual stockholders' meeting of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding company by storm, and when it adjourned had deposed ex-President Greenhut, elected a full board of directors and empowered the board to take any necessary action toward recovering from the trust's last officials any property that may be due the corporation. But Greenhut was not at all docile, being present at the meeting with objections at every turn; refusing to resign as director, and before adjournment he personally superintended the serving of papers in eleven libel suits of $50,000 each. The suits were served upon the mombers of the reorganization committee: R. B. Hartshorne, John I. Waterbury, F. W. Lockwood, Jules Bache and W. E. Hunton, and upon Attorney Levy Mayer, of Chicago; Attorney Nathan Bijur, of New York; Receiver John McNulta, and the three experts who have been examining the trust's books.

MANSUR BREATHES HIS LAST.

The Assistant Comptroller and Ex-Representative Finally at Rest.

Washington, April 17.—Charles H. Mansur, assistant comptroller of the treasury department, whose death had been looked for at any moment for several days, has breathed his last. Mansur was formerly a member of congress, representing the second Missouri district. He was born in Philadelphia on March 6, 1835, and received a common school and academic education at Lawrence academy, Groton, Mass. Subsequently he studied law and was admitted to the bar at Richmond, Mo., on Aug. 30, 1856. In the same year he removed to Chilicothe, Mo., where he resided until appointed to the treasury department. He was in the Fiftieth, Fifty-first and Fifty-second congresses, was a delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention in Chicago in 1884, and was always prominent in politics in his own state. Mansur's remains will be taken to Richmond, Mo., where the interment will take place. The funeral train left this city yesterday afternoon.

JOHN BULL TO GUATEMALA.

Kimberly Says The Counter Proposition Is Entirely Unsatisfactory.

New York, April 19.—The World this morning says: The World has received a private cable dispatch from London giving the following reply sent by the British government to Nicaragua. It is dated "London, April 18: "I have had the honor to receive your excellency's telegram of the 11th inst. My note was delivered to Senor Barrios on the 26th of February, with the request that a copy be forwarded to your excellency by mail of March 2. Her majesty's government cannot be responsible for the delay in your receiving it.

"Your counter proposal has been considered and I regret it cannot be accepted. Her majesty's government cannot admit there is any doubt as to the rights of British subject, and must adhere to the demands in my previous notes.

[Signed.] "Kimberly."

Notable Political Event.

Chicago, April 19.—The silver question is a burning one among Illinois Democrats, and nothing that has happened has so confirmed this fact as the resignation of Judge McConnell as president of the Iroquois club of this city. He resigned because he had "been obliged to take a position upon the currency question which I know is contrary to that held by a majority of the club." The club is overwhelmingly opposed to the free silver proposition and a canvass among such members of it as could be found in the clubs on Michigan avenue would seem to indicate that Mr. McConnell is not far from being in a minority of one so far as the influential members of the club are concerned.

Real Message from the Chicora.

Chicago, April 17.—Officers of the Graham & Morton Transportation company are positive that the message found near Glenn's pier, Saugatuck, enclosed in a bottle and signed "McClure," was written by Robert McLure, engineer of the lost steamer Chicora. The paper on which it was written was torn from a tab like those supplied to the boats by the company and a signature of McClure has been found in the books that is the same as that on the message.

All Quiet at Cincinnati, Ia.

Ottumwa, April 17.—The miners have disappeared from the vicinity of Cincinnati, and all is quiet now. It is expected that the troops will be withdrawn today, and it is said that the miners will then break out again.

Turned Up in Cape Town.

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 20.—Three months ago Daniel W. Souder, ex-county clerk of Allen county, mysteriously disappeared. Since then nothing has been heard from him until now. A letter was received by his wife from him dated Cape Town, South Africa. In this letter Souder says his mind was a total blank until he was far out on the ocean when he recovered his senses. He says he will return by firs steamer, which will probably be in thirty days.

Bandit Perry Captured.

Weehawken, N. J., April 17.—The police of this city believe they have arrested Oliver Curtis Perry, the escaped trainrobber. The man was captured on the river road near the West Shore railroad yards.

The man who was captured at Weehawken, N. J., was Perry, the bandit. He says he will give all the trouble possible before he goes back to Mattewan asylum, and extradition proceedings have been begun.

KOHLSAAT BUYS TWO NEWSPAPERS.

Another Change in the Journals the James W. Scott Founded.

Chicago, April 22.—H. H. Kohlsaat who for a time held the controlling interest in the Inter-Ocean, but sold out because he had ideas that did not "gee" with those of others in the concern, has since been watching an opportunity to get back into the ranks of journalism and his success marks another "lightning change" in the life of the Herald, founded by the late James W. Scott. The change is greater than that by which the paper became the Times-Herald, for it involves a change of politics from Democratic to Republican in the national issue of protection.

Mr. Kohlsaat has purchased $710,000 of the $1,000,000 in stock of the paper and one of the first indications of Republican control was the resignation of the principal political writer, who could not write protection articles against his own convictions. James W. Scott owned $200,000 in the Times-Herald and besides the money for this Mrs. Scott will get an annuity of $10,000 for ten years if she lives that long. She will also hold a small interet in the paper. It should be said that the sale includes The Evening Post also. Mr. Hawley, the managing editor of the Times-Herald, retains his stock, but of course will not control the paper's policy.

Outside of the issue of protection the paper will vigorously oppose free silver coinage at any ratio by this nation alone. In local affairs it will be independent and hold personal fitness as the only qualification for municipal office.

Representative Hitt Desperately Ill.

Washington, April 22.—The condition of Representative Hitt, of Illinois, is practically unchanged. His physician is in constant attendance, and last night a consultation was held over him by two Washington physicians and a prominent specialist from Baltimore. He is desperately ill, but there is still hope of his recovery, and a fatal termination is not thought imminent. The primary trouble was an aggravated case of grip, but this has now developed other serious complications. The illness has now lasted six weeks with frequent fluctuations.

Apples Are Safe Enough.

Springfield, Ills., April 17.—The state board of agriculture has received a communication from the state entomologists in reply to inquiries concerning a small green insect infesting the buds of apple trees and which are alarming fruit growers in many sections of the state, stating that the insects are the green aphis; that they are often present at this season, but rarely do any permanent damage to the fruit. When the insects' destruction is necessary a 5 per cent. emulsion of kerosene sprayed on the trees kills the "bug."

Will Report in Favor of McKinley.

Springfield, Ills., April 18.—The senate sub-committee of the committee on elections has reported to the committee on the contested election case of Wilson against McKinley, r commendiug that Senator McKinley be allowed to retain his seat. The report will be made to the senate today and will probably be concurred.

Was on General Grant's Staff.

Santa Cruz, Cal., April 22.—Colonel Thomas P. Robb died at his country home near Glenwood from the effects of the grip. Colonel Robb came to this country from Chicago. During the war he was a member of General Grant's staff.

Perished in the Flames.

Portsmouth, O., April 22—The house of Arthur Smith of Iudian Run, Ky., opposito here, burned at 3 a. m., and Arthur Smith, Jr., aged 3 years, burned to death. The family was awakened by the roof falling in and all were badly burned.

The jury in the Elks case at Cleveland, Ohio, has reported its inability to agree, and is discharged. It is understood the point of difference was on the value of the paraphernalia of the order. It was appraised at $300. Some of the jurors, it is said, could not agree that its sentimental value and special significance make it worth $2,000, which is necessary to keep the case in court. The members of the Grand Lodge have concluded terms of peace. They have agreed to a plan whereby both factions will be united and harmony will prevail. Part of this plan includes the resignation of both sets of officers and the selection of others.

The board of engineers selected by President Cleveland, in accordance with the act of Congress, to visit Nicarauga and investigate the feasibility, permanence and expense of constructing the interoceanic ship canal, is composed of Major William Ludlow, the army member, Commander M. T. Endicott, the naval member, and Alfred Noble, the civilian member (of Chicago). As the board is compelled to report its findings and conclusions to the President not later than November 1, it is expected that they will leave for the Isthmus with the least possible delay, probably first going to New York for a day or two, to examine the plans and contracts of the canal company at its offices there.

The most closely contested election, for Mayor, ever held in that city, has just taken place in Rockford, Illinois. Edward W. Brown, candidate of the "liberal voters," defeated Amasa Hutchins, the A. P. A. candidate. When the result was announced 5,000 persons, headed by the Rockford military band, marched to Mr. Brown's residence. The mayor elect made a speech condemning the secret and un-American spirit of the A. P. A. During the last few days he has been the recipient of hundreds of threatening and indecent letters, and members of his family have also been intimidated. While the domination of the Roman Church in this country would be greatly to be deplored, to be under the authority of a secret political society opposed to Catholicism would be no better. "The tender mercies of the wicked (lodges) are cruel."

When men are trying to start a race track in any locality they talk about "improving the breed of horses;" but it is a little peculiar that a good law in regard to gambling takes all their enthusiasm away about "this noble animal." The following good news from St. Paul is a case in point: "There will be no more racing in Minnesota. Senate bill No. 138, which prohibits the selling of pools, has been signed by Gov. Clough, and has become a law. As a result there will be no meeting of the Twin City Jockey Club this year, for Frank Shaw announces that the new law wipes that organization out of existence. There has been some talk of a suit for damages by Shaw against the State for breach of contract, as the State Agricultural Society, by a former Legislature, was authorized to allow him to build an expensive grand stand on an agreement to hold races on the State Fair grounds for twelve years. Of this matter Shaw makes no statement."

Sabbath, the 21st inst., a large number of registered letters were received at the New York city postoffice from Hamburg, so peculiar and similar in their appearance as to excite suspicion in regard to their being legitimate mail matter. Those of them destined to Chicago received a red ink official stamp, which made it the duty of the special agent of the treasury here to inspect the letters. When they were claimed, the persons who acknowledged the letters as their property were informed that they could not have the contraband goods, and that they were liable to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $500 for breaking the law that makes it a penal offence to engage in any lottery scheme. Scores of these packets are waiting to incriminate their owners in this city, and thousands of them are distributed in other places. The measures for the suppression of this vice are necessarily severe, but if carried out faithfully will prove to be salutary and effectual.

The following, from the usually wise and able Standard of this city, does not commend itself to our approval:

> Citizens of Cuba have progressed far enough with their revolution to proclaim a republic. We trust it is not jingoism to express the hope that the brave men who are struggling against oppression may be able to keep up the struggle until it shall be possible for the United States government to recognize them as belligerents fighting for independence, and lend their new republic the help of official recognition.

Not only have we as a nation no direct influence in the internal affairs of Spain and Cuba, but as friends of humanity we ought to deplore a war which, whatever may be its results, will bring unspeakable woe to the mass of the people of that island. Doubtless Cuba has been mis-governed. Possibly a change of government might be an improvement, but the history of most Spanish American States does not encourage such hope, especially in Cuba, whose people are very largely ex-African slaves, who are much lower in mental culture and religious knowledge than the colored people of our Southern States. We have no desire to see the queen of the Antillies transformed into another San Domingo.

We learn from the New York Sun that Dr. Robert W. Buchanan, who was convicted of having killed his wife and condemned to be executed, "was a Mason in good standing," before the murder, "but when he was convicted he was expelled from his lodge so that he cannot ask assistance from the Masonic order." "The Masons of the United States," it is stated, "would not interest themselves unless Buchanan's lodge asked for it." From which we may infer that if he was a man of enough prominence to warrant it, the "Masons of the United States" would interfere and shield the criminal from justice!

"Furthermore, do I promise and swear, that the secrets of a brother of this degree, given to me in charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secret and inviolable in my breast as his own, murder and treason excepted, and the same left to my own free will and choice."

"I furthermore promise and swear that I will assist a companion Royal Arch Mason, when engaged in any difficulty, and will espouse his cause so far as to extricate him from the same whether he be right or wrong."

Charles W. Slick, Grand Commander of Knights Templar, appeals to his Sir Knights; it does not look well to see the saloons so glad to receive the order. Whatever grand or good men are in the lodge had better come out. "A man is known by the company he keeps." And men will believe that "he that walketh with wise men will be wise; but a companion of fools will be destroyed." In referring to the display of the symbol of faith on the saloons at the last triennial conclave in Indiana, Mr. Slick made the following knightly appeal for a truer hospitality than is represented by serving of intoxicants: "The display of the cross upon the outside of saloons may and does wound our pride and feelings. It certainly does not hurt the symbol of our beloved order. Nor would the Bible be injured if laid upon a table in every saloon in the land; but Sir Knights, this should afford us food for serious reflection. Call to mind the encampment at Denver, for illustration; the numerous headquarters, grand and subordinate, the lavish display of the cross and other emblems of our order in them; then remember how many dispensed intoxicating liquors over what is worse than a saloon, a free bar. It is a mistaken notion that to convince a man of his welcome you must give him that which will befuddle his brain and cloud his intellect and and reasoning faculties. There is more true brotherly welcome and sociability in a cup of coffee or a glass of lemonade than in any intoxicating beverage. Let us urge our most eminent Grand Master to ask all grand and subordinate commanderies to refrain entirely from dispensing intoxicating liquors at their respective headquarters at Boston."

BOYS' BRIGADES AND MILITARY DRILL IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Between patriotism and militarism, though sometimes confounded, there is a very wide distinction. Governments do not depend for their authority on war, nor is civil law the simple mandate of physical force. Whatever may be true in autocratic and barbarous nations, in all civilized lands the government is essentially the expression of public opinion and civil law is the moral sense of the people, and their views of expediency, that have been written in their statute books. That such governments and laws are, perhaps always, imperfect and inadequate—that political corruption, injustice and oppression are widely prevalent, does not prove that we need war for their correction, but rather a better intellectual and moral development of the masses of society. War, though it has sometimes been used to break down the barriers to human progress, is always demoralizing. It always puts back the dial of moral advancement, by all parties that are engaged in the conflict. It is not simply un-Christian, it is barbarizing. It follows that to teach our youth to be patriotic we do not need to teach them the arts of fratricide, but rather the principles of international justice and correct political economy. A knowledge of military drill will in no wise promote these objects.

Nor do our sons and daughters need military drill for their best physical development. In our country schools there is abundance of work and play that is far better. In our cities there may be need of systematic physical education. This has served as the occasion for introducing military drill. But exprience has shown that, aside from all other considerations, the best physical development does not come from military training. There are many plans of physical culture that produce a more systematic and symmetrical development than can be acquired by the use of arms. Surely there ought to be some other way devised than to make it necessary for our sons to learn the best methods of killing each other.

Not only have we no occasion for the introduction of the military drill, but we cannot introduce it without a demoralizing tendency. It cannot be that young people can acquire an art without being inclined to its exercise. This is especially true of such arts as call into activity the baser elements of our nature. No one could teach pugilism without making it probable that some of his pupils would become pugilists; and no one can teach the arts of war without training some professional warriors.

The experience of the ages goes to show that where the military art has been most cultivated, there the spirit and practice of war has been most prevalent. We cannot afford to imbue our youth with this spirit.

AN OPEN LETTER.

The following was submitted to the great New York journal, and speaks for itself:

EDITOR COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER:—In your issue of April 7th you inform your readers that there are known to be 69 Freemasons in the New York Legislature; that there are Worshipful Masters, Grand Masters and Past Masters, as well as Generalissimos, Eminent Commanders and High Priests. We are very glad you found only one Democrat in that 69. We used to have slaves and overseers in Missouri; but we never heard of a "nigger" addressing his owner as "Worshipful Massa!" or "Most Worshipful Grand Massa!" yet every one of those 69 have knelt to a "Worshipful Master" in the Blue Lodge, and are now under the "Most Worshipful Grand Master" of New York. Those who have gone on through the chapter have bowed to a "High Priest" and are under the "Most Excellent Grand High Priest" of the Grand Chapter. In every chapter is a "King," and in the Grand Chapter a "Grand King." Six Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret, 32-degree. What strange reading! but thank God, all these are Republicans but one. It is enough to make Abe Lincoln, William H. Seward, Charles Sumner, Thaddeus Stevens, Thurlow Weed, Charles Francis Adams, and other "stalwart Republicans" turn over in their graves. They sifted the English vocabulary to denounce Southern slavery and hailed the Emancipation Proclamation, wiping out "involuntary" servitude, as the very voice of God; but now 68 Republicans in the New York Legislature have voluntarily sworn eternal allegiance to "Worshipful Masters" and a "Most Worshipful Grand Master." White men, and there cannot be a "Worshipful Master" without worshiping slaves. Then the "poor niggers" had no "Kings" and "Grand Kings." This system set up and running full blast over white Republicans goes the old system, "sum of all villainies," one better. "Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret!" Shades of Calhoun, Quantrell and Jefferson Davis hover over the New York Legislature—68 Republicans and 1 poor, lone Democrat. Do the Commercial Advertiser and other great dailies see anything particularly funny or worth their editorial thunder in these startling facts that will soon stand out in bold relief on the pages of United States history? "The demons of our sires become the saints that we adore." The Abolitionists fought to free involuntary black slaves Their white sons voluntarily bow to "Most Worshipful Grand Masters," and it is left for a citizen of Missouri, who never voted a Republican ticket in his life. to ring in an alarm. Shall we come again? Very truly,

WHAT IMPENDS?

That secret societies are against God and man needs no special argument to convince a mind not in the bonds of ignorance and worldliness; why then do ministers and leaders in judicial, professional and social life make their beds with this hideous beast? It is true that some are thoughtless and seduced by evil spirits in high places, but it is in many cases because men love the works of darkness rather than of light.

The Christian who remains silent through fear of man, or in ignorance of this great question, is at fault, "The fear of man bringeth a snare." It is the duty of the church to make the thoughtless think, enlighten the ignorant and rebuke the sinner.

Fraternalism, like a huge octopus, is sucking the spiritual life out of the nation. We are next door to infidelity. The last act of the drama is preluded in the bloody conflicts of trades-unionism, the miscarriage of justice through Masonry, the coldness of social life through lodge charity and clubs "largely social," and the fresh irruption of secretism in religion and politics.

The curtain will go down upon this act, for the drama must close. Will it fall upon America peaceful and prosperous, leading the world in all that makes for human happiness, or will the stage be darkened with the smoke ascending from the torments of those who are now drunk with the wine of the wrath of God?

SECRET SOCIETIES.

When I heard of a patriotic meeting to be held in this city I attempted to gain admission, but failed for want of a password. I was informed that it was a meeting of the A. P. A. to form a new political party, and not having passed the ordeal of their catechism and assumed the vows of secrecy and obedience to unknown leaders, I could not be trusted with their secrets. This struck me as not simply un-American, but as positively anti-American.—James P. Stoddard.

Concerning the duty of the Christian church in this matter we would simply say that no Christian church will receive a Mohammedan into its membership. Why? Because he is a believer in a Christless religion. No Christian church would receive a participating member of the Jewish church into membership. Why? Because he is a member of a Christ-denying church. But Masonry is just as distinctly a Christless and Christ-denying religion as either the Jewish or Mohammedan church. According to its own best authorities it is a religion of pure theism.—Rev. W. P. McNary.

I have reliable, historical evidence of not less than seven individuals murdered under Masonic laws.—Rev. Moses Thatcher, a seceding Mason.

All associations, whether formed for political or benevolent purposes, which impose upon their members an oath of secrecy, or an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws, are inconsistent with the genius and spirit of Christianity, and church members ought not to have fellowship with such associations.—United Presbyterian church law.

We cannot determine to keep anything secret without risking at the same time to commit a hundred artifices, quibbles, equivocations and falsehoods.—Godwin's Political Justice.

It was by and through the means of Masonry that the rebellion was got up. Slavery was the cause and Masonry the means. The forces of slavery, it is true, have been overthrown and destroyed, but those of its ally still stand in an unbroken phalanx, stronger and more formidable than war; and not until that phalanx is defeated is the rebellion entirely suppressed.—Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, p. 63.

Few can have office at the present day without being either secret society men, or showing a deference to the lodge, which is incompatible with their freedom, manliness or duty to their constituents.—Ibid, p. 65.

A country in which the offices of honor and profit are at the disposal of the Masonic lodge cannot fail to be the residence of servility and deceit.—Gen. J. W. Phelps.

Secret oaths are forbidden in some portions of our republic by the civil law, and ought to be in all portions; are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

We recently met a knight of something with skull and cross-bones pictured on his apron, a large gilt cross on his hat and a cigar in his mouth.

O wad some power th' gift'i gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us.

—Christian Witness.

All that crushes free thought, free speech, free press, free worship, free schools, free shops and a free ballot is the enemy of our free American land.—True Protestant.

Harvard and Yale are honeycombed by secret societies, which are valuable for the cultivation of comradeship, but which every one knows to be nests of iniquity and dangerous to the manhood of the men who belong to them. It has taken many a young man a good many years to overcome the habits which he contracted in these secret societies when in college, and the spirit of comradeship which they have built up, and which no one desires to underestimate, is a large penalty to pay for the vices which have killed out what is best in the minds and hearts of a great many of our young men.—Boston Herald.

We read, in a morning paper, that the Congregationalists, in their recent convention at Minneapolis, in treating of the increase of divorces, say "that the church fosters too many organizations to the exclusion of the home." Perhaps they had an eye to the secret societies; whether they did or not, whatever comes between man and wife and their family, is bad and only bad.—Faith's Record.

There you stand in the secret lodge and associate with drunkards, gamblers, thieves, liars, and backslidden preachers and call them brothers: no difference how devilish they act. Can you do all that is done there to the glory of God? Why should a good thing be secret? and if it be evil it should not exist. Jesus said: "In secret have I said nothing;" shall we "do evil that good may come?" Never. St. John 3: 19, 20; 18: 20.—E. E Shelhamer.

When the (Odd-fellow) lodge receives three millions of dollars, it returns to the sick and the families of the dead, one million; the other two millions, drawn in large measure from the families of poor men, being expended in what would be called administrative expenses. How ought honorable men, who love their wives and children, to look upon secret orders which thus swallow the wages of the poor and rob women and babes under the pretense of charity?—Charles A. Blanchard, President of Wheaton College.

The corner-stone was laid at London, on mechanic's holiday, A. D. 1717; thirty to forty stories have since been raised to the fearful height of ninety, and even one hundred and twenty degrees; the walls are living men of all Christendom, to the number of a million, 100,000 of whom are in this country, bound together by ties upon their fame, their life and the future salvation of their souls. It has a ritual, an altar, a priesthood and worshipers. It is an unhallowed temple, whose votaries are admitted in attire for a gallows. It has a government and laws, an empire, and crowned heads, and a book of constitutions and a sword. It is the temple of tyranny where young men swear fealty to an unknown prince. It is a refuge of lies; neither truth, nor righteousness, nor patriotism should suffer it long to defile the earth.—An Extract from a Report before the United States Anti-masonic Convention, Philadelphia, Sept. 11, 1830.

Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence. —Wendell Phillips.

THE TOBACCO PROBLEM.

BY REV. I. L. BUCHWALTER.

In writing upon this subject, which ought to be to every Christian a matter of thought and interest, "I entertain nothing but good will to all." Nor do I unchristianize men who are using it, especially old people, who in the days of youth, in their comparative innocence and ignorance, contracted the evil habit. Yet I would say most decidedly, that I believe they would be much more spiritual and useful if, in this day of increased light and responsibility, they would lay aside the pernicious habit. There are many great evils inseparably connected with the chewing and smoking of tobacco. I will speak of only a few in this paper.

First, it is a narcotic poison, and therefore very hurtful to health and the physical organism. While some are using it seemingly without any visible bad effects, or immediate sad results on the mind and body, it is nevertheless a fact that some of the most alarming and dreaded diseases that the human family is liable to are caused, and others greatly aggravated by its use, such as cancer, epilepsy, nervous prostration, heart disease, idiocy, etc., upon which all the best medical authorities of both Europe and America agree. Any amount of testimony can be gathered from skillful physicians, reports of health committees, and other sources all over the land, of its deleterious effects on the health of its users, especially upon the young. Its sad hereditary influence, transmitted to children, may be traced after many years of gradual degeneration. God commands his children to abstain from everything that may hurt the body, or becloud the mind and conscience. He says, "Ye are not your own; for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and your spirit which are God's." "And that ye offer your bodies a living sacrifice; holy and acceptable to God." This includes the whole man, and all our habits of life.

A noted physician has said, "Tobacco is as much worse than liquor as palsy is worse than fever." Dr. Parker says, "Chewing and smoking are most prolific causes of paralysis and apoplexy." Dr. Sims gives three cases of paralysis, which he himself knew to be directly caused by tobacco. In a medical journal it is stated that in one hundred and twenty-seven cases of cancers cut from the lips of persons nearly all were smokers. One physician says that he can enumerate at least eighty diseases that tobacco causes or greatly aggravates. Statistics show that from twenty to twenty-five thousand die annually in the United States from the use of tobacco. This, with much more that might be given, makes a fearful record against tobacco.

Ought not every lover of his race to diligently use his influence in opposition to the entire traffic? Some of our States, and other nations too, have already passed laws forbidding the sale of tobacco to minors; and institutions of learning prohibit its use among students.

Another objection is its impurity. It pollutes the mouth, and degrades the person of him who was created in the image of God. The result of its filthiness is seen in the home, along the sidewalk, and even in God's house of worship. It tramples on the laws of Christianity, which require us "to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

Another great evil and wrong connected with it is, the great waste of money. Yes, and much worse than wasted, when we consider the debasement and ruin that is sure to follow. From reliable statistics we learn that the people of the United States pay annually six hundred million of dollars for tobacco; while they pay for home and foreign missions only six millions. Just think of it. One dollar for missions: but one hundred for tobacco. What a record for this Christian nation! What inconsistency! Enough to make us blush for our Christianity.

Rev. N. A. Hunt, in his book on tobacco, from which I have quoted largely, gives an account of some young men who spent, for cigars alone, three hundred dollars a year, and others yet more than that. Perhaps it may be safely said that there are many church members who spend annually twenty-five to seventy-five dollars for tobacco and cigars, which no doubt is four or five times more than they pay for the support of the Gospel. Surely such a useless waste of the Lord's money by professed Christian people, while the cause of benevolence is languishing for want of support, must be very displeasing and sinful in his sight. He owns all our money, and claims for the promotion of his cause in the world at least one-tenth of our income, and allows nothing to be spent on trifling or hurtful things. Here are sufficient reasons to engage the serious attention of every child of God. Especially as the practice of smoking cigars among young men, and cigaretts among the boys, in many places is alarmingly on the increase. What can be done to remedy this great and growing evil? Answer: Let the church wake up from her apathy and slumber. Let all ministers and pastors bear a faithful testimony from the pulpit against the whole business; and give the proper instruction and warning, especially to the boys, who are entirely ignorant of the danger there is in cigarette smoking, and if possible prevent them from forming the vicious habit.

And now that the winter campaign of revival meetings is closing up, in which many young men and boys have been taken into the church, every proper means, by instruction and discipline, should be employed to create a pure religious sentiment, and train up the coming generation of young men clean and free from the tobacco evil and all other bad habits. Let every Christian father, who has hitherto thoughtlessly indulged in the practice of smoking cigars, break off at once, for how can he expect his boys to keep free from it, with such an example from the father. We should endeavor, as commanded. "To lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us," for in this way only "we can make our calling and title to heaven sure."

In the conclusion of this article another thought may be given, which is this. In this day of Christian light and increased moral responsibility, may we not hope that the time is near at hand when the religious conscience will be so quickened by the truth and Spirit of God that it will induce all earnest Christians to abandon entirely the manufacture and sale of tobacco and cigars, and cease, for any consideration, to offer to others that which they would not by any means offer to their own children? No doubt God would abundantly bless such noble sacrifice and business fidelity. Who will try it?

IS THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES CHRISTIAN?

BY REV. W. J. COLEMAN.

No question with regard to our government could be more important than this one. The Constitution is the legal basis of the government. All the officers of the government are sworn to preserve, protect and defend this Constitution, and the higher officials are bound by no other law. All Christian men chosen or appointed to office have a special interest in knowing whether the Constitution is Christian or not, for they must swear to it when they enter their offices.

The first question to be decided in the matter is: What is a Christian constitution? If we are clear on this question, then we may reach some agreement as to the character of our Constitution.

1. A constitution is not Christian simply because it says nothing against Christianity. Silence in this matter is not consent. Christianity is a positive thing and requires something positive by way of acceptance.

2. A constitution is not Christian simply because it is drawn up by good and able men. Good and able men sometimes make great mistakes. When our present Constitution was framed, it recognized, and so far as the general government was concerned, guaranteed the existence of slavery. Might not these same men have neglected to recognize the authority of Christ? The Constitution was not anti-slavery because good men framed it; neither is it Christian for the same reason.

3. Nor is a constitution to be considered Christian because it is the product of Christian culture and civilization. That the Constitution of the United States is the outgrowth of Christianity, no one can doubt. A large part of the early settlers of this country came to secure liberty of religious worship. The charters of the colonies made religious acknowledgments. The Declaration of Independence clearly recognized a Divine Providence. Our present Constitution secures civil and religious liberty to an extent almost unknown in other lands, and this we all believe to have been the direct result of the Christian culture of the generation that produced it. Yet without any religious acknowledgment in the Constitution this does not make it Christian. A Christian minister lecturing on the civilizing power of the Word of God argued among other things that nearly all of the kindness, honesty and good offices found in our homes and neighborly intercourse was due to the gracious influences of the Bible. At the close of his lecture a man in the audience arose and said, "I have lived in this neighborhood many years and I will call on my neighbors to testify whether I have been a kind and honest neighbor. I have been long married and my wife is here. I will take her word as to whether I have been a good husband. My children are here and they will tell you that I have been a kind father. You have said that all this comes from Christianity. What will you say when I tell you that I am not a Christian and that I do not believe in the Bible." The lecturer thought a moment and said, "I suppose your father was an unbeliever, too, was he not?" "Oh no," was the answer, "my father was a very strict church member and I was brought up on the Bible and catechism." "Then," was the answer, "may it not be that these social qualities of which you boast are the product of a religion that you yourself have never accepted?" It is clear that this man's religious father and his own early training did not make him a Christian, though they did make him a gentleman. So the Christian antecedents of our National Constitution, though they did put it in advance of all other governments, could not of their own force make it Christian, any more than a religious father can make his son a Christian. That must be the son's own act, and the Christianity of the Constitution must be sought for in itself. That it is the product of Christian culture and civilization, while it accounts for its many good qualities, does not of itself make the Constitution Christian. It might however make its lack of Christian character more serious.

4. A Christian constitution is one that acknowledges Christ directly and his Word in the Bible. This definition seems to be demanded by the meaning of the word, Christian. To neglect or refuse to recognize Christ in some definite way seems fatal to the claim of being Christian. Christian is not a word properly used to denote respectability and the possession of some qualities that the world has borrowed from Christianity. It is rightly applied only to that person or institution that is capable of being religious, and that has some expressed purpose of devotion to Christ and obedience to his Word.

5. The Constitution is a law and should recognize the law of God. It stands by authority of the people and they should recognize the superior authority of Christ. The acknwledgment required is not one simply of God's existence, his name or his providence, but of his authority and his law. Such an acknowledgment would make a constitution truly Christian.

Believing that a constitution would be Christian that with an honest attempt to obey the law of God, recognized the authority of Christ and the binding obligation of the moral requirements for nations found in the Bible, we turn to the present Constitution of the United States to see how it conforms to this standard.

Is the Constitution of the United States Christian? We answer that we sincerly believe it is not.

That there are in our national and state governments many religious observances, founded on traditional usage and the common law, is freely and gladly admitted, but these do not enter into the written Constitution and have no place in "the supreme law of the land." They rest on another and a different foundation. The Constitution considered in itself and in its historical interpretation stands apart from these observances, and teaches a theory of government that goes far to weaken their force and to prevent advance in the work of moral reform. There is no power of true moral elevation in the world apart from applied Christianity, and a constitution that does not recognize this power nor the law that governs it must exert an influence in the way of separating Christianity from politics that is to be overcome before the truth of God can do its work. Were it not that the Constitution, by its lack of religious character, constantly resists the application of the principles of the Bible and so hinders the coming of the kingdom of Christ, the Christian patriot might be the less anxious on this subject, but we may not be silent concerning great obstacles in the way when we are earnestly seeking to enthrone Christ as Lord of all.

Why should the Constitution, so grandly beneficent in other respects, not be amended in this regard? After a terrible struggle it has been changed to guard the rights to man. Has not the Lord of all a right to our loyalty and obedience that we, as a nation, have never owned and respected? Is it not time for us to recognize the authority of Christ? Would it not add strength to our human government to found it upon the divine government, and give to our citizens an example of obedience by our own loyalty to the Ruler of nations? And would it not be the greatest safeguard to our liberty to lay on our officers the divine law of duty, that perfect law of love and justice between man and man? Wherever in the world the Bible is best known, there is the greatest civil liberty. Why not seek still greater liberty by acknowledging the law of God in the very forefront of this greatest political law of man?

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Boston's public library.—Legislative doings.—Gruesome finds on the Common.—A Boys' Brigade story.—The cremation question vs. Masonry.—Gen. Booth's order against the lodge.—Good Friday in Boston.

Boston ought to be proud of her public library. For solid and general usefulness it is decidedly equal if not superior to a great public university. The building has a massive plainness that well comports with Puritan traditions. The inside is more ornate, but carries out even better the stateliness and sense of magnificent space characteristic of the architect's plan. Ascending the grand staircase we pause to take breath at the top, and gaze at the two stone lions which guard the entrance to Bates Hall. I believe it was Dr. Livingstone who thought the lion a much overrated animal. As the future discoverer of the Dark Continent came near being chewed up by one in his early days as a missionary and explorer, perhaps it was one of the cases where familiarity breeds contempt. Still it cannot be denied that the lion lends himself to purposes of architecture as does no other of the brute creation, though he is really not a beautiful animal. He is an epitome of brute strength, and these colossal warders that guard with calm unchanging front the portals to this paradise of knowledge speak an allegory. They personify the tyranny of matter over mind, of the earthly over the spiritual, and tell again from their stony lips the story of the heroes who have fought their way upward and onward to the sunbright heights where the memory of what they did, or said, or wrote to make make the world better, shrines their names as in a golden halo;—the story we are never tired listening to and which is never finished.

Why should the Sunday newspaper be exempted from the provisions of the law which oblige venders of other wares to close their places of business on that day? The fruit-venders have better reason to plead necessity for plying their trade on the Sabbath than has the propritor of the Sunday newspaper. The selectmen of Attleboro, Mass., have drawn this fine distinction, but it is a distinction without a difference. The pettiness of some of the measures which engage the attention of our lawgivers on Beacon Hill is worth noticing in this connection. Think of their concentrating their mighty energies on a bill against big hats in the theatres, or taking under solemn consideration a bill to regulate the sale of face powder, as if women hadn't a right to wear just such hats as they want to, and spoil at once their health and complexion in a vain attempt to improve the latter.

Ansonia, Conn., has solved the vexed question of prayer in the public schools. One of the committee, Rev. Mr. Woodcock, resigned from the board of education because prayer had been prohibited in the schools. His protest has borne fruit in the adoption of the Lord's Prayer as given by St. Matthew, without the doxology, and now he has been unanimously re-elected. Protesting Protestants are so few and far between that the land of steady habits may well congratulate herself on a specimen so genuine within her borders.

Here is a Boys' Brigade story which may interest those who approve of this organization and those who do not, but it is the latter who will probably enjoy it most. There was a prize drill at Mechanics' Hall the other day. "Why are you not one of those soldiers?" said a lady to a Boston schoolboy who stood watching it with interest. The boy replied that he didn't know. "Well, I hope you're a Christian," continued the lady. He answered, "Yes, ma'am." "I'm glad you're that,' responded his interrogator. This story, which is told by "Listener" in the Transcript, illustrates very well the tendency wherever such plans are adopted, to make Christianity secondary. And if it inclines adult minds to such an error, what must be the impression on the boys except that to carry a gun and drill is a more important thing than to lead that Christian life and begin that Christian warfare into which the wearing of regimentals and training in military tactics is supposed to induct them.

The excavations on the Common for a sub-way has included some old tombs, the owners and occupants of which went the way of all the earth so long ago that the records contain no account by which it is possible to identify the bones that are being ploughed up. They have been given decent burial, but it is a gruesome thing nevertheless, even if the march of improvement makes it necessary. The cremation theory will gain some new advocates, I imagine, among those who witnessed the spectacle. If the Egyptians, for instance, had cremated their dead instead of trying to preserve their bodies indefinitely, the ashes of the Pharoahs—of Tothemes and Hatsu, and the rest of the kingly dynasty of the Nile, would have escaped the touch of vandal hands, and been spared the indignity of being exposed in a museum to the curious gaze of the careless multitude. The peculiar decision of Grand Master Arnold of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge of Freemasons, that cremation is not Christian burial, has stirred up the Boston Transcript, which is almost the only daily in the city that never lauds the secret orders, to make the pertinent remark: "What has Christian burial to do with Freemasonry? Freemasonry is not a Christian institution, and if its claims to antiquity are to be recognized, it is hundreds of years older than the Christian religion. But the mere fact that Jews are received into the Masonic fraternity on equal terms with Christians proves that the order is not a Christian body. There is about as much reason in a Masonic lodge passing upon the question of Christian burial as it would be for a Baptist to decide upon a distinctly Masonic matter." The Transcript is generally acknowledged to be the exponent of the literary and cultured class in Boston and suburban towns, and though its circulation is limited beside the Globe and Herald, the quality of its readers more than makes up for quantity.

Gen. Booth's order from London forbidding members of the Salvation Army to belong to secret societies will not be likely to cause so much disturbance as the Pope's famous ban against these orders has created both in the ranks of Catholicism and Masonry. An official who was interviewed by our agent and secretary, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, stated that in his opinion there were not twenty members of the Salvation Army to be found in the United States who are Masons or lodgemen. They have evinced as yet no sensitiveness or chagrin over the order, which is in itself sufficient proof that this grand organization which has done such a mighty work for the fallen has never been troubled with lodgeism to any extent. Would that the same could be said of our churches.

The theaters of Boston did not close on Good Friday, but the public schools did. Why? is a pertinent question. To close the schools on Friday, or any other Romish holiday, is to give the pupils an object-lesson which, in the way of sectarian teaching, goes far beyond the simple reading of a few words of Scripture in the morning. But strangely enough, even anti-Romanists are carried away by this observing of days, and do not see that they are actually helping Rome more than their opposition can hinder.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Sweat-shop investigation.—Legal red-tape.—A new investigating company.—Harbingers of spring.

The assembly committee have been investigating the evils of manufacturing clothing in tenement houses. A physician from the health department testified that by law every tenement house was inspected twice a year, in addition to inspections made in response to complaints from citizens. All complaints, as a rule, were investigated within 24 hours.

Another physician, from the bureau of contagious diseases, told of a case of scarlet fever where a dozen persons were employed making clothing, and said that all manufacturing in tenements ought to be prohibited, as it was a constant menace to public health, and a cause of the dissemination of disease. If it were generally known what large quantities of women's and children's clothing were made in filthy tenements, the public would understand how grave the danger is, and insist upon its removal.

One sweat-shop keeper testified that a girl got nine cents for sewing buttons on a dozen coats, and earned about $7 a week, working 13 hours a day, including Sunday. Another testified that he paid a girl only $2.75 a week. A boy was brought forward as a witness who had been earning $2 a week. He was unable to tell his own age, the day of the week, or the month of the year.

The meetings of the committee are still going on, and are attracting interest.

The other day a man was drawn for jury duty who had been dead for several months, and when his widow protested that the man was dead, she received a solemn warning from the sheriff's office that the excuse could not be accepted, and that she must appear before the Superior court in order to get her husband excused from service.

Much difficulty has been experienced in selecting a jury for the trial of Inspector McLaughlin for bribery, owing to the efforts of the lawyers, who seem to challenge every talesman who shows the slightest gleam of intelligence or of common sense. Although nearly a week has passed, thus far but three jurymen have been secured. It is universally admitted that there is something radically wrong with our present jury system. The right of trial by jury has been considered to be one of the most precious heritages of our Saxon jurisprudence, but any lawyer will say that if he had a case and desired speedy justice, or was on trial himself and innocent, he would prefer to go at once before a judge and abide by his decision on the merits of the case. It would not be far out of the way to characterize our entire system of legal machinery as a scheme devised to enable criminals to escape the reprisals of justice. The youngest prisoner ever arrested on a warrant in New York was arraigned in the Harlem police court recently, on a charge of assault. A saloon keeper made a complaint that his son had been hit by a stone, and the police justice, supposing that the offender had arrived at the age of responsibility, issued a warrant for his arrest. To the surprise of the big policeman who served the warrant he found a little tot five years old and three feet high, who had just donned his first knickerbockers. When the case was called in court there was a general laugh all round, and the child was turned over to his parents.

A company has been formed to enable employers to keep a close watch on the doings of their employees, with little trouble or expense, and also for the purpose of looking up the record of any one whose history they may wish to investigate before employing him. By paying an annual subscription fee of $10 and $1 additional for each investigation employers may obtain the services of the company. The prospectus says that it proposes to insure "protection against dishonest and incompetent employees of all classes and grades, hotels, clubs, private residences, banks, stores, offices, cafes, and business houses. Employers should know the records of their subordinate help as well as that of the cashier or confidential clerk. The company, by its perfected system of personal investigation of the character, habits, reliability and domestic surroundings of employers, are able to promptly furnish subscribers a detailed report of the standing of applicants or employees already in their service."

The company has divided the city into districts, each one of which is in charge of an agent. Whenever a subscriber asks for the record of any one, the application is turned over to the agent in charge of the district, who ascertains the history of the man by questioning his neighbors. The grocers and butchers of the vicinity are examined to establish his financial standing. When the past history of an employee has been thoroughly investigated, a formal report is made on a printed blank to the applicant. A copy of each report is kept by the company, which already has the record of hundreds of unsuspicious and unsuspecting New Yorkers stored away in its safes.

The sudden advent of the warm weather has brought the late but ever-beautiful spring on with a rush that has been heart-cheering to those who have been shivering through an unusually disagreeable winter. The parks are clothed with living verdure, the buds have burst on the trees, and the other harbingers of summer are multiplying on every hand. Surely the earth is beautiful enough to brighten the most saturine face, and the sunshine is warm enough to soften the chilliest heart, provided one can keep in it. F. W. FARR.

REFORM NEWS.

ECHOES FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

At North Mt. Tabor (Portland) your agent always finds a welcome. I spoke there twice, on the 14th, to very good audiences. Three more subscribers were added to the Cynosure list. One man has been a lodge man, but finds that to follow Christ and make sure work for heaven, he must give up the lodge. On the 17th I spoke to a crowded house, at Ostrander, in Cowlitz county, Wash. The lodge people turned out in full force. It was quite evident that they started in to run a bluff, for they had gathered up all the old musty badges in the country. One said of your agent: "He was kicked out of the Methodist church, and is now a United Brethren." Another was sure that I had been a Presbyterian four years ago, for I married him at Chehalis.

Before my lecture that night, I departed from my usual custom, and disabused their minds as to my identity, and closed by inviting the gentleman whom I married at Chehalis four years ago, to remain a few minutes and settle with me, as I never received any pay for the service. He remained, and said: "I don't owe you for marrying me." I answered: "Sir, if I ever performed that service for you, you do, for you never paid me." He answered: "You are not the man I thought you were."

I ventured during the course of my lecture to say: "There are church members here to-night who will pace off five miles to Kelso or Castle Rock to the lodge, the darkest night, and will excuse themselves from attending prayer meeting only three-quarters of a mile away." There was such a flutter in the crowd as to give away about every guilty one among them. Quite a number signed our constitution.

The next night I spoke at Castle Rock, in the City Hall. Was met at the train by Rev. D. A. Trundle, of the Christian church, who was holding a series of meetings in the town. We soon arranged for him to begin a half hour earlier, and me a half hour later, and then all could hear me. I went to the hall at near eight o'clock, found it closed and dark. I sent a lad to the city clerk for the key. The clerk would not open the hall. I then found the marshal; he had no authority to open it. It looked like a "last resort" of the lodges to keep me out. The people began to crowd around, and ask, "Why is the hall closed?" and, "This is no way to treat a white man when he comes to town." The pressure got too heavy for the marshal, and he opened the door. The ticket agent rushed out and got oil to fill the lamps. When Bro. Trundle arrived with his congregation from the church, our hall was literally packed. Such a feeling was aroused against the lodges that it will not down. This, in a town of seven hundred people, with twenty-two lodges, is a great victory. I never saw lodge people so sick of lodges in all my experience. They have taken an overdose, and it is not setting well on their stomach. I never was treated better by any people than at Castle Rock. I went there without a friend, but came away with hosts of them. The lodge people here know how to behave themselves in a manner to command respect. Of course, there were a few exceptions, one notable from a source where we should expect better things (a minister). The ministers were all present to hear me. Two of them (Christian and Presbyterian) heartily ap-

CORRESPONDENCE.

GOOD OMENS FOR THE ANNUAL MEETING.

[Our readers will be glad to hear from so many friends of the cause and laborers for the truth which the Cynosure is especially called to maintain. The following letters from corporate members of the National Christian Association, it will be seen, were written in response to letters from our secretary, W. I. Phillips, giving notice of the N. C. A. meeting and Conference to be held next week.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

CHICAGO, April 17, 1895.

DEAR SIR:—Other appointments shall not prevent; and I expect to be present on the 8th prox., if only to give countenance to this greatest missionary work of the age, in which those engaged are building greater than they know. Should think every good citizen would prefer to pay an admission fee, and not permit trouble expended for entertainment. Yours, JUDGE ZEARING.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22, 1895.

DEAR BROTHER:—In response to your announcement of the annual meeting of the N. C. A., I regret to say that it will be impracticable for me to be present, but I will pray earnestly for those who assemble upon whom will fall the responsiity of planning for another year of reform work. The need of the work does not diminish as the years increase, and I trust the Lord may amply sustain those who give themselves to it. Yours cordially, E. D. BAILEY.

DAYTON, O., April 22, 1895.

DEAR BRO.:—I wish very much to come to the meeting of the corporate members of the National Christian Association, May 8th; and you may set me down as coming. I am much interested in getting an editor who can emulate Father Blanchard in talent, and Bro. Kellogg in discretion. I have no United Brethren to suggest for it. An editor at this time is the crying need of our cause. Yours, MILTON WRIGHT.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., April 22, 1895.

DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:—Yours of the 17th inst. received, and contents noted. The conference you refer to I heartily approve of, and as it is to be in the middle of the week when my quarterly conferences are not in the way, I shall try to be present. Yours in love of the truth,

A. G. JOHNSON.

MENDOTA, Ill., April, 18, 1895.

DEAR BRO.:—I am not well, but am praying and doing what I can to be present at our annual meeting the 8th of May. Our brethren are thoroughly aroused on the lodge question, especially since the Supreme Court has given what I call a lodge decision against them. But we live and the Lord is with us. The cause upheld by the N. C. A. is espoused by us all, and we do not propose to go back into the world to bow to the lodge god. If not providentially hindered I hope to be at Chicago on the 8th of May. Your brother in Christ, (Rev.) C. BENDER.

BEAUFORT, S. C., April 20, 1895.

DEAR BRO. PHILLIPS:—Yours of the 17th inst., notifying me of the annual meeting of the N. C. A., is before me. I regret exceedingly that I am too far away to attend your annual meeting. My heart and prayers are with you. You have my deepest sympathy in your struggles against the kingdom of darkness. And though I am not in such close communication with you as in former years, yet I have not at any time ceased to lift up my voice in both public and private against the abomination of the lodge. My heart rejoiced to see the Cynosure once more. We have not forgotten you in our prayers. May the blessing of heaven rest upon you in your annual meeting. Most sincerely yours, G. M. ELLIOTT.

NAPERVILLE, Ill., April 22, 1895.

DEAR BRO.:—In reply to your letter received a few days ago, I would say that I am heartily in favor of holding a convention, and hope it will be a success. I shall try to be present if possible. Yours fraternally, H. F. KLETZING.

NORTH HARVEY, Ill., April 19, 1895.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—Yours received and perused with interest. So glad you have arranged for a conference. I am attending the lectures at the Bible Institute this month. I have two names for the Cynosure, on conditions, and will try and see you next week. Your brother for the battle for the Master, W. O. DINIUS.

HOPKINTON, Ia., April 18, 1895.

DEAR BRO.:—Your announcement of the annual meeting to be held on May 8, 1895, at 10:30 A. M., and of the conference, has been received. It would give me pleasure to attend; but as I shall not be able to come because of the distance and other matters, I comply with your request and send a letter. It had been my purpose to attend on a similar occasion last year, but my arrival in Chicago being delayed one day, I did not succeed. It is my earnest wish and prayer that the Spirit may guide you in all your deliberations and plans for the future work of the Association. Organized secrecy is certainly one of the greatest evils of the day; and a foe to the salvation of the soul, the welfare of society, the work of the church, and the true prosperity of our loved land. The number, activity, and success of these secret orders might discourage us were it not that we press forward in the strength of the Lord of hosts. The N. C. A. has been instrumental in doing much good. The Cynosure is a power in the cause of righteousness. And the various conventions held from time to time, though they may not be so well attended, or attract so much attention as we desire, serve to keep the light burning and the work moving. We know that by and by the now enthroned Redeemer will establish righteousness in the earth. Leaving suggestions for the work to the older and more experienced members, and wishing you the divine help, I am yours cordially, T. H. ACHESON.

THE GREAT FIRE.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

I shall not presume to give a history of this sublime and awful conflagration 24 years after its occurrence, but a few of the facts that were burned into my memory may be of interest.

Friday night, October 6, 1871, fourteen blocks on the west side of the Chicago river, something over a mile southwest of the court house, were destroyed by fire. This fire was spoken of with bated breath, for it took the united effort of the whole fire department to extinguish it, although most of the houses were cottages of but moderate size. We had been enjoying several weeks of most delightful, cloudless Indian summer weather, and everything was dry.

About three or four o'clock Monday morning, Oct. 9, I was aroused by my father, who lived next door to us. He was pounding on my window and calling, "Ezra! Ezra! Chicago is burning up." We were soon on our way down town. The fire did not appear to be more than a dozen blocks away, but when we had gone a dozen blocks it seemed no nearer. It was about three miles from our residences, in a southeasterly direction. Until we got almost to it we felt sure that it must be on the west side of the river; but as we drew near it was a great relief to see that it was all east of the river.

We succeeded in working our way through the crowd, which was every moment increasing, up to the abutment of Randolph street bridge, which had been saved from destruction by a hose from a building on the bank of the river. A glance showed us that our store was destroyed, but we had then no conception of the completeness of the ruin of our machinery, most of which was in the one-story building back of the store. As the sides were brick, and what floor there was rested on the ground, while the heaviest of the machinery stood on the ground itself and there was little wood, except the low roof, we thought none of this machinery would be greatly damaged.

The scene as we stood there spell-bound was indescribably sublime and awful! The very air seemed to be literally on fire a thousand feet high. It has been called a tornado of fire, and yet the wind, which blew steadily from the southwest, was but a breeze. I had seen what were called great fires previously, when there was a gale to fan the flames, yet the flames in the large business buildings simply burned out the inside, or in the usual parlance, gutted them, leaving the walls standing; but we were amazed to see that most of the thousands of buildings had been literally levelled, the brick which was not powdered by the terrific heat being in the excavated basements below the street level.

Wierd-looking square columns of brick were to be seen here and there—the brick walls mostly of banks. The First National Bank was justly proud of its "elegant fire-proof building," which stood on the corner of State and Washington streets, but a small part of the very massive walls, with vault, alone stood the fury of the flames. Everybody seemed awed, if not paralyzed, by the majestic yet awful scene.

Will it cross the river and sweep the north and west sides of the city? was continually asked. The fire had started on the west side, just south of the great fire of Friday night, and that burned district alone saved the whole west side and our homes; but it had crossed the river from the west to the east side, and swept the business portion of the town, which is called the south side, because south of the main river, though east of the south branch of the river. The only hope for the north side was that God might, in mercy, rebuke the wave of flame, for the wind was from the southwest, and should the fire sweep the north side, the only hope for the west side was that the direction of the wind might not change, as only the narrow north branch of the river separates the north and west sides. We were not long in suspense. The north side was soon on fire, and tens of thousands fled for their lives across the river to the west side, covering a large tract of prairie near the river, and filling the houses, out buildings and yards of the hospitable west siders, who, using their wash boilers for making coffee, took pails of that steaming beverage, with bread and crackers, from grocers and bakers, to the famishing multitude, hundreds spending Monday afternoon and night in this work of mercy. The churches and school houses sheltered thousands, and on Tuesday thousands accepted the free transportation furnished by railroads, with feelings similar to those of Lot and his family when fleeing from Sodom.

When the flames that crossed the river Sunday night commenced sweeping the homes of the south side, thousands fled in terror to the lake and some into the edge of the lake. Here they had water, and were in no actual danger of burning up, but they suffered terribly from exposure, hunger and fright; and the breeze was a veritable sorocco, so that to stand upright meant suffocation from the smoke, as the wind blew towards the lake.

To me the most mysterious thing that I saw was the spread of the flames southward. I have never seen an explanation of this phenomena. To see those flames slowly but steadily eat their way in the "teeth of the wind" was more awe-inspiring to me than to see the flames rushing, literally like a race-horse, over the north side, for, with the very atmosphere ablaze, and the terrific draft of the flame carrying firebrands high into the air, awful as it was, it was not so mysterious as this demon of flame working relentlessly against the wind. When the citizens at last appealed to Gen Phil. Sheridan to stop this devouring monster by blowing up several blocks, it seems to me it must have been with a feeling that unless God blessed his effort it was in vain. He did bless the effort.

The headquarters of Gen. Sheridan were next door to my store on La Salle street, and I saw him often, and received patronage from his office. At one time I made two lots of lithographed topographical government maps for military use on his order. He was one of the few perfectly loyal, faithful brave generals of our army. As I had previously, with Shield's division, been back and forth over the entire route of Sheridan's famous ride, taking part in the first battle of Winchester, and for several weeks afterwards being on the skirmish line of the advance guard of the army, chasing "Stonewall" Jackson, I can appreciate and understand that ride. I may be pardoned for remarking that the regiment to which I belonged never regarded Jackson or his army as good fighters. He was great only as a raider. With a large cavalry division under Ashby, and by the use of every horse and mule his men could find, he was able to get from one point to another quickly, and by surprising small federal outposts he became famous. We met him on his first raid, the first winter of the war, when 100 of us whipped 1,500 of his men, who ran from the battlefield, leaving two pieces of artillery. In the first battle of Winchester we whipped him and drove his men from the shelter of the stone walls that they used as breastworks, notwithstanding the fact that his army was numerically superior, at least two to one. Because of his use of stone walls as breastworks in this battle we gave him the soubriquet of "Stonewall" Jackson.

In my next I will speak of the great loss sustained by our reform in the Chicago fire.

THE TWO KINGS—CÆSAR AND CHRIST.

There is much fog over the ideas of civil government and its relation to the government of Christ. The civic or Cæsar governments are only for the things of time—that of Christ is for both time and eternity. Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world," and he taught his people to pay Cæsar his taxes. The Cæsars or civic powers use the sword of steel, and should be a terror to evil-doers, and the opposite of that to well-doers. The civic sword is under God, in his Providence, and may be used by a devout Cornelius as a Roman soldier.—Acts 10: 1-3. The address of Peter, verses 34-43, shows the difference between the two kingdoms. Not a word of censure is uttered, nor of change is suggested to this devout soldier of Cæsar, because of his occupation, but he is at once welcomed and enlisted into the army of the great Captain of his salvation. The Holy Spirit having been given him he was baptized. To Cæsar's banner he no doubt continued as loyal as before, although he was bound to uphold the banner of the wonderful "Jesus of Nazareth."

Jesus was a patient teacher of his followers. He taught the impetuous Peter that the true use of the sword was for Cæsar's government and not for Christ's "kingdom," which "is not of this world." He could have had "legions of angels" to conquer those of Cæsar, but no. He healed the ear that Peter had cut off, and never afterwards did Peter use any other sword in the service of his ascended Lord and Master than "the sword of the Spirit," the word of the living God, which is sharper than any two edged sword of any civic government. It pierces the heart and nourishes the soul. It destroys the sinner, and creates a new man in Christ Jesus. Amen.

OBITUARY.

MRS. MATILDA H. FEE.

We learn to our great sorrow of the death of Mrs. Matilda Hamilton Fee, wife of Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky. Mrs. Fee was a native of Bracken county, Ky. Her parents descended from members of the Society of Friends, and were always opposed to slavery, though it was prevalent all around them. On Sept. 26, 1844, she married Mr. Fee. This was in the beginning of tha long and arduous anti-slavery struggle in which she as well as her husband was subjected to ostracism and bitter persecution for espousing the cause of the slave. Fo. some years they lived at Cabin Creek in Lewis county, Ky. About 1858 they came to what is now Berea, and commenced the great work which has resulted in Berea College.

It is not too much to say that the eminent success that has crowned the labors of Mr. Fee in this great undertaking as well as the victory over popular prejudice was very largely due to the firm but quiet steadfastness with which she stood by her husband in the bitter conflict.

Her life in Berea exhibited her not only as the wise and faithful wife and mother, the earnest Christian worker and faithful champion of all true reform, but especially as the thoughtful friend of the young women and girls of either race who came to Berea to be educated. She will long be remembered, not only by those who have enjoyed the generous hospitality of their truly Christian home, but by a great multitude who have learned to love and honor her for her work's sake.

We extend to our sorely-stricken brother our deepest sympathy. May the blessed assurance support him as in the past.

> When through the deep waters I call thee go
> The rivers of sorrow shall not overflow,
> For I will be with thee thy troubles to bless,
> And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress.

REV. JOSEPH W. HOYT was born Oct. 17, 1831, in Balton, Stanstead Co , Canada East, and fell asleep in Jesus March 2, 1895. Bro. Hoyt was a faithful servant of God, and nearly thirty-five years a minister in the U. B. church. Before his departure he requested that no member of any secret order be allowed to make remarks over his remains, or carry his body to the grave. "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." K.

LITERATURE.

A number of the Anti-Infidel Library—"Skeptical Objections and How to Meet Them"—H. L. Hastings, has recently been revised. It is an excellent work: clear, simple, pointed, convincing, and inexpensive. Mr. Hastings in conclusion says: One of the best answers to skeptical objections is a practical exhibition of "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father; and the best weapon for fighting infidelity is the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. This Word, studied, understood, practiced and proclaimed, puts to flight "the armies of the aliens, and makes us more than conquerors through him that loved us." Price 10 cents; without covers 5 cents. 47 Cornhill, Boston.

"Spiritual Gifts and Graces." We have received a little book with the above title, by Rev. W. B. Godby, A. M. We have been pleased with the earnest Christian spirit with which it has been written. It bears evidence of critical and reverent Bible study, and will, we trust, be instrumental in the promotion of spiritual gifts in all who read it. But while we sympathize with him in the desire that all "covet earnestly the best gifts," we question whether now, or at any former period, all Christians were called to the exercise of all the gifts. In his wonderful chapter on "the body and the members" (1 Cor. 12) Paul says, "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers; after that miracles, gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret? (verses 28-30). Manifestly they did not. Again he tells us that prophecy shall fail and tongues shall cease. Only love shall endure forever. It seems to us that while all should "walk in the Spirit," each of us should seek to cultivate the talent that God has given him rather than to reach out after others. Price, manilla, 10 cents; cloth 25. Published by Rev. M. W. Knapp, 520 Chase Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

TESTIMONY.

"The anti secret force in Maine for active work has developed very rapidly within the last few years. A single copy of the Cynosure coming to an honest praying man for two years had much to do with the anti-secret character of the Cornish church, and still more to do with the revival and re-organization of the Maine Christian Association. Behold what God hath wrought! Praise his name forever!"—Elder S. C. Kimball, Editor Christian Witness, New Market, N. H.

HOW TO REMEDY MANY EVILS.

Various Things Which the Careful Housekeeper Should Know.

To beat whites of eggs quickly add a pinch of salt.

A few drops of lemon juice make cake frosting very white.

A hot shovel held over varnished furniture will take out white spots.

Try sprinkling powdered cloves about the places infested by red ants.

A bed of pennyroyal for a cat or dog will drive away fleas.

To remove iron rust stains from cotton or linen: One part powdered oxalic acid, 2 parts powdered cream of tartar. Apply a little of the powder to the dampened goods.

Throw flour on kerosene flames.

Immediately cover a burn with collodion or mucilage.

Use alum water freely for chilblains.

A little flour dredged over the top of a cake will prevent the icing from running.

Sprinkle clothes with hot water and a whisk broom.

Ripe tomatoes will remove ink spots.

Try molasses for grass stains.

For roaches use equal portions of cornmeal and red lead mixed with molasses and spread on plates placed in their haunts.

How to Serve Meats and Their Accompaniments.

Roast beef, grated horse radish, Worcestershire sauce.

Roast pork or goose, apple sauce.

Roast veal, tomatoes or mushroom sauce.

Roast turkey or chicken, cranberry sauce.

Roast mutton, currant jelly.

Roast lamb, mint sauce.

Corned beef, mustard.

Boiled mutton, caper sauce.

Boiled chicken, bread sauce.

Boiled turkey, oyster sauce.

Venison or wild ducks, black currant jelly.

Broiled fresh mackerel, stewed gooseberries.

Boiled bluefish, white "cream" sauce.

Broiled shad, boiled rice and salad, lemons.

Compote of pigeons, mushroom sauce.

Fresh salmon, green peas, cream sauce.

Lobster, salad dressing.

Sardines, sliced lemons.

Fish in general, Worcestershire sauce.

Ham, mustard.

How to Wash Dishes.

Dishes should be arranged for washing and washed in the following order: Glass, silver, cups and saucers and finally plates and dishes. The rule is always to wash the cleanest first and to wash few at a time. Two pans should be used, one for washing and one for rinsing, and the water in both should be changed as soon as it becomes cool or dirty. Plates should always be thoroughly scraped before washing. There should be an abundance of towels, and dishcloths should always be washed out afterward in fresh water and boiled once a week and hung in the sun whenever possible.

How to Make Nut Cake.

Take 4 tablespoonfuls of flour, 4 tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, an egg, a teacup of chopped nuts, a pinch of salt and black pepper. Grease and heat a long biscuit pan, mix all ingredients well and spread thinly on heated pan. It bakes in a few minutes. When done and while warm, run a knife through center of pan lengthwise, then crosswise in strips. Turn pan over, and when cool cakes should be quite crisp.

Baldness is either hereditary or caused by sickness, mental exhaustion, wearing tight-fitting hats, and by overwork and trouble. Hall's Renewer will prevent it.

THE N. Y. INDEPENDENT AND LODGERY.

The Independent of New York has an editorial on the recent action of the Romish church excluding members of secret associations from its communion.

The Independent says that it is not an advocate of any secret society. It declares that it does not believe in the published revelations of the proceedings of Masonic lodges. It says that while the order may be atheistic in Europe, it is certainly not so in the United States. It goes forward to declare that often if it were proper to exclude members of the Masonic lodge, it would be improper to exclude members of the lodges of the Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, Sons of Temperance, etc. It affirms of these organizations that their secrecy is not their chief feature, that their secrecy is not essentially wrong, that its purpose is evidently not to hide immorality or inculcate infidelity or treason. The Independent adds that the members are decent moral people, pehaps half of them members of churches. That the members assist one another in times of trouble, enable the unemployed to secure work and care for widows and orphans. It says they do not a little which our churches might do to their advantage. The article concludes by the statement that whether the societies are useful or otherwise the opposition to them is foolish, and that by it the church discredits and weakens herself. The editor says that while trying to drive men into the church they are simply driving them out.

This argument epitomized is a very fair specimen of the work done by men who do not belong to secret societies, but who nevertheless are the obedient servants of the lodge. Take, for example, the statement that the writer is not an advocate of any secret society. How can that be truthfully said in view of what immediately follows the statement. If to say that organizations are helpful; that certain features which some persons object to are not really objectionable, and that churches would do well to imitate them, is not advocating them, it is difficult to know just what the writer would call advocacy.

Suppose the editor of the Independent were to address a constituency of lodgemen and would say to them that the churches were not hostile to the poor as is sometimes alleged; that there was fraternity of feeling among them; that they did aid and assist their members in times of need, and that in addition they taught the worship of God through Jesus Christ, which the lodges would do well to do, it is safe to say that the lodgemen would understand the speaker to be advocating the cause of the churches. Just as all intelligent persons can see he is advocating the cause of lodges in this article, though he says he does not

It is much to be desired that persons who undertake to discuss the lodge question should take a little pains to inform themselves and to think. How does the Independent know that the secrecy of certain societies is an unimportant matter, and is never used to conceal criminal transactions? It is safe to say that the only evidence he has for such a statement as this is the fact that some worthy men are members of such organizations, which men, the Independent does not think would be engaged in any illegitimate transactions. But it is easy to show that while there are worthy persons in these lodges, there are also persons of another kind, and that the vast majority are not those who fear God and love their fellowmen. How does the Independent know what this larger class of lodgemen are at? How they are using their grips and signs? Wendell Phillips said, when questioned respecting lodges, "They are evidently for no good purpose and may be used for any bad one."

The organizations which are above quoted as examples of the excellence of secret societies make no better pretensions than the Molly Maguires of Pennsylvania, the Clan-na-Gael of Chicago, or the Ku-Klux Klan of South Carolina. The fact is that secret organizations are well adapted to lawless transactions and that those who are connected with them will, some of them from time to time, probably make use of them for the purpose to which they are so well adapted, for which they almost seem to have been designed.

It is interesting to notice how eagerly the cudgel is taken up for the lodge. What has the church done? Nothing, but declare that persons who wish to have the benefits of its membership must not be members of the lodges. Why does not the Independent fall into a rage over orthodox churches which refuse to admit to their membership persons of other churches unless they will sacrifice their former membership?

A person wishing to unite with the Congregational or Presbyterian church, but who is at present connected with the Baptist church, is required to give up his present membership in order to attain that which he wishes. We hear no complaint on any side that this is unreasonable or persecuting. Why is it not just as reasonable to require a man who belongs to the Masonic lodge, the Knights of Pythias, or the Odd-fellows, to leave that organization if he wishes the benefits of church membership? The case is the stronger, in that all admit that the different religious denominations are parts of the true church of God, while the lodges make no such claim for themselves, and are known by all persons who have studied them to be distinctly anti-Christian in character. If a man should take a letter from the church of which he is now a member in order to join in a respectable, orderly fashion another church, why should he not withdraw from his lodge, which is an anti-Christian assembly, before he professes faith in Christ and asks membership in a Christian church?

It is a noticeable fact that the only churches which at the present time have a male membership equal to the female membership are those which enlighten their members respecting secret organizations and require them to abstain from them. The writer has been recently in the East, and in the West, in churches of the United Presbyterian denomination where the number of young men present in church and Sunday-school was equal, and in one case greater than the number of young women so connected; and the reason why the average young man joins the lodge and forsakes the Sunday-school, prayer-meeting, and church is because he is totally uninformed of the character of the secret organizations with which he unites. How is he to find out what it is? The minister who is paid for preaching to him will ordinarily tell him not a word on the subject. If he subscribes for a religious periodical, it will contain too often only such weak and unintelligent writing as is found in this editorial of the Independent. There is no way for the average young man to know what the Masonic lodge is except by joining; and after he has united he must be a brave man if he ever comes out. After he has united he will be an exceptional man if he ever cares anything for vital Christianity.

If the Independent and other religious papers and all our pulpits would for twelve months give to the subject of anti-Christian organizations the thought and publicity which the importance of the lodge movement demands of our churches, there would be hundreds of thousands of young men who would never sacrifice their liberty for lodge membership, and who would at least have a chance to come into the Christian church.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Our old friend, G. W. Needles, writes: "Brethren and fellow-workers in the great cause that lies so near my heart, I wish it were practical to attend the annual meeting and participate in your deliberations, but under existing circumstances I must forego that pleasure. In the first place my health will not permit so long a journey; and if that were not so the last year's crops were almost a failure, and my means have been absorbed and I have gone in debt to meet demands upon me. Hoping you will have a profitable time and a successful gathering, I bid you God-speed."

"Dear brethren, I am as much opposed to secret societies as ever. I endeavor to 'keep the ball rolling' and do the little I can do by sending the Cynosure to friends, passing it on to a neighbor, and by lending books. I pray the Lord to be with you."—Mrs. E. C. Capwell.

—To my mind every year shows more and more the importance of the work which the National Christian Association is doing. I regret that I have not been so situated these last few years that I might do for this cause what I would like. The clash of interests between some of the secret orders, together with their almost endless multiplicity, is awakening thought upon this subject and unloosing the tongues of many who formerly would not have thought the subject of sufficient importance to give it organized and effective opposition."—B. T. Pettingill.

—"Many thanks for your invitation. I do not think it will be possible for me to attend the conference. My hands are overfull. So I shall have to bid you God-speed in your endeavor to shed light upon the ways that are dark, and bide my time for a word of testimony. Sincerely yours," —E. P. Goodwin.

—Bro. H. C. Delano, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, Evanston, writes: "I am so full of work, giving some extra time to lectures here and there, I fear that I cannot attend the proposed meetings. I earnestly hope that you may have a good time, and profitable indeed."

—Bro. C. B. Ward, for eighteen years a missionary in Bombay, brought to this country about a year ago his wife and children, and is now preparing to return to his field of labor. He is in cordial sympathy with the Cynosure and the work of the National Christian Association.

—Bro. N. W. Deveneau, pastor of the French M. E. Mission in this city, intends to help the conference and annual meeting with his presence and his prayers.

—Bro. T. D. Wallace, of the Eighth Presbyterian church, city, writes that he is under obligations for special work just now, and will not be able to attend the conference.

—The secretary of the Illinois Home Missionary Society, writes: "I have an appointment to deliver an address, which will prevent me from being present to participate in the interesting discussions which you will doubtless have. Trusting that the conference will be the means of promoting truth and righteousness, and build up the kingdom of Jesus Christ, I am yours sincerely," —James Tompkins.

—W. R. Sterrett, Cedarville, O., sends his greetings to the annual meeting as follows: "I regret that it will not be possible for me to attend the annual meeting May 8, '95. My desire is that the King of Righteousness may give light in all your counsels, and grant his abundant blessing to follow them. May God's people work with him to remove the works of darkness out of the way of the oncoming King of Glory. (Do they not see him coming?) Joyfully let us bear reproaches for his name, and we shall soon reign with him. Yours for the Master."

—"My dear brother, I thank you sincerely for the kind invitation to be present at your meeting of the N. C. A. My heart is wholly with you but it will be absolutely impossible for me to be present as I am now overcrowded with work and engagments. Yours very cordially and fraternally,"—J. F. Loba, Evanston, Ill.

—Bro. R. M. Chestnut says: "It will be impossible for me to be with you at your conference. Hoping and praying that God may bless your meeting, I am yours truly and fraternally."

—"I regret that previous appointments for May 8–11 prevent me being present at the N. C. A. meeting of that date. Sincerely yours,"—W. T. Meloy.

—G. M. Robb, "an interested reader of the Cynosure," at New Alexandria, Pa., refers to the statement in our Washington letter not long since, that "this is a Christian nation" and says: "While I have no desire to deny that in a very important sense the nation is Christian, yet I do not think it Christian in the full sense that it should be." We insert at his request the article, "Is the Constitution of the United States Christian?"

—Bro. M. N. Butler writes: "Members of the National Christian Association: Although not a member of your association, yet the announcement in the Cynosure of your annual meeting reminds me that I am heart and soul in the great cause against the Christless un-American lodge system and other giant evils, and I simply pen a line to extend a fraternal greeting and wish you ever-increasing success in spreading the light and truth along these lines. The Cynosure reflects interesting glimpses of the reform work from the field week by week, and serves to strengthen our faith which often needs strengthening."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Liquor dealers, murderers —Race track crime breeders.— Income tax —American Tract Society anniversary.— A wedding —American Society of Religious Education. —Patents.

Bad as the liquor dealers as a class are known to be, few people were prepared to accuse them of adding murder to their other crimes against law and order; but a man now in the Washington jail has confessed that he was employed by the liquor men to murder a police sergeant who, by his activity against those liquor dealers who conduct their business illegally, had made many enemies among that class. This confession, which has been placed before the grand jury for action, has aroused much indignation in this city, even among those who have not heretofore taken any active part in working against the liquor men, and it will unquestionably add to the zeal and industry of the active temperance workers. About the time the man in jail says he was bargaining with the liquor men for the murder of Sergeant Daley, that officer received an anonymous warning that he would be murdered if he did not let the liquor men alone. This is the same officer the liquor men tried so hard to have dismissed on trumped-up charges, supported by perjury, a few months ago. The man who made this confession is a thief, but the police think they have evidence to corroborate his statements to a sufficient extent to cause them to believe him. They are still investigating, and some arrests will probably shortly be made among the liquor dealers.

A union of pulpit and press has accomplished wonders in other places, and the good people of the national capital are now praying that the union which has been made by two daily papers, and a large number of our preachers, will succeed in driving off the crowd of criminals, which has steadily grown larger and larger since the establishment of the race tracks on the Virginia side of the Potomac, just opposite Washington. It has been fully proven that a number of burglaries recently committed here were the work of men who made their headquarters around these race tracks. The Washington police keep these thieves out of the city, so far as they can, but they have no authority to go over into Virginia after them, and the authorities in Alexandria county, where these race tracks are located, are openly accused of being controlled by the gamblers who operate them. So the only thing left to Washington people, who constantly see bright young men made into thieves and drunkards through the presence of these race tracks, is to arouse public opinion to such an extent that the Virginia authorities will be compelled to drive out these men who openly violate the laws of God and man. The two daily papers have been waging a strong fight on these criminals for sometime, and the ministers of the city have been firing a shot in the same cause occasionally; but last Sunday there was a regular broadside from the pulpits of the city, seventeen ministers denouncing the evil and calling upon their congregations to aid in driving it out. This will be kept up until something is done.

Chief Justice Fuller announced yesterday that arguments on the petitions for a rehearing of the income tax cases would be heard May 6, when it is expected that a full bench will be sitting.

Special services were held in the Church of the Covenant, in commemoration of the seventieth anniversary of the American Tract society. Dr. Hamlin preached the sermon and Dr. W. A. Rice, the missionary secretary, delivered a short address. The venerable ex-Justice Strong, who has for twenty-two years been president of the Tract society, is the senior elder in this church.

No less than four bishops were present at the marriage of Hon. G. N. Curzon, M. P., of England, to Miss Mary Victoria Leiter, which took place in St. John's church, on Monday. Bishop Talbot, assisted by Rev. Dr. Mackey-Smith, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The other bishops present as guests were Coxe, Doane, and Potter.

The American Society of Religious Education, the headquarters of which have been located in Washington for the last two years, held its sixth anniversary meeting this evening in the First Congregational church. Gen. John Eaton, president of the society, presided, and the annual address, on "The Bible and Sociology," was delivered by Hon. W. T. Harris, U. S. commissioner of education. Others who took part in the services were Rev. Dr. Hugh Johnston, Rev. Dr. J. E Gilbert, secretary of the society, whose annual report was an interesting document; C. W. Needham, who reported the progress of the Sunday Teachers' Club; H. B. F. McFarland, who told of the successful lecture course of which he had charge; and Rev. G. B. Patch, who talked about the Bible Readers' Union. *

proved my work, while the other (M. E.), I was told afterward, acted more like a "hoodlum" than any person in the vast audience. Several signed the constitution. Some took the paper. Quite a number bought books on the subject.

Here I had the extreme good pleasure of meeting again Rev. H. Elwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, whom I met, in 1884, in Benton county, Indiana. Am pleased to find him still against secret societies. I was met, the next morning, at the train by a number who wanted books and more light on the subject. They urged me to stop off, and give them another lecture on my return. They assure me "no house is large enough to hold the audience that will greet you next time."

Rev. Trundle is heartily opposed to the orders. May the Lord bless the dear people of Castle Rock, and give them moral courage to carry out their deep convictions on the lodge question.

STUDY SELF CONTROL

YOUNG MEN, BE FAST ONLY TOWARD GOODNESS.

Madison C. Peters Exhorts Youth Not to Sell Its Birthright—Impurity Is Worse Than Intemperance—Sad Ending of Byron and Lamb.

There is nothing young people need to cultivate so much as self control. Farewell to the hopes of a young man when he flings the reins of passion loose on its neck! What an illustration of the bondage of sin these words which Burns wrote during a long sickness:

Fain would I say forgive my foul offense,
Fain promise never more to disobey,
But should my Author health again dispense
Again I might desert fair virtue's way,
Again in folly's path might go astray,
Again exalt the brute and sink the man.
Then how should I for heavenly mercy pray
Who act so counter to heavenly mercy's plan:
Who sin so oft has mourned, yet to temptation ran?

What better is the testimony of Byron, who wrote on his thirty-third birthday:

Through life's dull road so dim and dirty
I have dragged to three and thirty.
What have these years left to me?
Nothing, except thirty-three.

Still later he acknowledged what no man of God ever needs to confoss:

Though gay companions o'er the bowl
Dispel awhile the sense of ill;
Though pleasure fill the maddening soul,
The heart, the heart is lonely still.

Count o'er the joys thine hours have seen,
Count o'er thy days from anguish free,
And know whatever thou hast been
'Tis something better not to be.

Nay for myself, so dark my fate
Through every turn of life hath been,
Men and the world so much I hate
I care not when I quit the scene.

He laid his master mind like incense on unhallowed altars, and with his last breath he gathered up the strings of his discordant harp, sat down in the ashes of his hopes, and before dying, at 38, sent forth this wail from the gloomy depths of his soul:

My days are in the yellow leaf;
The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
The worm, the canker and the grief
Are mine alone.

How sad those verses of Hartley Coleridge, written in his Bible on his twenty-fifth birthday:

When I receved this volume small,
My years were barely seventeen,
When it was hoped I should be all
Which once, alas, I might have been,
And now my years are twenty-five,
And every mother hopes her lamb
And every happy child alive
May never be what now I am.

Charles Lamb made all the world laugh at him and then afterward made all the world weep at his fate. He who could outwit everybody was outwitted by his own passions. He thus cries out to young men: "The waters have gone over me. But out of the black depths, could I be heard, I could cry out to all those who have but set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth to whom the flavor of his first wine is delicious as the opening scenes of life or the entering upon some newly discovered paradise look into my desolation and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is when a man shall feel himself going down a precipice with open eyes, and a passive will, to seo his destruction and have no power to stop it and yet feel it all the way emanating from himself, to soe all godlinoss emptied out of him and yet not able to forget a time when it was otherwise; to bear about him the piteous spectacle of his own ruin. Could he see my fevered eye, feverish with the last night's drinking and feverishly looking for tonight's ropetition of the folly; could he but feel the body of the death out of which I cry, hourly with feebler outery, to be delivered, it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth in all the pride of its mantling temptation."

Young men, living in America and the nineteenth eentury, the very synonyms for opportunity, will you sell your birthright for a few nights of carousing? Will you in the beastliness of lust, in the vortex of pleasure, in the red gleaming of the wine cup, in the pleasures of riot, in the foul pestilence of disease, in the madness of the gaming table, in the painted harlot's vile embrace, will you, can you drown all there is about you of purity and nobleness and manliness and become a poor, degraded, wretched thing? Will you spend a weary, worthless life and see your sun go down at noon? Look at the facts. Have done with the riotous living, the hollow amusement; bo serious, sober, steadfast, strong and "sit solf governed in the fiery prime of youth, obedient at the feet of law." If you must be fast, be fast in the right direction, fast toward goodness, toward God.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 5. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The lessons of Gethsemane.—Mark xiv, 32-52.

The garden of Gethsemane is one of the sacred spots in the history of our Lord Jesus Christ. Whenever we enter its sacred inclosuro, we instinctively feel that we must do so reverently and humbly because the ground whereon we stand is holy ground.

Gethsemane is fruitful of important subjects and lessons that may be drawn from them, but the all important, overshadowing subject that it suggests is that of the agony of Christ. Here it was that His soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; here it was that he "sweat as it were great drops of blood, falling to the ground;" here it was that He prayed unto God that the cup, if possible, might pass from Him. Who can contemplate such agony and suffering without inquiring what was the cause of it? It was not death, for Christ had power over death. It was not the fear of death, for He knew that death would only bring release from His pain and agony. It was not the thought of separation from His loved ones, for He knew that even after doath He would still abide with them. What was it then? It was the fact that in Gethsemane Christ began to bear the burden of man's sin. Here it was that He who knew no sin was made sin for us all. Here our iniquity was laid upon Him. The cup which filled His soul with such unutterable dread was the cup of God's anger, filled to the brim with its strange red wine, the wine of His wrath. How this agony of Christ should teach us the enormity of sin and its consequences! If He could scarcely bare it, how can we stand up under its burden? Let us be warned, then, to accept His suffering as ours, that "by His stripes we may be healed."

The intensity of Christ's suffering and agony is best seen perhaps in the fact that He prayed to God that, if possible, it might pass from Him. Had the burden of sin not been almost intolerable in its intensity the Son of God would never have uttered this agonizing prayer. God answered His prayer, but not in the way asked. The cup was not removed, but "there appeared unto Him an angel from heaven strengthening Him." Another important lesson. We, too, may have our cups of sorrow, of pain and affliction and may pray to God that they pass from us, and although thoy may not pass away He will give us strength to drink them, which is equivalent to the same thing.

The intensity of His agony must have been increasod also by the faithlessness of the disciples. What pain in the exclamation "What! Could ye not watch one hour?" Another lesson. When we are faithless, we grieve the Son of God. Will we pain Him, who bore the burden of sin for us?

The Age of the Mouth.

One of the most celebrated living novelists was heard once to say that if he were a woman he would try to be one with a charming disposition—a disposition sweet and unselfish and sunny and self controlled and sorene, if nothing else, because it mado ono look so pretty around the mouth. The fanciful remark is to bo pondered. It is that sort of disposition, and that alone, which gives a woman a good mouth and an attractive mouth to the end. More, it is that sort of disposition alone, with the childlike quality of mind that goes with it, that keeps the mouth young in expression for any length of time. The French actress knew it. She was not a childlike creature naturally nor a serene nor a self controlled and sweet one. But she knew by an unfailing instinct that if she were all these she would also look younger around the mouth, and that she wanted to do. So she assumed the virtue, though she had it not.

The American Girl.

An English magazine writer truthfully says:

Outdoor life, delight in action, the spirit of sport, have taken hold of American womanhood. Girls of strong, active physique, erect carriage and energetic spirit, delighting in tennis, riding, boating, walking, are now the rule. The feeble indoor do nothing is the exception, and the result is a tall, vigorous race with free steps and checks aglow with the ruddy color of physical health and energy. Walk along the avenues of New York, Boston, Chicago or any large city at the fashionable hours, and the procession of bright, animated girlhood which passes before one's eyes gives ample proof of summer activity in the country and city work in gymnasium and riding school.

The Uncharitable Woman.

A story is told of a bright little girl here in town which points an excellent moral. I detest stories with a moral as a rule, but this one points to such a universal fault and such a bad one from all standpoints that it much impressed me. The little lady was an unnoticed listener at a family discussion, and she suddenly piped up and said:

"Say, mamma, is everybody wicked?"

"Why, no, my child, of course not," said mamma. "What makes you ask such a question?"

"Only because you haven't said a nice thing about anybody today."

The rest was silence. I cannot imagine how the horrors of that distressing habit of criticism could be brought more forcibly to any one's mind than by the comment of this little one. And I am charitable enough to believe that it is only a habit. There is comparatively little in it that is really vicious, but it is an insinuating habit, and one that grows upon you, and before you realize it you are devoting your day to saying disagrecable instead of agreeable things.—Kansas City Times.

Boiled Sewing Machine.

This does not make a very palatable dish, but it gives very satisfactory results. A sewing machine that seems to get out of order without cause is probably dirty and will fail to give satisfaction until thoroughly cleaned. If the works are set carefully into a boiler of boiling hot soapsuds they may be quickly cleaned with little trouble. Add a teaspoonful of ammonia to a pail of the suds and let the machine works stand in this until the dirt is removed. Then lift out and dry thoroughly with a woolen cloth and set it in a warm place until every particle of dampness is removed. Now set it on tho stand, oil every part, adjust the belt, and the machine will run like a new one. Old clocks that have seemed to outlive their usefulness may be treated in this manner, and a thorough boiling will often cleanse the works and give them a new lease of usefulness.—Kansas City Star.

Mrs. Will Carleton.

Mrs. Will Carleton was a Baptist missionary in India before her marriage to Mr. Carleton. Her first husband died in tho missionary work there, and so did her threo children. She returned to this country to recover the health she had lost, and against all her prearranged plans married instead of going back. She has kept ever since a most ardent interest in India and pays the expenses of one native teacher there year in and year out. She organized a board of young people in Brooklyn, where she lives, into a missionary society and gave it the name of "Farthest Lights." She went to her husband for the name, as she constantly turns to him for sympathy and assistance in her missionary enthusiasm. She has no children now, but she says if she had a daughter she would want to dedicate her to missionary work in India.—Exchange.

Mme. Diaz.

Mmo. Diaz, wife of the president of Mexico, reminds an American girl, who knew them both, very much of Mrs. Cleveland. The girl is Miss Conway, whose father was at one time a member of the diplomatic corps in the City of Mexico. Mme. Diaz sympathizes with movements for expanding the life of women, but is herself very conventional in her life, and shows more talent for society than anything else. She lived in New York city several years, when she was Miss Rubis, but she likes Mexico better. She is young, handsome and childless.

Teach the Children Love.

Indulge in the warm and gushing emotions of paternal love. Think it not a weariness. Teach your children to love, to love the rose, the robin; to love their parents, their God. Let it be the studied object of their domestic culture to give them warm hearts, ardent affections. Bind your whole family together by strong cords. You cannot make them too strong.—New York Mercury.

Tablecloth Stains.

Do you know that when a stain gets on the fresh dinner cloth the easiest way to remove it is immediately after dinner to slip a bowl directly under the spot, thus raising the cloth from the table, and then pour boiling water over the stain? Let the cloth remain stretched over the bowl until the wet portion dries.

Danger In Heavy Clothing.

There are more illnesses growing up into giant maladies every day than the old time family physician ever dreamed of, even in his varied and comprehensive experience. One of the new disease fads is told about by a popular physician, who is consulted only by women of the haut ton.

"There is a new complaint that has recently developed among women," said he. "It begins with a tired, dragged feeling and general lassitude. The patient feels disinclined for exercise and gradually loses her appetite and spirits while, as a natural result, really serious troubles are apt to develop under such favorable conditions. A patient of mine, who is a prominent woman of the world, came to me a few days ago nearly in tears. 'Doctor,' she said, 'I am either growing old or am going to be ill. I feel tired and exhausted all the time and have no spirits for anything, and yet there does not seem to be anything really the matter with me.'

"I asked her a lot of questions about herself and could not see any canse for the symptoms she described, and as I had had several similar complaints within the week I felt quite puzzled. Suddenly an idea strnck me. 'Will you step on my weighing machine?' I asked. 'I would like to know your weight.' 'Oh, doctor,' she remonstrated, 'I really have lost a good deal, but with this skirt you could not tell anything. It weighs at least 10 to 12 pounds.' 'Ah, that is exactly what I want to get at,' I answered. 'Go home, my dear madam, take off that heavy skirt and heavy mantle, put on light, sensible garments and walk several miles a day, and I will gnarantee a cure.'"

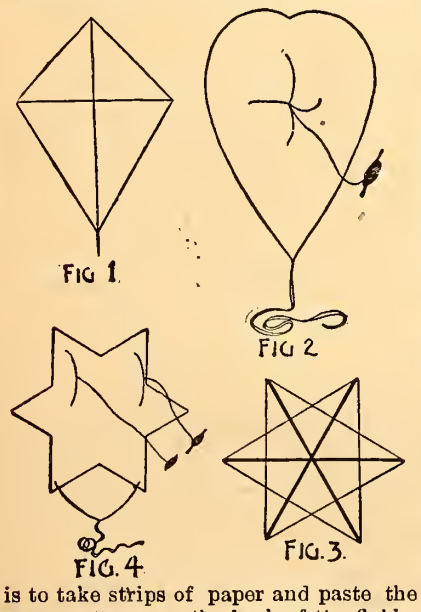
Woman and the Bible.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, with the assistance of a company of distinguished women, has been preparing a commentary upon those passages of the Bible which relate to women. This commentary, which has been awaited with interest by many women, has begun to appear serially in The Woman's Tribune of Washington and is attracting newspapor comment far and wide. Many of these comments have been friendly, but some havo been unjust and even ridiculous.

Men have been publishing voluminous commentaries upon the Bible for centuries. Why should it be absurd for a committee of women to prepare a commentary upon those passages especially relating to their sex? The women associated with Mrs. Stanton in the work are Mary A. Livermore, Lady Henry Somerset, Frances E. Willard, Frances Lord, Harriet Stanton Blatch, Helen Gardener, Mrs. Robert Ingersoll, Ellen Battelle Dietrick, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Sarah A. Underwood, Rov. Phebe Hanaford, Rev. Olympia Brown, Mrs. Chapman-Catt, Clara Bewick Colby, Frances Ellen Burr and Lillie Devereux Blake. It will be seen that the committee ineludes women of the most diverse religious views. Each woman will be responsible only for her own portion of the commentary.—Woman's Journal.

Four thonsand girls were last year sheltered in the Anchorage mission at Chicago and 300 placed in good positions.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS.



HOW TO MAKE KITES.

Observe the Following Directions and You Will Have Two Good Soarers.

The best material with which to cover a kite is strong tissue paper. It is better than silk, with which Benjamin Franklin covered his kite, because it is not so porous and will hold the wind better. Franklin knew this, but used silk, so that if it rained the kite would not be blown to pieces. All that is absolutely necessary, however, to make a good kite which will fly high, and fly well, are some pieces of wood, a spool of thread, a newspaper, some flour for the paste and a jackknife. Don't let any one induce you to try to make a kite that will fly without a tail, for it is not reliable. The good old kites with the tails which can be made heavy or light, according to the wind, and can be made steadys or divers by just adding a little tail or breaking a piece off, can always be relied on to do just what you want them to do.

Now, to make the heart kite, take two sticks of wood. The lighter they are the better they will fly, only don't make them so light that the least strain will break them. If you want to make a kite 3 feet high, one stick must be 3 feet long, and the other 2 feet. Make a cross with them, the short stick one foot from the top of the long stick. Then tie them together with thread where they cross each other. Take another piece of thread and tie it to the top and bottom of the long stick, and to the ends of the cross sticks, so that it looks like the picture, Fig. 1. Then take a piece of tissue paper, if you have it, and lay it on the frame. Cut some paper in strips and paste them, with good flour paste, over the sticks and thread and on the tissue paper, until you have fastened the tissue paper to the frame, leaving plenty of margin outside of the thread. Then cut the margin in the shape of a heart, as shown in Fig. 2. You will now find that the round parts of the heart, which are not made stiff by being pasted to the frame, will not stand out straight, but will droop.

There are two ways to make stiffening. One is by taking some broom straws and piercing them through the parts of the paper you want to stiffen, as you would with a pin, and the other is to take strips of paper and paste the broom straws on the back of the flabby places until they stand stiff. The bellyband of the heart kite is shown in Fig. 2, and you will find that it is a good high flier.

The steering kite is a little harder to build, but any boy can make one if he tries and will have lots of fun in flying it.

Fig. 3 shows the frame. The heavy lines are the sticks, and the light lines are thread. Take three light sticks, 2 feet long each, cross them exactly in the middle, as shown in Fig. 3, and tie them firmly with thread. Then tie a piece of thread to the end of one of the sticks and then to another and another until a skeleton just like the figure is made—a six pointed star. In putting on the thread every time it crosses another thread or one of the sticks tie it, so that when completed the frame will be strong and firm. Lay the frame on a piece of tissue paper and cut the paper just a little bigger than the frame. Then turn the edges of the paper over the thread and paste them down with good flour paste. This kite is not flown as others are. You have got to have two balls of string and two bellybands, or bridles, as they are called, on it, as shown in Fig. 4. You must be careful to let out both balls of cord evenly until the kite is well up; then if you want to steer it to the left pull slightly on the left string, and you will find it will travel some distance in that direction.

If you want it to go to the right, pull on the other string. It will take a little practice before you can raise the steering kite without getting the two strings or reins mixed, but when you get the nack of the thing you will find it lots of fun. Another thing you can do with this kite is to have races between "messengers" by starting one on each string. On both of the kites which have been described the usual tails are to be used. These kites can be made any size, even bigger than a man, if you want to, only if the heart kite is too big you will have to get something stronger than broom straw to stiffen the edges with. Whalebone is best.

On Top of Grandpa's Barn.

When the little ship sails west,
The sky is bonny and bright.
But you never know how the wind will blow
The little ship before night.

She scuds away to the east
When the world is full of rain,
Then off she goes when a cold wind blows,
Tacking to north again.

All day she sails hither and yon,
But never to port gets she,
And though you may laugh the little craft
Has never sailed on the sea.

Her sea is the air, and the spray
That wets her keel is the rain.
On every cruise he carries the news,
This good ship Weather Vane.

DRUNKENNESS IN FRANCE.

Increase In the Consumption of Alcohol Tripled In Forty Years.

To begin bluntly with the actual consumption of alcohol in France, the amount per head of the inhabitants has more than tripled in the last 40 years. In a workingmen's suburb of Rouen the average absorption is a half liter (eighty-eight hundredths of a pint) for each inhabitant daily. By this is meant that amount, not of beer or wine, but of spirits of alcohol, however taken. It would be wrong to suppose that such excesses are limited to the laboring class of the population. Dr. Lancereaux says: "Women have a particular taste for absinthe, and if they rarely intoxicate themselves with wine and with alcohol it must be acknowledged that in Paris at least they are often injured by aperitifs (absinthe, bitters, etc.). Without fear of being accused of exaggeration, I venture to say that this kind of intoxication, for some years back, is as common among women as among men."

Throughout all France there are now 55,000 more liquor shops than before the war of 1870. With the 32,000 open in Paris and the 425,000 in the departments, there is one place for selling alcohol to every 85 inhabitants. The quality of the alcohol thus sold may be gathered from the scale of prices in the popular resorts—2 cents a glass for absinthe, 3 cents for coffee, with the "little glass" (brandy). The price, but not necessarily the quality, is higher at the places where the wives of respectable bourgeois sit beside their husbands. Of late there are frequent complaints of the use of absinthe before the noon lunch and the evening dinner in the family itself.

As to drunkenness proper, it has until recent years been no very noticeable evil among the so called Latin races. At present in France there is a large and growing number of instances. In some of the country parts there is something frightful in the statistics of minors under 16 years of age brought up before the courts for scandalous intoxication. In Paris the frequency of drunkenness has long been a known fact and is rapidly on the increase. Its significance is strengthened by the great number of deaths registered as due to "accidents alcoholiques."—Exchange.

BEER AND BRAINS.

The English Laborer Is Beginning to Realize That They Don't Go Together.

When John Burns, the English labor leader, was asked to state his position upon the temperance question, he said: "I have been a lifelong abstainer from alcoholic drink and from tobacco as well. I feel satisfied that the bulk of the trade union men in our country are temperance men. There is a rapid change going on in that direction. However much trade unionists may differ on other points, they are all agreed in opposing the saloon keepers. There is a growing tendency to hold their meetings apart from saloons and to seek meeting places in town halls, municipal chambers and the like.

"A few years ago publicans sought to get meetings of workingmen in their buildings, but now the workingmen are getting so sober, because they drink less liquor or none at all, that the saloon keepers spend more to get rid of them than they do to get them. Among the labor leaders especially there is a strong sentiment for temperance. The bulk of the socialistic labor leaders and lecturers especially are teetotalers. In England we are beginning to realize that beer and brains don't go together."—Exchange.

The Whisky Habit a Handicap.

Any one coming into contact with the swifter currents of city life will learn that there are hundreds of men who abstain from drinking, not because they have any hatred for alcohol, but because they have certain objects in life and have learned by experience or observation that the use of whisky would interfere with their plans.

They are content that other men in their same line of business, or those with whom they deal, should drink, if they want to drink, but as calculating sports and speculators they have gone over the records and have decided that the liquor habit is a handicap.—Chicago Herald.

The English poet, Robert Bridges, is a doctor who retired from practice long ago. He is now 51 years of age. A second edition of his "Eros and Psyche" has just appeared in London.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 12.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 53-64—Memory Verses, 60-62—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 3—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

53. "And they led Jesus away to the high priest, and with him were assembled all the chief priests, and the elders, and the scribes." After the darkness and agony of the garden, being strengthened by an angel, He went forth to lay down His life of His own accord (John x, 18). The boastful disciples all forsook Him and fled (verses 31, 50). The young man of verses 51, 52 was probably Mark himself, as in other cases the unnamed one was doubtless the writer of the gospel (Luke xxiv, 18; John i, 40). Jesus, being bound (John xviii, 12), is led as a lamb to the slaughter (Isa. liii, 7), for those before whom He was brought had long before determined to kill Him (Math. xii, 24; John xi, 53).

54. "And Peter followed Him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest, and he sat with the servants and warmed himself at the fire." The result of Peter's following afar off and being in bad company is seen in verses 66 to 72 following the lesson. Self confident boasting is very apt to lead to rash conduct, bad company and many worse things, as in the case of Peter. We must have no confidence in ourselves, but be strong in the Lord and let Him perfect His strength in our weakness (Phil. iii, 3; Eph. vi, 10; II Cor. xii, 9).

55. "And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put Him to death, and found none." Their minds were fully made up, and God was going to let them have their way and accomplish what He foresaw would surely come to pass (Acts iv, 27, 28). They were now seeking some reason for their conduct, but could find none except in the wickedness of their own hearts. Testimony in His favor they could have readily obtained in abundance, but against Him, none. See John xviii, 20; Heb. vii, 26; Math. iii, 17; xvii, 5.

56. "For many bare false witness against Him, but their witness agreed not together." It had been written that it should be so. "False witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty." "False witnesses did rise up. They laid to my charge things that I knew not" (Ps. xxvii, 12; xxxv, 11). So every true follower of Jesus may expect to suffer wrongfully for conscience toward God, may expect to suffer for well doing, and if under such circumstances we can take it patiently God is well pleased (I Pet. ii, 19, 20). As His followers we must walk as He walked (I John ii, 6).

57, 58. "And there arose certain and bare false witness against Him, saying, We heard Him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands." Just what He did say, out of which they made this accusation, is found in John ii, 19, and if you compare His words with what they made Him say you may not feel so bad about some sayings of yours which have come back to you somewhat perverted. The fact is that we have no time to waste on feeling bad about slanders and false accusations. Such things will continue till the Lord comes, and when He permits them to come our way we must at once thank Him for the privilege of such fellowship (I Thess. v, 18; Phil. i, 29), and referring the whole matter to Him just leave it with Him to be adjusted (Isa. liv, 17).

59. "But neither so did their witness agree together." Consequently there was no case against Him, and He should have been set free, for their law said plainly that one witness could not condemn; there must be two or three (Deut. xvii, 6; xix, 15). How can we expect righteousness in a world which through its most religious leaders thus treated the Lord Himself? His meek submission is our example and makes us think of the admonition, "Take wrong, be defrauded" (I Cor. vi, 7).

60. "And the high priest stood up in the midst and asked Jesus, saying: Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witness against thee?" He knew there was no case against the prisoner, perhaps felt the ridiculous position in which they were placed, and allowed his feelings to overcome him. According to the law, the witnesses had testified nothing against Him, for no two agreed.

61. "But He held His peace and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked Him and said unto Him, Art Thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?" There was nothing to answer, and in the calmness of conscious innocence He was quiet. When people seek our hurt, speaking mischievous things and imagining deceits all the day long, let us have grace to be as the deaf who hear not and as the dumb who open not the mouth, but just hope in the Lord (Ps. xxxviii, 12-15).

62. "And Jesus said, I AM, and ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven." This reply takes us back to the name He used when He sent Moses to deliver Israel (Ex. iii, 14). He often used it in the days of His humiliation, for in many cases where we read, "I am He," the "He" is in Italics, so that He really said "I am," as in John iv, 26; viii, 24, 28; xiii, 19; xviii, 5, 6, 8, etc. When He shall come in power and glory, as He said, it will be bringing His saints with Him according to Zech. xiv, 5; Judg. xiv; I Thess. iii, 13, and it will be for the redemption of Israel and for vengeance upon her enemies (Deut. xxxii, 43; Isa. xxxiv, 8; xxxv, 4; lxiii, 4).

63. "Then the high priest rent his clothes and saith, What need we any further witness?" This apparently holy wrath was all of the devil in the name of religion. To this day it may be seen. We should not be moved by it. It is often seen, even in religious people, in connection with this very truth of the second coming of Christ in power and glory. Let one insist that Jesus is coming with all His saints (Col. iii, 4) for the conversion of the nation of Israel, and to set up the kingdom promised to David with a throne at Jerusalem, according to Jer. iii, 17; Luke i, 32, 33, etc., and he will probably be accused of perverting the truth to the destruction of his soul.

64. "Ye have heard the blasphemy. What think ye? And they all condemned Him to be guilty of death." And began at once, like so many barbarians, to illtreat their prisoner. They spit on Him, and mocked Him, and struck Him, and He meekly bore it all. O Jesus, Saviour! what have we ever borne for thee? May we deeply ponder it and have grace to bear for His sake with meekness whatever He may let us endure for Him. Because we are here in His stead we should always act as He would (II Cor. v, 20).

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, April 24.—The senate adopted a number of amendments to the Cook county civil service bill and advanced it to third reading. The bill to grant relief to veterans through the Grand Army was passed, as were the valued policy bill and the bill regulating pawners' societies. In the house a bill was introduced to construct a ship canal from Chicago to the Mississippi. The enacting clause was stricken from the bill providing that all election judges should be appointed by boards of supervisors. Notice of reconsideration was given. A number of bills were advanced in both houses.

SPRINGFIELD, April 25.—The senate spent most of the day in a hot discussion of the Humphreys sanitary district bill, and the debate was still on at adjournment. Bills were passed: to pension retired teachers; providing for suits for dissolution of corporations. Littler's bill to repeal the anti-trust law was advanced to third reading.

In the house the resolution for investigation of alleged fraudulent assessing of property was voted down. The senate amendment to the house bill prohibiting the use of explosive oils in coal mines was concurred in. A number of amendments to the mine inspection bill were adopted and the bill ordered to third reading.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 26—The senate put in most of the day discussing the drainago canal, the fight being, as previously, between the Valley and Chicago members. There was nothing new advanced in the argument. The appointment was announced of James A. Sexton, of Chicago, to succeed himself as trustee of the Quincy Soldiers' home, and it was confirmed. Bills were passed appropriating $50 to each farmers' institute and providing for surrender of charters of corporations. The house advanced to third reading the bill appropriating $200,000 for a western insane hospital, but refused to make it a homeopathic institution. Members of both houses were busy during the day entertaining the visiting Wisconsin legislators.

SPRINGFIELD, April 27.—In the senate the Leeper amendment to the drainage bill was adopted in pursuance of the agreement between the Chicago and Valley people. The bill was read the third time and made special order for next Tuesday. The amendment is to secure thorough dilution with lake water of Chicago sewage. A number of bills were advanced to third reading, among them Littler's revenue bill. The house advanced all the bills on the calendar to third reading, including the "anti-Catholic" bill. Both houses adjourned to 5 p. m. Monday.

Free Silver First, Last and Forever.

EFFINGHAM, Ills., April 29.—The Democrats of Effingham county met in this city to select delegates to the state convention at Springfield, June 5. Resolutions were unanimously adopted in favor of 16-to-1 free silver and instructing the delegates to the state convention to vote accordingly, first, last and all the time. The state committee's action in calling the convention was also approved. Ninety-five per cent. of the Democrats of this county are in favor of free silver. R. F. Lawson, chairman of the Republican county central committee and editor of the Republican organ of the county, is a pronounced silver advocate.

Moloney Makes War on the Bridges.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ills., April 24.—Attorney General Moloney will announce the forfeiture of their franchises by the Eads Bridge company, the Merchants' Bridge company, and the Wiggins Ferry company. This is the result of an investigation by himself and a senate committee, which showed that the companies had a pool by which the gross earnings of traffic across the Mississippi were divided.

Accused of Embezzlement.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Archibald Campbell, secretary of the Scottish-American building Loan and Savings association, at 94 Washington street, was arrested, charged with embezzling $4,700 of the association's funds. He was removed from his position as secretary and is succeeded by D. F. McDonald. The association was established in 1888. The president is William Wilson and the treasurer Peter McEwen.

Wisconsin Solons Visit Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 25.—A delegation of 100 members of the Wisconsin legislature arrived here last evening. They were met by a committee from the Illinois house and senate and escorted to a hotel. They will call on the governor, attend the sessions of the assembly and be driven about the city. This evening a banquet will be tendered them at the Leland hotel.

Declared for 16-to-1 Silver.

LACON, Ills., April 7.9—At their regular meeting Riverside district grange, composed of leading and representative farmers of different political faiths, of Marshall and Putnam counties, unanimously adopted a resolution declaring for free coinage of silver at 16-to-1.

Death of a Prominent Illinoisan.

PEORIA, April 26.—Frank Hitchcock, ex-United States marshal for the northern district of Illinois, and for seven terms sheriff of Peoria county and mayor of the city one term, died yesterday afternoon aged 57.

Status of the Debs Case.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—It is stated here that the continuance of the Debs ease has no significance. The attorney general wired the district attorney at Chicago to continue the ease until the July term of the court. It is expected that by that time Judge Grosscup, who is ill, will have sufficiently recovered his health to hear the case. Judge Grosscup heard the previous case and granted the injunction against Debs.

County Treasurer Arrested.

WASHBURN, Wis., April 25.—Ex-County Treasurer Alonzo Knight has been arrested on the charge of embezzlement of $8,000 from the county. The examination of Allen T. Williams, ex-county clerk, on a similar charge, is now in progress.

Thirteen Miners Killed.

EDINBURG, April 27.—An explosion occurred in a coal pit at Denny, near Stirling, about thirty miles from this place. There were 177 men in the pit at the time of the accident. Thirteen of them were killed.

A CLERGYMAN'S STATEMENT.

"Three years ago we had a beautiful boy born to us. At the age of eleven months he breathed his last, a victim to impure blood. On August 4, 1891, another boy was born, who at the age of two months became afflicted with the same disease. We believed the trouble was constitutional, and not common sore mouth. I procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and commenced to give it regularly to both mother and baby. Improvement began at once. We have succeeded in eradicating the scrofulous blood from the system and to-day we are blessed with a nice, fat baby boy, 18 months old—the very picture of health, all life and full of mischief—thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am a minister in the Methodist Protestant church, and it affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all as a safe, sure remedy. Even my wife, after taking Hood's, became healthy and fleshy and has the bloom of girlhood again." REV. J. M. PATE, Brooklyn Station, Mo.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!

"A Prisoner of Hope."

COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.

Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

EX-SENATOR WILSON'S FUNERAL.

Prominent Men from Far and Wide Attend the Statesman's Burial.

FAIRFIELD, Ia., April 26.—The remains of ex-United States senator James F. Wilson were interred here yesterday afternoon. It is probable that the attendance upon the ceremonies exceeded any in the history of this portion of the state. All the neighboring cities were represented by delegations of prominent men. Among those who were present to pay a last tribute of respect to the dead statesman were Governor Morrill, of Kansas; ex United States Senator Harlan, Senator Allison, and Hon. J. S. Woolson, of the United States district court. A guard of honor of 100 old soldiers and thousands of citizens accompanied the remains to their last resting place.

HITT'S CONDITION ALARMING.

The Illinois Representative Suffers Another Relapse.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Mr. Hitt continued to grow worse during yesterday and last night his condition was alarming. At 2 o'clock a. m. his brain symptoms were becomiug very serious. Fears were entertained that he might not survive the night.

Ten Men Drowned.

BALTIMORE, April 27.—A report comes from Burham's wharf, Middlesex county, Va., that during a storm on the Rappahannock ten men—two white and eight colored—were drowned. When the storm broke a number of canoes sought safety under the lee of a vessel. The vessel dragged anchor and the canoes were cut loose. It was the occupants of these boats that were drowned.

Methodist Bishops in Session.

CARLISLE Pa., April 25.—The Methodist Episcopal bishops of the entire world are now in convention in this city and will remain here until Thursday of next week.

Deluge of Death.

PARIS, April 29.—The great dam at Bouzey, in the Epinal district, has fallen to pieces and let its immense volume of water down through the valley below. One hundred and fifteen deaths have already been reported and the end is not yet, while the destruction of property will reach, it is expected, 50,000,000 francs. The whole Aviere valley is a scene of ruin and desolation. The roads are strewn with the debris from the houses, the barns and the fences of the peasants.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, the Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F B Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of Today. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D. D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preachiug is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligeuce is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sc olists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recoguized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D., Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

CONCRETE AND TAR WALKS.

Directions For Laying These Pavements. Formula For Mixing the Concrete.

To lay a concrete walk about 12 inches deep and the width desired fill in about seven inches deep wth coarse gravel, as shown in the cut, and ram it down well. Cover this with sand or fine gravel about one inch deep. This is the foundation for the concrete to rest on. The concrete should be four inches deep and mixed in the following manner: One measure Rosendale cement, 2½ measures clean sharp sand and 5 measures stone and coarse gravel.

This should be well rammed. Before it has had time to set the surface should be scratched so as to hold the top coat. The top coat is made as follows: One part portland cement and 2 to 2½ parts clean fine sand.

This is spread on about 1½ inches deep and then rammed down to one-half inch. Smooth off the top with a trowel. Cover with sand, grass or anything to prevent drying too fast. Keep it covered for at least ten days. When making concrete, be very careful not to get too much water. The mass of concrete when ready for use should, with repeated light ramming, show a thin film of moisture on the surface. If properly mixed with water, it will not show a jellylike motion under the rammer.

For a tar pavement dig out the walk to the depth of four inches. Thoroughly mix coal tar and coarse graeel and fill in about three inches deep; then roll it down with a heavy roller or else ram it. Then make another mixture of fine gravel or sifted coal ashes and tar and spread on a thin coat, cover it with sand and roll or beat it well. This has been made for about 75 cents per square yard. The concrete will cost more, according to a writer in The Old New England Homestead, who furnished these directions.

Pure Clover Seed.

Fortunate is the farmer who grows his own clover seed and on clean land. Otherwise he is liable to have a crop of weeds as well as clover. No one ought to purchase clover seed without first testing it with a microscope and ascertaining if it is free from weed seeds.

And now comes the report that there is in the market adulterated clover seed, the extraneous matter being quartz rock ground up and colored to imitate clover seed.

Drought Proof Fodder Plants.

Of the true grasses, Hungarian brome grass, Italian rye grasses, English rye grasses, meadow oat grass, sheeps' fescue all grow well and are not affected by drought. How they will stand a pasture test is a question not yet solved. Alfalfa does well. Red clover sown in the fall has a fair growth, but is not equal to half the growth of spring sown alfalfa. Sanfoin is a promising plant and grows rapidly throughout the driest weather. Its nutritive value is not yet determined. Lupine, the great German forage plant for sheep, is not a success, not producing as much forage as our wild lupine.—Idaho Station

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

Rich Red Blood

In the body of an adult person there are about 18 pounds of blood.

The blood has as its most important elements, small round corpuscles, red and white, in proportion of about 300 red to 1 white one.

If the number of red corpuscles becomes diminished and the white ones increased the blood is impure, thin, lacking in the nutrition necessary to sustain the health and nerve strength of the body.

Then That Tired Feeling, Nervousness, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, or others of the long train of ills, according to the temperament and disposition, attack the victim.

The only permanent remedy is found in a reliable blood medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts upon the red corpuscles, enriching them and increasing their number. It thus restores the vital fluid to healthy condition, expels all impurity, cures Nervousness, That Tired Feeling, Scrofula and all other diseases arising from or promoted by low state of the blood.

That these statements are true we prove not by our own statements, but by what thousands of perfectly reliable people say about Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read the testimonial in the next column from a beloved clergyman. Then take

"In view of the benefit I have had from Hood's Sarsaparilla I wish to give the following testimonial. I have several times been badly

Poisoned With Creeping Ivy.

As the old school of medicine simply tried to remove the symptoms instead of the sources of them, much of the poison was left in my system to appear in an itching humor on my body with every violent exertion in warm weather. At all times there were more or less indications of poison in my blood, up to a year ago last winter, when on my body. I then purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after using that and a half of another bottle, the sores and humor disappeared. I attended the Christian Endeavor Convention in Montreal and also visited the World's Fair in the hottest weather of the summer. Was on the go all the time, but of the burning and itching sensation which had marred every previous summer's outing. I have reason, therefore, to be enthusiastic in my praises of Hood's Sarsaparilla." SAMUEL S. SCHNELL, pastor of Free Baptist Church, Apalachin, N. Y.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth $1.00.

Stories of the Gods. By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood. Postpaid, 10 cents.

Zella Nicolaus, now Mrs. Ruhman, is suing George Gould for $50,000, complaining of malicious persecution. She says Gould has attacked her reputation.

IS LITTLE BUT SAUCY.

NICARAGUA MAKES THINGS INTERESTING FOR JOHN BULL.

Occupation of Corinto Made Practically Useless by Declaring the Port Closed—Efforts of the United States and Central American Governments to Induce Nicaragua to Pay Up Fail.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The United States government has been officially informed of the occupation by the British of the city of Corinto, Nicaragua. The situation in that country is at this writing as follows: Great Britain has occupied Corinto, the principal seaport of Nicaragua, and the British flag waves above the town. The three ships, Royal Arthur, Satellite and Wild Swan, have taken positions where they can command the approaches to the town. The Nicaraguans—military and civilians—have abandoned the place, the soldiers withdrawing to the heights on the mainland—Corinto is on a sort of island—and preparing to fight, it seems, if the British shall make any effort to move into the interior.

Sharp Play by the Nicaraguans.

To checkmate the British and prolong and complicate the trouble with the apparent intention of forcing the difficulty into the domain of the Monroe doctrine and getting it where the United States must interfere, the Nicaraguan government has closed the port of Corinto. This will prevent merchant ships from entering to discharge cargo, for if they should do so the goods could not go into the interior without danger of seizure by the Nicaraguans. The only way to meet this move, for the British, will be for them to occupy other Nicaraguan ports as they are made ports of entry, until the whole coast is blockaded; or declare war and capture the capital, Managua.

Washington Diplomats Surprised.

The news was a surprise to the state department here. It was believed that the only difficulty in the way of a speedy settlement of the trouble was that arising from trouble experienced by the Nicaraguan government in raising the money hastily, and that the British admiral would be indulgent on this point when once satisfied of the disposition of the Nicaraguans to comply with the terms of the ultimatum otherwise had never been doubted by the department. As soon as the British had occupied Corinto the Nicaraguans destroyed the telegraphic connection between that point and the rest of the world, and the British commander will have to send his dispatches by boat to the nearest cable telegraph station.

Only Making the Matter Worse.

There does not seem to be any doubt anywhere of the right of Great Britain to demand and collect this smart money, for in maltreating Pro-Consul Hatch the Nicaraguans were insultiug the British flag, a thing that no nation submits to, whether the insulter is big or little. And this resistance and attempt to prevent the British from getting the money will, it is expected, only make the cost greater to Nicaragua, for the British will be likely to add the cost of collecting to the original sum. It is doubtful, moreover, whether the closing of Corinto is such a shrewd move. It is a well-established principle of international law that one payment of duties is enough, and if the British collect them and the Nicaraguans seize the goods she may have them to pay for.

WENT BACK ON UNCLE SAM.

Refused to Accept a Compromise Obtained by Ambassador Bayard.

It turns out that Admiral Stephenson, of the British fleet, received Nicaragua's reply to the ultimatum on Friday and that the reply was an absolute refused to agree with the ultimatum. A dispatch from London says that "Ambassador Bayard, acting under instructions from Washington, represented to the British foreign office that Nicaragua, if given two weeks additional time from the expiration of the three days fixed in the ultimatum, would meet Great Britain's demand for the payment of £15,000 indemnity for the expulsion of Pro-Consul Hatch. Lord Kimberly acceded to this, and as it was presumed that the state department at Washington was acting for Nicaragua it was thought that the incident would be closed without further complications. But as Nicaragua refused at the last moment to acquiesce in this arrangement the original plan of occupying Corinto was carried out."

It is evident that both the United States and the Central American republics were anxious to secure a peaceful settlement of the difficulty by the payment of the indemnity demanded by Great Britain for the expulsion of Pro-Consul Hatch. Guatemala, San Salvador and Costa Rica strongly urged Nicaragua to pay the $75,000 indemnity to Great Britain. The present president of Costa Rica even went so far as to offer to contribute one-fifth of the amount, but popular sentiment in Nicaragua was so set against England that the administration decided not to yield.

It is not known exactly what representations were made to the state department here by Nicaragua or Nicaragua's representative to induce Secretary Gresham to cable Bayard these instructions. It is believed, however, that the Nicaraguan government rejected the plan to save itself from the wrath of the people and in the hope of ultimately inducing the active intervention of the United States. It is said that the state department has all along advised Nicaragua that the expulsion of Consul Hatch was an offense that no self-respecting country could overlook and that prompt reparation was due Great Britain.

When Lampton and Wiltbank, citizens of the United States, were expelled from Bluefields last July for alleged complicity in the conspiracy to defy Nicaraguan authority on the Mosquito coast, in which it was said Consul Hatch was involved, the state department took such vigorous steps that Lampton and Wiltbank were not only permitted to return, but they were restored to all their rights and property, and a public ball was given in their honor. At that time it was believed that Nicaragua would show the same willingness to furnish redress to England that she did to the United States.

But by continued delay matters were allowed to reach the acute stage, and Great Britain, in accordance with the terms of her ultimatum, seized Corinto to enforce the payment of the indemnity claimed to be due her. Much interest is manifested in diplomatic circles in the situation. Secretary Gresham drove to Woodley yesterday afternoon and had a long consultation with the president. It was thought that some statement would be made, but upon his return the secretary declined to give out anything.

POSITION OF THE ADMINISTRATION.

No Interference While John Bull Does Not Attempt a Land Grab.

From the best information obtainable it seems almost certain that the administration will not attempt any interference with the dispute as long as Great Britain confines itself to the collection of the indemnity. The United States have maintained in the past that European powers could, in their international dealings with South and Central American countries, conduct their disputes in their own way as long as they did not seek to overthrow existing governments, set up monarchies or protectorates, or acquire territory.

If the occupancy of Corinto fails in its object and Great Britain should declare war on Nicaragua, it is said that the administration would still decline to interfere so long as the war was carried on not for the aggrandizement of Great Britain or the acquisition of territory, but for the sole purpose of collecting the indemnity. It is pointed out that for the United States to interpose to prevent England from carrying out the present method of collecting the debt would be equivalent to declaring a virtual protectorate over Nicaragua, and would keep us involved in endless broils with European powers.

It would give these states the privilege of resisting just claims of other countries and taking refuge behind the skirts of the United States. In other words, all diplomatic correspondence relative to these states would practically be carried on through Washington. Besides, it would greatly embarrass this government in the enforcement of its own claims against these countries. It is confidently believed that rather than suffer the seizure of other ports or bombardment, Nicaragua will comply and pay the indemnity.

There is some difference of opinion here as to whether the declaration of Nicaragua that Corinto is closed as a port of entry will be recognized. It is plainly within the power of any country to close a port in time of peace, but this country has always maintained (and in this we have been sustained by international custom) that in order to close a port an effective blockade must be sustained, and England has not "blockaded" Corinto.

The president of Nicaragua has cabled to the Associated Press as follows: "Nicaragua protests before all nations against the outrage which Great Britain inflicts upon her by the military occupation of the port of Corinto, in order to sieze from her by force a sum of money which is not owed, in absolute disregard of international laws, and of the dictates of right, justice and equity."

Iowa Farmer Swindled Out of $1,200 by Sharpers.

MOUNT PLEASANT, April 25.—Two men have been arrested at Columbus Junction suspected of being those who swindled Farmer Kinney out of $1,200. Kinney says that a stranger approached him on the streets of Mount Pleasant concerning the purchase of his farm. He took the man out to the farm and was showing him about the place when they met a second man who appeared to be intoxicated and said he had been "skinned" out of $3,000 by a man with cards. He produced some cards and proceeded to show Kinney and the land buyer the way he was taken in. In the same old way Kinney was induced to try his luck, and won $3,000. The intoxicated man refused to pay the money till Kinney showed his pile.

Kiuney left the men and drove to Mount Pleasant, borrowed $1,200 at a bank, and returned to the sharpers. All three men then placed their money in a tin box and this was given to Kinney to keep. The land buyer then confidentially told Kinney to go home with the box and he would get rid of the drunken man, who seemed to grow more intoxicated. Kinney took the box home and afterward to the bank, where it was discovered to be empty.

BOGUS "MESSIAH" INDICTED.

John Jacob Schweinfurth and His "Heaven" at Rockford in Trouble.

ROCKFORD, Ills., April 29.—Sheriff Oliver went to the "heaven" south of this city with a capias for the arrest of George Jacob Schweinturth, indicted by the graud jury for living in open adultery with inmates of the place. The bogus messiah did not come out of the house for an hour after the arrival of the officers, but finally accepted service without resistance. The sheriff also had an execution to levy ou his personal property on account of George W. Coudrey's $50,000 judgment, obtained in Chicago, but every door and window was kept closely locked and guarded and he was unable to get in to make the levy.

Schweinfurth was under arrest and in custody of the sheriff in Rockford six hours, but finally furnished bail in the amount of $3,000, the bond being signed by the Weldons, owners of the 600-acre farm on which the "heaven" is located. The bond is only good until today, when Schweinfurth, Mary Weldon, Isabelle Tuttle and Margaret Teft Weldon, will probably enter pleas to the indictments returned against them.

Fire in a North Dakota Town.

ST. PAUL, April 26.—Fire destroyed the greater portion of Minnewaukan, N. D., in the northern part of the state near the Manitoba border. Only two business houses are left. The Northern Pacific depot was one of the buildings burned. Those who were burned out are T. E. Mather, William Plummer, J. M. Cubbism, Mrs. C. Brown, Benson County bank, K. L. Richmond & Sons, the North Dakota Siftings newspaper, and J. J. Gearey. The aggregate loss is $40,000, with $15,200 insurance.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

April 24 the New York legislature considered a resolution inviting Canada to become a part of our United States government. Before the resolution passed it was changed so as to read, "ask Congress to invite," so as to allow the United States Congress to take action instead of the State of New York. The resolution was ordered printed. What Congress may do, or what Canada may do, can only be conjectured. The Roman Catholic church is on the alert, and the Manitoba school question may help to decide matters.

The horribly disfigured and partially decomposed body of George W. Ebersol, who disappeared election night, April 2, was found four weeks later in the Chicago river at the foot of Dearborn street. The last time Ebersol was seen alive was at 11 o'clock that evening, when he parted with his brothers, Charles and John, at Dearborn and Randolph streets, after having taken the first Masonic degree in the Masonic Temple. The police will not say whether the mutilations were caused by tug boats or an assassin's knife. Two witnesses declare that at 2 o'clock on the morning of April 3d they heard cries from the alley at the back of Ebersol's house at 75 Hill street, and saw two men throw something into an express wagon and drive off.

One of the worst features of the G. A. R. movement is the effort that it is making to get our public schools into its clutches. Commander-in-Chief Lawler has appointed fourteen members of the order in fourteen different States as "aids in charge of the military instruction in the public schools." Here in Chicago permission was given the G. A. R. by the school board "to participate in the school exercises incident to Memorial day." How they were to participate is not stated; but soon after Gen. Brown, from one of the posts, appeared at the ministers' meeting, and asked if members of their association would undertake to address the children at the public schools where the Decoration day exercises were held. Thus the lodge would have the credit, and the ministers the labor. The bait was swallowed by the ministers. A resolution was passed promising the requested aid, and Revs. W. H. Holmes, J. J. Tobias and I. C. Wakeman were appointed to confer with Gen. Brown.

How shall we overcome the mania for whist parties, clubs, lodges and the like which sap the energies and spiritual life of church members? People who will neglect the prayer-meeting for such things as are named above, have not much spiritual life to be sapped. They reveal the thinness of their thinking and the lowness of their piety. Such is the great difficulty; they have not religion enough to see what their religious obligations are. They are over on the devil's side, and are blind to their own coldness of heart and the injury of their influence. They are about as much use in a prayer-meeting as an icicle is to kindle a fire. Such things do not so much sap the spiritual life of people, as they prevent the spiritual life from flowing into their hearts. It is no use to scold them, for scolding, no matter how true the words used, always wakes up opposition and stirs up unkind feelings. The better way is not to notice them at all, save in the most kindly manner in private. A few tender words to a young Christian about not doing anything which will interfere with the spiritual life, will do more good than all public denunciations. Warm up the prayer-meeting. Keep the spiritual uppermost. Donot fight or throw clubs, but say "Come," and the spirit of God will do the rest. Church members who have no spiritual life are the greatest load the church has to carry, and sometimes the trouble is in the minister himself. The above question and answer appeared in a recent Advance. This question should be considered by every Christian newspaper in our land. In the words of Pastor Fisch of Paris, "The church in America must stand as one man against Masonry or be destroyed."

The state of feeling among the miners near Pittsburgh is rapidly becoming critical, and violence is probable before the close of the week. Colored miners are being imported by operators, and that fact is adding fuel to the flames. F. L. Robbins to-day landed 100 men at the Jumbo mine and 30 at the Midway in the McDonald field. They are all colored men from Virginia, and it is claimed that any amount of diggers can be obtained from that region. The men came in over the Pennsylvania road in special cars. They were furnished with supplies, and are quartered in the company houses. None have yet gone to work, but all are expected to go into the mines in the morning. Labor's greatest trouble is that it is divided and has to contend with labor as well as with capital. The old Knights of Labor, led by Sovereign, are to be confronted with a new Independent Order of Knights of Labor. The Master Workmen of Local Assembly 2423 K. of L. at Manistee, Michigan, says: "I have no faith in, and am opposed to, this new organization called the Independent Order of the Knights of Labor. Since Mr. Powderly failed of a re-election as General Master Workman he has not ceased to stir up strife and contention, and sought by all means to destroy the order. If he could not control and own them he would destroy. He has deliberately violated every principle of knighthood and manhood, and proved false to the order which honored him for so many years." And so, with ill-feelings and contentions, the cause of the workingman is injured. Add to all this the fact that the saloon takes more than half their wages and the lodge a generous share of the other half, and the poor laborers are really in a deplorable condition. There is but one way out to peace and comfort and happiness; that is through Christ.

The bill known as the Percy-Gray bill was defeated in the New York Legislature May 1, and re-considered and passed by a large majority the day following. The Governor's signature is required to make the bill a law, and the gamblers are confident that he will sign it. It is claimed that it will be a great thing for racing, because by abolishing bookmakers and poolsellers it will in all probability raise the price of admission to the tracks, thus keeping away the greater part of the objectionable element. There will be betting on the races under the new law, but it will not be done by those men who are working for $2 or less per day. Philip J. Dwyer, the presiden of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, said: "So far as I am concerned it is the Gray bill or no racing. If the bill is defeated there will be no Brooklyn handicap and no racing at Gravesend. The gates of the course will remain closed. I do not take much stock in the idea of racing under the Ives pool law. The idea of spending a term in prison is not inviting to me, but that is just about what I would risk if I raced under the old Ives law. I will race in this country only where and when I may do so legally. If I cannot do that in America I can do it in England, and there I will probably go if racing is killed in this State." Other turfmen who were seen expressed views similar to Mr. Dwyer's, and it was learned on excellent authority that in the event of the defeat of the bill J. B. Haggin, the big California breeder, would have sent his yearlings to England to be sold there. By the combined provisions of the bills horse racing is allowed under the supervision of a commission of three members, to be appointed by the Governor, to serve for three years, the racing to be under the rules of the Jockey Club of the National Steeplechase Association. Pool selling is absolutely forbidden, and unrecorded bets or wagers between private individuals are the only things in that line allowed. The tax on racing associations allowed to operate is to be levied upon the gross receipts, and before obtaining a certificate full payment of capital stock must be certified to. Trotting associations are entitled to all the privileges of the acts. These men have evidently never for themselves or their sons and neighbors considered the question, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

REMINISCENCES. — FREEMASONRY IN THE ARMY.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

When the war broke out I was a student at Wheaton College, boarding at home. Shortly before this I had been examined, and received a teacher's certificate from the county superintendent of schools, and expected to teach the following winter; but when Sumter was fired on I knew that meant the death knell of that "sum of all villianies," slavery, and I believed that God wanted me to help strike off the shackles of the Negro. I was but a little over 18 years old, and my father did not agree with me as to my duty. I respected his parental authority, and told him I would not enlist without his consent. When, as he frequently did, he spoke about my teaching, I told him that if he engaged a school for me I would teach the best that I could, but that I had no heart to apply for such a position, as my heart was in the service of freedom.

As the summer passed, and the terrible Bull Run disaater aroused the nation, I could see that father would not long withhold his consent to my enlistment. As a company of cavalry was being raised in the neighborhood, which young men of my acquaintance were joining, and I was assured of a sergeantship if I would go with them, it was very nearly settled that I should join, when an article appeared in the Northwestern Christian Advocate, signed by Rev. W. B. Slaughter, stating that he was raising a company of Christian young men for the 39th Illinois infantry. Less than a year before this I had enlisted under the banner of Christ, and father thought that in Slaughter's company I would find not only more congenial comrades but those who would help me heavenward. I had confidence in his judgment, and on Sept. 2, 1861, I joined company G, 39th Illinois, at Camp Nather, which was situated in the outskirts of Chicago. For the next six weeks the manual of arms, military drill and ordinary camp duties took up much of my time. I was delighted to find that there was much religious interest in the regiment, an open-air service being held nearly every evening. When I found out that none of the first score of men who had enlisted in company G; in fact, none who had enlisted before Capt. Slaughter's article appeared in the Northwestern Christian Advocate were even professing Christians, while some used very profane language and were intemperate, my confidence in Capt. Slaughter was shaken. Later I learned that he was a zealous Freemason, and had selected G as the letter for his company because he considered it more Masonic than the first letter of the alphabet.

Capt. Slaughter was a very strict disciplinarian, with a few marked exceptions. A man by the name of McKee, one of the first enlisted, got drunk on every possible occasion, thus disgracing the whole company, and it was a cause of much complaint that he never was punished in any way. We soon learned the reason—McKee was a brother Mason.

October 11 we started for the "seat of war," going to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, Mo., where we expected to get our arms and enter active service under Gen. Fremont; but the government was very short of muskets, and after staying there a trifle over a month we were sent to Willlamsport, Md., through a mistake or misunderstanding, which received Congressional investigation later.

Nov. 17 Lieut. Jos. W. Richardson of Co. A died from typhoid fever, brought on, it was currently reported, by ungodly excesses. Chaplain McReading, who had recently joined the regiment, preached his funeral sermon, which was the usual nauseating Masonic lying eulogy, and landed his lodge brother in the "grand lodge above."

Up to this time Christian men of the regiment had held prayer meetings as we found opportunity, and they were nearly always attended by a few young men from Christian homes who had not accepted Christ.

The effect of the Masonic funeral services referred to makes me shudder now on thinking of it. The faith even of Christian men was shaken, and Christianity was for the first time, to my knowledge, in the army, openly ridiculed.

In a previous article I have alluded to the first battle of Winchester, Sunday, March 23, 1862, when we whipped Stonewall Jackson, and chased him day after day away up the valley till opposite Richmond. Then we were withdrawn from the valley, and made a rapid march to join McDowell's army at Fredericksburg, Md., leaving a very small federal force under Gen. Banks to guard the valley. Our going was promptly taken advantage of, and Lee sent the flower of his army, under Johnson, Ewell and Stonewall Jackson, rushing up the valley, driving the gallant Banks up to and across the Potomac into Maryland; and had Lee himself been with the army, Washington would undoubtedly have been captured.

There was a railroad in operation from Front Royal, Va., to Fredericksburg, Md., the line of our march, and we could and should have been taken by rail, even if in cattle cars, for we were ragged and many were barefooted, because supplies had failed to reach us, but we were promised ample supplies at Fredericksburg.

The day after we reached Fredericksburg there was a grand review of the army by President Lincoln, Secretary of War Stanton, Lord Lyons of the British embassy and others. Both of my feet were blistered, the blister on one of them covering nearly one-half the bottom of my foot, though I had better shoes than many of the men. My blistered feet may have been one reason why I was put on camp guard that day. "Honest Old Abe" and his retinue rode close by my post, and I had the pleasure of saluting the grand old statesman and hero.

That night news of the great raid of the combined forces of Johnson, Jackson and Ewell reached us, and although we had not received the clothing and shoes we so greatly needed we were started back again for the valley the next morning on foot, marching about twenty hours per day —not stopping even to eat, and given a most limited allowance of time for sleep. We ate as we marched.

Our return was a surprise to the enemy, and we recaptured quite a number of those who had been taken prisoners by the rebel raiders. Had not the traitor McDowell prevented it, aided by the armies of Fremont and Banks we could have captured the whole raiding army, for the raiders were between us and the Potomac—Fremont from West Virginia was on their flank, Banks was behind them, and the valley at this objective point (Strasborg) was so narrow that we could and would have held ten times our number had we been permitted to do so, but a peremptory order from Gen. McDowell forbade our doing so. An orderly (mounted messenger) of Gen. Shields told us that on receipt of this order from McDowell, Gen. Shields denounced him as a traitor, and swore that he would shoot him on sight.

The Shenandoah river at this time was very high, and in order to reach Richmond the rebel army, which was on the west side, must cross the river, and their dependence was on a single bridge down the valley at Port Republic. Shields therefore hurried off one brigade to destroy this bridge, and as Fremont was fighting the raiders on their right flank and Banks was behind them, there was still hope of capturing them. The bridge was reached by the brigade in ample time and was set on fire, when an officer on a foaming charger appeared with an order from McDowell to extinguish the fire and hold the bridge at all hazards. A little later the rebels appeared, and though repeatedly stopped in their attempts to cross, they massed their forces, and under cover of a terrific artillery fire forced a passage. A man who took part in the fight said that they mowed down the rebel column, and he believed the rebels lost more in killed and wounded than their entire brigade numbered, but they were eventually forced to retreat, with the loss of several cannon.

The grand old hero, Gen. Shields, was permitted to do no more for his country. He was immediately relieved of his command under the slander that he was becoming insane. The traitor McDowell did not dare give the true reason.

A few weeks later we were sent to join McClellan's army on the peninsula, and were on a transport in the James river the night of the "battle of Malvern Hill"—the last of the famous "seven days' battles" during McClellan's retreat ("change of base" he called it), in each of which, under the leadership of fighting Joe Hooker, Farnsworth and others the rebels were whipped. Gen Hooker and other officers of the Army of the Potomac testified before the Congressional committee on the conduct of the war that these battles resulted in complete routs of the rebel army, and that had they been permitted to do so they could have followed the fleeing enemy into Richmond. But each victory was followed by a retreat, ordered by McClellan.

While we were on that transport in the James river, during the battle of Malvern Hill, a squad of rebel prisoners were taken on the boat. They proved to be members of a North Carolina regiment. With others I engaged in conversation with them, most of the time being spent in an animated discussion of the ability and character of Union and Confederate officers, and I was astonished at the intelligence and candor of these men. "How do you like Gen. McDowell?" I asked. The answer was startling. "Oh, we all like him. He is a good friend of the South. Our officers have told us that he is a high Mason, and our officers are nearly all Masons. They told us we could depend on Gen. McDowell as a friend who would never injure the Southern cause.

POSITIVE VS. NEGATIVE REFORMS.

BY REV. H. H HINMAN.

The Lord Jesus Christ was and is the Great Reformer. He only can and will destroy the works of the devil. He only can establish righteousness and truth in the earth. It becomes us, therefore, as co-workers with him to study carefully his methods, and so far as possible to imitate his example. It is a remarkable feature of the teachings of our Lord that they are always positive. His commandments are not so much what we shall not, as what we shall do and be. He never in so many words prohibited human slavery, that system then so widely prevalent and so cruelly wrong. He did not say that men ought not to use intoxicating drinks, though he well understood the inconceivable sorrows that then and in all subsequent ages would grow out of their use. He said nothing about the Elusinian mysteries and other forms of secret idolatrous worship which ensnared and corrupted the great mass of mankind. There is nothing in his teachings about the eight-hour law or the cruelties of child labor in manufacturing establishments. There were then and are now thousands of questions of applied morality, pending before the people, about which he gave no direct and explicit instruction,

But he did lay down principles that are applicable to every case. He did establish a system that meets every human requirement, and which shall give precisely the right answer to all moral questions. The ax was laid at the root and not at the branches of every evil system. "Every tree" (said Jesus) "that my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit shall be hewn down and cast into the fire."

But the root of all evil is human selfishness; covetousness or "the love of money" is only one of the most conspicuous of its manifestations. The divine remedy is, first of all, the new creation, the re-formation of individual heart and life. This is what it is to be in Christ. "For if any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things have passed away; behold all things have become new." 2 Cor. 5:17. This is not only true of the individual but is equally true of the world at large. It is only as human society is transformed by the power of Christ that there shall be fulfilled the words of him that sat on the throne, "Behold I make all things new."

It follows then that the Gospel of Christ is our model, and the only true basis for all moral reform, and that in seeking the removal of any evil, we should seek it mainly, essentially, by seeking the conversion of men to God. It by no means follows that we are not to investigate and condemn individual sins. There were occasions when our Lord specified some great iniquities and spoke out in terrible denunciation. But it is not the only nor the principal method by which we are to labor. We are not to expect that the abandonment of certain forms will save either the individual or the world.

Is it not possible that the comparative failure of specific reforms is largely due to their negative character, and that had we been more earnest in teaching men what they should, instead of what they should not be, we should have had a larger success? Teaching men to forsake the lodge is all right, but all sin is to be forsaken, and men must at the same time receive Christ. It may seem a slower process of conducting a special reform; it will, in the end, be the wiser and surer method.

STAND LIKE AN ANVIL.

"Stand like an anvil," when the strokes
Of stalwart strength fall thick and fast;
Storms but more deeply root the oaks
Where brawny arms embrace the blast.

"Stand like an anvil," when the sparks
Fly far and wide, a fiery shower;
Virtue and truth must still be marks
Where malice proves its want of power.

"Stand like an anvil," when the bar
Lies red and glowing on its breast;
Duty shall be life's guiding star,
And conscious innocence its rest.

"Stand like an anvil," when the sound
Of ponderous hammers pains the ear;
Thine be the still and stern rebound
Of the great heart that cannot fear.

"Stand like an anvil," noise and heat
Are born of earth and die with time;
The soul, like God, its source and seat,
Is solemn, still, serene, sublime.

—Bishop Doane.

MANY WITNESSES.

Americans have no conflicting interests respecting secret societies. We object to the secret religious ceremonies which they all practice. No matter what the temples, altars or shrines; if not Christ's they are Satan's. Religious rites, practiced by members of a body taken promiscuously from the community; professors of religion and men making no profession, form nothing less than a moral and religious system in which personal piety is not required, nor general justice; we regard the whole system, therefore, as opposed to true religion and just government.—Jonathan Blanchard.

It was about fourteen years ago that I was first initiated in the lodge. Within a few months after, I advanced to the Royal Arch degree, and some time after I took the degrees of Knighthood, as they are called. I well remember the horror I felt when the bandage was taken from my eyes and I found myself partly naked, with men standing around me pointing at me implements of death, and a human skull was handed me to drink from, and I was required to repeat words, awful in themselves, and which I cannot distinctly recollect, but which I believe to have been the same I find given in the explanation of that ceremony in Bernard's "Light on Masonry." From that time I absented myself from the lodge and chapter. My mind was afterwards led by degrees to an examination into Masonry; which I am now satisfied is repugnant to the spirit of the religion of Christ.—Henry Tatem, an eminent Baptist pastor, Providence, R. I., 1832.

Freemasonry is built upon the basis of a natural religion having for its foundation the honor and worship of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, but excluding the divine incarnation and the mysteries of human redemption. Whilst using the sacred Scriptures, it ignores the divine doctrines of the Christian faith. Pretending to a special and progressive illumination, it resembles, and through several of its writers even claims, descent from the secret societies of pagan Egypt, Greece and Samothrace.—The Bishop of Birmingham, England.

I am free to say that it is my deliberate opinion that the vicious character of Masonry and its guilt-concealing and barbarous oaths are such as not only to release all from their bonds, but also to lay upon them the solemn obligation to tear off its covering and expose its enormity. I regard it as Satan's masterpiece, a terrible snare to men. It sits at this moment as a nightmare on all the moral energies of our government, and utterly paralyzes the arm of justice.—Nathaniel Colver, former pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston.

Give them the truth anyway, and if they would rather leave their churches than their lodges, the sooner they get out of the churches the better. I would rather have ten members who were separated from the world than a thousand such members. Come out from the lodge. Better one with God than a thousand without him. We must walk with God, and if only one or two go with us it is all right. Do not let down the standard to suit men who love their secret lodges or have some darling sin they will not give up.—Dwight L. Moody.

God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and to the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion.—Charles G. Finney.

There are certain other widespread organizatious, such as Freemasonry, which, we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God.—Prof. S. C. Bartlett, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary.

These associations are inconsistent with the genius of Christianity, because the secrecy which they affect, and to which they bind their members by promise or oath, is unnecessary and so unwarrantable, dangerous and ensnaring to the conscience, and, therefore, utterly opposed to that openness and publicity which Christ enjoins on his disciples both by example and precept.—Prof. J. G. Carson, D.D., Xenia, Ohio.

We have then the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. In our judgment we are forced to the same conclusion, we cannot escape from it; we wish it were otherwise; we therefore sorrowfully but solemnly pronounce this judgment.—President C. G. Finney, of Oberlin, 1868.

But my strongest opposition to Masonry is because of its rivalry with religion. It steps in before the church, and is a false, an idolatrous religion, a religion without a Saviour and, therefore, a delusion and a snare to all who engage in it, or rest their hope upon it.—Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

If on such anti-Christian grounds, prayers are framed, rites established and chaplains appointed, ignoring Christ and his intercession, God regards it as a mockery and an insult to himself and his church. In it is revealed the hatred of Satan to Christ. By it Christ is dethroned and Satan exalted.—Rev. Edward Beecher, D.D.

A man is not fit to be a juryman who has taken these Masonic oaths and holds to them. Such a man is not competent to be a constable or a justice of the peace. He has disqualified himself practically and really, for he has by these oaths perjured himself for the one side or the other, and so is unable to do justly in his official relation between man and man.—Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Secretary American Missionary Association.

There may be a broad distinction between the good and the bad in secret societies, but as they all alike have oath-bound obligations to complete oblivion of all they do or say, I have no means of judging the good from the bad. So I turn away from them all to the great Teacher who said, "In secret have I said nothing."—Samuel C. Pomeroy, in an address, 1883.

SOME THOUGHTS ON SECRECY.

I am opposed to the secret lodge system, and I will tell you why. I have in my possession a book entitled "The Abduction of Morgan," or "The Broken Seal." This book contains a full history of the abduction and murder of Captain William Morgan, of Batavia, New York, as it was learned through the confession of some of those who helped to do the hellish deed, together with an exposition of Freemasonry. I have read this book many times, and it has made such an impression on my mind that I cannot think of secrecy except with loathing. I know that some say that the Morgan story is a fable, but we have abundant evidence to the contrary. Some of my ancestors were living in, or near, Batavia at the time of the abduction, and afterward saw the remains identified by Captain Morgan's wife. Then again, history tells us that there was an anti-secrecy political party formed at the time, as a result of the excitement and agitation caused by the abduction. Ben Pearly Poor, in his reminiscences, speaks of such men as John Quincy Adams and William H. Seward being connected with that movement.

Mr. Poor, himself a Mason of high degree, makes no denial, but says the real or supposed abduction. I am also opposed to the lodges because of their lodge worship, which is nothing more nor less than idolatry. Then again, I am opposed to them because I believe them to be incompatible with republican institutions. Our ancestors oppressed by the aristocratic rulers of Europe, having endured for a long series of years the oppressions of kings, lords and dukes, and having no choice left them but slavery or flight, they chose the latter and came to the wilds of America where there were no lords or dukes, no Grand High Priests nor Grand Kings to extort the hard earnings of the poor. They have taught their sons and daughters to prefer death to slavery. After the struggle of the Revolution, with no enemy near to disturb their deliberations, a government was founded on plain republican principles. No high-sounding titles found a place in the government. All were placed on a common level, and the man who held the highest and most enviable station mortal ever held was styled simply President of the United States. Such was the government founded by Washington and the patriots of the Revolution. Now let us examine the institution of Masonry and ascertain whether it is founded upon the same basis as that of our common country. The government was founded in open day with all the light of heaven shining upon it. Masonry is the child of darkness, and nothing but secrecy can sustain it. Its principles are partial, and its ultimate aim is the benefit of the few at the expense of the many. All its ceremonies are anti-social and anti-republican. The titles given to its officers are not republican. I will give some of them: In the Grand Lodge they have their Grand Lecturer, Grand Junior and Senior Deacons, Grand Master of Ceremonies, Grand Marshal, Grand Treasurer, Grand Chaplain, Worshipful Grand Junior and Senior Wardens, Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Most Worshipful Grand Master. The titles of the Grand Encampment are: Worshipful Sword Bearer, Worshipful Grand Standard Bearer, Worshipful Grand Marshal, Worshipful Grand Recorder, Worshipful Grand Treasurer, Worshipful Grand Wardens, Worshipful Grand Captain General, Worshipful Grand Generalissimo, Worshipful Grand Master. I might go on indefinitely, but I have given enough to show that Masonry is idolatrous and anti-republican. And as to the minor orders, they are simply offshoots from Masonry and therefore no better or no worse than the mother institution. Can one be a Christian and belong to these? No, a thousand times no, if he undertands their nature and character.—N. P. Bronson, in Christian Conservator.

"Supposing him to have been in the company, they went a day's journey" without him. Luke 2:44. How many companies have done and are doing the same thing! How easy it is to take it for granted that Jesus is with us in our journey, and never miss him until the day is spent! And then we find that the day has been lost. Nay, more! It was not until "three days" of diligent search that he was found again. And all because of a supposition instead of a care that we realize his presence, and watch his movements and his guiding eye, move when he moves, turn when he turns, and stop when he stops. If our hearts are really occupied with him, and his will, and his work, instead of our own plans, we shall readily discern his real presence, and be saved from such loss of time and toil.—Friends' Expositor.

If the dreadful phraseology of the oaths of some secret societies is meant in serious earnest, those oaths are barbarous, blasphemous and murderous, wholly inconsistent with civilization. If they are not to be taken seriously they are not less blasphemous, and are immoral nonsense. How grown-up men can thus solemnly or farcically be initiated into conclaves whose symbolism is half heathen, half Christian, whose initiations are indecent, whose alleged history is created out of human fancy, and in regalia illustrating all this, can parade our streets, is beyond my comprehension. And all this is but an inferior part of the evidence wrought.—Rev. I. J. Lansing, D.D., in Christian Conservator.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

"Offensive" advertising.—The W. C. T. U. crusade in North Adams.—Our New England dialect.—The Christian Endeavorers and Priest Phelan.—The G. A. R. in the public schools.—A liquor revolt.—A late spring.

Great corporations and speculators of the Peter Bell stamp, who would paint over a glowing June sky if they could with patent medicine ads, ought to be made to understand that the public has some rights which they are bound to respect. There has been a law in Massachusetts for some time against painting advertisements on rocks; there is now one pending, if it has not already passed, "to prevent the offensive use of buildings for advertising purposes." It might be difficult to draw the line and say just where such use grows "offensive." It is much less of an evil, however, to deface the works of man than to put a tree or a rock to these base uses. If the many whose æsthetic sensibilities have suffered in this way could be heard from!—but as a rule they suffer and make no sign, while that obtuser class known as the "general public" allow with stupid indifference the work to go on of destroying natural beauties that can never be replaced. It is very hard for the average American to understand that anything can have a price outside of or beyond its commercial value; and for the Irishman or German it is an utter impossibility. To get any such idea into the cranium of the average foreigner would be like getting a joke into the head of a Scotchman—only to be received through a surgical operation. Men may come and men may go, but the advertising goes on forever in spite of all laws to the contrary. "Natural beauty," says a writer in "Garden and Forest," "has an intrinsic value as a refreshment to the spirit, and a restorer of the health of the mind and body. This is not a merely sentimental or fanciful view of the case. It is fundamental truth." But it is a truth which the people will have to be educated up to better than they are at at present before the laws against spoiling natural beauty by "offensive" advertisements are enforced.

The greatest sinners, however, so far as defacing buildings are concerned, are the theater companies. In which connection it may be said that at North Adams, the W. C. T. U. have begun a vigorous crusade against the posting of immoral lithographs, and the granting of licenses to the theaters for the production of immoral plays. The white ribboners are God's reserve forces in the great moral conflict now upon us, and I wonder if it is not owing to them more than anything that the good old Saxon word "woman" is being so largely substituted for "lady." But it has taken generations, nay, centuries, to teach us how much grander is the name the Bible gives our sex than the one invented by man.

I am glad to see that societies are being formed with the object of preserving our local New England dialect from utter extinction. It is a rich mine for the etomologist. Still, in back country districts housekeepers who spend their strength on petty domestic details are said to "putter;" and we hear the good mother tell her reluctant young hopeful to "hyper along to school"—hyper by the way is pure Greek, and reminds one of a tropical palm shooting up from a hedge of yankee currant bushes—or scolds her young daughter for going "traipsing off into the woods," when she is wanted at home for some domestic duty. None of us will live long enough to see the last of these old words vanish absolutely from use, but time, or rather the march of education, is slowly blotting them out of the common speech of the people; and why should we not seek to preserve the New England dialect which is more full of interest, and older by many centuries than the oldest of her historical buildings.

The Christian Endeavorers are much stirred up over the charges made by Priest Phelan against that body, and I see that at Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, the different C. E. societies have united in petitioning Mgr. Satolli to unfrock, degrade and depose the offending priest. Scandalous and unfounded as were these charges, the Christian Endeavorers would do better to let them slip into innocuous oblivion, instead of going down on their knees, as it were, to Satolli, with the unctuous flattery that "we are encouraged to make this petition from the many protestations which you, as well as the Holy See that you so ably represent, have recently made towards America and American institutions." Priest Phelan has no monopoly of extravagant remarks. Statements are being continually made at patriotic meetings which it would be difficult for the speakers to prove. This is a source of weakness. Indiscriminate denunciation is a kind of boomerang which recoils on itself.

Levy P. Crouch, president of the Connecticut Peace Association, has brought on himself the ire of the Grand Army because, owing to conscientious scruples, he wishes to have his children who attend the public schools excused from saluting the flag. Just now the G. A. R. and the A. P. A. seem disposed to arrogate to themselves all the patriotism there is in the country; and it takes considerable courage to withstand their opposition, and the slur of being "unpatriotic" if one does not approve their pet measures, and frankly says so.

The liquor men are revolting against what they are pleased to call "the continual nagging of the temperance fanatics." There has been a law passed prohibiting the issuing of licenses within one quarter of a mile of a city or a town which votes for no license, if the authorities of that city or town remonstrate. Many who live in no license towns and object to a saloon located at their back door, have taken advantage of this privilege, and filed remonstrances. It is only simple justice that towns so voting should be given some protection from their license neighbors, though it is true that a quarter of a mile would not be much of a hindrance to a man who wanted to drink. The liquor traffic is the one business that nobody wants. The outlying districts wish to banish the saloon into the centers of business. The centers of business on the other hand want to shove it off into the suburbs. Such a cordon of restrictions drawn around any legitimate business would long ago have driven it out of existence, and the fact that it lives and thrives under such circumstances shows what immense profits are made in the murderous traffic.

"A late spring is a great blessing," says some wise weather-prophet. Farmers and fruit-raisers may congratulate themselves. No "lagging rear of winter's frost" has nipped the leaf-buds which, hidden in their varnished sheaths, have had no days of unseasonable warmth to lure them out. I notice that the Industrial Aid Society has asked for contributions of money and lands to furnish work for the unemployed by which they can raise food for their families. Every charity which helps the improvident to be provident, and makes self-supporting citizens out of those who would otherwise become tramps and paupers, and at the same time causes two blades of grass to grow instead of one, is one of those far-reaching philanthropic schemes which give rich men the best interest for their money—could they realize it.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Masonic pride.—G.A.R. excitement.—Another heresy trial possible—State and city politics.—A Mohammedan propaganda.

A party of thirty-four Master Masons have recently returned home from Palestine, as proud of their pilgrimage as any deluded Romanist pilgrim who has visited a sacred shrine. On March 6th a session of a Masonic lodge was held in King Solomon's quarries in Jerusalem, in which they all participated. They brought home many interesting souvenirs, and New York will have a block of limestone granite cut from the quarries, to be used in the new Masonic Temple now being built in Albany. Perhaps they suppose that Masonic virtue will accrue to them in the "Grand Lodge above" because of the pious devotion which they have shown in visiting the tomb of that old Jewish royal debauchee, whose ultimate repentance and salvation have always been matters of dispute, and are doubted to-day by the most thoughtful students of Holy Scripture.

The city papers are still publishing many letters about Col. Waring's attack on the G. A. R., an account of which was recently given in the Cynosure, and the mayor's office is daily besieged by squads of so-called veterans, insisting that the colonel be removed from the office of street cleaning commissioner. In a more recent letter Col. Waring characterized the G. A. R. as an organization that placed the bounty-jumpers of '64 on the same footing with the enthusiastic volunteers of '61, and which would vote for any party that would secure it a pecuniary bonus. The communication closes with the following peroration: "The unending crime of this organization has been the destruction of the sense of duty and of the spirit of patriotism, and the substitution for these manly motives of a mere cash consideration. Henceforth windy clamor must take the place of noble incentives, and the nation's gratitude can be expressed only in dollars and cents, as it is now expressed in the millions paid to unworthy 'veterans,' who have been hunted up and seduced by the claim agents; and what is even worse, have been coddled, pauperized, and emasculated by the Grand Army of the Republic."

These words are significant, as coming from a man who served with distinction throughout the whole war, and whose record has been scanned in vain for any spot or blemish. It is gratifying to note that many papers are publishing letters every day upholding and applauding his statements.

Rev. Dr. R. Heber Newton, Rector of All Soul's church, recently preached on the "Resurrection of Christ," with the result that some of his brother clergymen in the Protestant Episcopal Church have complained to the Bishop, and are seriously considering the advisability of preferring formal charges of heresy against him. In his discourse he emphatically rejected the doctrine of the resurrection, and frankly said that he could not accept the testimony of the disciples because no one saw Christ in the act of rising from the tomb. Since one article of the Apostles' creed is, "I believe in the resurrection of the body," some of the more loyal churchmen insist that Dr. Newton ought to be deposed from the ministry of the church. Several years ago, in like manner, he publicly repudiated the doctrine of the Incarnation, and although a similar discussion arose, it soon subsided, and he was left in the undisturbed possession of his parish. It is not considered probable, at the present time, that Bishop Potter will pay any attention to these complaints; and it seems to be a fact becoming more prominent every year that one may be a minister of the Episcopal Church in good standing, and believe and preach anything he pleases without the slightest regard either to the Bible or the creed of the church.

The passage of the police magistrate's bill last week is a triumph in the cause of reform. It was feared that the deal between the Republican machine and Tammany Hall would prevent its passage, and it undoubtedly would have done so had not Gov. Morton appeared upon the scene, and disciplined three Republican senators in the very nick of time. The Tammany senators have sworn the direst vengeance on what they were pleased to call this breach of faith on the part of the Republicans, and on the following day Senator O'Sullivan attacked O'Connor in a speech that was said to have been the most severe and bitter invective that has been heard in the legislature for many years. Reformers are jubilant over the timely and prompt action of the governor.

The Raine's ballot bill has been reported by the judiciary committee. As passed previously in the Senate it contained the fatal provision that an illiterate voter might designate some person to accompany him into the booth to prepare his ballot. It was pointed out that this would enable every venal voter to designate some man whom he might suspect of having money for the purchase of votes to accompany him to the booth, and thus be assured that the illiterate voter would deliver his vote for the right candidate. This provision was stricken out, and as a substitute an amendment was reported that when an illiterate voter applies for ballots, the inspectors may designate two men, of opposite political belief, to accompany him inside the booth and aid in preparing his ballot.

Some of the city pastors have been preaching against the Percy-Gray racing bill, claiming that it nullifies the constitution, and that it is a most infamous measure for a so-called reform legislature to pass. Meanwhile the sporting and racing fraternity are clamoring for its passage, with good prospects of ultimate success.

A Mohammedan missionary movement has been in progress for some months in the city. Every Sunday, at the corner of Broadway and 13th street, up four ricketty flights of stairs, in an Odd-fellow's lodge room, a mere handful of the disciples of the False Prophet meet and pick Christianity to pieces, and prophesy that Mohammedanism will soon supplant it altogether. The lodge room is a fitting place for it, as it is most kindly disposed to Masonry, Theosophy, and all forms of Oriental mysticism. "The unspeakable Turk" has a big contract on his hands in undertaking to graft Islam and Kismet into American citizenship. F. W. FARR.

AN INTERESTING ITEM.—Oliver Ainsworth graduated from Harvard College in the year 1794. Two years later it became known that he was writing an exposition of the secrets of the Masonic lodge, of which he was a member. One evening he was called to the door to speak to some one who called at his home in New England. Not expecting to go out of the house he went to the door without his hat, but stepped outside and was never seen again by his family. Vague rumors were circulated that he was seen in Elktown, Maryland, but he probably was taken care of by the fraternity.

REFORM NEWS.

FOR VICTORY.

CHICAGO, May 4, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Pressure of work has prevented reports for the past two weeks. For ten days I labored in New York and vicinity. The usual list of Cynosure subscribers was secured and new friends enlisted. One Sabbath was spent with my special friend, Rev. James Parker, Jersey City. Bro. Parker is pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church of that city. His church, known as one of the Conservative, is enjoying a healthy growth, notwithstanding its aggressive testimony against popular evils. I responded to Bro. Parker's invitation to speak at the morning service, and had the pleasure of listening to the logical, thorough and convincing sermon which he preached in condemnation of promiscuous dancing in the afternoon. Bro. Parker does not spend much time in condemning the sins of the Jews, but evidently endeavors to point out those sins the most likely to entrap those who may hear him.

Returning to Washington I found the Cynosure of April 11th containing my open letter to Dr. Easton was in demand. So far as I have heard the doctor has not replied to this letter. As it has been widely read it could hardly fail to set some to thinking. In his church paper Dr. Easton publishes his wish to be chaplain of the next House of Representatives, and urges his members to use their influence to secure for him this position. He calls attention to the fact that he is a 33 degree Mason, a leader among the Oddfellows and Knights of Pythias, evidently thinking that such an enunciation will have great weight in getting him the salary paid the chaplain. Whether the members of the next Congress desire one who has done so much swearing to do their praying remains to be seen.

Friends having Cynosures of April 11th who do not wish to retain them would help our cause and do me a favor by mailing the same to 355 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D. C. Late parlor meetings in our mission there have been well attended, and new light has been given. I shall (D. V.) respond to requests to give lectures in Washington Co., Pa., in the near future. Sabbath, May 19, I am to be at Venice, and a week later at McConnell's Mills. If there are friends in that county who desire lectures soon, they can address me at Venice. W. B. STODDARD.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST AGENT.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 29, 1895.

From Castle Rock I went to Centralia in Lewis county, Washington. This is a little city of about two or three thousand people. It is where the Grays Harbor branch leaves the main line of the Northern Pacific railroad. The hard times have left their impress on this, as on many other places. Many good buildings are vacant.

I was expecting to speak here in the Christian church, but was side-tracked to the W. C. T. U. hall. There was no one to look after the opening, but we got there in good time, and a young man (God bless him) hunted the key, and opened and lighted the hall for us. Some of the members of the Christian church explained that they had a few lodgemen in their society, and did not wish to offend them by having it in the church. The pastor was very anxious for it, and thought it just the thing needed. He says, "I think it is time to call a halt on these lodges, especially for Christians."

Well, we had a good crowd at the hall. They listened very attentively, and quite a number gave their approval of the lecture by nods, amens, and various ejaculations. I was very kindly entertained here by Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCall.

When I arrived at Tacoma, I found they had not received my appointment. We set out to see what we could do. I agreed, as the pastor was away, that I would preach for them on Sabbath morning. We had an excellent service, holding till one o'clock. No chance to stop. The people got happy and shouted the praises of God. At night, spoke directly on the lodge evil. Only a small congregation, but a very good interest. Two took the Cynosure for a year. One gentleman walked down street with me after the address. Said he, "I suppose I was the only lodgeman to hear you to-night. I can assure you your work is of the Lord. When I got salvation two years ago, I saw that in order to keep it, I must quit the lodge. I have never been back to it. I find enough in Jesus to satisfy me. If you can open the eyes of Christians to this it is well." I told him there were other lodgemen present, but he was the only one who seemed to have his eyes open to the truth. I am constantly receiving such testimonies. This man was a member of the M. E. church.

From here I went to Seattle, passing Puyallup by, not being able to secure a house in which to speak. I spoke on Tuesday night at the Seattle Seminary, a Free Methodist institution of learning. Prof. Clark W. Shay is principal, with two excellent lady teachers to assist him. The college is doing an excellent work mentally and morally. It should be supported well by the denomination, and other Christian people who are opposed to what is false, and who love the truth. The address had been mentioned to a number of lodgemen in the community, who were especially invited to be present. Prof. Shay led in prayer, after which Rev. Beers gave us a good introduction. Always during my lecture work I give opportunities for replies. I even challenge a successful contradiction. Two subscribed for the Cynosure. Quite a number took books. The students seemed anxious to know more of the subject.

The next night I spoke in Maple's Hall, South Seattle. Here I thought the lodgemen would beat me out of a crowd, but after I began speaking the hall filled up well. Here we were cheered on by such veteran reformers as Rev. M. H. Nichols and Bro. J. C. Card. Mr. Maple was present. He is treasurer of King county, and an avowed infidel. I heard him say to a young man as they came out of the hall, "There's more truth than poetry in that address." I think many minds were aroused to investigate the crying evil of secret societies.

As I returned next day through Castle Rock, a gentleman boarded the train. He said, "Mr. Williams, nothing has so stirred our town for years as your lecture. It is all the talk. The Presbyterian and Christian minister have both taken up the fight, and have spoken out freely against the order. You must return and lecture again." This I will do if the Lord wills.

La grippe is handling me roughly for a while. Pray for me and our cause on this coast.

P. B. WILLIAMS.

As the warm weather comes on the labor unions begin to threaten strikes. Worse than poor pay, worse than honest hunger even, is the effect of these strikes on the laborer. We would not for a moment justify men in oppressing the poor. Doubtless this is done in many cases; God will certainly avenge the wrong; but for men, free men, to swear to obey unknown superiors, and to conceal from their wives secrets which affect the welfare of themselves and children; and then to not only not receive pay for being idle, but violently prevent others from doing the work which they refuse to do, cannot but degrade and destroy these men who would be honored and blest if they would suffer for a season, if need be, rather than do wrong!

THE LODGE IN POLITICS.

The county treasurer of Clinton county, Pa., (I think of '93) was a defaulter of over six hundred dollars. He was never prosecuted and they elected another, and he appointed the defaulter as his secretary. They are both Masons; the one that is treasurer now is a 33d degree Mason. Now what do you call that but Masonic rule? Our country has no laws which can be used against a Mason. A WITNESS.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE VENERABLE J. G. FEE.

To members of the National Christian Association:

I have, as some of you know, just passed through the severest trial of my life—the giving up of my dear wife. She was of the Lord—a stay to me in the many trials of life. She was constant in her protest against secret orders as contrary to the spirit of the Gospel and inimical to the well-being of human society.

Our church has a resolution, a written protest against secret orders. I see not how the great evil of secret orders is to be removed from our land but by the protest of the Christian church. The church is supposed to echo the voice of God, which only can reach the conscience of men.

I know no movement which is so stealthily and successfully injecting the poison of secretism into the mind of the populace as the Grand Army of the Republic. It comes with the show of patriotism, and yet maintains and practices that which is perilous to a republic. The devil is never so successful in injecting evil, as when he "comes in the livery of heaven." I wish the editor of the Cynosure would again specify reasons why this organization is seriously objectionable. The people need "line upon line" JOHN G. FEE.

THE DECEPTIVE CHARACTER OF THE LODGE.

The secret fraternities claim to be a helping brotherhood, but the claim is false and deceptive. The carnal brotherhoods are a caricature of the brotherhood which Christ instituted. Jesus asked the question, "Who is my mother and who are my brethren?" and then answered, "Whosoever doeth the will of my Father the same is my mother and sister and brother." But because it is a brotherhood in being pledged to help each other, many are deceived, and suppose they may innocently prefer its members though not so needy to more needy ones outside of their fraternity, though the latter be ever so truly the children of God. And so, blinded by the god of this world, they turn away from the Bible requirement, "Do good unto all men, especially to them who are of the household of faith." I cannot see how so many are so greatly deceived except on the supposition that devils are busily at work on these various lines influencing, suggesting, and impressing.

We know Satan is called the adversary, the seducer, the deceiver; that he is called "the prince of the power of the air, that worketh in the children of disobedience." "Even Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light." Not so much wonder then that even church-goers and church members, seeing false religions dressed up in the gaudy hues of great pretensions and seeming devoutness, should be deceived. Especially are they liable to be thus deceived if they are not genuinely consecrated to the service of God, but are vacillating in their minds between the world and carnality on one hand and Christ on the other hand.

We account for the deception partly from the fact that it is so much more in accord with the pride of the human heart to think of saving one's self by ceremonies, and by faithfully keeping pledges and obligations made in secret fraternities. Join this fact with the bold, unscrupulous pretension that "Our rites embrace all the possible needs of man, moral, social and spiritual; and have a meaning high as the heavens, broad as the universe, and profound as eternity," and we have some clue to the readiness with which many are drawn into Masonic ceremonies. While the devil impresses them with the thought, if you are only faithful to these ceremonies and obligations you will be all right, there is no offence of the cross in this. The heart may retain its pride and love of the world, and hope to be saved.

So many good men join the fraternities, they must be good. In this way many are deceived. The looker-on seeing ministers and deacons, elders and class-leaders joining the lodge fraternities will think that, of course it is a good thing or they would not go into it. But, (1) Many professing to be good men are not really so. (2) Many of them have never studied the real character of Freemasonry—its origin and designs —and so are themselves deceived; and if they have real goodness, that fact is the means of deceiving others who naturally suppose that if the minister belongs to it he understands it. The writer of this has in a number of instances conversed with ministers (Masons and Odd-fellows) who said, with apparent honesty, that these fraternities require the candidate to believe in the Bible and to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Yet nothing could be further from the truth. So they are "deceiving and being deceived." (3) Many who are nominally members of these fraternities have become informed as to the anti-Christian character of the lodge religion, and so in their hearts renounce it and do not attend the meetings of the lodge, yet are looked on by outsiders as genuine lodgemen; and so the deception continues.

The initiation in Freemasonry is evidently Satan's counterfeit regeneration, and answers to the work of the Holy Spirit, contemplated in the Gospel of Christ. Satan evidently has power to impress human spirits, and succeeds best with those who do not by faith in Christ resist him.

Yours truly, C. POWERS.

PROHIBITION IN THE COLLEGES.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

The third annual convention and contest of the Inter-Collegiate Prohibition Association of Illinois was held at Wheaton College, April 18th and 19th. It was very interesting and encouraging from first to last. The meeting of the executive board occurred Thursday afternoon, the 18th of April. Delegates were present from the Northwestern University of Evanston, Eureka College, University of Illinois, Northwestern College of Naperville and Wheaton College. Chicago University was also represented on Friday afternoonand evening.

Thursday evening Pres. Blanchard gave the annual opening address on "The Church and the Saloon." It was an exceedingly interesting argument for a firm stand on this and other reform questions by the churches of our country. The music for this as well as the other meetings of the convention was furnished by quartettes of Wheaton College.

During Friday morning, papers were read and discussed by the delegates and club members. The first, on "The Need of Education inPolitics," by Alfred O. Shacklee, president of the Wheaton Club, was able and interesting. Mr. Shacklee said that American citizens were not lacking leaders; "they were led to death;" they needed to be taught to think rightly for themselves. The second paper was on the "Mission of the Illinois College Prohibition Association," by Mr. M. E. Nonnamaker from Naperville. This was a very practical subject for the convention, and was to the effect that while all the people need to be educated in politics, the particular business of the associatien was to educate college men on this particular question, since they will to-morrow make laws embodying their opinions of to-day. After the discussion of this subject, Mr. William Drummet, of Eureka, read a paper on the "Financial Needs and Means for Raising Funds" for the association.

The afternoon was taken up by a paper on "The Sphere of the Local Club," written by Thos. W. Reely of Champaign; an address—"Wanted—Men," by Mr. C. P. Nadelkof of Wheaton, and the reports of committees and clubs, and the election of State officers. Mr. Drummet of Eureka was elected president, Miss Belle Blanchard, of Wheaton, vice president, Mr. Gaston, of Champaign, secretary, and Mr. Walter S. Davis, of Chicago, treasurer.

In the evening came the anxiously awaited contest. The order on the program for the orations had been settled by lot. Mr. Edward S. Hutchins, Evanston's representative, gave the first oration on "The Great Leader of a Great Cause" to the large audience which nearly filled the chapel. Miss Evelyn Pinkney followed with an oration on the Prohibition party as "Our Nation's Hope." Then the program was varied by a piece from the male quartette, "Bury Him Deeply Down," which was followed by "Oh Neighbor, Come Off the Fence" as an encore. Mr. J. F. Smith did credit to Eureka College by his oration on "King Alcohol in the Arena of Life." It was an apt comparison of the old Roman rulers looking upon the gladiatorial combats, with modern King Alcohol enjoying the destruction caused by his orders. After another song Mr. Geo. H. Gaston, of Champaign, delivered his oration on "The Basis of the Prohibition Principle." "Liberty, law and growth," said he, "furnish the basis of prohibition reform." Mr. J. Howard More gave the last oration on "The Scourge of the Republic." It astonished everyone, and delighted truth-seekers. He had a wonderful store of pointed and piquant epithets which were used to great advantage. While the averaging committee were ascertaining the decision of the judges the audience were entertained by music. The decision of the judges seemed to be in accord with that of the audience, as is not always the case. The first prize of $25 was presented to the representative of Chicago University, Mr. More, and the second of $15, to Miss Pinkney of Wheaton College. We hope Mr. More will carry off the honors at the national contest.

Mr. J. A. Benson, the State secretary of the association, came a long way at his own charges to preside over the meeting, which he did most handsomely. Miss Guild, the State treasurer, acted as secretary. E. ALBERT COOK.

ODD-FELLOWS CELEBRATE.

LISBON, Ia., April 30, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Lisbon Herald gives an account of a great Odd-fellow convention celebrating the seventy-sixth anniversary of the founding of that order in America, held in our town last Friday. You will see that the oration was a long string of laudations of the order; Christ and the divine atonement and salvation, all left out, and nothing but the human side and human goodness and duty presented. And that very falsely, for instead of it embracing all mankind, as the orator said, their brotherly love and benevolence is all confined to the order, and that only on condition of it being well paid for. And yet the ignorant masses seemed to take it down like butter and honey, with a few noble exceptions. And as I mused, I thought how has the fine gold become dim. This once strong anti-secrecy United Brethren town, where some years ago no such lodge demonstration could have been held, now welcome the demonstration, and some of our brethren and sisters are in the lodge.

Our present law on oath-bound secrecy is just about as effective against the lodge as the Mulct law of Iowa is against the saloon in our State. For it won't be long, unless some counter influence is brought to bear, until all the larger towns will have all the saloons that the whisky ring will want, and thousands of young men (in this once prosperous prohibitory State) on the inclined plain downward, toward a life wasted, parents' hearts broken, and the end a drunkard's grave. Oh, that God would turn back the tide of evil that is coming up in the various channels of our national life, and give us a deeper channel of righteousness, peace and prosperity than ever before. Yours as ever, I. L. BUCHWALTER.

TWO VETERANS AT REST.

(BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY,) LEWISBURG, Pa.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It is with inexpressible sadness that we announce the death of our esteemed brother, Rev. Nathan Callender, who departed this life on Saturday, April 20, at the home of his son, A. L. Callender, Scranton, Pa. He had often expressed his desire either to die or to be buried on his birthday. The latter might have been granted, but owing to the inconvenience for some of his friends to be present his burial was delayed one day—otherwise he would have been buried on his seventy-fifth birthday. He had been in poor health for several years. but maintained his pastorate with the Scott Valley Baptist church until the early part of last winter, when his declining health compelled him to resign.

Elder Callender was a man of unblemished Christian character, and lived strictly in accordance with his convictions, a sincere and devout Christian. Having been converted at the age of nineteen, he early entered into his Master's service, where he was a very active and faithful servant, as well as a diligent student, studying to "show himself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." He was a firm Prohibitionist, and the first man to vote that ticket in Susquehanna county, and for a time he stood almost alone for its support. As a pastor he was dearly loved by his people, and even those who did not agree with him in his views on moral questions highly respected him for his sound reasoning and gentlemanly courtesy.

He faithfully opposed the workings of the secret lodge, as he believed it to be the enemy of the home, the church, and the equal rights of man; and until his earthly labors were ended he endeavored to "throw out the life line" in continuous warnings, to keep the ignorant from being led "blindfolded" into the Christless lodges.

For a number of years he held the position of president of the Anti-secret Association of Pennsylvania, and as long as his health permitted he was among the leading lecturers in the anti-secret cause. The last time he was able to meet with the National Christian Association was in the convention held at Binghampton, N. Y. His remarkable address on that occasion was published in the Cynosure, of which he has long been a subscriber.

In his death we feel that our loss is almost irreparable. All who knew him, and especially those who watched over him in his last moments, can testify to his unfaltering faith and trust in Him unto whom, while living, he "presented his body as a living sacrifice," and in whose arms he is now enjoying the reward of the blest.

On the same day that the remains of Rev. Callender were laid to rest, Rev. S. E. Miller of Clifford, Pa., passed suddenly away. He had been declining in health for nearly a year, but was not considered to be in danger. His last sickness was only for thirty hours, and his death was a surprise to all. He was a man of strong Christian character, and was respected by all who knew him. He was a staunch anti-secretist, and he publicly and fearlessly denounced the workings of the lodge. He and Elder Callender were co-workers, not only in the Christian ministry but also in the battle against the Masons. Singularly they had agreed that the one surviving should preach the other's funeral sermon; but God in his providence saw fit to take them both to himself at an interval of scarcely three days. We deeply mourn their loss, and feel that it can only be compensated in the assurance of eternal rest with Jesus, whom they were never reluctant to proclaim as the Saviour of all mankind. B. F. THOMAS.

HOW TO MAKE PICTURE FRAMES.

Pretty Ones That Can Be Fashioned at Home.

Have a plain pine frame made the size of the picture. Procure from a druggist a quantity of cork covered paper, such as bottles are packed in. It is usually given away. Cover the frame with this, then give two coats of ivory white paint or gild with gold or bronze paint. Another way is to cover the pine frame neatly with plush or velvet. A narrow gilt molding next the picture gives a pretty finish to either frame.

At the picture stores they give away the triangular pieces that are left after making a frame. These make a part of a very pretty frame for a square or round picture. Take a piece of pine board an inch thick and 14 inches square. Plane it smoothly and cut off the corners to form an octagon. Cut a round hole in the center 10 inches in diameter. Cover this frame neatly with plush, paste a strip of the plush an inch wide around the inside edge of the circle. Now take the triangular bits of molding. They may be had of all sizes, according to the width, but for this frame they will need to measure seven inches the longest way. Four of these are to be placed one on each corner. Glue will hold them nicely. Fasten the picture to the back, and it is ready to hang. If a glass is needed, it may be held in place by strips of cloth pasted around the edges, which will hold it to the frame. The frame should be hung diamondwise—that is, with a corner at top and bottom.

Passe partout for photographs, small engravings or inexpensive pictures are made by binding together the picture and glass (a cardboard back may be added) with black ribbon. Lap on glass half an inch. Fasten on two brass rings, with narrow strips of cloth for hanging. Use flour paste for binding and fastening on rings.

How to Make Vienna Rolls.

To make crescents similar to those sold in the shops as Vienna rolls, roll the dough into pieces about eight inches square and a quarter of an inch thick. Cut this across twice from corner to corner, which will give four triangles, each of which will make a horn. Take the triangles, one by one, pull them out a little to make them longer and place the broad side nearest to you; then roll them lightly from this broad side. Place them on a tin with the point uppermost and bend the points so that they nearly meet to make the roll crescent shaped. Let these crescents rise a second time, brush the surface with milk or white of egg and bake. Sometimes, in order to keep the folds of dough distinct, a little butter is spread barely over the triangles and then lightly floured before the horns are rolled.

How to Make a Portable Sewing Cloth.

Where a sewing room is impossible a rug of linen crash under the machine, large enough to cover half the room, will be a great convenience. At a moment's notice all the threads and scraps may be gathered up in this rug and shaken on a paper in some convenient place, keeping the room neat and clean without the trouble of sweeping. Such a rug may be purchased by the yard, 2½ yards wide, at 80 cents a yard. Two yards and a half will make a sewing rug that will last for years, and it may be easily washed and ironed when soiled.

Ayer's Pills are recommended by leading physicians and druggists, as the most prompt and efficient remedy for biliousness, nausea, costiveness, indigestion, sluggishness of the liver, jaundice and sick headache; also to relieve colds, fevers, neuralgia, and rheumatism.

When the hair begins to fall out or turn gray, the scalp needs doctoring, and we know of no better specific than Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

Many of our —— subscribers, alas! seem to be as baskets or sponges: either leaking out the truth as fast as they receive it, or else absorbing it for self only. They forget the precious promise of God: "The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." Prov. 11: 25. But some of our subscribers and readers are like wells and reservoirs: they receive the living water and give it out to other souls. They send in new subscribers, send lists of names to whom we may send specimen copies, help circulate our books, and otherwise promote the work of the Lord. "Go thou and do likewise."

Cynosure subscribers, please read the above once more, and then ask yourself, Am I like a basket or sponge, or like a well or reservoir?

We desire to call especial attention to the letter from the aged John G. Fee, page 5. The war of Rebellion was hatched in the Southern lodge-rooms. Now the G. A. R. strews flowers annually over the graves of the rebels, and has begun to go South and fraternize with the Confederate Veterans' lodges. And we find such setiments as the following: "Masonry, while non-sectarian and non-partisan, has ever encouraged loyalty to the government—where that government was free. It is true a majority of the Masons in the South, during the civil war, were opposed to the Union, but it is equally true that they were ever ready to recognize the sign, and to render all the relief in their power to a brother though a foeman." Bro. Ezra A. Cook's article on page 2 will be read with interest as showing how this favoriteism—this treason—prolonged the war.

KING SOLOMON'S QUARRIES.

We have a letter from the Washington Post of April 8th, written by a minister whose name is M'Corkle. In it he describes a meeting of American Masons in the excavations at Jerusalem, which are said to be the place whence Solomon obtained stones for the Temple. Having made himself known as a Mason, he was permitted to join in the organization of the lodge, and in the "refreshment" which followed the "labor." Repeatedly he makes allusions to the alleged fact that Freemasonry had somewhat to do with the erection of the Temple; that Solomon was a Freemason, etc., etc. We do not know whether he was sincere in this writing. Very possibly he was, for Masons who are intelligent men, and well informed respecting most questions, are often totally ignorant of the history of the organization to which they lend their spirit. All persons who are well read in the history of the lodge know that Freemasonry, as a speculative system, is not yet two hundred years old; they know that neither Adam, nor Noah, nor King Solomon, nor the two Saints John, nor any other of the Scripture worthies had anything to do with it. They know that all the speculative Freemasonry there ever was in Jerusalem has been carried there by lodgemen from Europe and America. Mr. M'Corkle may not know these facts, as already said; we do not know whether he is one of the ignorant or one of the well informed members of the order. It is pitiful, however, to see a man professing to be called by the Holy Spirit to preach the Lord Jesus Christ to dying men, busying himself with the signs and ceremonies of Freemasonry, and joining with Masons, very possibly with godless men, in the ceremonies of that pagan religion. It is not needful to seek the cause of spiritual barrenness in our churches when the shepherds of the sheep, who should be guiding the flocks, are associating with all sorts of unbelievers in the work of pagan religions like the Masonic. It is interesting to know that the lodge which is called the "Royal Mother Lodge" has only twenty-four members, and that these are almost all merchants and importers. There are a few natives, but these are doubtless men who have been deceived into supposing that Masonry has some historic connection with this ancient city.

The Royal Mother Lodge at Jerusalem is probably one of the youngest organizations of that kind in the world, yet true to the Masonic instinct for false pretense, it calls itself "Mother Lodge." How long will Christian men, even sensible men who are not Christians, have patience with such an organized and perpetual lie?

CHARITY AND BENEVOLENCE.

These terms have been misapplied by secret lodges until their real significance is nearly lost. Both of these words by their derivation mean a feeling of love or good-will; and as such feelings generally find expression in kind deeds and loving acts, came to be applied to actions prompted feelinges. Addison has said, "Charity is a virtue of the heart, and not of the hands; gifts and alms are the expressions not the essence of this virtue."

There is no true charity but that which springs from love to God; no true justice but what rests on the fear of God; no true morality but that which is founded on the Word and law of God. Men are by nature selfish; every one knows this is true of his fellowman even if he does not realize that it is true of himself. God is love, and when a man is born of God and becomes his son the change of heart becomes apparent, by the fact that love for his brother man springs up in his heart.

Now the secret lodges, nearly if not all of them, claim to be charitable institutions. "Masonry," says an eminent Masonic author, "is but another name for that spirit of pure, brotherly love which should unite all men."

> "God hath made mankind one vast brotherhood, > Himself their Master, and the world his lodge."

When the candidate for the Mollie Maguires knelt to take the oath, the officer who administered it first read to him the following statement of the objects and principles of the society: "We are joined together to promote friendship, unity, and true Christian charity among our members, by raising money for the maintenance of the aged, sick, blind and infirm. The motto of the order is Friendship, Unity, and true Christian Charity." The motto of the order of Odd-fellows is "Friendship, Love and Truth."

And yet Masonry gives nothing except in return for money paid in, and not then, unless the dues are paid up to date; the Mollie Maguires, while that order was allowed to exist in our government, was the most murderous institution that can be imagined; and the Odd-fellows' lodge brings to mind the couplet:

> —"With one hand he put
> A penny in the urn of poverty,
> And with the other took a shilling out."

But men say we feel the necessity of a loving brotherhood, where each seeks the other's good and not his hurt; where the strong bear the infirmities of the weak—a shelter in the time of storm. This they find more in theory than in practice in the church; hence the organization of the lodge. If a member is sick it pays him so much per week till he recovers. If necessary, its members will sit up with him night after night. If he dies, it will bury him, and provide for the widow and orphans. Do you say the church does this? Yes; a few choice spirits do; but ninety per cent feel under no such obligations. "Said a man to his friend, "I think I will go into a lodge." "Why not into the church?" "I put the lodge first and the church second," said he, "because the lodge will show more sympathy and love for me in sickness, adversity and death, than the church shows."

In other words, this man did not want an opportunity to do good to his fellows; his heart was not stirred by love either to God or man; and not knowing it by experience, he judged there was no such thing as charity, and was going to join the lodge which he thought would be obliged to help him if reduced to want. Now any one can see at a glance that as soon as an organization, even if started by benevolent persons, has a majority of such members they will simply prey upon one another.

The truth is, Christ is "the desire of all nations." He only can satisfy. We are in God's universe and we can walk at liberty only by seeking his precepts. Ps. 119: 45. Much of the suffering and misery in the world is occasioned by the untruthful idea that men would be happy if they could have what they think they want. Wealth, health, friends, these are all desirable things to have; but Paul and Silas, beaten, sore, with their feet in the stocks, are infinitely happier than the jailor who incarcerated them. "God," in the words of St. Augustine, "has made us for himself, and our heart is restless till it rests on him." Christ is the head of the Christian church. His word to his followers is, "Do good and lend, hoping for nothing again." "And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God, love his brother also."

G. A. R.—GREAT ARROGANT RENEGADES.

The Grand Army of the Republic, falsely so-called, seems to have drank "the waters of vanity" until they are ready to burst. A part of the old soldiers, possibly half, get together and shut out all who cannot conscientiously promise to keep their secrets, and style themselves the Grand Army. Their name is false in two particulars: (1) They are not the army. (2) They are not in any sense grand.

But they are great in a few particulars: They are great for breaking the Sabbath; they are great for getting offices which they are not fitted morally, at least, to fill; and they are great leeches on the United States Treasury. Since they assume to be great when not really so, they are arrogant; and of late this body has well earned the title renegade, so that after all the lettered title G. A. R. is right.

First, this great arrogant body of men set apart May 30 as a day to be observed every year to decorate the graves of the old soldiers; not only those who had given their lives for their country, but equally with these they concluded to honor those who had been traitors! We see such captions as these: Reunion of Blue and Gray.—Northern Veterans Entertained by their Brethren in Atlanta. And such statements as this:

"Commander-in-Chief Thomas G. Lawler, of Rockford, Ill., and staff arrived in Atlanta to-day from Montgomery. There was a session of the Georgia and South Carolina departments at the Atlanta Post. The Grand Army men were driven about the city and entertained at the Capitol City Club to-night. To-morrow evening there will be a general reception at the Post hall, at which the Fulton County (Confederate) Veterans' Association will be present in a body."

In other words, the secret lodge in the North is being entertained by the secret lodge South; and when one of their number protests against such treasonable doings, this great renegade order cries out in the following style:

UNPATRIOTIC AND OUT OF DATE.

Department Commander J. A. Thayer of the Massachusetts division, G. A. R, needs the lesson which the Grand Army men of Chicago and other places seem disposed to give him. When the friends of dead Confederate soldiers proposed to dedicate the Confederate monument at Oakwoods cemetery on memorial day one of the most prominent Grand Army Posts in the city, acting in human sympathy and fellowship, asked to be allowed to participate. Prominent men of both North and South took heed of the good example and joined in the effort to make this memorial day service a beautiful and fitting symbol of national unity and brotherhood. The event promises to be one of the most notable re-unions of the blue and gray ever known. To the glory of the Grand Army be it said Thayer is likely to have few associates in his task of trying to rend asunder the healed wound. He is living far behind the age, and neither humanity nor patriotism is in his speech.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." . . . "Whereby we know that it is the last time."

THE REBEKAH DEGREE--A WARNING.

This side degree of Odd-fellowship was invented by Mr. Schuyler Colfax. The motives he gives for its formation are the following: 1. "It will tend to increase the resources of the subordinate lodges," and "to induce them (members) to progress upward in the order." 2. "Save the trouble of wives' and widows' cards. 3. Lessen and ultimately destroy the prejudice felt against the order by many of the fairer sex, which prevents accessions of members." In a word, it was a scheme to compliment women, appeal to their vanity in the name of charity and then extort money from them. The organ of the Odd-fellows Lodge, the Companion, says:

At first a sister held her membership only through her husband. If for any reason the husband lost his member ship in the subordinate lodge, the wife went out of the order with him. To-day a married sister holds her membership independent of her husband, and the case is not infrequent where a married sister has held active membership after her husband had severed all affiliation with our order.

When ladies were to be admitted the Noble Grand gave the word, "admit them (calling the lodge up with two raps as they entered)." Being admitted the conductor, with the candidates (who had removed previously their bonnets and shawls), and their husbands marched around the lodge-room, while an ode was being sung to them.

The bait took well, and soon we find that unmarried daughters of Odd-fellows, above the age of eighteen years, when proposed by either parent or guardian, or sisters proposed by their brother, such young ladies took their degree; but the more money that came in the more generous these charitable Odd fellows became. And "now," the Companion says, "that the law, making all unmarried women, over eighteen years of age, eligible for membership in the Rebekah branch of our order, we expect that the applications for admission will be double that of any previous year." And these young women, their hats and shawls removed, march around the lodge with the men who proposed them for membership, while the lodge sings, "Welcome sisters to a shrine," etc. "Thus women are inducted into a secret order intended and named only for men." It is a woman's degree, practiced in the night, in which men, known and unknown, may be a majority of ten to one, while women, as before, are excluded from the order itself.

With the customary formalities of an oath, with her right hand on the Bible, the deluded woman is pledged to conceal—not, indeed, the secrets of Odd-fellowship, of which she is permitted to know nothing—but to conceal the secrets of her single degree.

When we remember that the Grand Lodge statistics show that the order receives three dollars in dues to one paid back in benefits—taking these avowed motives and this published practice together—the order must, on its own authority, be regarded as a gigantic swindle. And nothing but the wide reputation of Mr. Colfax, and the success and popularity of the imposition, prevents its being handled by the law like mock auctions, lotteries, and other swindling practices. And the benefits, such as they are, being paid indiscriminately to rich and poor, proves its perpetually repeated boast of being "a ministry of love," "drying the widows' tears," etc., etc., to be bald hypocrisy and wicked pretense.

All this in a world where, alas! corruption is so common, would not justify a national appeal against it, were not this secret order, like the others, a false religion, as is shown abundantly in the "Analysis of the Order" proper. Even the poor Rebekahite, after being bedrabbled through her weak degree, is told that she is now "within our SACRED CIRCLE," and receives a pink and green ribbon as an emblem of ETERNAL LOVE. (!) (See p. 254) The Bible is quoted abundantly to make the farce solemn, and the most fulsome adulation of woman, merely as a sex, is poured into the ears of the initiate throughout the lecture of the degree. Whoever reads and ponders the degree itself will see that its wicked and hateful nature is not and cannot be overstated.

The Philippian damsel, who "brought her masters much gain by soothsaying" (Acts 16: 16), is a type of the condition of women in all false religions, ancient and modern.

A missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. informed the writer that no females were educated by the pagans in his part of Asia but a few brilliant and beautiful girls for the uses of the temple and companionship of the priests. Two thousand such were kept in the single Temple of Diana at Ephesus, which was 220 years in building, at the expense of all Asia Minor. The priests were pimps and panderers to the prostitution of these unfortunates, and gained untold wealth by renting their persons. The poor Pythian damsel at Delphi was placed upon a tripod over the exhilerating gas, when "she immediately began to swell and foam at the mouth, tearing her hair and cutting her flesh." Her masters took her ravings, while in this state, for oracles, and interpreted them for money. Such are some of the Greek "Mysteries" from which Masonic and Odd-fellowship writers boast their orders descended! And women in Freemasons' and Odd-fellows' side-lodges are as near the condition of women in the old lodges of paganism as a Christian country will allow. They are under "masters." Every lodge of females was finally obliged to be adopted by, and under the guardianship of, some regular Masonic lodge (Mackey's Lexicon, p. 22); and "a banquet and a ball," says Clavel, "are inseparable from a lodge of adoption, and are, in fact, the real design of its organization." (Lexicon, p. 26.)

Bro. Malcolm McNeil, while in the Cynosure office a short time ago, gave the following interesting account of his experience with the A. P. A.'s: A Scotchman, he is relentlessly opposed to the Roman Catholic Church because by its human ceremonies and false priests it keeps men from Christ, and by its interference in national affairs it seeks to overthrow our free government.

A friend knowing his feelings about the Romish church urged him to join the A. P. A., and he finally said yes he thought he ought to help against the aggressions of Rome. But he was opposed to secret societies, and went, praying for guidance.

There were five to be received, and in the anteroom a paper was brought with questions, for the candidates to answer: "What is your name? To what other societies have you belonged?" etc.

In reply to the second quetion, Mr. McNeil wrote: "Masons, twenty-three years; but left for Christ's sake."

The papers were taken into the lodge-room, and that answer created a furor. In a few minutes a large man came out, and in a defiant manner asked, "Where is that man who says he belonged to the Masons?"

"I am the man, sir," said our brother:

The A. P. A. gentleman looked at him, and without a word turned and went back into the lodge room, where it was decided that a man who had left the Masonic lodge for Christ's sake was not good timber for the A. P. A. lodge. And he was rejected.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mr. J. A. Krum of Hudson, Ind., relates the following interesting annecdote: When Mr. Ronayne was lecturing against Freemasonry in Indiana some years ago, the Masons were holding a lodge meeting and a member of the fraternity came from the lecture to the lodge and said: "He" (Ronayne) "is telling it all out word for word; what shall we do?" "Why, we will just call him a liar," they said. So they went out and pronounced Mr. Ronayne "a miserable liar." But later when one of these Masons was convicted for sin, he said he "would not dare affront God by even going forward for prayer or doing anything to get religion until he confessed and gave up Masonry."

—Our good brother, W. J. Gladwin, writes: "Praise God for bringing my dear sons Victor and Vivian back to India to help in this great revival evangel campaign. We welcome them in Jesus' name, to live and to labor for his glory alone. By a happy coincidence the lads came just in time to begin work upon the new printing machine, which came to our office to-day. These blessed responsibilities and duties are new pledges of God's wondrous grace toward us, and of his promised greater things than these." We rejoice with this faithful Christian missionary, and pray that with his sons he may continue to accomplish much for the glory of God and the salvation of precious souls.

—One very pleasant circumstance in connection with the coming of the annual meeting is that it brings to the Cynosure office so many friends of the truth and of our Lord Jesus Christ. We have enjoyed visits lately from C. B. Ward on his way back to his mission in India; J. W. Wolfe, a home missionary evangelist from Indian Ter.; Bishop Dillon, Bros. Chalmers, Deveneau, Ronayne, Hodge, Hinman, Hitchcock, W. B. Stoddard and possibly others. It is inspiring and encouraging to see and converse with these good men, who labor together in prayer for us, and who expect to be present and take part in the important meetings next week.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Drunkenness in Germany.—Ashamed of their record.—Gamblers —Dr. Thurber.—Dr. Easton on Rome.—No war with England.

Who has not heard some well-meaning advocate of the moderate use of light wines and beer for beverages declare that in Germany, where the practice is well-nigh universal, there was comparatively little drunkenness? It would be well if all those well-meaning people could be crowded into one audience and addressed by Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, the famous W. C. T. U. around-the-world missionary, who is at present delivering daily addresses in Washington churches. Mrs. Leavitt does not speak from hearsay, but from knowledge gained by personal observation and investigation. She calls attention to the fact that in Germany, the land of beer and light wines, the official returns of physicians, which are acknowledged to have been incomplete, show that in a single year 25,000 people died from drunkenness, and expresses the opinion that Germany has at least 100,000 deaths a year from drunkenness. Just file those figures away in your mind and spring them on the next person you hear advocating the moderate use of light wines and beer. Mrs. Leavitt says European drunkenness is noticed less than it is here because it is the common and expected thing. She quotes recent remarks of the Emperor of Germany, who has become greatly alarmed at the great increase of drunkenness in that country. According to Mrs. Leavitt's figures, which are not exaggerated, ten out of every eleven murders are due to the use of intoxicants; nine out of every ten criminals owe their downfall to the same baleful influence, while seventy-five out of every one hundred divorces can be traced to the same source.

In a town near Washington—Hagerstown, Md.—the courts have been appealed to, to prevent Rev. Edmund Walton, a minister in charge of one of the town's churches, carrying out his threat to publish the names of all those who signed saloon-keepers' applications for license. It is said that the signers include church members and other prominent citizens, and the wording of the application for an injunction shows that many of the signers are ashamed to have it known to the public that they signed. The bill asking for the injunction says the publication of the names of the signers would bring them into odium and ridicule and would damage their reputations. Nevertheless it is hoped that the court will not interfere. Men who sign saloon-keepers' applications for license ought to be known; and if making them known brings them into odium and ridicule and damages their reputations, it will serve them right.

The ministers of Washington are keeping up the crusade against the gambling dens located in and around the race tracks on the Virginia side of the Potomac, and they have been joined by a powerful auxiliary force made up from the ranks of our most prominent business men. Arrangements are being made to bring such influence to bear upon the Governor of Virginia as will compel him to break up these dens of thieves.

Rev. Dr. E. G. Thurber, pastor of the American church in Paris and a member of the board of direction of the McAll Mission, is in Washington. He preached Sunday evening, on his church and the missionary work in France, in Foundry church, and on Monday he delivered an address on the same topics at the regular meeting of the Washington Auxiliary of the McAll Mission, held in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church.

Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian church, preached last Sunday the fourth of a series of sermons dealing with the general relations of the Roman Catholic Church to Protestant Christianity. As usual, the doctor used some very strong language. For instance, the following extracts: "It is now Rome and anti-Rome. Let the cry of the Protestants be: For God and home and native land; one flag supreme, and that the stars and stripes."...."Despotism is the same, whether under the Pope of Rome or the Czar of Russia. We are practically fighting over again the old battle of Luther against papacy. Well may we again inquire, what shall be the limit of power between church and state? Shall they be separate or a unit?"....."Free Bibles! free speech! free press! free schools and liberty of conscience! Abolish these at the behest of Rome and the republic is not only lost but destroyed."

There has been more or less wild talk in Washington about trouble between the United States and Great Britain, as a consequence of the latter's invasion of Nicaragua's territory, but none of it has come from those in authority, who anticipate no trouble. Nothing official has been made public by the Department of State, and there is no indication that anything will be made public at present.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS.

Madison C. Peters Says It Is an Awful Bargain to Sell Goods and Soul at the Same Time—Good Manners a Winning Force. Do All Things Well.

I cannot better introduce the few secrets of success to which I must limit myself in this article than by quoting a paper which is interesting in itself and from its history. Some of you may remember the burning of the steamer Henry Clay on the Hudson river in 1852. Among the victims of that criminal disaster was the Hon. Stephen Allen, an old and rich merchant of New York, and who had been mayor with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. On his body was found a well worn newspaper slip containing the following good maxims:

Keep good company or none.
Never be idle.
If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind.
Always speak the truth.
Make few promises.
Live up to your engagements.
Keep your own secrets, if you have any.
When you speak to a person, look him in the face.
Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue.
Good character is above all things else.
Your character cannot be essentially injured, except by your own acts.
If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that none will believe him.
Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors.
Ever live (misfortunes excepted) within your income.
When you retire to bed, think over what you have been doing during the day.
Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper.
Small and steady gains give competency with tranquillity of mind.
Never play at any kind of game of chance.
Avoid temptation, through fear you may not withstand it.
Earn money before you spend it.
Never run in debt unless you see a way to get out again.
Never borrow, if you can possibly avoid it.
Do not marry until you are able to support a wife.
Never speak evil of any one.
Be just before you are generous.
Keep yourself innocent, if you would be happy.
Save when you are young to spend when you are old.

Both the merchant and the salesman may consult these maxims with advantage. In the spirit of these hints let me further observe: Tell the whole truth about your business. Don't let unfair competition tempt you from the straight line. It is an awful bargain that a man makes when he sells his goods and his immortal soul at the same time.

From the moment you enter the service of a firm their interest must be yours. Guard their interests as your own. Avoid whatever may injure them. Take hold of the humblest piece of work that comes along and push it to the highest success. Do it as if it were the grandest thing you ever expected to do. Whatever you do, do it well. A rival of a certain lawyer sought to humiliate him publicly by saying: "You! You blacked my father's boots once." "Yes," replied the lawyer unabashed, "and I did it well," and because of his habit of doing even mean things well he rose to greatness. Many young men's performances may all be summed up in the phrase "eye service." When their employers are present they are extremely diligent, when absent models of sloth and unfaithfulness. The young man who rises is he who is always at his post, advancing himself toward usefulness.

Good Manners Win.

Good manners are a winning force in life. "Manners make the man," and a man's manners are often the making of him. They determine his reception among his fellows. No policy pays like politeness. Unmannerly actions are among the most expensive luxuries of life.

Keep your engagements. If a man's word cannot be depended on when he makes an engagement, he will be mistrusted.

Never disregard appearances. The apparel often proclaims the man. Dress affects a man's manners and morals. A general negligence of dress very often proclaims a corresponding negligence of address.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy—rich, not gaudy.

What Success Is Not.

When a rich man passes, most people sigh, "How I should like to be that man!" We worship success by itself apart from the means used to get it. To be a successful man is enough, no matter what has preceded it. Men bow down when he passes as in the fable the people bow down to the golden idols that were strapped on the back of a donkey who was ass enough to swell with pride because he thought all this reverence was for him.

Money has its uses, but you need not be rich to be good and happy and useful. Emerson says, "Give me health and a June day, and I will make the pomp of kings ridiculous," and if with that a man can add God's smile and love how he pours contempt on the flimsy, fading possessions of the merely rich!

What Is Capital?

Capital is not what a man has, but what a man is. Character is capital; honor is capital.

Take, then, no thought for aught save truth and right,
Content, if such thy fate, to die obscure.
Youth fails and honors, fame may not endure,
And loftier souls soon weary of delight.
"Keep innocence; be all a true man ought.
Let neither pleasure tempt, nor pain appall.
Who hath this, he hath all things, having naught;
Who hath it not, hath nothing, having all."

MADISON C. PETERS' ADVICE FOR TRAINING BOYS.

Teach Them to Be Honest, Modest and Truthful—Consideration For the Feelings of Others—Decision of Character. Victory Comes to the Persevering.

The tender twig is bent in childhood, the spirit is then shaped, the principles are then implanted and the whole character formed. What to teach a boy is an important question. Divine wisdom, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" harmonizes with the proverb, "As the twig is bent, the tree inclines."

Accuracy.

The great want of Americans is accuracy. Some men live in a kind of mental telescope, through whose magnifying medium every anthill is turned into a mountain. General Pope was renowned among his soldiers for his exaggerated rhetoric. In one of the engagements a private was mortally wounded. A chaplain knelt beside him, and opening his Bible at random read about Samson's slaughter of the Philistines with the jawbone of an ass. He had not quite finished when the poor fellow interrupted him by saying: "Hold on, chaplain, don't deceive a dying man. Isn't the name of John Pope signed to that?" If a man is to be accurate, he must be taught to be accurate in his childhood. Let your boy with the first lispings of speech be taught to speak accurately on all subjects, be they trivial or important, and your boy when he becomes a man will scorn a lie. Teach your boy to be sober, honest, modest and truthful in his observations. By example show him the strict letter of the fact and do not deal in the marvelous. If your boy has committed a fault or carelessly broken anything and takes the full blame upon himself and makes no excuses about it, that boy will make every inch a man. Encourage him to tell the truth. Don't whip him because, like a little man, he tells the truth. Whip him—he may lie the next time to escape the whipping.

Consideration For the Feelings of Others.

Teach him to have consideration for the feelings of others, to say not a word, to give not a look, that would cause unnecessary pain. We can understand how that a boy who had never been taught better might carry torpedoes in his pocket and delight in throwing them at the feet of passersby, but we cannot understand how a man who was well instructed as a boy could do such a thing. And yet there are men who carry torpedoes all their lives and take great pleasure in tossing them at people and enjoy a fiendish delight in seeing them jump.

Decision of Character.

Early instill into your boy's mind decision of character. Undecided, purposeless boys make namby pamby men, useless to themselves and everybody else. They are tossed to and fro, carried about by every wind of doctrine. As Dryden puts it:

"Everything by starts and nothing long."

Teach your boy to have an object in view, the backbone to go after it and then stick. How many men slumber in nameless graves or wander through a life more than wasted because they had not a worthy purpose, a patient energy for its accomplishment, a resolution that never flinches, never flies the track.

Treating.

Treating is the cause of more than half of our drunkenness. America is the only country where this silly and expensive show of hospitality is recognized. Many of our young men are established in intemperance because they feel themselves bound by a law of reciprocal generosity to treat. Let us prohibit treating by law.

Proves His Sincerity.

The only conclusive evidence of a man's sincerity is that he gives himself for a principle. Words, money, all things else, are comparatively easy to give away, but when a man makes a gift of his daily life and practice it is plain that the truth, whatever it may be, has taken possession of him.—Lowell.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 12. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How can we Endeavorers help our church?—I Cor. xii, 1-27. (Meeting to be led by the pastor.)

In this chapter Paul, by analogy, represents the relation that exists between Christ and the church as similar to that which exists between the head and the body, Christ being the head and the church the body, and going still further he represents the relation of the individual members of the church to it by that which the members of the body sustain to it. Endeavorers, therefore, as members of the church are members, organs, of the body of Christ, and in studying the relation of the members of the body to it we may see the relation of the members of the church to the church and consequently how they may help it.

1. All the members of the body have something to do. Not one organ of the body has been created without an object. God intended it to do something, and if it does not do it it loses the power of doing it. The blind fishes in Mammoth cave once had the power of sight, but by living in continual darkness they neglected to use it and consequently lost it. To fulfill his relation to the church, to help the church, the Christian, the Endeavorer, must have something to do. Inactivity, do-lessness, can never help the church. Christ wants the members of His body to be active in His service. We are to present our bodies a living sacrifice, not a dead one. We are to be living stones as a part of Christ's temple. There is no place in the body of Christ for slothful, idle and indolent members. The branch that does not bear fruit is removed and cast into the fire. The one who does not use the talent given to him loses it. Forfeiture is the penalty of neglect in all cases.

2. Each member of the body has a definite, specific work to perform, and the success and harmony of the whole structure lies in its faithfully performing it. All have work, but not all the same work. The eye is for seeing, the ear for hearing, the feet for walking. It is the same in the body of Christ. To each one God has given some talent—ability to do some special work for Him. All are not apostles, all are not prophets, all are not teachers, but it takes the work of all to make a full rounded, symmetrical, successful church. If you would help your church, find out what is the talent God has given you and use it. Be content to fill a little space if necessary that the Lord may be glorified and His church may prosper.

3. All of the members of the human body work in harmony and unity. The eye is not jealous of the ear or the ear of the tongue. Endeavorers, do the work that God has given you the power to do in peace, harmony and fellowship with one another, and you cannot but help your church.

Stands For Christian Endeavor.

The editor of The Lutheran Evangelist devotes the first two columns of a recent issue of his paper to a defense of the Christian Endeavor form of organization as opposed to all forms that might be used to separate the young people of his church from the young people of other evangelical denominations. He says that if the animus of such societies as he names is antagonistic to the Christian Endeavor society "then we stand squarely for the great Scriptural providential movement which has organized the young for Christian work with the pledge of loyalty to Christ and to the denomination."

The Greatest Attraction.

"It was the best meeting that I have ever attended, because so many testified of Jesus." Such was the testimony of an unconverted young man concerning a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting in Savannah, Ga., which he chanced to attend. We cannot too early learn that the most attractive thing about our meetings, as about our religion, is Jesus Himself.—Golden Rule.

The Woman's Suffrage Movement.

The movement for woman suffrage began in conservative New England, and its advocates were regarded as dangerous fanatics. However, they became so strong that a law was passed authorizing women to vote at school elections, a privilege that very few availed themselves of. New England has taken rather an advanced step, and social relations did not appear to be so greatly disturbed as had been confidently predicted by leading writers, and Wyoming, where there were very few women, gave them suffrage and invited believers in it to settle there. The proceeding was a popular one, and the territory of Washington followed Woyming subsequently, incorporating woman suffrage in its state constitution. Utah followed suit, and Colorado also put in a bid for the women. Then Illinois allowed them to vote at municipal elections. Kansas gave them suffrage, and Ohio provided for them a ballot in school elections.

Miss Addams as Scavenger.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, has applied by bid for the scavenger work of one of the worst wards in the city—that in which the "social settlement" of Hull House has already done so much good. Her plan involves the offering of a cent a bushel as a prize for clean ashes, unmixed with garbage. The ashes then can be sold to the railroads for ballast. The public dump can thus be supplanted by the garbage crematory, where all the refuse may be burned. The Chicago Tribune says:

Miss Addams' scheme is so practical and so businesslike that her bid should be accepted forthwith. The character of her opponents, the present scavengers, may be judged from the fact that last summer Hull House lodged 700 complaints for failure to empty garbage boxes.

But the contractors have more to fear than simple business skill. While they are moved by the desire of gain only, Miss Addams is moved by a fine enthusiasm. Women are the centrifugal force of the world. They are forever driving things out from their own center, pushing apart the systems that men have pulled together, resolving the complex again into the simple for the recreation of the times. Through Miss Addams and women of her own sort the simple standards of right and wrong, honor and dishonor, may be brought back into phases of American life where they have seemed to be lost.

Twenty Years After.

The United States supreme court was called upon only 20 years ago to determine the momontous question as to whether or not a woman was "a person" under the citizenship clause in the federal constitution, finally declaring that she was not, under the following facts: Mrs. Myra B. Bradwell of Chicago, the talented editor of the Chicago Legal News, who died about a year ago, after occupying a prominent position in the American bar for a quarter of a century, wanted a license to practice law. She was allowed to enter the examination before the supreme court and passed with the highest average possible. There was no question as to her qualifications except that of sex, but upon this ground license was withheld. She appealed to the supreme court of the United States, and that august tribunal decided that she was not a legal "person," and hence not entitled to the "privileges and immunities of citizenship." The legislature of Illinois subsequently passed a statute allowing women to practice law. Now there are women lawyers in almost every state in the Union, and a woman pleading a case no longer shocks the chivalry of courtroom officials and habitues.

More Bread and Less Cake.

"At this end of the nineteenth century," said one of the bright club women of New York on a recent occasion, "we women ask from the table of society more bread and less cake. We want to know all the details of municipal housekeeping, feeling sure that our knowledge of domestio housekeeping may be of some help in keeping a clean, pure atmosphere." "Municipal housekeeping" is a good phrase. Every woman should bring to bear the weight of her influence, since she cannot vote, upon the fathers, husbands and sons who can. No man has a larger interest in better schools, better sanitation, better illumination, nor in the betterment of any and every department of municipal housekeeping, than has his sister woman. "More bread and less cake!" is a good battlecry.—Philadelphia Record.

To Fluff Your Hair.

It is quite the thing to have fluffy tresses again. To do that your hair must be kept scrupulously cloan and free from all oily mattter. A splendid wash for the hair is to break an egg in a dish and beat it up; then apply to the roots of the hair with the fingers, rubbing it well into the scalp. Have ready a big bowl of soft water, or water broken with some borax, and wash the head well in that; then rinse in two or three waters, but use no soap. Dry on hot towels and brush for an hour with a clean, moderately stiff brush, being careful not to scratch the scalp too hard. After that process every hair will stand almost by itself, but at the same time will be glossy.—Kansas City Times.

MARIE OF GREECE.

A Pretty and Well to Do Princess Who Also Has Brains.

Princess Marie of Greece narrowly escaped becoming czarina of Russia. She was the choice of the present emperor's mother, who had set her heart on having the pet daughter of her favorite brother as her successor. But there were religious obstacles to the match. Strict rules exist in the Greek church prohibiting marriage between first cousins. Although dispensations are readily granted in such cases by the pope, the Orthodox church is far less amenable to leniency in the matter, and so bigoted a member of the Greek rite as Alexander III could certainly not be expected to set an example of disobedience to the canon laws by permitting his eldest son to wed his first cousin. Princess Marie is a pretty girl, somewhat full faced. She has inherited the comeliness that distinguished her maternal grandmother, the Grand Duchess Constantine Constantinovitch, nee Princess of Saxe-Altenburg, whose sister, the ex-queen of Hanover, and herself were known in their youth as two of the most beautiful women in Europe.

Princess Marie has inherited her mother's tasto for the sea and is passionately fond of yachting, knowing how to handle a boat almost as well as her mother, who enjoys the distinction of being the only petticoat admiral in existence, having boen appointed to that dignity in the Russian fleet by the late czar, a recognition of her action in passing the examination for a sailing master's certificate. The princess is a very desirable catch and should experience no difficulty in finding a good husband, for in addition to her good looks and amiable character she will inherit the principal portion of the large fortune which her cautious and exceedingly wide awake father, King George, has been ahle to amass since he was elected to tho throne of Greece by means of thrift and speculation.

Miss Grace Harriman.

Miss Grace Harriman has issued in pamphlet form six lectures upon "Tomato and Fruit Growing For Women," which she gave at the forestry exhibition, Earl's court, in 1893. She is now both a practical fruitgrower and a county council lecturer at Sawley, near Derby, England, and her own experience justifies her desire to see many women following her example. She shows how a woman's small plot of ground can he worked to profit and gives valuable instructions on the details of horticulture. She thinks it is wise not to take more than half an acre in hand at first. Upon this a cottage, tomato house, poultry yard and fruit plantation may be planted.

The Latest Silver Craze.

It has come to pass that a collection of silver all in the shape of spoons is no longer thought as interesting as a collection of silver made up of many quaint and curious things having different shapes and uses or no use at all. The curio silver table of latest fashion has sometimes a silver lamp of exquisite shape, picture frames of silver, bonbon boxes, odd spoons, a piece of embroidery heavy with gold and silver threads, filigree silver from Venice and pretty things made from silver in all parts of the world. Such is a collection that is not easily called together, and its owner values it accordingly.—New York Post.

WOMEN ARE MORE INTEMPERATE.

London Police Records Show an Increase In Feminine Intoxication.

Intemperance among women is increasing. The metropolitan police returns show that there has heen a decided advance during the last two years in the number of women apprehended for drunkenness. In 1889 the total was less than 8,000. In 1891 it was nearly 3,500. There was a corresponding growth in the number of "drunk and disorderly" cases during the same period. Last year 8,373 women were taken into custody on this charge in London alone.

Inquiry of magistrates, clerks, jailers, missionaries and others whoso daily duty obliges them to frequent the metropolitan police courts and petty sessions has resulted in the accumulation of information which unfortunately leaves no room for doubt that the recent magisterial comments upon the frequency of feminine intoxication are more than justified by the facts. The statements from the bench are corroborated, too, in other quarters.—London Telegraph.

Alcoholism Leads to Consumption.

Alcohol has the power of degenerating nerve fibers. It is especially an irritant to the pneumogastric nerve and has an especially destructive affinity for that nerve. The children of parents who suffer from alcoholism are in a tremendous percentage of cases the victims of consumption. In fact, the children of parents who are even moderately hard drinkers always prove the easy victims of consumption. Furthermore, our records show that hard drinkers themselves are particularly susceptible to consumption, and that alcoholism in a great percentage of cases leads to consumption. These facts are due to reflex action over the pneumogastric nerve.—Drs. W. L. and M. L. Amick.

Powderly on the Saloon.

I believo in Sunday rest. So do the Knights of Labor. If the dry goods man is compelled to close on Sunday, the saloon ought to be closed. I believe that in five years the sun will shine on a country whose saloons are closod on Sunday. If I had my way, the saloons would bo closed until the next Sunday.—T. V. Powderly.

Cause and Effect.

Jones—Whisky, I notice, has different effects in different parts of the metropolis.

Brown—How is that?

Jones—In the borough it causes drunkenness, in Fleet streot alcoholism, in Piccadilly heart failure.—Pearson's Weekly.

Deal Gently.

Deal gently with the erring.
Yo know not of the power
With which the dark temptation came
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled, nor how well,
Until the hour of weakness eame
And sadly thus they fell.

Prohibition That Prohibits.

Yet, my friends, there's one kind of prohibition that can be enforced. There is one saloon that can be closed, and that is the saloon hetween a man's chin and his nose. That can be prohibited, and if every man and woman would practice total abstinence for their own sake, for the sake of the community and for the sake of their weak brother who may be influenced by their acts it would not be long before the corner saloons would be closed every day in the week.—Thomas E. Murphy.

Has Father Got Here Yet?

One of the most touching pictures for the year is "a snap shot" of two little girls in rags and harefooted standing just inside the saloon, with men drinking and carousing, and timidly asking, "Has father got here yet?"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 19.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xv, 1-15—Memory Verses, 14, 15—Golden Text, Mark xv, 5—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation." The devil's servants are very quick and very persevering—they put the Lord's servants to shame. The disciples could not watch one hour, hut these servants of satan watched all night in their hatred of Him who loved them. Then in the morning they consummated their wickedness. There is a morning coming, however, when the tahles will he turned. See Ps. xlix, 14; Isa. viii, 20, R. V., aud compare Dan. vi, 19-24.

2. "And Pilate asked Him, Art thou the king of the Jews? And He, answering, said unto him, Thou sayest it." The wise men from the east hare witness that He was king of the Jews even when He was a babe (Math. ii, 2). Nathanael testified to the same very early in His ministry (John i, 49), and Gabriel stated it very plainly hefore His birth (Luke i, 32, 33). Notwithstanding all the scoffing of Jews and gentiles of those days or these days, the time draweth nigh when all nations shall see it.

3. "And the chief priests accused Him of many things, hut He answered nothing." There was no truth in their accusations any more than in those of the false witnesses whom they had previously summoned, so there was nothing for Him to answer. When we are falsely accused, let us learu from Him to commit our way unto the Lord and trust Him to manage it for us. He had confessed that He was the Christ, and knowing what awaited Him He calmly awaited their disposal of Him.

4. "And Pilate asked Him again, saying: Answerest thou nothing? Behold how many things they witness against thee." Pilate did not know that there was no truth in any of the charges which they brought against Him, and therefore could not but have heen surprised that He had nothing to say. Pilate was not accustomed to cases of this kind. he had never seen a prisoner like this and was greatly perplexed by His manner.

5. "But Jesus yet answered nothing, so that Pilate marveled." He was oppressed and He was afflicted, yet He opened not His mouth (Isa. lii, 7). He was probahly communing with His Father. Nothing will help us to be quiet under false accusations and in the presence of enemies like the realized presenee of the Lord and that we are ever before Him.

6. "Now, at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired." Jesus knew all this, but there was nothing iu it for Him, for He knew well that His only release would be death. He was not seeking release, but to fulfill all righteousness, and as He had often foretold (chapters viii, 31; ix, 31; x, 33, 34) He knew that He was about to be slain.

7. "And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection." Here is a real child of the devil brought into the story with the Holy One of God. Already He begins to be numbered with the transgressors as if He, too, was a transgressor. When cut to the heart hy being thus numbered with sinners (if it should ever he your experience), think of Him.

8. "And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them." Probably anxious to get the man they wanted released, and afraid lest Pilate might attempt to release Jesus.

9. "But Pilate answered them, saying, Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?" By comparing the parallel accounts this seems to he Pilate's sixth attempt to release Jesus. For the first five see John xviii, 28, to xix, 14, and Luke xxiii, 4-16. See his threefold testimony to His innocence in John xviii, 38; xix, 4, 6. See in Math. xxvii, 19, his wife's plea that he should let Him go. This King of the Jews was the heaviest and most perplexing case that Pilate ever had on his hands. So it is still.

10. "For he knew that the chief priests had delivered Him for envy." See how Joseph's brethren hated and envied him (Gen. xxxvii, 8, 11). Israel envied Moses and Aaron (Ps. cvi, 16). "Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous, but who is ahle to stand before envy?" (Prov. xxvii, 4.) In Gal. v, 21, envy is followed by murder as one of the works of the flesh. Let us hate every appearance of it iu our hearts as we should hate the devil himself.

11. "But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barahhas unto them." Who can estimate the guilt of those in high places who move the people against Christ? The worst we have to contend with today is from the professed friends of Christ who, while saying beautiful things about Him, yet move the people against His atonement and His precious hlood, which alone can save us from hell (Lev. xvii, 11).

12. "And Pilate answered and said again uuto them, What will ye theu that I shall do unto Him whom ye call the King of the Jews?" Or as in Math. xxvii, 22, "What shall I do theu with Jesus, who is called Christ?" It is not a question for us to ask another's opinion about. We are responsible to Him for our treatment of Him. Pilate knew He was innocent and should have rescued Him from His tormeutors, but the weakness of Pilate is overruled to accomplish the Lord's purpose. Bad for Pilate all the same.

13. "And they cried out again, Crucify Him." They preferred Barabbas to Jesus, a murderer to a Saviour, darkness to light. It is plainly written that "all that is in the world is not of the Father, but is of the world," and that "the friendship of the world is enmity with God" (I John ii, 16; James iv, 4), yet how many are deliherately choosing the world instead of Christ! They would not say as these did, "Crucify Him," hut taey do say that they prefer the world and its pleasures.

14. "Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath He done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify Him." In connection with this verse we find in Luke xxiii, 22, that Pilate said, "I have found no cause of death in Him." But the people will not listen, they thirst for His hlood, satan has control of them, and he will kill Jesus if he can. What he failed to do in the garden of Gethsemane he will do now, and God will let him, for this is his hour and the power of darkness.

15. "And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas uuto them and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged Him, to be crucified." See the contrasts, Pilate contenting the people, Jesus pleasing the Father; Barabbas the guilty, Jesus the guiltless; the people crying out, Jesus silent. How cruel, unjust and perfectly fiendish it all was! How can we have fellowship with such a world? Let us honestly face the question, Am I seeking to please the people or to please God? (Gal. i, 10.)

DEADLY TORNADO.

Region Near Sioux Center, Ia., Terribly Devastated.

FRIGHTFUL LOSS OF HUMAN LIFE.

School Houses Wrecked and Two Teachers Killed—Numbers of the Pupils Dead and Wounded—All One Family Wiped Out but the Husband and Father—Meagre but Terrible Details.

CHICAGO, May 4.--A telegram from Sioux City says a cyclone is reported at Sioux Center, Ia., forty-four miles north, and that fifty-two persons have been killed. The report has not been confirmed, but dispatches from Lemars and Lyons, Ia., Lodl, Manitowoc and Neillsville, Wis., tell of furious storms and several fatalities. Nellie Marsden, teacher at the school house four miles north of Ireton, Ia., was killed and the school house wrecked.

Some Details of the Horror.

OMAHA, May 4.—A special to The Bee from Sioux City says: Dispatches were received here by the Sioux City and Northern Railroad company from their agent at Sioux Centre, forty-five miles north of here, telling of a terrible cyclone near there in which a number of people were killed and injured and much property destroyed. The wires where the storm was were blown down and telegraph reports are consequently very meagre.

Teachers and Children Killed.

The first dispatch received by the Northern road said that the cyclone passed three miles northeast of there at 3:50 p. m. A school house near the town was destroyed, the teachers and a number of the children killed and injured. Have not yet been able to learn the exact number or names. The whole country in the path of the storm was devastated. The Sioux City and Northern tracks between Perkins and Doon are washed out for several miles.

Reports His Whole Family Killed.

Dispatches from Sioux Center at 3:30 p. m. say three school houses and at least twenty residences and barns were swept away. At the school houses two teachers and three children were killed and many injured. Two women were found dead not far from the point where one of the school buildings stood. One man who arrived in Sioux Center late in the evening reported that his house was blown away and his family killed.

Says the Dead Reach Hundreds.

He reports that at least 200 or 300 people must have been killed. Parties have been sent out from Hull, Sioux Center, and Orange City, neighboring towns, but their work is being carried on in total darkness in the midst of a tremendous rain and wind storm. A number of bodies have already been recovered, although the exact number cannot be learned.

It is said that Perkins, a small town between Sioux Centre and Doon, was directly in the path of the storm and was almost entirely wiped out. The wires leading to it are all down.

DEATH ROLL SO FAR AS KNOWN.

Definite Reports of the Storm and Details of the Destruction.

LATER.—Definite reports are beginning to come in as to the path followed by the cyclone. The storm originated about a mile and a half southwest of Sioux Center. It moved from there in a northeasterly direction and passed directly through Perkins, a small town six miles north of Sioux Center. After passing Perkins nothing was heard of any damage.

Late last evening, however, news was received from Sibley to the effect that a storm struck there about 6 p. m., destroying the house of John Watterson, killing Mrs. Watterson and injuring Watterson and his son. The Sioux City and Northern train which arrived at 10 o'clock last evening brought in several passengers who witnessed the storm.

They reported that thirteen dead bodies had been brought into Sioux Center at 6 o'clock. They estimated that fifty people must have been killed. The northern train barely escaped a smash up near Doon, but was stopped by section men before it passed upon the dangerous territory.

A List of Thirty-One Dead.

Everett Arnold, of Creston, aged 18, killed by lightning; Mrs. Herman Bellkamp, of Sibley, killed by lightning; Miss Nellie Coombs, of Sibley, killed by lightning; two Coombs children, struck by lightning; L. D. Everett, of Sioux Center; eight children still missing from the Haggie school house, thought to have been killed; Matilda Haggie, of Ireton, killed by falling debris; Jacob Jansen, of Sioux Center; Mrs. John Koster, of Sioux Center; two Koster children of above; Miss Anna Marsden, of Sioux Center, a school teacher: George Marsden, of Sioux Center, a school teacher; Mrs. C. B. Ost, of Ireton; Mrs. Postma, of Sioux Center; Miss Anna Post, of Ireton; Peter Stimmer, of Superland, killed by lightning; Rudolph Schwerdtfeger, of Laurens, killed by lightning; —— Verhof, a child, of Sioux Center; Louis Verhof, of Sioux Center; Mrs. John Watterman, of Sibley; Mrs. Warie and babe, of Ireton.

Two Score People Injured.

The injured are: M. Blackmore, of Sibley; Nathan Blackman, of Ireton, Miss Minia Coombs, of Ireton, bruised; will recover; Miss Jennie Coombs, badly bruised about head and face, will probably recover; Miss Luella Coombs, seriously injured; Devoort, four girls, of Ireton, bones fractured and internal injuries; Peter Devoort, face and arms cut and bruised; Albert Devoort, hurt internally; John Freys, of Sibley, badly injured; Miss Haggie, of Sioux Center, badly injured; John Haggie, internal injuries, badly hurt; Herman Haggie, leg broken; Lewis Haggie, face bruised and internally injured; William Haggie, shoulder dislocated; George Hulstein, aged 5 years, of Sioux Center; John Jansen, of Sioux Center, arm broken; Miss Nellie Koster, of Sioux Center, badly hurt; Miss Agnes Koster, face bruised; Miss Mildred Koster, internal injuries; two Meeks children, of Hawarden; three McConless children, of Ireton; A. M. Perry, of Hawarden, face cut and bruised; Mrs. Rosburg, head and arms cut; Miss Ida Rosburg, injured internally; Thomas Rosburg, aged 15, slightly hurt; Daniel Rosburg, bruised slightly; Lewis Rossbury, of Sibley, shoulder dislocated; John Rossbury, of Sibley, badly bruised; two Sherman children, of Sioux Center; Alice Smith, aged 9 years, of Sibley, bruised; James Smith, aged 11 years.

Drowned or Frozen to Death.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., May 4.—News has been received from Kokiak Island, Alaska, by the steamer Alki, that the steamer George R. White, of Seattle, was wrecked in a gale on April 14. Seventeen of the crew were either drowned or frozen to death. Eight reached shore and still survive. The schooner Kodlak was also wrecked in the same gale near the same place, but no lives were lost. The schooner George R. White cleared from this port on July 24, 1893, for a year's cruise in the North Pacific ocean and Behring sea.

HOOD'S IS KNOWN.

The testimonials in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla mean something. They tell of things worth telling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is known by the cures it has made. Just read this testimonial, bearing the impress of sincerity and truth:

"When I was 18 a bad fever sore came on my right leg. After a time it healed, but 21 years later, last winter, it broke out again terribly sore, and many said it would never heal up. My son read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla he urged me to try it. I did so, and to my great joy in a short time the sores ceased to discharge, and shortly after began to heal. After taking five bottles the poison was eradicated and the sore entirely healed. I now feel as well as ever, and enjoy renewed strength and vigor." FRANK O. PIERCE, South Londonderry, Vermont.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!
"A Prisoner of Hope."
COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.
Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, May 1.—The sonate advanced several important bills to third reading, mostly appropriations, and passed the following: Placing the Lincoln monumont under state control; to put flags on all the public school houses; Cook county civil service reform bill; Humphrey drainago bill; amending the warehouse law; providing that fees from dram shops shall be applied to roads and bridges; resolution that Frank H. Cooper. of Siegel, Cooper & Co., be brought to the bar of the senate because he declined to answer questions asked him. The house passed the bill providing for more expeditious trial of election contests. The bill to create a free employment bureau in each county was killed.

SPRINGFIELD, May 2.—The unique spectacle of a citizen on trial for contempt before the state senate for refusing to talk about his private affairs to legislators was presented in the capitol by Frank H. Cooper, vice presldent of Siegel, Cooper & Co. of Chicago, appearing before the bar of the senate to explain why he declined to answer the questions put to him by Senator Salomon's department store investigating committee. Cooper refused to reply to questions that he considered his private business. The expectation is that he will not be held. Nothing else was done in the senato. In the house senate bills regulating street railways were passed as was a bill to establish a western insane hospital. A resolution for sine die adjournment May 24 was recommitted.

SPRINGFIELD, May 3.—The house engaged in a bitter fight, that took up all the morning over, adjournment. The Evans resolution for adjournment today was amended by the committee to read May 28. It was defeated, the country members being largely against it. They think June 15 early enough to adjourn. The matter was postponed for a week. The legislature has been in session four months. The house did little other business. In the senate a resolution was presented declaring that Frank H. Cooper, of Chicago, had purged himself of contempt and that he be excused from answerlng the disputed questions. It will probably pass. Houso amendments to the "L" railway bill were concurred in. Bills were passed for statues to Marquette and Elijah P. Lovejoy. A bill was introduced making it a penal offense to make such claims as those made by Schweinfurth and others.

SPRINGFIELD, May 4.—The senate and house have adjourned until Monday evening. The only bill passed in the senate was one to prevent the spread of swine diseases. A number of bills were advanced to third reading. The house advanced the drainage blll to third readlng without opposition. A resolution was adopted appointing the speaker, Lieut. Gov. Gill, and C. C. Brown, a committee to arrange for the formal transfer of the Lincoln monument to the state.

Argument on the Income Tax.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—There is no doubt that the argument on income taxes in the supreme court will begin next Monday. General Wheeler has received a letter from Justice Jackson, in which he says that his health is so much improved that he hopes for its complete restoration.

Gresham and Hitt Are Better.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Secretary Gresham was much more restful yesterday and last night was said to be somewhat improved. The secretary suffers some pain at times, but finds relief in sleep. Representative Hitt passed a comfortable day and his conditlon is said to be slightly more hopeful.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

No need to Read, in order to find out about Pearline. Your friends can tell you all you want to know. You'll find most of them use it. Ask them about it. We'll leave it to any one of the millions of women who are using Pearline, if it isn't the best—the most economical thing, for washing and cleaning. But all the Pearline users don't get its full benefits. Some seem to think that it's only for washing clothes or cleaning house.

Pearline washes everything. And with almost every use you can put it to, besides the labor it saves and the ruinous rubbing, it gives you better work—better results.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 445 JAMES PYLE, New York.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, functions and value with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

Items on Pump Irrigation.

It is generally conceded, not only in theory, but it is backed up by practical application, that for low heads or for elevations not exceeding 100 feet the simple form of handling water with centrifugal pumps stands at the head, says The Irrigation Age, which calls attention to the following: In the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys, particularly in that portion occupied by the swamp land reclamation districts, centrifugal pumping plants have been used with marked success.

The use of the very large pumps is naturally, owing to their construction, limited to comparatively low heads, and in no case thus far have any large plants been put in handling water over 30 feet. With the smaller or moderate sized centrifugal pumps 100 feet and even more is not an uncommon matter.

In southern California and Arizona many large pumping works have been installed for irrigation purposes, and it has shown that in many cases it is much cheaper in first cost and operation to put in a pumping plant than to use a gravity system. There is practical data which shows that in large tracts and where the lift does not exceed 20 to 25 feet, water can be furnished at a cost of 50 cents per acre, including all charge of operating and fixed charges of interest, taxes, depreciation, etc.

Reclaiming the Waste Places.

Under the Carey act the states in which the arid and desert lands still owned by the government are located are entitled to 1,000,000 acres each for the purpose of reclamation. It is proposed to accomplish their reclamation through private enterprise, the states transferring the lands to settlers by whom they will be capitalized to secure the water rights necessary to make them valuable. Of the 606,000,000 acres of land still subject to public entry Colorado holds 36,000,000, Nebraska 10,000,000, Nevada 30,000,000, New Mexico 42,000,000, Wyoming 41,000,000, Montana 14,000,000, Arizona 10,492,000, North Dakota 10,856,000, Idaho 7,841,000, Washington 5,131,000 and Oregon 24,742,000. This comprises something over one-third of the public lands.

Wyoming has taken the lead in the attempt to reclaim and settle its share of arid lands, but Oregon, Montana, Washington and other western states are preparing to work along the same lines. The land when transferred from the state to the settler at from 50 cents to $1 an acre will still be subject to a charge of from $8 to $15 an acre for securing water rights, and as long as there is land in the valley states still available at not much above that price the states or companies at interest will be expected to offer the most liberal inducements to settlers. There is no question of the value of irrigation as a means of reclaiming the alkali lands of the west. In New Mexico, Arizona and California such lands when properly irrigated produce fruit and vegetables not equaled elsewhere in the country. The problem of their profitable settlement is almost wholly one of water rights, says the New York World.

Prepare for Spring

If you were about to journey to a warmer or colder climate you would make careful preparations.

Besides taking a supply of warmer or cooler clothing, as the case might be, you would thoughtfully select a stock of medicines as safeguards to keep you in good health.

The cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla tell what it does more eloquently than any argument which can be written. Read the frank statement below:

"Last spring, on account of overwork and bad humors, I became very much run down. About June a scrofula bunch appeared on the left side of my collar bone. It was very sore continually, and after a time my left arm began to feel disagreeable. In a short time it pained me nearly all the time. With that and the scrofula I was in perfect misery all through the summer. I became so bad that my friends tried to me get to have a doctor, but I thought I would try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have taken five bottles and part of the sixth and am feeling like myself again. I have gained flesh rapidly The scrofula bunch and my lameness has all gone, and I feel like a new creature." MISS HATTIE M. CLARK, Parkman, Maine.

Purify Your Blood

Now we are all about to change to a warmer climate, though not of our own volition, and what is more reasonable than to take a reliable medicine to resist the debilitating effects of higher temperatures?

Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed. It thoroughly expels from the blood the impurities which have accumulated during the winter, increases the appetite and improves the digestion, drives away that tired feeling and nervousness, and gives the strength and vigor without which we cannot appreciate beautiful Spring. It is

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, inciuding the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Wednesday. May 1.

The Minnesota Iron company, at Tower, Minn., has announced a 10 per cent. raise in wages for its 1,000 employes, beginning today.

The commissioner of internal revenue now estimates the product of the income tax at scarcely $10,005,000.

Thursday, May 2.

The supreme court of Kansas has decided that the law of 1892 giving a mortgagor eighteen months for the redemption of property after foreclosure is constitutional in so far as it applies to contracts in force prior to the passage of the law.

Friday, May 3.

Bismarck, through the Hamburg Nachtrichten, has returned thanks to all his friends at home and abroad for their recent overwhelming congratulations.

Saturday, May 4.

S. Feinheimer, of Chicago, ran his tongue along the flap of an envelope, the edge of which cut his tongue. He was dead in less than a week of blood poisoning.

Monday, May 6.

The half breed difficulty, at Turtle Mountain, S. D., has been subdued without loss of life. The United States marshals have arrested the men wanted, the half-breeds concluding that a fight would end disastrously for them.

PEACE IS IN SIGHT.

The Trouble Between Great Britain and Nicaragua About Over.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The state department has received a telegram from Ambassador Bayard at London, stating that Great Britain has accepted the guarantee made by Salvador of the payment of the indemnity by Nicaragua in London within a fortnight, and that so soon as Nicaragua confirms and so informs the British admiral, the admiral is instructed to leave Corinto.

The above official statement given out at the state department may be regarded as chronicling the passage of the acute phase of the difficulty between Great Britain and Nicaragua. It cannot be doubted that Nicaragua will promptly confirm the arrangement, and the British fleet will leave Corinto as soon as notice of the action of the British foreign office can be communicated to Admiral Stephenson, which by the way might be sooner had not the Nicaraguans purposely interrupted the communication by cable directly between the foreign office and the admiral.

The guarantee by Salvador of Nicaragua's indebtedness, it is said, is simply repayment of the favor extended to Salvador by Nicaragua at the time of the Ezeta incident, when Dr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan minister at Washington, took up the case of Salvador by instructions of his own government and worked so hard to secure the extradition of the refugee to Salvador. In addition to this consideration, based on gratitude, the Salvadorians are supposed to be influenced in espousing the Nicaraguan cause by a feeling of apprehension at the presence of British troops on Central American soil.

Although it may be safely assumed that the acute phase of the Nicaraguan incident has passed—supposing that there should be no hostile collision before the formal orders have reached the commanders on each side—there are yet some matters to be adjusted before the incident can be regarded as entirely closed. After the settlement of the "smart money" claim on account of the treatment of Hatch, a commission must be selected and proceed to adjudicate the claim of other British subjects, not officials, who were expelled from Bluefields at the time of the outbreak last summer.

If damages are assessed against Nicaragua in these cases there will be some grumbling, but it is not likely to lead to serious trouble. The "smart money," it should be remembered, is for mistreatment of a British official. The Nicaraguans claim that Hatch was never really an official, but the British—without contradiction so far—assert that though Hatch never had an exequator he was acknowledged in his official capacity by the Nicaraguan government, which communicated officially through him to England. And because that in mistreating him Nicaragua insulted the British government, owing to Hatch's official position, England refused to arbitrate in his case.

MANAGUA, May 6.—The city of Corinto was evacuated by British troops yesterday morning, and the Nicaraguan flag now flies in its accustomed place in the port.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, May 6.—Nicaragua has authorized Senor Chrisanto Medina, the Salvadorian minister at London and Paris, acting Nicaraguan minister in London, to accept the modified ultimatum of Great Britain. This modified ultimatum, it is understood here, was secured by the influence and through the intercession of the United States. Senor Medina is also authorized by the government of Nicaragua to pay the £15,500 in London, under protest, within five days after the departure of the British squadron from Corinto. It is understood here that the other items in the original ultimatum of Great Britain will all be settled by arbitration.

TURNEY DECLARED GOVERNOR.

Contest in Tennessee Won by the Democrats in the Legislature.

NASHVILLE, May 4.—The joint convention of the legislature decided at 12 o'clock last night that Peter Turney had received a majority of legal votes cast at the November election and was duly elected governor of Tennessee. The day was spent in discussion which lasted until 12 o'clock last night, when a vote was taken which resulted as above stated.

A battery of artillery boomed forth the news to the sleeping city and enthusiasm prevailed. The attendance at the capitol was great and the enthusiasm was most marked. The Turney majority on joint ballot was thirteen.

Death Strikes in Wisconsin.

MANITOWOC, May 4.—A great storm passed over the village of Kellnerville, and John Anderla, 14 years old, who was yet in bed, was killed by a bolt of lightning. At Neillsville, Mrs. Joseph Sutherland, of the town of York, retired to the cellar, and no sooner was she there than lightning struck the house, stunned her husband and killed her. At Lodi, a bolt of lightning killed Joseph Chlup and his team.

Five Killed by a Powder Explosion.

SOUTH ACTON, Mass., May 4.—The powder mills of the American Powder company blew up, killing Charles O'Neill, Jr., Nelson Morton, Fred. K. Winslow, Charles Estes, and A. Estes. Three buildings were destroyed.

Condition of Secretary Gresham.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Secretary Gresham passed a comparatively good day. Though not quite so well his general condition shows a satisfactory improvement.

CYCLONE IN ILLINOIS.

Four Persons Killed and a Store Building Blown Down.

AURORA, May 6.—The village of St. Charles was visited by a cyclone which passed through the town with fatal results. The old stone postoffice building on the east side of Main street, occupied by Mrs. Church as a millinery store, was blown down and Mrs. Church was killed. Two young ladies had apartments in the building and one of them who is missing is supposed to be in the ruins; the other, Miss Augusta Anderson, was killed. The falling walls caught and killed a passing horse, and the driver was seriously injured.

Two other men were struck by flying timbers and were quite badly hurt. Several other persons about town received injuries more or less serious. A man named Luther Caustin had one leg and an arm broken. Andrew Johnson, of Elgin, had his back broken. The killed are: Mrs. Hattie E. Church, Miss Augusta Anderson, Charles Johnson and Joseph Thompson, all of St. Charles.

JACKSONVILLE, May 6.—This section was treated to a storm which amounted almost to a cyclone. Rain and hail fell in torrents and the wind blew a hurricane, doing great damage. Two men were driving under some trees when one fell on them and crushed the vehicle to atoms, injuring the occupants. Buildings were unroofed and much property destroyed.

PEORIA, Ills., May 6.—A wind and hail storm, the severest in recent years, swept over the city, doing many thousand dollars' worth of damage. Hail an inch and a half in diameter fell.

Night Watchman Found Murdered.

CAIRO, Ills., May 2.—Frank Axley, night watchman at the box factory of the Carey-Halliday Lumber company, was found murdered. He was on duty and when he was missed search was made for him and his body was found in the Ohio river in front of the factory. There were wounds on his head and many marks on the ground, showing where the body had been dragged from the top of the hill to the river. Two negroes are under arrest on suspicion.

Pension Suspended.

ROCKFORD, Ills., May 6.—Rollin D. Fowler of this city has received notice of the suspension of his disability pension. He fought in thirteen important battles, was a prisoner in Libby and Belle Isle, and has been a life-long Democrat. He was appointed internal revenue collector for the Ninth Indiana district by President Andrew Johnson.

Deadly Lightning at Work.

GREEN BAY, Wis., May 6.—At Seymour lightning struck the house of John Kitchenmeister, killing Kitchenmeister and seriously injuring his wife.

LANCASTER, Ills., May 6.—James Ashford and George Rhodes, of Downing, Mo., were killed by lightning.

CHICAGO, May 6.—During a heavy rainstorm lightning struck a party of field laborers at East Prairie, near Niles Centre. Herman Spandikow was instantly killed and his 16-year-old son badly hurt.

Took Senator Palmer's View.

AMBOY, Ills., May 4.—At a meeting of the Democratic county central committee of Lee county, held here yesterday, resolutions were unanimously adopted refusing to call a convention to nominate delegates to the state Democratic silver convention. The committee took Senator Palmer's view of the situation.

Notes of the State.

J. T. Callahan, who was editor of the Alton (Ills.) Free Lance before its conversion into the Alton Morning Advance has brought action against Editor C. R. Brinton, Jr., of the latter paper for criminal libel. The article charged Callahan with irregularities in the execution of a chattel mortgage.

Michael Pitts, a saloonkeer of Nashville, Ills., who fatally kicked a man while ejecting him from his saloon, has been held responsible by a coroner's jury.

The large general store of William Wisenand, at Diana, Ills., has been closed by the sheriff on eleven judgments. Liabilities are $6,500; assets, $3,000.

Mrs. Mary J. Colvin committed suicide at Horner, Ills., by drowning herself in the Salt Fork river.

At the national meeting of the A. P. A. in Milwaukee, just closed, it was recommended that a higher degree be formed, composed of those members of the order only who by long trial had proved to be faithful to the movement.

Reports have reached Little Rock, Ark., from Ouachita county of the wholesale kidnaping of Negroes by white men of Louisiana, farmers living adjacent to the Arkansas line, who needed farm laborers. When laborers were needed they crossed into Arkansas, selected the Negroes they wanted, and took them to Louisiana by force. Similar reports have reached here from Union and other counties on the Louisiana border. A dispatch from Eldorado says Judge Smith of Ouachita convened a special grand jury to investigate the recent outrages of this character. In some cases the kidnapers have been seen driving before them like so many sheep a bunch of Negroes with their arms pinioned and tied together.

The State Federation of Labor is planning to have a great patriotic demonstration by organized labor on July 4. The object of the demonstration will be to show the public where the great majority of the organized workmen of this State, and particularly of this city, stand in regard to American institutions. They intend to make it clear that the faction which is trying to force un-American ideas and un-American methods upon the labor organizations of Chicago do not represent the sentiment of the great mass of the men themselves. Committees were appointed to take charge of all arrangements in connection with the event, and also to arrange with committees in other cities in the State for similar demonstrations on the same occasion.

A group of about thirty-five laborers, reenforced by others whom they had stirred up to mischief and by the usual hangers-on who are always ready to make trouble, set forth to mob and drive out the workingmen employed at the works of the Illinois Steel company in South Chicago, May 7. As a result of this lawless proceeding there was a riotous conflict, the rioters attacking first the workingmen and afterward the police who were sent to quell the disturbance. This outrageous performance is not to be tolerated, and the real workingmen at South Chicago should be the first to demand that the rioters be suppressed. The "strike" of the few who undertook the mischief was conducted in utter defiance of the rules of peaceable labor unions. No warning was given; no effort to treat with the employers was made. The rioters simply picked up the handiest weapons and started in to drive peacable workingmen out of the works. When the workingmen failed to comply, the rioters set upon them and started in to violate laws and ordinances as they saw fit. Whatever the real or imaginary grievances of the small group of employes who precipitated the riot, the methods by which they sought to enforce their claim are intolerable. The workingmen at South Chicago who value their good name should take every measure in their power to co-operate with the authorities in suppressing these rioters and restoring peace.

There is a movement on foot among the people of northeastern Minnesota, northern Wisconsin, and a portion of Michigan in favor of separation from the States to which they respectively belong, and the formation of a new commonwealth or State to be called the State of Superior. Prominent public men are said to sympathize with the scheme, and the Legislatures of the three States affected are to be asked to sanction the proposition. It is assumed that if the Legislatures of the States concerned are induced to give their consent to the separation no difficulty will be encountered in Congress. According to the plan of the separationists, the new State is to have the important cities of Duluth, Superior, Marquette, and Menominee, and all the mineral lands as well as the greater part of the timber lands of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The chief reason for the separation advanced by the citizens of the territory involved is that their industrial interests are different and distinct from those of the bulk of the population of the three States named above, and that fair and just legislation is impossible under present arrangements. The interests of the new State would be chiefly mineral, while the paramount influence in the existing Legislatures of the three States is exerted by the agricultural sections. The scheme has met with little favor by the press, but its popularity among the people of the affected region is admittedly considerable.

May 1st the city refused to renew the amusement licenses which were held by the saloon-keepers previous to that time. Chief Badenoch issued orders requiring that all saloons should be closed at midnight according to the ordinance, and that the concert-hall feature be eliminated. The chief's order was sent to Inspector Lewis, and by him delivered to the patrolmen. The saloon-keepers were notified, and a strict watch was kept upon them to see that the orders were obeyed. The orders were not obeyed at all the saloons after the second night. The men were instructed to gather evidence. They did so, and a result was that thirteen of the saloon-keepers were arrested, the patrolmen swearing out the warrants. "There is to be no foolishness about this thing," declared Inspector Lewis last night. "We warned the men not to keep open on penalty of arrest. They have chosen to make a test and the police department will do its duty. The saloons must be closed after midnight." Bonds were furnished by the saloon-keepers, and their cases will come up for trial. Such news items as this cannot but inspire law-abiding citizens with courage and gratitude to God; and Christians should remember the personal danger that these officers of the law have to encounter, and the moral courage required to resist temptation. Samuel said, "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you." Are Christians in the United States sinning against the Lord in not praying for the officers of the law, "For rulers and all in authority?"

The commander of the Confederate veterans of Chicago says that G. A. R. posts have very generally decorated the graves of the Confederates and the Confederates the graves of the Union soldiers in the cemeteries. The money for the monument was mainly raised by himself, and no Northerner asked to recognize the right of the Confederate cause. But neither "he nor any other Southerner who was an actor during '61–'65 can or will forget the past," and he adds, "it is not reasonable to expect us to change our original opinions." A monument, if it has any meaning at all, is meant to be a perpetual memorial. The graves of heroes and statesmen may be neglected, and often are; but monuments survive, not merely as tokens of sentimental affection, but as tributes to services in a great cause or in behalf of a worthy principle. The reason why this ex-Confederate is so interested in the Chicago monument is because he "cannot and will not forget the past;" because he has not "changed his opinions." Had he done so he would care little or nothing about the monument. He would be far more likely to be ashamed of it than to be proud of it, and busy himself in tearing it down rather than in erecting it. When monuments shall be erected anywhere in the South to the memory of Lincoln and Grant; when the anniversary of their births is celebrated there, then it will be high time to erect monuments in the North to the lost cause and to the wrong the Confederates undertook to uphold and perpetuate. But by that time the people of the South will not want to erect monuments to Davis, Lee, and their soldiers. They will feel that they are no more deserving of monuments than George III. or Cornwallis, who struggled to uphold tyranny and oppress their fellowmen. They will consider them as complete failures as the French now consider Louis XVI. or Louis Napoleon. Rational opposition to Confederate monuments is not based upon hatred or a spirit of revenge, but upon sound moral principles and an earnest and sincere desire not to allow those principles to be confused or obscured. There should be no resurrections.

FREEMASONRY ON TRIAL—A DREAM.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The so-called Ancient Free and Accepted rite of Masonry was duly indicted by a grand jury of citizens, and was brought to the bar of public opinion and put on trial before that court. This trial, which had long been evaded by the counsel for the accused, was of great interest.

In the indictment Freemasonry was charged with false pretensions, in that it was neither free nor ancient nor benevolent; but that it imposed unlawful and profane obligations and practiced ceremonies that would not be tolerated in the light of day. That it required its candidates to invoke upon themselves the penalty of death if they should be disobedient to its mandates; and that its penalties are most shocking to a rational mind.

It was charged with unduly influencing courts of justice, legislative bodies and executive officers, and with bringing into being a great host of legitimate children which have been an incubus on society and which tend to destroy public morals and the Christian religion.

To this indictment attorneys of the order entered the plea of not guilty, and consented to a trial before their peers.

After much delay the following twelve men were selected as a wise, fair and competent jury, and were impanneled: For foreman, John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States; ex-President John Quincy Adams, Wm. H. Seward, Millard Fillmore, Daniel Webster, John C. Spencer, Thaddeus Stevens, Wendell Phillips, Gerrit Smith, Horace Greeley, Samuel Adams and James Madison, the fourth President of the United States.

These being duly sworn, the case was opened by the prosecution and the following witnesses testified:

Elder David Bernard deposed and said: "I am a minister in good standing of the Baptist denomination. In early life, before I fully comprehended the nature and practical workings of the order, I took seventeen degrees in Freemasonry, including those of the lodge and chapter. I am well acquainted with all the ceremonies and covenants of the order, and can testify from personal knowledge that these oaths, penalties and ceremonies are such as any unprejudiced citizen would pronounce immoral and profane, and that the execution of its penalties would involve a horrible crime; and I know that Freemasonry has often been used for the perversion of justice."

In rebuttal he was asked: "Did you not swear that you would always conceal the secrets of Masonry? Are you not now a self-confessed perjurer in giving this testimony?" He replied: "It is true that I promised to always conceal and never reveal the secrets of Masonry; but it was only after the most positive assurance that there was nothing in the obligation I was about to assume that would conflict with my duty to God, my country or myself. When I found that this was false, I regarded my covenant as void. I found, too, that there was no secrets in Masonry; that what they chose to call secrets had all been published to the world before I promised to keep them."

Chas. G. Finney was then called, and testified: "I am a minister; and president and theological professor in Oberlin College. In early life, before I became a Christian, I took three degrees in Freemasonry. When I became a Christian I was completely converted from Freemasonry to Christ, and could have no fellowship with any of the proceedings of the lodge. Its oaths appeared to me monstrously profane and barbarous."

The prosecution then called Edmond Ronayne, Jacob Doesburg, Geo. R. Clarke and Stephen Merritt. The two former had for years been masters of lodges respectively in Chicago, Ill., and Holland, Mich. The two latter had been evangelists.

The testimony of Mr. Ronayne and Mr. Doesburg was very full and explicit as to the character of the lodge and the chapter. Their testimony was made a matter of record and was legally attested. It cannot here be given in detail, but it fully sustained the charges of the indictment. The two evangelists corroborated the testimony of the others, but dwelt mainly on its baneful influence on the cause of Christianity. They, too, had taken many degrees in Masonry. Several hundred others gave corroborating testimony, and some eminent Freemasons were found to have written the work of the lodge in cypher. This, on examination, fully sustained the expositions.

The defense refused to plead to the specific charges or to deny the direct statements of the witnesses. Their position was one of "dignified silence." They affirmed in general terms that many eminent men had belonged to the order; that therefore it could not be bad, since no good man would ever be connected with a bad institution.

REMINISCENCES. — FREEMASONRY IN THE ARMY.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

(Concluded.)

1. Gen. McDowell was in command of the Union army at the terribly disastrous battle of Bull Run, and I believe that he and Gen. Patterson deliberately planned the Union defeat.

2. Wherever his troops went the property of rebel sympathizers was most carefully guarded, and his own soldiers when choked with thirst were not permitted even to get a drink from the wells of these outspoken "fire-eaters," who were permitted to curse the soldiers as they passed. My authority for this is the word of eye witnesses.

3 Gen. McDowell was in command in the second battle of Bull Run in the spring of 1864, when McClellan had been superseded by Gen. Pope, and when the traitor FitzJohn Porter with McDowell did all in their power to wreck the Union cause. Gen. Pope sent a division to occupy Manassas Gap (adjoining Bull Run) and thus head off a large rebel column. They arrived in time, and taking the railroad embankment for breastworks, awaited the rebel attack. Just as the rebel advance arrived, an order came from McDowell to fall back from the railroad, which was obeyed. When the rebel column came up they took this railroad embankment for breastworks and Union soldiers were literally mowed down by the rebel troops, the Federal soldiers being forbidden to return their fire. Those murdered and wounded by this traitor were taken to Alexandria, Va., but a few miles distant. A comrade of mine, who credits me with saving his life, was then a nurse in the hospital at Alexandria. He said that when the hundreds of wounded from this slaughter (for it was not a battle) told the harrowing tale of cold-blooded, wholesale murder, a squad of the nurses grasped their muskets and declared that they would shoot the monster, McDowell, if they could find him, but they failed to find him.

Most of the winter of 1863–4 I spent with a few others of my regiment on "detached duty" at the south end of Hilton's Head Island, in sight of Fort Pulaski and in hearing of the drums of the rebel forces stationed for the defence of Savannah, a few miles south of us. While there three deserters of a New England regiment were recaptured, as they were trying to reach the rebel lines, and for several days were guarded by us They had deserted several weeks previously, and while on their way to the rebel lines were met by a party of rebels who were deserting to our lines and were brought back by them. The penalty for deserting to the enemy was death; and the evidence was so clear that when tried by court martial they had been found guilty and sentenced to be shot, and their sentences were sent to President Lincoln for his approval. Before these sentences were returned approved they were permitted to escape, and it was while they were seeking the rebel lines that we recaptured them. The leader of this party of deserters was an intelligent American, while the other two were unusually ignorant appearing foreigners. Shortly after this, and the day before we were to embark for Fortress Monroe, we, with many other soldiers, were drawn up in the line of battle to witness the execution of some deserters. The "death cart" passed close by us, and we saw that its only occupants were the two ignorant foreigners that we had recaptured. A few minutes later we witnessed the terrible execution scene. "But where is the Yankee?" was the question of the boys who had recaptured and guarded the trio; and as we recounted the circumstances to others, they too asked the same question. As no answer came for several days the question was asked still louder and more earnestly than at first. The answer was, that the name of the American was spelled wrong and the sentence was therefore inoperative; but this answer only aggravated the matter, and we were finally told that the Yankee was a Mason and that the name was purposely spelled wrong, which we did not doubt was the true answer, especially as some were bold enough to defend the villainous act and later brag of it as showing what Freemasonry will do for a brother in trouble.

Of course Masonic favoritism in the promotion to office was common. When going on a camp guard one day in South Carolina, a brutal, ignorant officer, who had learned to write his own name in the army, and who had been promoted from the ranks to the captaincy, told us he had noticed some of the men did not walk their beats, and if he saw any of us standing still on our beats he would tie us to a post. This brute was a zealous Freemason. As it was midsummer and the tropical sun made the sand so hot that it literally blistered the flesh that it touched, and a soldier standing in the shade of a palmetto tree could guard the line better than when walking, the heartlessness of the order is apparent; especially when you consider also the fact that camp guard was not a necessity but a mere matter of form, as we were on a desert island; and further, that just two-thirds of the time day and night we were under the fire of the rebel forts that formed the defence of Charleston.

AN ODD CHURCH.

NO CHURCH AND STATE FOR IT.

In the Toronto Globe of April 27 is a report of the annual meeting of the rather celebrated Jarvis Street Baptist church of that city, which persists in its extraordinary course of paying enormous taxes (imposed by itself) which it need not do if it would do as our Catholic and Protestant American churches are doing all the time! This Jarvis Street (Toronto) Baptist church actually raised $15,337 for all her purposes, and wouldn't keep $1,442 that she thought was her honest share of taxes which the city ought to accept. So Toronto tax-payers have $1,442 less to pay for the one year past. This is even larger than has been done for years past. When will our American churches render to Cæsar the taxes honestly due Cæsar, and not expose themselves to the charge of wrong-doing by the A. P. A.?

THE FATAL ALLIANCE OF CHURCH AND STATE.

In a volume of "Sermon Stuff" by the rector of St. Stephen's church, Philadelphia, the Rev. T. D. McConnell, D. D.. accounts for the weakness of episcopacy in this country in this way: "All our church's feebleness in the United States is due to the fatal alliance of the mother church with the political power of England." And "she has been seriously hindered in this country by her too close identifications with wealth."

The above remarks are in connection with Satan's offer to Jesus of the kingdoms of the world if he would serve him. It would be an awful temptation to a young man, and is a constant one to those who would bring in the kingdom by alliance with forces which are powerful in the world whose kingdoms can only be won in the way that Satan suggested.

The reality of the the temptation was in the fact that the devil told the truth. Preferment does come in this way:—elbowing one's way to a fortune, stabbing rivals in business, etc. It seems easy to use these methods for advancing the kingdom—measuring success by the visible fabric of the church and calling on the secular power to endow and enforce her beliefs. But alas, the issue of all is failure, because the kingdom of God has its own laws.

Just so. The kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ has its own laws on record in the New Testament, and he is the King and the Lawgiver. Not Cæsar, not Moses, not any civil power nor pope. T. H.

[We cannot agree with this brother that Satan told the truth in the case cited. Nor can the kingdoms of this world be won for Christ in the way Satan suggested. "And there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." Rev. 11: 15.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

SECRECY OPPOSED TO CHRISTIANITY.

Joseph Cook distinguishes between gilt-edged and guilty-edged secret orders. The Highbinders of California are imported from China. The flowery kingdom is honeycombed with them. Their chief weapon is murder. The government has tried in vain to suppress them. The English gunboats keep the Triads of India at bay on the coast, but in the interior of India they have all but supreme control. Our government found it necessary to assail the "Knights of the Golden Circle" during the war, for they were plotting to destroy it. It became necessary to throttle the Molly Maguire and Ku-Klux clans as a means of self-protection. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that any one who has taken the Endowment House oaths of the hierarchy should not be naturalized, and if naturalized, should be disfranchised. Taking the secret oaths disqualifies them for becoming citizens, or if citizens, for exercising the privileges of citizenship. The Mafia is a secret order from Italy. They discovered their real character in the murder of Chief of Police Hennessey of New Orleans, just as the Clan-na-Gael in the murder of Dr. Cronin of Chicago. The murder of Wm. Morgan by the Freemasons in 1826 caused forty-five out of every fifty of the members to leave the order. They exposed the oaths. This gave rise to the law passed by the Vermont Legislature in 1833, that any one administering or taking an oath not authorized by law should be fined not more than $100 and not less than $50. In 1839 this penalty was increased to $200. Massachusetts adopted this law and Daniel Webster advocated it. It ought to be adopted by every State in the Union.

The Jesuits are a secret order. Through the 100,000 confessionals in America they manipulate the votes, the business, the politics of half a million of our citizens. They have their hands upon the secular press and the city governments of this country. They have complete control of the liquor traffic, and that is the greatest factor to-day in our political life. They are the most dangerous enemy in our land.

These orders are very different from the Orangemen, the G. A. R. and A. P. A. But all are alike in the matter of secrecy, and that is the badge of Satan's kingdom. Secrecy identifies them with the kingdom of darkness, the kingdom of the evil one. Secrecy makes them a source of danger to the life of the republic. Out of 13,000,000 voters, 1,000,000 belong to secret orders. They hold the balance of power in closely contested elections. This government cannot afford to have her policy dictated by the lodge. We must throttle the serpent or it will ruin us.

The lodge oaths are unscriptural. Take the first three degrees of Masonry. The Entered Apprentice swears to keep the lodge secret, on the Bible, in the name of God, on the penalty of having his throat cut, his tongue torn out by the roots, and his body buried in the sands of the sea at low water mark. The Fellow Craft oath, besides secrecy, adds "a promise to abide by all lodge rules, obey signs and summonses, assist poor Fellow Crafts, etc., under penalty of having his breast torn open, and his heart plucked out, and exposed to be devoured by the vultures of the air," etc. The Master Mason's oath adds, the keeping of a brother Master Mason's secret, murder and treason excepted, and they left to his own discretion, binding himself "under no less penalty than that of having his body severed in twain, his bowels taken thence and burned to ashes, and the ashes scattered on the rough sands of the sea where the tide ebbs and flows twice every twenty-four hours." The Royal Arch degree amends the above with "murder and treason not excepted." These oaths and imprecations increase in blasphemy and barbarity through all the thirty-three degrees. Are they taken in earnest or jest? Let Dr. Lansing speak: "If in earnest, then these penalties are to be executed in case of failure to keep, or betrayal of, secrets. Who then will execute them? Some one must. Solemnly God's name is invoked, the Holy Scriptures appealed to, human life declared forfeited, savage penalties threatened,—and for what? To compel the keeping secret of the forms, orders, rites, ceremonies of a society alleged to be organized for fellowship, for benevolence, for religion, and for keeping each other's secrets. Was ever a more horrible contradiction between purpose and method? The things sworn to be done are of a very dubious character:—secrecy and obedience to laws as yet unknown to the oath-taker—fidelity to a class of men and their families, and secrecy, warning, and help to such, when criminal, except in case of murder and treason—which leaves ninety-nine hundreds of all crimes under protection of the oath. This is a fierce and savage oath to do a wicked thing, and less than blasphemy it cannot be, if taken in earnest. But if not in earnest, they are in jest. Then, and then only, are they neither to be kept nor avenged. And if not, the blasphemy of such jesting is as plain as its folly. Let a man say: 'I offer myself to this penalty, but it is never to be executed;' then he jests all through the oath, and he may as truly say: 'I promise secrecy, but the promise is not to be taken as in earnest.' The lodgemen say that those who reveal these secrets are perjured. But they that take these oaths and keep them, can they be other than perjurers and even murderers? If they take them and keep them, are they not sanctioning and committing the highest crimes? It were better not to take the oaths; but if inveigled into taking, one can never be innocent in keeping, only in breaking them. If taken seriously and kept, these oaths, as a prior obligation, make invalid, perjured and blasphemous every other oath subsequently taken in courts of law, since no witness, lawyer or judge can keep the lodge oath and the court oath, at once. If the court oath is kept, the lodge oath is violated and rendered inoperative and blasphemous."

The oath of an A. P. A. is milder in form and perhaps less lable to involve complicity with crime. But swearing to keep secret something, the nature of which is not known, is sinful. In Lev. 5:4, 5, we read: "If a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him, when he knoweth of it, then shall he be guilty in one of these." A man who swears to keep secret what is said and done in the lodge, whether he discover that the thing is evil or good, in either case his swearing to keep secret what he did not know beforehand is an unworthy and sinful act. It is surrendering his manhood. It is bartering away his birthright of personal liberty. It is breaking the law of God which secures the independence of the immortal spirit.

Secret societies are essentially idolatrous. Idolatry is a capital offense. It is spiritual adultery. It is worshiping the devil instead of God. For this sin Moses commanded the sons of Levi to slay every man his brother until 3,000 had fallen. For idolatry Israel was carried captive to Babylon. It is a sin God cannot tolerate. The lodge is a religion. In the lodge, pagan, Mohammedan, Jew and Christian unite in worship. Whom do they worship? Not the Christian's God. It is not good Masonry to mention Christ's name in the lodge. The worship is often led by a known libertine and drunkard. They sacrifice to devils and not to God. As was said of the Samaritans, whose religion was a strange medley of the heathen nations with whom the king of Babylon colonized the land and the few Israelites left after the deportation: "They feared the Lord and served graven images."

Now we raise the question, What is the present duty of the friends of Christ who repudiate the lodge to make their reform complete and secure the blessing of our Saviour and Lord?

They should refuse to hold membership or receive the sealing ordinances in any church that permits the members of the lodge to remain in full communion. The lodge worship is idolatry. It is devil-worship. They sacrifice to devils and not to God. The churches that fellowship these devil-worshipers as members and officers and ministers, are parties to this devil-worship. So long as the children of Christ who repudiate the lodge remain in full communion with these churches they are parties with them in this devil-worship, and their testimony is neutralized. The only way in which they can free themselves from complicity in this devil-worship is to separate themselves from these churches. So long as they remain identified with them and their idolatry God will not hear their prayer to destroy the lodge. They must have faith strong enough to part company with sin and lay hold upon the divine arm, else they cannot have fellowship with him. Hence the significant command of Paul in Hebrews: "Let us go forth unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach." The apostle asks five questions, and in each uses a different word, and yet in every one teaches the duty of dissenting from wrong. "For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? Or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" Our duty is to separate from evil. This is the position of power.—J. M. Foster in Christian Statesman.

HOW WE SEE GOD.

The pure in heart shall see God in prosperity. It is a singular fact that most people are more inclined to see God in their afflictions than when he blesses them with prosperity. They are apt to attribute their temporal blessings to their own sagacity or efforts. But the pure in heart praise God for their prosperity, recognizing his hand in it all.

The pure in heart see God in his providential dealings. They recognize God in the affairs of men. In whatever happens among the nations and kingdoms of earth they see his moulding hand turning and overturning for the glory of his coming kingdom.

The pure in heart see God in nature. The scientist sees only scientific laws as he views nature. The artist is charmed and delighted by its beauty only, but the pure in heart see God in everything, from the lowly daisy to the majestic forest. In all they see the work of their Father's hand.

Especially do the pure in heart see God in his Word. The mere scholar sees only the rhetorical beauties of the Bible. The natural man hears and sees the writings of prophets and apostles; but the pure in heart see through these writings and recognize the mind and will of God.

Deeper than all else, they whose hearts are "purified by faith" see God as dwelling within, according to his glorious promises often repeated: "I will dwell in them and walk in them." "I will sup with him." "Christ in you." He gives peace and power. The pure hearted are full Christians, mature, strong in the Lord, made perfect in love, perfect as their Father in heaven is perfect,—not in degrees but in kind and character. But the time is coming when the pure in heart shall see God in the unclouded vision of heaven's eternal glory. "See him as he is." "See the King in his beauty."

> "In rapturous awe on him to gaze
> Who bought the sight for me,
> And shout and wonder at his grace
> To all eternity."

No wonder that Jesus said that such are BLESSED, happy, joyful. Well may we "rejoice in the Lord always" with "joy unspeakable and full of glory." What a pressing duty is upon us to testify to all of this great salvation.—India Watchman

"MAMMA, ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?"

A woman of influence, the wife of a prominent lawyer, told the story of her conversion in a prayer-meeting. She said, "Last evening my little girl came to me and said:

"'Mamma, are you a Christian?'

"'No, Fanny, I am not'

"She turned away, and I heard her say:

"'Well, if mamma is not a Christian, I don't want to be one.'

"I tell you, my dear friends, it went to my heart; and then and there I tried to give myself up to Christ."

Little do mothers think of the influence which they are exercising over their children for good or ill. The children look to mother as the pattern of all perfection, and if mother is not a Christian, why should they be? But if the mother is trying to serve the Lord faithfully, that fact is a reason why the child should follow in her footsteps.—Sel

The Western Catholic News (March, 1895,) speaks of "the old corroded principle of private judgment which encourages every man, woman and child to be their own spiritual guide." The Catholic Review (May, 1895,) says: "When Catholics are in power they always respect the rights of conscience possessed by the minority."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

The Common burying ground.—A "Trilby" suicide.—Liberalism in the Episcopal church.—Dr. Fulton on "Woman and the A. P. A."—Madame Blanc on "A Prarie College."—Connecticut's purchasable voters.—The Mayflower for Massachusetts.

The subway business can hardly fail to force on the public mind thoughts curiously interlinked with the living bustling present, and the shadowy past just behind us; the struggling army of labor, and the innumerable company we shall soon join who have no part in the work of the world nor lot with the workers. Throngs of able-bodied men stand idly watching the process of excavation go on, in vain hope of a job, while women and children are toiling on starvation wages. It sets us to thinking of what 1900 may see if these things continue. At the same time who can help a sentimental sympathy with those whose mortal remains have been disturbed in the march of improvement? They were laid to rest —at least many of them—so reverently and lovingly, by hearts rent with the anguish of parting, but which would have been rent with a still keener pang could they have foreseen the future. Let us be glad that they didn't and couldn't; that to them the end of the world would have seemed a nearer and more probable event than that a great city should grow up around them which in a hundred years would require every square inch of available space to fill its congested lungs. The Common burying ground is a modern affair, comparatively speaking. It is not so old as King's Chapel, Copp's Hill or the Old Granary by considerable more than a century, yet it antedates the Revolution. It was the sepulchre of the common soldiers who died of disease or wounds during the British occupation of Boston; and among those buried there we can boast of at least one distinguished name, that of Gilbert Stuart, the portrait painter. Another is M. Julien, the Delmonico of Boston in those early days, whose name has gone down to posterity immortalized by the famous soup, a recipe for which can be found in every cook-book. I have no doubt that the New England Cremation Society, which is going to hold a public meeting in May, will have a much larger attendance and stronger following for the unpleasant sights to which so many have been unwilling witnesses the last month.

Yellow-colored novels with blood-curdling titles are not responsible for all the mischief wrought on weak or ill-disciplined minds. Reading and re-reading "Trilby" has recently driven a young man in Hartford to commit suicide under the belief that he was hypnotically controlled by Svengalia, the hyynotist of the story. This unreal, unwholesome kind of fiction acts upon some minds like poison, and it is a pity that the press and even the pulpit has combined to give so much prominence to this book, which I doubt not a hundred years from now will be unknown except as a curiosity. But every age has its fads, and ours seems to concentrate in itself all the fads of all the ages which have preceded it. A distinguished Theosophist has recenty been lecturing to the convicts at Charleston. The papers did not report whether any became converts to the new religion; but if anyone needs Christ and the power of the Gospel, it is the man behind prison bars who has forfeited his social standing, and must have a supernatural power to aid him if he would ever conquer his past life. It is sad when a stone instead of bread is offered him.

The Episcopal church has its Andover question, and perhaps the next Diocesan convention here in Massachusetts may see some hot theological disputes. There are a small minority who verge on Unitarianism; there is a majority who believe that the Episcopal church is the church, and its thirty-nine articles an infallible resume of all that needs to be known in the way of doctrine. Meanwhile I should think it quite natural that those who belong to the high church party should look longingly through the bars towards Rome, which cannot by any stress of possibility have an Andover question any more than a fossil of prehistoric era could have the toothache.

Dr. Fulton is now lecturing every Sunday afternoon in Music Hall, at the same hour that the Patriotic meetings are held in the People's church, but it does not perceptibly thin the large audiences which gather at the latter place, nor damp their "patriotic" enthusiasm. Now patriotism is surely a good thing, but when it trenches on the Sabbath, and desecrates the house of God with noisy demonstrations befitting a town meeting, it becomes something else. Dr. Fulton spoke the other Sunday on "Woman and the A. P. A.," lauding this secret organization which, according to him, "has ushered in a new era into the world's history," and warning its members not to put themselves on record as in favor of woman suffrage,—a thing which the doctor hates next to Romanism itself. Yet when he urges women to help the A. P. A., and speaks of their presence in council as "an inspiration," and their instincts as "a necessity" in the great work of saving the Republic, it is difficult to see how they can do all this and keep always in their sphere without the defiling touch of politics. I see that the Supreme Council which has just met at Milwaukee, though its sessions are of course secret, is supposed to have gone deep enough in politics for "the determination reached by this body," in the language of the Standard, "to have an important bearing on the next Presidential election." It is supremely queer to see men like Fulton and Parkhurst invoking the aid of women in their work which is certainly political, dealing as it does with problems that can only be settled at the ballot box, yet denying them the only weapons which can make their aid effective. Dr. Fulton has done a good work against Rome, but one cannot help wishing that he would occasionally drop the ego, and forget that he is Dr. Fulton.

There is an article in a late number of "McClure's Magazine" by Madame Blanc on "A Prairie College" that will rejoice the souls of many a man and woman now bearing the burden and heat of the day who received their education at this Western institution which she celebrates —Knox College. Madame Blanc, Parisian woman though she is, has the eye and heart which loves naturalness and delights in simplicity. Having twice visited Galesburgh she acknowledges that she would gladly "take her knitting" and go back to enjoy again its quiet atmosphere of culture, and study anew the problem of co-education answered so successfully in the experience of the college of which Dr. Jonathan Blanchard was so long the honored president. In fact, Knox and Oberlin, and the other young Western colleges which have sprung up in their tracks, never debated the question at all; and Madame Blanc notes with admiration that what in Europe, even in New England would have been considered a revolutionary step, or at least a very radical experiment, was the simple, natural outcome of life as it was lived in the new and then far West. Says Madame Blanc: "The wild odors of the prairies do not prevent me from appreciating certain drawing-rooms in Boston or New York. But I have often been shocked at the willing ignorance which Americans who have crossed the ocean ten times profess for the still new portions of their own country as if the treasures of the future were not buried there. I left Galesburgh with regret. I afterwards returned to it from a long distance."

Connecticut has a very unenviable reputation for the venality of its voters, the number of those who are purchasable being placed as high as 20,000 out of a total of 159,741. It has also another peculiar distiction of being the only State in the Union which practically disfranchises the residents of its cities. The town of Union which has less than 500 inhabitants has two representatives, and the city of New Haven, with a population of 100,000, has the same number. Thus it will be seen that a large part of her citizens have really no voice in state matters, while the country districts where most of the purchasable voters are found have much more than their fair share. Connecticut ought to amend her State laws, and not allow such inequality to exist for the benefit of political schemers.

Massachusetts is rather slow in choosing a national flower. Maine has selected the pine cone and tassel, and Vermont the red clover, but so many flowers have been suggested for Massachusetts that it is not strange she cannot at once make up her mind. The mayflower seems to belong to her of right, not that it is a common flower in all parts of the State, but it was the first that greeted the pilgrims;—tiny pink censers of fragrance trailing lowly on the ground, but brave and sweet and pure as the Puritan maidens who plucked them with rejoicing hearts on the first spring days that followed that terrible winter. The mayflower and no other should be the chosen floral emblem of Massachusetts.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The recent census.—Arbor Day.—Brooklyn trolleys —College courses for poor boys.—The Governor's veto.

The result of the recent police census, as verified by the board of health, fixes the population of the city at 1,846,866. Of this total 925,310 are males, and 924,566 are females. This is an increase of 139,151 over the census of 1890, and shows an annual increase of 30,966 These figure are regarded as approximately correct, and show a normal and satisfactory growth. Should the greater New York idea materialize, the bill for which is now mysteriously hanging fire in the Legislature, the total population would become 3,051,838, which would make New York the second city in the world, coming next to London. There is a strong element, however, in Brooklyn that opposes annexation through local pride and patriotism, regarding Brooklyn as the city of homes and churches and the most distinctively American city in the Union. New Yorkers, on the other hand, look on Brooklyn as merely one of the dormitories of Manhattan Island, which, without the great bridge as a means of easy communication, would not be one-half its present size. Area and population, however, do not always harmonize. New York has only 42 square miles, while Chicago has 189, Philadelphia 129, Brooklyn 66, St. Louis 61 and Boston 37. The value of real estate is the true standard of a city's wealth. The value of real estate in New York is $1,562,000,000, and in Chicago, $204,000,000, so that New York's 42 square miles are worth seven times as much as Chicago's 189 square miles. Again it has been said that the debt of a city shows the amount of stealing that has been carried on by the politicians having the government in charge, and in this respect New York easily carries off the palm, for the city debt is $104,000,000, while that of Chicago is only $17,000,000, Brooklyn $49,000,000, and Boston $35,000,000.

The usual Arbor Day exercises were held in all the public schools, although with much variety, since the law permits each principal to determine the character of the exercises to be held in his school. The day is not of so much significance in the city as in the country, where the planting of trees can be indulged in and where the children can receive practical instruction in arboriculture. It is encouraging, however, that the day is so generally observed, as there is no day of the school year that can be more productive of fruitful and lasting benefits both in the minds of the children and the improvement of the country.

The Brooklyn Trolley companies have a new time schedule. The cars creep through the streets at a pace much slower even than that of the average horse car. It is believed to be a sharp trick on the part of the railroad magnates to turn public opinion against the city authorities who have at last taken tardy action in relation to the use of fenders in view of the 109 lives already sacrificed upon the streets. Passengers are complaining bitterly, while motormen and conductors encourage their protests with suggestions that they present them to the mayor. Within the next thirty days, Mayor Schieren said, every company in the city would be compelled by a new ordinance to place safety-fenders on their cars, so as to save the lives of the people. Although this ordinance will oblige the companies to adopt life-savers, it cannot direct the kind of fenders they shall use; and for this reason some of the companies propose to get the cheapest in the market, which have already been proved to be practically useless. It is only a question of time, however, when public sentiment will triumph over selfishness and greed, and the cars will not only be run at reasonable and satisfactory rates of speed, but will also be properly provided with life-saving appliances.

Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, of the New York World, proposes to give $250 a year to certain boys graduating from the Grammar schools of New York City, for the purpose of enabling them to take a college course in any first-class college in the United States which they may choose. In addition to this sum these boys will receive free tuition in the Horace Mann high school for a period of three years, at the end of which time they will be fitted to enter the college of their choice. While they will be free to enter any first-class college, arrangements have been made to have them given free tuition at Columbia College in the School of Arts, Mines, Law or Medicine. An examination for the purpose of selecting ten boys from the graduating classes of the present year will be held in June, and will include English grammar and literature, American history, arithmetic, geography and free-hand drawing. The whole period covered by the course of study will not exceed seven years, and it will thus be possible for the poorest boy in the city to receive a liberal education that will put him on an equality with the richest. This is a most sensible form of philanthropy, and yields the largest and most satisfactory returns.

Gov. Morton's veto of the King's County Charities Organization bill was a tremendous and most unpleasant surprise to the machine politicians of both parties who had been conniving and combining to secure its passage. The best men in all parties commend the wise and patriotic interference of the governor with the plundering schemes of the political thugs and tricksters, who through this bill were seeking to build up the machine of Thos. Platt and Jacob Worth. Lieut. Governor Saxton comes in for his share of praise for his sturdy labors in bringing this iniquitous measure to naught. It is hoped that this will mean the total and final collapse of the Platt machine in this part of the State at least. Only a feeble protest was made in the Assembly when the veto was received, and there is little or no possibility of a successful appeal to the courts.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The polyglot petition.—Baptist convention.—Anti Saloon League —Open-air workers —Edmunds law in D. C.—Anniversaries.—Dr. Easton.— Income tax.—Patents.

The big polyglot temperance petition of the World's W. C. T. U., which has been in the vault of a Washington safe deposit company since last February, when the meetings in connection with its presentation to President Cleveland and Congress were held, will shortly resume its journey around the world. It will be due at the monster meeting that is to be held in London, Sunday, June 16, and the demonstration which will accompany its exhibition in Albert Hall, in that city, two days later. The steamer Berlin of the American line has been chartered to carry the petition and such American delegates as will accompany it. After the London convention the delegates will go to Grindenwald to participate in a temperance convention now being arranged by Rev. Dr. Lunn. In August the petition will be taken to Christiana, Stockholm, Copenhagen and St. Petersburg, and in the autumn to the capitals of all the countries bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. That is as far as the program has been definitely arranged, but later the central countries of Europe are to be visited, and afterwards Australia, Africa and Asia.

Washington is rapidly filling up with visitors to the Southern Baptist Convention, which opens Friday. Present indications are that the attendance will be larger than any similar convention has ever had.

There was some very plain talk at the last meeting of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League, because of the reported refusal of the officials of an Episcopal church to co-operate with the league in preventing a bar-room license being issued to a small hotel in the vicinity of the church. It is claimed by the league committee, which has filed a formal protest and is now considering the advisability of appealing to the courts, that the license was illegally issued, the hotel being within 400 feet of a church.

The third annual convention of the Open-Air Workers was held in the hall of the Central Union Mission this week, Rev. Dr. Tennis Hamlin, vice-president at Washington, presiding. Probably the most interesting feature of the convention was the sermon on open-air work by Rev. A. T. Pierson, formerly of London, now of Philadelphia, himself a successful open-air worker of wide and long experience. Once there were scoffers at this class of religious work, and some of them were church members, too; but the good results have been so apparent in Washington that no scoffers are now to be found. The talkers from the gospel wagon maintained by the Central Union Mission are treated with the same respect that ministers preaching from their pulpits have accorded to them. Among those in attendance were Rev. Llewellyn Caley, of Philadelphia; D. L. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio; Frank H. Marston and Rev. E. H. Byington, of Brooklyn; and Rev. Dr. J. S. Stone, of Bedford, N. Y. The association has grown in three years from 75 to 275 members.

Since the court decided that the Edmunds law against the co-habitation of men and women not legally married was in full force in the District of Columbia, an earnest effort has been made by some of our foremost moral reformers to have the officials proceed against the violators of that law, and they have partially succeeded. Some of the parties arrested have escaped punishment by marrying, and the effects of the few arrests made have been altogether wholesome.

Anniversary services were a feature in several Washington churches Sunday. At the Fourth Presbyterian it was the twenty-first anniversary of the ordination of the pastor, Rev. Jos. T. Kelly, and the eleventh of his pastorate of that church; at the Church of the Reformation it was the sixteenth anniversary of the origination of the church as well as of the pastorate of Rev. W. E. Parson; at the Ninth Street Christian church it was the fourth anniversary of its organization as a mission of the Garfield Memorial church, and at the First Baptist church it was the sixty-seventh anniversary meeting of the Washington Bible Society which was held, the anniversary address being delivered by Rev. C. A. Fuller, of Baltimore.

Rev. Dr. Easton is still after the Catholics. In the course of a sermon on "The Jesuits: their Rise and Organization," he said: "It is not, to any thoughtful student of history, at all surprising that in this closing part of the nineteenth century two assassinations of American Presidents have been charged to the Jesuits, and that Wilkes Booth and Guiteau were but pliant tools of the Societas Jesus." He closed by saying: "A storm is gathering, and the hope of averting the religious conflict as seen by Lincoln and Grant is in the expulsion of Satolli and all of the Jesuits from this land consecrated to civil and religious freedom."

The arguments before the Supreme Court for a rehearing in the income tax cases have been followed with the greatest interest by officials and lawyers. The decision is thought to depend upon the vote of Justice Jackson.

REFORM NEWS.

NEWS FROM THE GREEN MOUNTAINS.

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 4, 1895.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The secret lodges in this and the neighboring city of Barre are numerous and strong. Very little, so far as I can learn, has been said against them of late years. A very few only have any knowledge of the discussions of the question fifty and sixty years ago, and the church rules adopted and civil legislation of that period are either forgotten or ignored. The act of Nov. 7, 1833, stands upon the statute books, and if enforced would sweep every lodge in the State out of existence. It is exceedingly comprehensive, and T. C. Phinney, Dept. Secretary of State, admitted to me that its design was to prohibit the administration of oaths and obligations by Masonic and kindred orders. The language is, "Any oath, affirmation or obligation in the nature of an oath, not authorized by law," etc,; and the penalty of not less than fifty, or more than one hundred, dollars is to be exacted of the one who administers and the one who takes the obligation. Since the secret government of clans has obtained a supremacy over the open government "for the people and by the people" to the extent of nullifying this law for over half a century, it is doubtful if it could be enforced, but it might be well to test it in a court of competent jurisdiction. A Mason, prominent in the order for many years, holding a civil office, tells me that only two members of the fraternity living in Montpelier at the time when the law was passed refused to sign renunciation papers, and a judicious agitation of the subject would result in a general desertion of the lodge.

I find here but one clergyman who is not "unequally yoked with unbelievers" and living in constant violation of a statute of the State. Bro. N. M. Shaw is a free man; and with his "little flock" has shown me much kindness. Rev. —— Webster, of the Baptist, has recently joined the K. of Ps., and Rev. —— Webb, M. E. pastor, attends the Odd-fellows lodge about once a quarter. Both these gentlemen treated me courteously, and unlike many pastors I met, they were too conscientious to cover the "unfruitful works" of their lodges by absolute falsehoods.

Rev. Edgar M. Smith, D D., is president of Montpelier Seminary, an M. E. school, with about one hundred and seventy-five pupils in attendance. He was a college mate of Dr. I. J. Lansing, with whom he differed on the secrecy question. He frankly avowed his opposition to my work and said, "I have received more benefit from a secret society than from any other organization except the church." He said there were secret societies in the church. He said there were secret societies in his college, but he thought their secrets amounted to very little. He did not favor my speaking to the students, but kindly allowed me to give each one as they retired from chapel service a copy of Dr. Carradine's Sermon and Folly, Expense and Danger of Secret Societies. The tracts were received with avidity; and coming out of the president's office a little later I saw that they were being read by scores of young men and women with apparent eagerness. The Dr. claimed to know the persons whose faces and testimonies appear in "Danger Signals", but expressed his opinion of their judgment and candor in terms not unfamiliar to those who remember the days of Wm. Lloyd Garrison, John Brown, Wendell Phillips, Nathaniel Colver, Chas. G. Finney and Jonathan Blanchard. He consented to allow the Cynosure to come to the college reading-room, but with the express understanding that such permission should not be construed as in any way endorsing our work. With a ministry living in constant violation of the example and teaching of Christ, who ever spake openly and commanded his followers to let their light shine, and in contempt of a civil statute enacted in the interest of morality and religion, it is no marvel that Zion languishes and the love of many waxes cold, where the devil has five churches working in darkness to Christ's one with open doors, and where the members and pastors and Worshipful Masters and High Priests of Baal altars are mutually and interchangably commingling in the sacramental communion of our Lord and the "cup of devils."

At Barre I met with greater encouragement and with more spiteful opposition. Bro. P. C.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TITLES ROYAL AND MASONIC.

SCHUYLER'S LAKE, N. Y., May, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Freemasonry can never gain the esteem in England that it has in this country because there it is in rivalry with the aristocracy. Respect for the wealth and position of the latter in that country prevents the fulsome adulation common in our own. Aristocratic titles detract from the popularity of the Masonic, and the older institution asserts its superiority within and without the lodge.

The Century, from the imperial standpoint, says that the name and existence of Freemasonry do not antedate the eighteenth century. But the great Standard Dictionary, published in this country by Funk and Wagnalls, in its desire to puff Masonry rather exceeds the province of a dictionary, and illustrates with a representation of Washington in the regalia of the York rite; on the principle, possibly, that an object of doubted value is enhanced by connection with one of known worth. A strict regard to real and symbolic truth would have employed the effigy of Satan, the arch Mason.

The truth is, Washington did not enter the lodge but once or twice for thirty years before his death, and spoke very disparagingly of it. A Mason in our time following this course would not be held up as a paragon or even honored with the burial rites of the order.

Why was not Arnold, the Mason and traitor, chosen to exhibit the regalia? He has no higher use in the memories of mankind, and aptly illustrates this essence of conspiracy. The fraternity employs many expedients to gain an introduction to the public. They corrupt the Bible by omissions, and books of reference by fraudulent interpolations in their own behalf. A READER

REBEL FLAGS.

DARLINGTON, Mo , May, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Benjamin B. Piper was for nearly four years a sharpshooter in the Confederate army during the late war. After the battle of Corinth he said some Roman Catholic flags, red flags with the white cross, appeared in the hands of the flag-carriers. This was under Lieutenant Commander Kirby Smith of the Trans-Mississippi, Gen. M. M. Parsons over Gen. Price. The Missouri Johnnies refused to march under these colors until Gen. Price made a speech explaining that the Sisters of Charity in Mississippi had presented him with these flags, and that the sympathies of the Catholics was with the Rebellion. Al. Hamilton carried one of these papal standards for about two years.

I had heard of this flag business in a vague way, and Providence seems to have ordered that I should meet and converse with living witnesses. Add this to the fact that the Pope was the only European power to officially recognize the "Confederate States of America," and that Booth, a papist, killed Abe Lincoln, and it places another link in the chain against Rome. AMERICAN.

THE CHRISTLESS FATHERHOOD AND BROTHERHOOD

CHICAGO, May 4 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE: —The two expressions, "Fatherhood of God, and brotherhood of man," have become very popular since the World's Fair. But Christians believe Christ when he said, "No man cometh to the Father, but by me," and the lodge does not so teach. In Chicago there are 1088 lodges and only 384 churches, nearly three to one; and the question is, how shall the true churches of Christ obtain control in the hearts and minds of the people of Chicago? How can Chicago continue to be regarded as a city in which Christianity predominates, when such a difference in numbers exists between the supremacy of Christ and that of the lodge chieftains —destitute of our New Testament Christ as all these secret chambers are? Jesus himself warned his people against "false Christs and false prophets," whether in the wilderness or in the secret chambers, and commanded his people not to believe he was there. (See Matt. 24: 23–28.) This passage may have had its first application to Jerusalem, but what are the signs of the times when Chicago has nearly three times as many lodges as churches? As Christ has said, "No man can serve two masters;" so no man can be equally loyal to the lodge and the true church of Christ. What said Alexander Campbell?

"Of the impropriety of Christian men joining any nominally moral society but the Christian church, we have many instructive and alarming proofs. Their affections are such as must in all cases be divided; and if the rival claims of the two associations conflict, they cleave to the human rather than to the divine institution; and show more respect for the brotherhood of the human than for the brotherhood of the divine fraternity.

"But 'the man of sin' and the spirit that inspires him have always plead for a church and state amalgamation, and for bringing the whole unregenerate world into the forms and under the name of a Christian people. Hence the middle wall of partition being broken down, not between Jew and Gentile, but between Christ's church and the world, Christian people are prepared to inter-marry, if not to commit adultery, with any institution that may be got up under the show of some public good that may do honor to them before the world. One would think the world had ceased to be, as in old times, under Satan. John spoke in a very impolite, unsocial, uncharitable style, when he said, 'We are of God, little children, and the whole world lieth under the devil.' All mixed communion in religion with the world, under any pretence whatever, is spiritual adultery or fornication, according to my Bible.

"The friendship of the world is enmity against God. Whosoever will be a friend of the world is an enemy to God. Out of Christ's church 'the whole world lieth under the wicked one.' I know no Temperance, Odd-fellow or Freemason fraternity that does not recognize a brotherhood with the world. 'They are of the world, they speak of the world, and the world heareth them.' Christians though in the world are not of it. Any union, then, for moral purposes with the world, that brings us to commune religiously with it, by the laws and usages of the institution itself, is opposed to the law and kingdom of Jesus Christ, and cannot be favorable to the church or to the world."

Yours truly, A DISCIPLE.

THE LODGE MOST CENSURABLE.

DEAR CYNOSURE.—"For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God." 1 Peter 4: 17. The time was, and it is more fully so now, that censure rests on the church. The seven churches were censured more or less in many things. If these things are so of churches ordained of God, how is it with organizations that reject Christ? If God ordained the church and it did not always act right so that it must be censured, how is it with organizations ordained of Satan to reject Christ? If the worst church that ever existed is censurable, the lodge is much more so. Who ever heard of a church ever so fallen that it rejected the name of Christ in prayer, by discipline? The name of Christ is expunged from his own Word in lodge Bible readings. The ritualistic prayer of the lodge rejects Christ, and it is un-Masonic to pray in the name of Christ. No Christian church was ever so badly fallen.

But the church is censurable for not being faithful in her testimony concerning the lodge. She has compromised and made a truce, not peace, with "the unfruitful works of darkness." The church, not to be censurable, should be unswervingly loyal to Christ and not truckle to the lodge. But bad as the churches may be in compromising with evil, there is not one believes in rejecting Christ. Nor does the Spirit bring such accusation against the seven churches of Asia in censuring them. "There is no other name given in heaven or among men whereby we can be saved, except in the name of Jesus." He is our salvation, and the churches know it. His enemies are ours. CYRUS SMITH

LITERATURE.

The story of the diplomatic maneuvers between England and France for the restoration of Napoleon's remains to France and of their removal from St. Helena to Paris, in 1840, and their burial, with imposing ceremonies, in the Hotel des Invalides—in some respects the most curious and dramatic episode in all the Napoleon history—is told by Miss Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine for May. The paper is illustrated with a remarkable series of contemporary engravings, portraying the funeral progress from the reception of the remains on board the French ship at St. Helena to the final scene at the Hotel des Invalides.

Much interest will be felt by the public in the return of Rudyard Kipling to India. He has just agreed to furnish a regular contribution to the Cosmopolitan Magazine for the coming year, beginning his work upon his return to India. India has never been critically considered by such a pen as Kipling's, and what he will write for the Cosmopolitan will attract the widest attention, both here and in England. Perhaps the most beautiful series of pictures ever presented of the Rocky Mountains will be found in a collection of fourteen original paintings, executed by Thomas Moran for the May Cosmopolitan. To those who have been in the Rockies, this issue of the Cosmopolitan will be a souvenir worthy of preservation. This number contains fifty-two original drawings, by Thomas Moran, Oliver Herford, Dan Beard, H. M. Eaton, F. G. Atwood, F. O. Small, F. Lix, J. H. Dolph, and Rosina Emmett Sherwood, besides six reproductions of famous recent works of art, and forty other interesting illustrations—ninety-eight in all. Though the Cosmopolitan sells for but fifteen cents, probably no magazine in the world will present for May so great a number of illustrations specially designed for its pages by famous illustrators.

The welcome extended in England to Volume II. of the Standard Dictionary is something remarkable, especially so as England, being the mother of the language, might be expected naturally to be somewhat sensitive at being asked to accept from America a dictionary claiming to be authoritative in the use of a language peculiarly her own. The cordiality of the reception measures a notable change in sentiment since the historic comment of the "Edinburgh Review," made some decades ago, "Who reads an American book?"

NEVER IN VAIN.

No message of love to God and man has ever been in vain; no love of man or God has ever perished from the universe; no life of love has ever been or ever can be lost. This is the only infinite and only eternal message, and this is why the mission and the message of Jesus of Nazareth must abide. This is the reason that the life of Jesus is eternal, and that all things must be subdued unto him; for "love never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall be done away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part; but when that which is perfect is come; that which is in part shall be done away. . . . . For now I see in a mirror darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I have been known."

And when at last we shall clearly know what now we dimly see in Jesus Christ—that "love is righteousness in action:" that mercy is the necessary instrument of justice; that good has "been the final goal of ill;" and that through testing innocence must have been glorified into virtue—when we shall see that God is love and law is Gospel, and sin has been transformed into righteousness, then shall we also see that "there is one body, and one Spirit, even as also we were called in one hope of our calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is over all, and through all, and in all."

Then shall we see that "unto each one of us was the grace given according to the measure of the gift of Christ;" . . . . and we shall all "attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ;" and

"Every kindred, every tribe,
On this terrestrial ball,
To him all majesty ascribe,
And crown him Lord of all."

HOW VACCINATION WAS DISCOVERED.

Accident Brought About One of the Greatest Blessings Known to Man.

When Dr. Jenner, the celebrated physician, was at Sudbury once, he was surprised one day at hearing a country woman say that she would not take the smallpox because she had had the cowpox, and upon inquiry he learned that it was a popular notion in that district that milkers who had been infected with a peculiar eruption, which sometimes occurred on the udder of the cow, were completely secure against the smallpox. It occurred to Jenner in 1780 that it might be possible to propagate the cowpox, and with it the security from smallpox first from the cow to the human body and then from one person to another. How to Ascertain the Weight of Cattle.

Measure the girth close behind the shoulder and the length from the fore part of the shoulder blade along the back to the bone at the tail, which is in a vertical line with the buttock, both in feet. Multiply the square of the girth, expressed in feet, by five times the length, and divide the product by 21. The quotient is the weight nearly for the four quarters, in imperial stone of 14 pound avoirdupois. It is to be observed, however, that in very fat cattle the four quarters will be about one-twentieth more, and in those in a very lean state they will be less in the same proportion to the weight obtained by the rule. The four quarters are little more than half the weight of the living animal, the skin weighing about the eighteenth part and the tallow about the twelfth part of the whole.

Broil quickly over a hot fire and place it on a hot platter, spreading both sides of it with the following mixture: A tablespoonful of melted butter, a half tablespoonful of salt and a half tablespoonful of white pepper. On top of the steak lay 3 plantains which have been fried in butter. The plantains are the red bananas. Over this pour a half pint of bechamel sauce, and over the whole sprinkle a tablespoonful of grated horse radish. This will be found a delicious dish for a luncheon party. How to Make Stout Drawing Paper Transparent.

This can be done by simply brushing the paper over with Canada balsam, thinned down when necessary with a little oil of turpentine. Any paper capable of the transfer of a drawing in ordinary ink, pencil or water colors can be made as transparent as the thin yellowish paper at present used for tracing purposes. The liquid used is benzine. It at once assumes transparency and permits of the tracing being made and of ink or water colors being used on its surface without running. country by Funk and Wagnalls, in its desire to puff Masonry rather exceeds the province of a dictionary, and illustrates with a representation of Washington in the regalia of the York rite; on the principle, possibly, that an object of doubted value is enhanced by connection with one of known worth. A strict regard to real and symbolic truth would have employed the effigy of Satan, the arch Mason.

The truth is, Washington did not enter the lodge but once or twice for thirty years before his death, and spoke very disparagingly of it. A Mason in our time following this course would not be held up as a paragon or even honored with the burial rites of the order.

Why was not Arnold, the Mason and traitor, chosen to exhibit the regalia? He has no higher use in the memories of mankind, and aptly illustrates this essence of conspiracy. The fraternity employs many expedients to gain an introduction to the public. They corrupt the Bible by omissions, and books of reference by fraudulent interpolations in their own behalf. A READER

REBEL FLAGS.

DARLINGTON, Mo , May, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Benjamin B. Piper was for nearly four years a sharpshooter in the Confederate army during the late war. After the battle of Corinth he said some Roman Catholic flags, red flags with the white cross, appeared in the hands of the flag-carriers. This was under Lieutenant Commander Kirby Smith of the Trans-Mississippi, Gen. M. M. Parsons over Gen. Price. The Missouri Johnnies refused to march under these colors until Gen. Price made a speech explaining that the Sisters of Charity in Mississippi had presented him with these flags, and that the sympathies of the Catholics was with the Rebellion. Al. Hamilton carried one of these papal standards for about two years.

I had heard of this flag business in a vague way, and Providence seems to have ordered that I should meet and converse with living witnesses. Add this to the fact that the Pope was the only European power to officially recognize the "Confederate States of America," and that Booth, a papist, killed Abe Lincoln, and it places another link in the chain against Rome. AMERICAN.

CHICAGO, May 4 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE: —The two expressions, "Fatherhood of God, and brotherhood of man," have become very popular since the World's Fair. But Christians believe Christ when he said, "No man cometh to the Father, but by me," and the lodge does not so teach. In Chicago there are 1088 lodges and only 384 churches, nearly three to one; and the question is, how shall the true churches of Christ obtain control in the hearts and minds of the people of Chicago? How can Chicago continue to be regarded as a city in which Christianity predominates, when such a difference in numbers exists between the supremacy of Christ and that of the lodge chieftains —destitute of our New Testament Christ as all these secret chambers are? Jesus himself warned his people against "false Christs and false prophets," whether in the wilderness or in the secret chambers, and commanded his people not to believe he was there. (See Matt. 24: 23–28.) This passage may have had its first application to Jerusalem, but what are the signs of the times when Chicago has nearly three times as many lodges as churches? As Christ has said, "No man can serve two masters;" so no man can be equally loyal to the lodge and the true church of Christ. What said Alexander Campbell?

"Of the impropriety of Christian men joining any nominally moral society but the Christian church, we have many instructive and alarming proofs. Their affections are such as must in all cases be divided; and if the rival claims of the two associations conflict, they cleave to the human rather than to the divine institution; and show more respect for the brotherhood of the human than for the brotherhood of the divine fraternity.

"But 'the man of sin' and the spirit that inspires him have always plead for a church and state amalgamation, and for bringing the whole unregenerate world into the forms and under the name of a Christian people. Hence the middle wall of partition being broken down, not between Jew and Gentile, but between Christ's church and the world, Christian people are prepared to inter-marry, if not to commit adultery, with any institution that may be got up under the show of some public good that may do honor to them before the world. One would think the world had ceased to be, as in old times, under Satan. John spoke in a very impolite, unsocial, uncharitable style, when he said, 'We are of God, little children, and the whole world lieth under the devil.' All mixed communion in religion with the world, under any pretence whatever, is spiritual adultery or fornication, according to my Bible.

"The friendship of the world is enmity against God. Whosoever will be a friend of the world is an enemy to God. Out of Christ's church 'the whole world lieth under the wicked one.' I know no Temperance, Odd-fellow or Freemason fraternity that does not recognize a brotherhood with the world. 'They are of the world, they speak of the world, and the world heareth them.' Christians though in the world are not of it. Any union, then, for moral purposes with the world, that brings us to commune religiously with it, by the laws and usages of the institution itself, is opposed to the law and kingdom of Jesus Christ, and cannot be favorable to the church or to the world."

Yours truly, A DISCIPLE.

THE LODGE MOST CENSURABLE.

DEAR CYNOSURE.—"For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God." 1 Peter 4: 17. The time was, and it is more fully so now, that censure rests on the church. The seven churches were censured more or less in many things. If these things are so of churches ordained of God, how is it with organizations that reject Christ? If God ordained the church and it did not always act right so that it must be censured, how is it with organizations ordained of Satan to reject Christ? If the worst church that ever existed is censurable, the lodge is much more so. Who ever heard of a church ever so fallen that it rejected the name of Christ in prayer, by discipline? The name of Christ is expunged from his own Word in lodge Bible readings. The ritualistic prayer of the lodge rejects Christ, and it is un-Masonic to pray in the name of Christ. No Christian church was ever so badly fallen.

But the church is censurable for not being faithful in her testimony concerning the lodge. She has compromised and made a truce, not peace, with "the unfruitful works of darkness." The church, not to be censurable, should be unswervingly loyal to Christ and not truckle to the lodge. But bad as the churches may be in compromising with evil, there is not one believes in rejecting Christ. Nor does the Spirit bring such accusation against the seven churches of Asia in censuring them. "There is no other name given in heaven or among men whereby we can be saved, except in the name of Jesus." He is our salvation, and the churches know it. His enemies are ours. CYRUS SMITH

LITERATURE.

The story of the diplomatic maneuvers between England and France for the restoration of Napoleon's remains to France and of their removal from St. Helena to Paris, in 1840, and their burial, with imposing ceremonies, in the Hotel des Invalides—in some respects the most curious and dramatic episode in all the Napoleon history—is told by Miss Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine for May. The paper is illustrated with a remarkable series of contemporary engravings, portraying the funeral progress from the reception of the remains on board the French ship at St. Helena to the final scene at the Hotel des Invalides.

Much interest will be felt by the public in the return of Rudyard Kipling to India. He has just agreed to furnish a regular contribution to the Cosmopolitan Magazine for the coming year, beginning his work upon his return to India. India has never been critically considered by such a pen as Kipling's, and what he will write for the Cosmopolitan will attract the widest attention, both here and in England. Perhaps the most beautiful series of pictures ever presented of the Rocky Mountains will be found in a collection of fourteen original paintings, executed by Thomas Moran for the May Cosmopolitan. To those who have been in the Rockies, this issue of the Cosmopolitan will be a souvenir worthy of preservation. This number contains fifty-two original drawings, by Thomas Moran, Oliver Herford, Dan Beard, H. M. Eaton, F. G. Atwood, F. O. Small, F. Lix, J. H. Dolph, and Rosina Emmett Sherwood, besides six reproductions of famous recent works of art, and forty other interesting illustrations—ninety-eight in all. Though the Cosmopolitan sells for but fifteen cents, probably no magazine in the world will present for May so great a number of illustrations specially designed for its pages by famous illustrators.

The welcome extended in England to Volume II. of the Standard Dictionary is something remarkable, especially so as England, being the mother of the language, might be expected naturally to be somewhat sensitive at being asked to accept from America a dictionary claiming to be authoritative in the use of a language peculiarly her own. The cordiality of the reception measures a notable change in sentiment since the historic comment of the "Edinburgh Review," made some decades ago, "Who reads an American book?"

NEVER IN VAIN.

No message of love to God and man has ever been in vain; no love of man or God has ever perished from the universe; no life of love has ever been or ever can be lost. This is the only infinite and only eternal message, and this is why the mission and the message of Jesus of Nazareth must abide. This is the reason that the life of Jesus is eternal, and that all things must be subdued unto him; for "love never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall be done away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part; but when that which is perfect is come; that which is in part shall be done away. . . . . For now I see in a mirror darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I have been known."

And when at last we shall clearly know what now we dimly see in Jesus Christ—that "love is righteousness in action:" that mercy is the necessary instrument of justice; that good has "been the final goal of ill;" and that through testing innocence must have been glorified into virtue—when we shall see that God is love and law is Gospel, and sin has been transformed into righteousness, then shall we also see that "there is one body, and one Spirit, even as also we were called in one hope of our calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is over all, and through all, and in all."

Then shall we see that "unto each one of us was the grace given according to the measure of the gift of Christ;" . . . . and we shall all "attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ;" and

MASONIC BAPTISM.

There are some honest persons who doubt whether Masonry is a religious institution. Of course all who have studied with any reasonable amount of thought, know that it is a religion, Christ-rejecting and man-destroying. Its altars, prayers, priests and prelates prove this beyond the possibility of successful dispute. Among the evidences bearing on the point, is the rite of baptism, which is fully described in the following extract from a Washington paper. The service here referred to took place a number of years ago, but the lesson that thoughtful people should learn from it is not altered by that fact:

The first public Masonic baptism which has ever taken place in the District, was performed last night in the Chapter chamber, Masonic Temple, in the presence of a large number of Masons, their wives and daughters. The children were an infant son of Dr. Joseph W. Nairn, 32-degree, and a son of Mr. G. B. McGrotty, 18-degree, who were baptized in Mithias Lodge of Perfection, Ancient Scottish Rite, which is the consistory of this Masonic jurisdiction. The rite was performed by Thrice Illustrious P. O. M. Albert Pike, assisted by Illustrious J. O. Sinclair, S. G. W., Illustrious L. H. Pike, J. G. W., C. W. Bennett, Grand Orator, M. W. Leland, Master of Ceremonies, B. F. Hedrick, Senior Deacon, C. T. Nutze, Junior Deacon, Rev. Mr. Harris, Chaplain, H. J. Martin, Secretary, J. L. Stoddard, Tyler.

The ceremony of Masonic baptism has always been celebrated in the Ancient and Accepted Scottish order, ... Grand Master Pike gave a short history of the ceremony, saying that it taught neither hatred, intolerance nor revenge. . . . . Soon after the Master of Ceremonies returned, followed by one of his assistants bearing a lighted candlestick, with three lighted candles, one white, one black and one red, forming a triangle. Following were two assistants, one carrying the child of Dr. Nairn—Robert Brice Nairn—on a cushion covered with light blue silk, the other leading the child of Mr McGrotty—Edwin Albert McGrotty—and behind these came the parents of the children and the sponsors. After the third circuit of the room, the procession halted, and the candlestick was placed before the altar, and the children returned to their mothers, who, with the sponsors, took their seats in the center of the room. The Masonic choir then sang, "My soul doth magnify the Lord." . . . After an invocation to the Deity, and music, the children, the parents and sponsors were conducted forward to the altar, on which water, oil and salt were placed. The Master then called the lodge up, descended from his throne, and after a few words addressed to the group, lighted the incense on the altar. After a chant by the choir, the Master took the children severally in his arms, dipped their left hands in a basin of perfumed water, and said, "By this symbol I devote, in each case, thee to the service of virtue and truth. May our Father who is in heaven keep thee innocent and pure in heart, all the days of thy life." The Master then took the vessel of perfumed oil, dipped the little finger of his right hand therein and marked it with a delta on the forehead of each child, saying, "I set upon thy forehead the symbol of wisdom, power and love of God. May he protect thee and guide thee in right courses all the days of thy life," the choir singing in the meantime the chant, "Blessed are the undefiled in the way." . . . . After rising, the Master, taking the vessel of salt in his hands, repeated the Arab vow, which sanctifies the enemy with whom he had tasted salt, and placing a portion of salt on his tongue, said, "With this salt I seal my vow." The vessel was then passed to each brother, who in turn repeated the vow. The children were then invested with the lambskin aprons, and each was presented with a Masonic jewel, the Master saying, "In the name and under the auspices of the Supreme Council I do proclaim these children consecrated to the service of truth and virtue by Masonic baptism and anointing after the ancient custom of Masonry, to be wards of Mithias Lodge of Perfection."

Albert Pike who performed this rite of baptism was the rebel general who brought Indians on to the battlefield at Pea Ridge, to kill and scalp wounded Union soldiers. The writer never saw him, but is credibly informed that he was one of the most profane persons in the District of Columbia. Some time since we called attention to the fact that the lodges in San Francisco have large assembly halls, from which they bury their dead, so they are not under the necessity of calling upon the churches even at the end of life. In this region, while Masons do not generally go to church while living, their friends ordinarily like to have them buried from the church when they are dead. We think that the San Francisco plan is better, and that persons who care nothing for the church when alive, would be consistent if they should not seek the use of its buildings for their funeral occasions. The general lesson taught by all these movements is that the Christian church and the pagan church are active rivals, and will in the end not continue to exist side by side as now, but by the very necessities of the case continue their real and deadly struggle, though silent, until one or the other triumphs.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association assembled in Carpenter Hall at the appointed hour. A letter was read from the president, Rev. J. E. Roy, stating that it was impossible for him to be present. Rev. M. C. Ranseen, the vice-president, was called to preside.

There was a good attendance, and letters of interest were read from members who were unavoidably absent. Reports given and some of the speeches made will be reported to our readers next week. Prayer was offered by Rev William Fenton.

One very pleasant feature of the meeting was the presence of some who have been actively engaged in this reform in years past. Edmond Ronayne, who has lectured extensively and whose books, the "Master's Carpet," etc., are authorities, J. L. Barlow, Mr. M. L. Worcester, and some others who have not been able to attend these meetings of late, were present.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President—Rev. W. G. Moorehead, Xenia, O.

Vice President—Calvin Pritchard.

Secretary and Treasurer—W. I. Phillips.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. M. C. Baker.

Directors—C. A. Blanchard, E. B. Wylie, J. M. Hitchcock, H. F. Kletzing, W. O. Dinius, E. Whipple, Ezra A. Cook, J. A. Collins, T. B. Radabaugh, C. J. Holmes, T. B. Arnold.

After the business was accomplished, an opportunity was given for friends present to express opinions on various phases of the work.

Mr. Ronayne was called, and among other things said: "Freemasonry should not be compared with other secret societies. They are not comparable. Freemasonry is an association of assassins. If Masons carry out their obligations they must assassinate those who reveal the secrets of the order."

Bishop Dillon of Oregon spoke of the utter selfishness of the Masonic order, and endorsed a plan suggested by Mr. Ronayne of forming clubs and of questioning candidates as to their connection with secret societies.

Rev. E. B. Wylie said: "God is rolling upon the pastors of the churches the importance of instructing the young on this important subject. God is at work."

Bishop Wright spoke of those who had under God begun the great work of enlightening the world and ridding it of the evil of secretism, and who have finished their work.

Bro. W. B. Stoddard spoke of the fact that he had not worked on the line of separate organization, but through the church, which is "the pillar and ground of the truth" in the world.

After the minutes of the meeting were approved, and prayer by Bishop Dillon, the Association adjourned.

THE CONFERENCE.

The conference began with a prayer meeting, led by Rev. E. B. Wylie, pastor of the Summerdale church. A fair audience was present, and listened with interest to W B. Stoddard, of Washington, D. C., in a carefully prepared address on the "Religious Character of Freemasonry," and to a practical as well as intensely interesting address on the present "Duty of the Church Respecting Lodges," by Pres. C. A. Blanchard. A partial report of the latter is given in the present issue of the Cynosure.

Thursday morning M. A. Gault presided and Bishop Dillon of Oregon gave an address, "Christ the Light of the World vs. Lodge Darkness," which will be fully reported to our readers next week.

At 2 P. M. the meeting was begun with prayer. W. I. Phillips was appointed moderator. Rev. N. W. Deveneau, a French evangelist of this city, gave an interesting account of how he escaped being entrapped. In conclusion he said: "To me there can be but one course in my ministry, to speak of Masonry as I do of any other sin."

Edmond Ronayne then spoke at length in a very forcible manner on the "Oaths and Death Penalties of Freemasonry."

Mr. M. McNeil, chaplain of "Chicago Sailors' Mission," gave his testimony as to how God had delivered him after being twenty-three years in the lodge, or in his own words, "how he left for Christ's sake.

Mr. John Sutcliffe, of Wheaton, Ill., gave his experience very simply and convincingly. He had been burned out; and was assured that it would help him to become a Mason. His minister was a member; and he at length, though he did not like to subscribe to things which he could not fully understand beforehand, concluded to join. After taking the first two degrees he did not want to go to the lodge again; but the master came over to his home at nine o'clock at night and persuaded, almost compelled him to go and take the third degree. Mr. Sutcliffe said, "I felt guilty. It seemed as if I should lose my soul if I did not get out." The oaths were like a heavy burden on his conscience. He never went again and decided he would drop out. But no; after moving from Wheaton, on his return some years later his dues were demanded. He told the lodge brethren he had left the lodge and would not pay dues. He asked for demit, but the lodge said no, "not until dues are paid." This he felt it would not be right to do. But the lodge bought lumber of Mr. Sutcliffe, who was a lumber dealer, and when he sent his bill they charged lodge dues and refused to pay, but sent him a demit.

A gentleman (a Mason) present was allowed to ask questions. In the evening a short prayer meeting was followed by three addresses: "The Sabbath Question and the Lodge," by M. A. Gault, "Separation," by J. E. Wolfe of Indian Territory, and "My Objections to the Secret Lodge System," by Rev. Samuel H. Swarts. These addresses will be reported in part, at least, in the Cynosure.

THE CHURCH AND THE LODGE.

The following is the abstract of an address given at the St. Paul convention by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College:

Obligation is determined by need, knowledge, and ability. We are not bound to do all good, but only such good as we can do. We are not under obligation to rectify all wrongs, but those which come under our observation, and are within the limits of our power.

The church is related to all forms of social life, and should favor and aid those which are helpful to men, while it antagonizes those which are injurious. The attitude of the church toward lodges should be determined by the character of the lodges. The work of the church should be determined by her power.

We think it entirely safe to say that no evil can prosper in our country without having in some way silenced the Christian church. In other words, we believe that the church has the power to abolish or drive into obscurity every organized evil which affects mankind. This seems to be clear from the very nature of the case. The church, when pure and devoted, is the body of Christ, the representative of God to men. He dwells in her, speaks through her, and providentially co-operates with her. He causes the forces of nature, the work of evil men, and the course of history to labor with her for the extirpation of that which he hates, and for the establishment of that which he approves.

But not only does this truth that the church may rule the world if she will appear from the nature of the case. History seems to teach the same lesson. In our own land the churches have never, but in a single instance, uttered a united testimony against prevailing evil. They never declared as a whole against slavery, until it was abolished. They have not as yet declared against the legalized sale of intoxicating drinks. They have never made a united protest against Sabbath breaking, but they did unite to condemn the opening of the World's Fair on the Lord's day.

God blessed their testimony. Congress heeded it. The directors heeded it, and that Fair was a failure so far as attendance was concerned, until its management voted to respect the will of the church.

We are of the opinion that the same course respecting secret societies, or the liquor trade, would be followed by the same result. These evils live because the churches are willing that they should live. In other words, the churches are indirectly responsible for them, and so long as they continue to neglect obvious duty respecting them, so long they are sharers in the evils which they might but do not remove.

The secret society system is at the present time one of the strongest if not the stongest movement which Satan is directing against the life of the church, life of the state, and the salvation of men. Beginning with the Jesuits, passing through the numberless lodges of all names and kinds, with their varying rituals, and regalia, we find certain principles common to them all. They are secret. They obligate their members to conceal their transactions from the uninitiated, and secrecy has been the badge of evil, ever since Adam and Eve sought to hide themselves, after having sinned. We are never ashamed of our excellencies. We do not seek to conceal them. It is our defects, our sins that we do not mention, that we should be glad to forget. As of the individual, so of the organization, associations of men doing good work for humanity, do not hide themselves, their objects or their motives from the public eye. Combinations of men for lawless and evil purposes always do hide. They are compelled to do so. The success of their efforts depends upon the measure of their secrecy.

That these organizations are rivals of the church, appears to the most casual observer. They profess to teach morals, and in their burial service they plainly intimate that those who heed their moral instructions, and secret obligations, are saved throughout eternity. In almost all of them there is the altar; and what is an altar? From the beginning until now, a place of worship. The altar means nothing but worship. It does not belong to a business house, an insurance company, or a mutual aid society. It belongs to a church.

But these lodge churches differ by the diameter of the universe from the church of Jesus Christ. The latter receives all, the poor and the halt, the maimed, the blind, the man, the woman, the little child. The lodge churches generally receive men, twenty-one years of age, able-bodied, sound in mind, prepared to pay before and after they enter. The church of Jesus Christ requires men to repent of their sins, to acknowledge them, to put them away, and to trust in Jesus Christ for pardon. The lodge church requires none of these things. It requires men to pay money, to go through certain initiatory ceremonies, to take certain obligations, and promises life eternal to those who do these things. In the early dawn of human history, there were reared up two altars side by side. On the one there was a bleeding lamb, image of Jesus Christ, telling of death for sin, and of hope for the sinner, because of that death. On the other, there were corn, wine and oil, fruits of the earth, offerings of gratitude, without confession of sin, or recognition of a sacrifice. Those two altars are in the world to-day. The one is set up wherever Jesus Christ is preached as the sole remedy for man's guilt and sorrow. The other is set up wherever men are taught to hope for righteous living and safe dying, without those two things. Anyone who will study the lodge will see at a glance that the lodge altar is Cain's altar, that the lodge religion is not Christ's religion, that the lodge god is not the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, but is, on the other hand, the god of this world, the power that now works in the children of disobedience.

It follows directly from these premises that it is the duty of the church to enlighten the people respecting this great system, which is now swallowing the money, the time, the thought, and the religious hope of millions of our young men. The church has no right to be silent respecting it, and if she is, is responsible for its continuance, the partner in the deaths of those who die eternally because of it. Women and childen make up more than two-thirds the membership of Christian churches at the present time. Men are as religious naturally as women. It is as natural for them to feel the guilt of sin, the desires for holiness, and the fear of death as for their mothers, sisters, wives and daughters. Yet they are content without the Christian church. They sit on the Sabbath smoking, and reading newspapers, while the women of their households are in church. Their religious natures are satisfied with what they have heard. They believe that in some way or other, they do not exactly know how, they are going to be saved, and so they drift, and drift, and drift, until they pass over and out of sight. It is time for a change. The needs of men require it. God demands it, and with faith in him, and faith in his Word, we should warn men against the deceptive claims of these institutions, and against trusting to their false pretensions for life that now is, and life that is to come.

PERSONAL MENTION.

[We insert this week words of greeting and encouragement which were sent by persons who could not attend the annual meeting. The extracts are short, but will stimulate to greater efforts and more earnest prayers.—ED. CYNOSURE]

—Bro. W. G. Moorehead, Xenia, O.: "I am in sympathy with all Christian efforts to teach the people of God that they are to be separate from all worldly and ensnaring alliances. I am unable to attend the convention."

—Bro. I. R B. Arnold, of the Floating Chapel, writes that he is willing to work up a dozen county and township conventions, commencing early in June, in this State. Friends who would like Bro. Arnold's assistance, please write to the N. C. A. office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

—J. K. Alwood, Morenci, Michigan, sent greetings to the annual meeting as follows: "Dear brethren in Christ:—Grace, love and peace from our Saviour Jesus Christ on you all, and on your holy cause evermore. Glad to be remembered by and numbered with true reformers."

—Bro. John Dorcas, who was detained by affliction in his family, writes: "It is my desire to be a member of the National Christian Association while I live, whether I can be present at the annual meetings or not. Hoping you will count me worthy of this relationship and praying that the spirit of the Divine Master may be manifestly present with you in all deliberations, and that the divine benediction may rest upon your labors in this reform in church and state, I am, as ever, your co-laborer and brother in Christ.

—J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn., writes: "It would give me much pleasure to meet with the brethren on said occasion, and enjoy a free interchange of views regarding the best way to stem the tide of iniquities now rolling in like a flood upon the whole body politic, even threatening to deceive and drown the very elect. Ofttimes are not the efforts of the various church societies of young people so perverted that a large number of their members are led to believe they are performing works of merit, and thus to ignore the necessity of the blood of Christ. That God may be honored at your meeting in the transaction of business which shall redound to his glory and the dispelling of darkness, is the prayer of your brother in Christ."

Abbey, pastor of the Baptist church, is not indifferent to the dangers from secret societies. He has members who sympathize with him, and has spoken against them from his pulpit. Bro. J. A. Wright and his wife, of the Free Methodist, refreshed and encouraged me much by their counsels and prayers.

Rev. Davenport, M. E. pastor, expressed great surprise that President Smith should allow the attention of the students to be called to the subject, and as I, not having been a Mason, knew nothing about it, he had no time talk on the subject. Dr. Jackson, who is just moving into the city as pastor of the Congregational church, was not accessable; but his nephew, Dr. Joseph W. Jackson, informed me that he was himself "a 7-degree Mason; that his father belonged to the 33 degree Scottish rite, and that I had better keep clear of the Jacksons if I was opposing secret societies." I was told, afterwards, that the young Dr. was "of a rather excitable temperament." I learned of one Covenanter, Bro. John Taylor, and hope to see him later. Spoke to the Christian people here last evening, and shall probably worship with them on Sabbath. JAMES P. STODDARD.

"The Blue Degrees are but the outer court of the Temple. Part of the symbols are displayed there to the initiate, but he is intentionally misled by false interpretations. It is not intended that he shall understand them, but it is intended that he shall imagine that he does understand them. Their true explanation is reserved for the Princes of Masonry."—Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, in "Morals and Dogma," page 819.

STERLING TESTIMONIES.

JAMES G. BIRNEY, Candidate of the Liberty Party for President, was a Freemason, "but never entered a lodge after he joined the church, and, as his sons grew up, he cautioned them against joining any secret order."—Gen. Wm. Birney.

DISRAELI, LORD BEACONSFIELD: "In conducting the governments of the world there are not only sovereigns and ministers, but secret orders to be considered, which have agents everywhere—reckless agents, who countenance assassination, and, if necessary, can produce a massacre."

CHARLES SUMNER, in a Letter to Samuel D. Greene: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it."

A. M. SULLIVAN, Irish Leader: "I had not studied in vain the history of secret, oath-bound associations. I regard them with horror. I knew all that could be said as to their advantages in revolutionizing a country, but even in the firmest and best of hands they had a direct tendency to demoralization, and are often on the whole more perilous to society than open tyranny."

HORACE GREELEY: "Many persons were brought to trial on account of the murder of Morgan, but no one was judicially found guilty of murder. It was established by seceding Masons that the oaths—at least in some of the highest degrees—that were administered, and taken by those admitted to Masonic lodges, disqualified them from serving as jurors in any case where a brother Mason of like degree was a party, and his antagonist was not."

JOSEPH RITNER, Governor of Pennsylvania, 1837: "If it be true as the lamented Colden (himself one of the initiated) declared, that many a Mason became a great man but no great man ever became a Mason, how nearly does it concern the youth of our country to pause and reflect before they commit their present standing and future reputation to the keeping of a society, which for its cold-hearted and selfish purposes could immolate even the fame of Washington at the shrine of its abominations."

RICHARD RUSH: "Hooker, personifying law, eloquently exclaims, 'her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world; everything on earth does her homage, the highest as not beyond her control, the least as claiming her protection.' Masonry has overset this primordial system. She has dethroned this image of God upon earth. To reinstate it over so insolent a victor, we must have a political organization. There is no other way of assaulting, there is no other hope of vanquishing, there need be no other dream of humbling such a foe. It fights with desperation."

HON. EDWARD BLAKE, Leader in Canadian Parliament, in a Debate, March, 1884: "I am not in favor of State recognition of any secret societies. I have never joined one, though many of my best friends are members of secret societies. But I believe the tendency of secrecy itself to be injurious. I believe that it brings with it the possibility of evil; I believe that it involves a certain amount of sacrifice of individuality and independence, and gives very great facilities for the misleading of members by designing leaders—very great and mischievous facilities for that purpose." "I believe that a great deal of the trouble, social and political, that has occurred in those countries [Europe and America] is due to secret societies."

JOHN ADAMS: "The use of my father's name for the purpose of which Mr. Sheppard would now apply it, is an injury to his memory, which I deem it my duty, as far as may be in my power, to redress. . . . While Mr. Gridley lived, he was the intimate friend, personal and professional, of my father. He died in 1767. My father often resorted to him for friendly counsel, and, as he was Grand Master of the lodge, once asked his advice, whether it was worth his while to become a member of the society. In the candor of friendship, Mr. Gridley answered him—NO,—adding that by aggregation to the society a young man might acquire a little artificial support but that he did not need it, and that there was nothing in the Masonic institution worthy of his seeking to be associated with it. So said at that time the Grand Master of the Massachusetts Masons, Jeremy Gridley; and such I have repeatedly heard my father say, was the reason why he never joined the lodge. The use of the name of Washington, to give an odor of sanctity to the institution as it now stands exposed to the world, is in my opinion as unwarrantable as that of my father's name."—Letter of John Quincy Adams, Aug. 22, 1831.

PLEASURES OF SIN.

THEY ARE LIKE WATER IN A BROKEN CISTERN.

Madison C. Peters Says Fast Life Is a Negative Quantity—"Sowing Wild Oats" Is the Devil's Maxim—Vain Regrets of Ill Spent Lives.

Fast life, taken at its best, what is it worth? Its value is what mathematicians would call a negative quantity; it has the minus sign before it. In the equation of life it does not add to, but rather subtracts from, the sum total of your happiness and leaves you less truly yourself than you were before you enjoyed it.

The pleasures of sin are short lived. In the expressive symbolism of the Bible they are like water in a broken cistern which speedily runs out, or like the blaze of thorns which crackle and flame up for a little and then die down into a heap of ashes, and the experience of all who have indulged in them will corroborate these statements. There is in them at best only a temporary thrill which vibrates for a moment and needs to be reproduced again and again. They are not joys forever. The pleasure of iniquity in any form is confined to the moment of indulgence in it. "You have to manufacture it anew on every occasion, and you can only recall the enjoyment by repeating the sin, and with repetition the same discovery of the fleeting nature of the joy is made. It is not a fountain sending ever forth its sparkling waters, but it is a leaky pitcher, which is empty before we can drink out even that which it first contained." Lest you may think I am straining my very utmost to make out a case because it is my business as a preacher to talk morality, and so representing the matter unfairly, I would have you listen to other testimonies whose bitter personal experiences may add weight to my opinions. Listen to Robert Burns, whose testimony I give in lines which are not more exquisitely beautiful than they are strictly true:

Pleasures are like poppies spread—
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snowfall in the river—
A moment white, then melts forever;
Or like the borealis race
That flit ere you can point the place;
Or like the rainbow's lovely form
Vanishing amidst the storm.

Burns had indulged in the pleasures of sin. He had taken from them all they had to give, and yet this is his testimony regarding them. But why need I call up the shade of that gifted poet here? I make my appeal to yourselves. Have you got that amount of pleasure out of sin which you expected from it when you began to yield to it?

Over every sinful pleasure you may write the Lord's own words, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again." Ask that brilliant courtier, Lord Chesterfield, and he will tell you: "I have enjoyed all the pleasures of this world, and I do not regret their loss. I have been behind the scenes, I have seen all the coarse pulleys and dirty ropes which move the gaudy machines, and I have seen and smelled the tallow candles which illuminate the whole decorations, to the astonishment of an ignorant audience." Ask the dazzling wit, faint with a glut of glory, yet disgusted with the creatures who adored him, Voltaire, and he condenses the essence of his existence into one word, "ennui." Ask Byron, and we will be answered with an imprecation by that splendid genius who

Drank every cup of joy, heard every trump
Of fame; drank early, deeply drank, drank drafts
That common millions might have quenched, then died
Of thirst, because there was no more to drink.

Sowing Wild Oats.

In all the range of accepted American maxims there is none that, take it all in all, is more thoroughly abominable than the common one that "a young man must sow his wild oats." Look at it on which side you will, and I defy you to make anything but a devil's maxim out of it. The only thing to do with wild oats is to put them carefully into the hottest part of the fire and get them burned to dust, every one of them. If you sow them, no matter in what ground, up they will come with long, tough roots, luxuriant stalks and leaves, and as sure as there is a sun in heaven a crop will follow which turns one's heart cold to think of. The botanical definition of wild oats is: "A species of oat remarkable for the length of time the grain will lie in the soil and retain its vegetative powers. Where it abounds naturally it is an inveterate weed." There is a popular delusion that after a little while those who have sown wild oats will settle down to steady habits, and that they are more likely to make better men for having sown wild oats. The prevalence of these notions has ruined thousands. It is a monstrous impeachment of God's wisdom. "Whatsoever a man soweth that also shall he reap."

The Mystery of Sin.

There is a deep and awful mystery in the downward progress of a soul, when he who was once master of sin becomes the slave of sin. Alas, there are scores of men who would give all they have to begin life over again. There was a time when they never intended to be vicious, but step by step they lowered themselves; shame, truth and self respect died. The lower elements of their nature first were freely indulged, then became importunate, then exacting, then domineering, then uncontrollable. I have seen young men in the envenomed chains of disease, compared to what are hot pinchers? There is no inquisition so bad as that which the doctors have to look upon. In the words of Shakespeare they might say, "But that I am forbidden to tell the secrets of this prison house, I could a tale unfold whose lightest word would harrow up your soul." You know young men who have suffered worse pangs than ever savage produced at the stake.

Independence.

Let your boy wait upon himself as much as possible. The more he has to depend upon himself the more manly a little fellow he will show himself. Self dependence will call out his energies, bring into exercise his talents. Pythagoras says, "Ability and necessity dwell near each other." It is not in the hothouse, but on the rugged Alpine cliffs, where the storms beat most violently, that the toughest plants grow. So is it with man. The wisest charity is to help a boy to help himself. Let him never hear any language but this, "You have your own way to make, and it depends on your own exertion whether you starve or live."

Perseverance.

Lucky for the boy who can say, "In the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail." Out upon weathercock men, who change with every wind! Give us men like mountains, who change the winds. You cannot at one dash fly into eminence. You must hammer it out by steady and rugged blows. A man can get what he wants if he pays the price—persistent, plodding, perseverance. Never doubt the result. Victory will be yours. There may be ways to fortune shorter than the old, dusty highway, but the stanch men in the community all go on this road. If you want to do anything, don't stand back shivering and thinking of the cold. Jump in and scramble through. Push and pull.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 19.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The story of Pilate and its warnings.—Math. xxvii, 17-26.

Pontius Pilato was the sixth Roman governor of Judæa. He was appointed A. D. 25-76 in the twelfth year of Tiberius and reigned until A. D. 36. The principal event of his life was his relation to the trial, condemnation and execution of the Lord Jesus Christ, and it is from this standpoint that we are to study his life and its warnings.

1. Pilate's life warns us against moral cowardice. Pilate was not a physical coward. He was a brave soldier on the field of battle, but he was a moral coward. He was afraid to do right in the face of the possibility of losing the political position that he occupied if he did it. He knew Christ was innocent. He acknowledged it, for he said, "I have found no fault in Him," and yet when the Jews charged that he would not be Cæsar's friend if he set Christ free he yielded to his fear of man and delivered Christ to be crucified. Yet this did not save him from political disaster. Through difficulty with the Samaritans he was sent to Rome to answer charges against him and lost his kingdom and is said afterward to have taken his own life. This is a terrible warning against moral cowardice. We should never fear to say no to evil. We should never fear to do right. Our only fear should be to do what is wrong in the sight of God.

2. Pilate's life warns us against trying to shift our responsibilities upon others. When Pilate heard that Jesus was a Galileean, he sent Him to Herod of Galilee, thinking that He would place the responsibility upon Herod of condemning or acquitting Him, but Herod returned Him. When at last Pilate consented to release Jesus, he took water and washed his hands, as if to cleanse himself of the guilt of Christ's blood, and said to the Jews: "I am innocent of the blood of this just person. See ye to it." But all the water in Christendom would not have cleansed Pilate's hands. He was the ruler and not the people. He was the judge and not they. Although so willing to have His blood upon their heads, they could not take Pilate's guilt upon them. We are every one individually responsible to God for our actions. We cannot place this responsibility upon any one else. Each one must answer for himself, and himself alone, to God. What a solemn thought! Individually responsible to God!

3. Pilate's life warns us against rejecting Christ. Christ stood before Pilate, but the day is coming when Pilate will stand before Christ, and it were better for him if he had never been born. Christ now stands before us, but soon we will stand before Christ. What are you doing with Jesus, the King of the Jews? Answer for eternity.

Bible Readings.—Isa. xiv, 12-16; Prov. xxix, 25; Eccl. xii, 13; Math. xviii, 1-4; xxvii, 22; Mark viii, 35-37; Luke xxiii, 5-7; John xii, 25; xix, 12, 13; Acts iv, 18, 19; v, 27-29; Rom. xii, 2, 10; xiv, 12; I John ii, 15-17.

Where Heaven Is.

Where the good man stands with his eye on God is heaven. Where the wicked man cowers is hell. No longer joy gilds the guilt, and misery no longer vexes the goodness. The setting free of joy and sorrow from their long unnatural attachments to seek their fitness of character—that is the coming in of the King; that is the judgment day.—Phillips Brooks.

Proverbs.

Sleep much, weep much.

Unbridled passions bridle the soul.

The secret of popularity is personality.

Fallen man's only hope is a risen Christ.

The Christian's sole aim should be a soul aim.

Until we are willing to pray we cannot be ready to work.

Sin lions cannot hurt the man who lives close by the Lamb.

The weak kneed Christian is the one who seldom exercises his knees.

Open hearts, with closed purses, satisfy no neighbor's hunger.

The fires of ambition often end only in smoke, and cigarette smoke at that.—W. T. Ellis.

Social Obligations.

Christian Endeavor has a social side. It assumes social obligations, and it exerts a social influence. The chief end of Christian Endeavor is not the discharge of social duties, and this is not the most important business of the society. This should be borne in mind. But when this is said it remains that the social obligations of the Endeavor society are of great importance. One of the important committees is that which has charge of the social work of the society. The extending of social courtesies to individuals and the providing of social entertainment for the members and their friends may exert a very important influence upon the popularity and efficiency of the society. Recreation and amusement are a want of our nature. Especially is this true of young people. Moreover, it is right and fit that Endeavorers should act in concert in providing for this want. It is well that the society as an organization should, in a degree at least, give direction to the social life of the members.—National Presbyterian.

True Christian Endeavor.

In one Christian Endeavor society of Australia was a young lady who offered herself to the mission field. The missionary board of her denomination was not financially able to send her out, but her Christian Endeavor society at once took up the matter, fixed upon an annual contribution that they themselves would make and canvassed the church for the remainder, so that now they have guaranteed her permanent support.—Golden Rule.

As God Wills.

We can all be servants of God wherever our lot is cast, but He gives us different sorts of work, according as He fits us for it, and calls us to it.—Beacon.

Christian Endeavor Jottings.

The Epworth league meets in international conference in Chattanooga June 27-30.

Missions! Missions!! Missions!!! These are the words that we hear growing louder and louder as the time for the Boston convention draws near. Boston, '95, is to be first and foremost a missionary gathering.

The Hawaiian Islands report several flourishing Christian Endeavor societies that know no revolution from the steady march of Christian progress. It seems as if "every kindred, every tribe," could praise God for the Christian Endeavor movement.

A Lima (N. Y.) society finds an "antigossip pledge" conducive to the spirituality of the members.

Woman's Courtesy Title.

The use of the term "lady" is plainly courteous, writes Margaret Deland in "When Lady, When Woman," in The Ladies' Home Journal. Even when the street car conductor cautions us, "Don't get off, lady, till the car stops," or the cash girl wails at us, "Here's your change, lady," and we feel half impatient and half amused, we hardly know why, even then, we do realize, I think, and appreciate, that it is meant courteously. "Woman, here's your change," would be distinctly unpleasant, even though strictly true and not meant to be impolite.

There is, however, another term which is coming more and more into use, which saves us either of these extremes. I mean the old, dignified, noncommittal word, "madam." "A conventional term of address," the dictionary declares it to be, "to women of any degree."

Connecticut Women Voters.

Connecticut women have taken in many towns a lively interest in the school election. In Bridgeport alone more than 3,000 women voted, and their efforts were crowned with success. Wherever there was any contest in choice of school committee, women very generally registered and voted.

Mrs. Beecher.

During the discussion on woman suffrage at the recent Utah constitutional convention the following extract from a letter written by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher was read: "My life has always been a busy one, with no time and less inclination to allow the question of 'woman's rights,' or 'woman's sphere,' in connection with public affairs, to disturb me. My own legitimate sphere in past years has been larger than I have been able to fill to my own satisfaction, and, as to woman's rights, I have always had more than I could attend to and would have at any time willingly sunplied those women who find time hang heavily on their hands for lack of more outside public right."

Little Alice's Good Night.

Little Alice never liked to go to bed. She made many excuses for this dislike. One night she was fussing a little as usual. "Oh, mamma," she said, "I feel so lonesome!"

"Suppose," said mamma, "you think about the pretty, bright stars. They are shining so brightly. There is one almost opposite your window, just over the roof of papa's office."

"Let me see," cried Alice, running to the window. "Mamma, I am going to choose that brightest one for my own."

"Very well, dear," said mamma.

Every night after this for some years before jumping into her little bed Alice went to the window, lifted the curtain and bade one star good night. She had a verse she used to say:

Good night, little star.
I go to my bed.
I leave you to shine
While I lay down my head
On my pillow to rest
Until morning light,
When you will be fading
And I shall be bright.

If the nights were cloudy and Alice could not see any star, she said the verse just the same, for she thought the stars were shining somewhere behind the clouds. After this she said no more about being lonesome, but went happily to bed.—Youth's Companion.

The Clock's Face.

One of the questions that the sharp eyed boy or girl is sure to ask is, Why isn't the hour of 4 on a clock's face put IV instead of four ones, thus, IIII? The reason for it is said to be that away back in the time of Charles V of France, who reigned in the latter half of the fourteenth century, when the first clock was made, its maker, Henry Vick, was commanded to bring it before the king. He did so, and the king was very well pleased with it, watching the works with much interest. But he said finally, "You have got the figures on the dial wrong."

"I think not, your majesty," replied the clockmaker.

"Yes. That four should be four ones."

"Surely not, your majesty," urged the man again.

"Yes, it should be four ones," insisted the king.

"You are wrong," once more said Vick, which made the king very angry.

"I am never wrong," he cried. "Take it away and correct the mistake." The poor clockmaker could only obey, and the blunder of the king has come all the way down to us, for all clocks have been so marked ever since.

His Facts.

A teacher requested her pupils to bring in three items of information about the neighboring river that they could prove to be facts, and one little fellow contributed the following: "I have lived near it. I have sailed over it. I have fallen into it."—New York Tribune.

"What Can We Do?"

Oh, what can we do, my brothers,
To speed the cause along?
We can speak a word to others;
We can cheer them with a song;
We can give them hearty greeting;
We can shake them by the hand;
We can bring them to the meeting;
We can help them firmly stand.

Oh, what can we do, my brothers,
To haste the longed for day
When the weeping babes and mothers
Shall wipe their tears away?
We can sow the seed and reap it;
We can help the sad hearts sing;
We can sign the pledge and keep it
In the strength of Christ our king.
—Church Monthly.

Fermented Liquors Dangerous.

The Danish Temperance society, with the consent of the education department of the government, has sent copies of an admirable book on alcoholics designed to assist the work of the school in promoting temperance to all teachers. This work clearly shows the danger of the weaker fermented liquors as well as the distilled spirits and the fallacy of alcohol as a remedial agency.—Exchange.

Never Hanged a Teetotaler.

Berry, the English hangman, while lecturing at Grimsby recently, said that during his term of office he had conducted over 500 executions. A great many of the crimes were caused by drink; but, he added emphatically, "I have never hanged a teetotaler." This is another evidence of the righteousness and virtue of total abstinence.—Selected.

Drunkards Are Punished In Normandy.

Normandy's law against intoxication is that on the third conviction for public drunkenness the offender is liable to the following: 1. Loss of his vote. 2. May not be voted for. 3. May not serve on a jury. 4. May not exercise any administrative faculty, such as acting as executor of a will. 5. Loses the right to carry arms.

Inebriates Can't Get Married.

In Waldeck, a little German principality, a decree has been proclaimed that a license to marry will not be granted to any individual who has the habit of getting drunk, and if one who has been a drunkard applies for such license he must produce sufficient proof of reformation to warrant his receiving it.

A BRAVE LITTLE JAPANESE.

Would Not Break His Promise When Ordered to Drink by His General.

A little Japanese lad was engaged on the occasion of a special ceremony in the army to pour out the wine, and on being asked at the close by the general in chief to take a drink himself, as he must be tired and in need of something refreshing, the little fellow said he didn't care for any. The general thought this strange and urged him to take some anyway, as it would be good for his health, even though he disliked it. But our temperance youth persisted that he didn't want any. This somewhat vexed the officer, to find any one connected with the army guilty of disobeying his orders, and he said rather roughly to the lad, "Well, if you won't do as I say, you never can become a soldier in the army."

One of the lower officers who was standing by and heard the conversation laughed and came up to the boy and asked him why he was so disrespectful to the general, threatening that if he persisted in such insubordination he would cut him down with his sword. (This was in old feudal days.) The brave little fellow, with tears in his eyes, said he could not drink, even if he had to disobey the general's order, and, in fact, he did not think it was necessary for a soldier to obey such orders. His own (the boy's) father, he said, had lost his life through drinking "sake," and when he left home he solemnly promised his mother that he would never taste "sake," and he felt he must keep his word. The officer and the general were so filled with admiration at the boy's simple firmness that they, from that time, showed him special kindness, and it is said that the boy became one of the most trusted officers in the army.—Christian Herald.

WORKSHOPS AND DRINK.

Toiling In Unwholesome Rooms a Fruitful Cause of Drunkenness.

Writing upon workshops and drink, The Hospital says: In the first place it ought to be demonstrated whether drunkenness is or is not actually a product of the modern workshop, and it should be demonstrated by facts and concrete evidence, not alone by arguments addressed to the understanding of that limited class who have had the advantage of an elementary scientific training. Next it ought to be shown, and still by undeniable facts, not by general reasons of an abstract or specialized character, what is the extent of the drunkenness, what is the approximate number of drunkards who can be proved to be annually manufactured by unhealthy workshops.

Thus we should get a complete picture of the whole deadly circumstances of the case, and we should be able to go to the legislature and say so many tens of thousands of our toiling industrial classes are made drunkards annually by unwholesome workshops; so many in consequence are annually consigned to premature graves, and so many tens of thousands of widows and orphans are thus thrown annually upon public charity or upon the rates. This ought not to be. It must not be. The state has the power to decree that the creators and utilizers of factories and workshops shall make their factories and workshops healthy. They shall make them healthy, or they shall not make them or utilize them at all.

Better Burn the Money.

The use of intoxicating liquor brings no benefit whatever to him that uses it, but how much money is constantly spent for it by the workingman! I know the need he has for these dollars, and yet in the country at large the amount spent yearly is simply appalling. How many would be in comfortable circumstances but for this money spent in drink! Far better indeed did they burn the sums. The saloon keeper is the hardest taskmaster. The moment people take the pledge they learn the value of money and afterward learn to work for themselves and not the saloon keeper.—Archbishop Ireland.

Liquor Drinking In Finland.

Finland long ago decreed local option, and under its enforcement the country has changed from being given over to drink to a condition of practical total abstinence. It was supposed in other times that in cold countries it was absolutely necessary to take spirits, but that fallacy which fed the liquor traffic has been put away, with many others of similar character. Indeed science and invention have been the two worst foes of the drink delusion.—Christian Work.

Dangers of the Drink Traffic.

In addressing a recent public meeting in Glasgow Premier Rosebery said: "We know how much of crime and how much of all the evils of civilization are to be traced to drink. And there is this further danger in this question. I see it coming in that shape, nearer and nearer, that, owing to the enormous influence wielded, directly or indirectly, by those who are concerned in upholding the drink traffic, we are approaching a condition of things perilously near the corruption of our political system."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 26.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xv, 22-37—Memory Verses, 25-27—Golden Text, Rom. v, 8—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

22. "And they bring Him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull." After Pilate scourged Him and delivered Him to their cruel pleasure the soldiers crowned Him with thorns, smote Him and did spit on Him, mockingly bowed their knees to Him and finally led Him out to crucify Him. Think on these things until you see Him bearing all that for you and your whole heart cries out, "I am Thine, O Lord!" Then cheerfully, not by compulsion, like Simon the Cyrenian, bear the cross after Him (verses 16-21). Happy Simon! Blessed burden! But where was Simon Peter?

23. "And they gave to drink wine mingled with myrrh, but He received it not." On the way to Calvary He spoke to the weeping ones of the coming days of sorrow because of this national rejection of Him. To reject Christ brings unutterable misery. Matthew, Mark and John call the place of crucifixion Golgotha. Luke alone calls it Calvary. In Rev. xi, 8, it is spoken of as a part of the great city where our Lord was crucified. See in the wine and myrrh (compare Math. xxvii, 34) a fulfillment of Ps. lxix, 21. But He would not accept it.

24. See in this verse a literal fulfillment of Ps. xxii, 18, for every detail of His humiliation and sufferings was accurately foretold and fulfilled to the letter. So shall it be also with every detail of the predictions concerning His coming again. As He would not be stupefied by the drink offered to Him, may we not shrink from suffering with Him this little while.

25. "And it was the third hour, and they crucified Him." About 9 a. m. He endured the agony of having both hands and feet pierced with the cruel nails (Ps. xxii, 16). He was the fulfillment of all the sacrifices that had ever been offered at that morning hour. Naked that he might be clothed: a king, yet not a thread of the trappings of earth's glory; all for us.

26. Over the cross by Pilate's orders there was written in Hebrew and Greek and Latin (the three languages which represented all the world), "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews," and Pilate would not alter it, though the chief priests asked him to (John xix, 19-22). It was a title which was, and will yet be manifest to be, of interest to all the world. Are you interested now on the line of Isa. lxii, 6, 7? See R. V.

27. Two evildoers were crucified with Him and He in the midst (John xix, 18). He could not choose His company any more than Joseph could in the prison, but He could glorify God even under such circumstances, and He did. Even these were such as He would choose to save, and for just such He was then dying. It is a faithful saying that He came into the world to save sinners (I Tim. i, 15).

28. Long years before it was written concerning Him, "And He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. liii, 12), and here was part of the fulfillment. In His lifetime, while going about doing good, He was told that he had a devil and that He was a glutton and winebibber (John viii, 52; Luke vii, 34).

29. The passersby could not let Him alone, but railed on Him and perverted His words and repeated some of the very words which satan used in the temptation, "If Thou be the Son of God" (Math. iv, 3; xxvii, 40). It looks as if all the dogs of hell were let loose upon Him (Ps. xxii, 16), yet He meekly bore it all and answered not.

30. "Save thyself and come down from the cross." On one occasion Simon Peter told Him to pity Himself, but He told Simon that that was satan talking through him and added that there was no way for Him or for His followers but by the cross (Math. xvi, 22-24, margin).

31. "He saved others; Himself he cannot save." Thus said the chief priests, and they said better than they intended, for He could not save Himself and us, but He chose not to save Himself that He might save us. As to His being unable to save Himself if He wished to, that of course was a lie, for His own testimony was as to His life, "No man taketh it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself" (John x, 18). See our privilege in I John iii, 16.

32. They mockingly called Him "King of Israel," and said that if He would descend from the cross they would believe on Him. Contrast the testimony of Nathanael to His being "King of Israel" and his reception of Him (John i, 49). Even the thieves reviled Him, although one of them afterward believed and was saved. Between people and priests and soldiers and thieves it was surely mountains of mockery, and no follower of His seemed bold enough to comfort Him with a word of loyalty to Him.

33. Even the sun refused to shine on such a scene, and for three hours there was great darkness. We think of the darkness of Gen. i, 2, and Ex. x, 21, 22, and the outer darkness of Math. xxv, 30; Judg. xiii, but the darkness of our lesson was unique. Never in all earth's history was there or will there be again just such a day. It was the Creator of all things suffering for His creatures that He might redeem them from destruction.

34. After six hours on the cross He cried out in the words of Ps. xxii, 1, forsaken of His Father for our sins, for He was made sin for us (II Cor. v, 21). See His seven sayings from the cross in Luke xxiii, 34, 43; John xix, 27; Math. xxvii, 46; John xix, 28, 30; Luke xxiii, 46. Mark gives but this one, for in this gospel Jesus is peculiarly the suffering servant. He was forsaken for us that we might never be forsaken, even as it is written, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee" (Heb. xiii, 5).

35. "Behold He calleth Elias." So thought some of the standers by. They understood neither Him nor His words, and it is even so still. He had at one time to say to His disciples, "How is it that ye do not understand?" (Mark viii, 21.) And it was but a few hours before that he had said to Philip, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?" (John xiv, 9.)

36. As one ran to give Him drink, probably because of His cry, "I thirst" (John xix, 28), another hard heart said, "Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take Him down." They could not understand one willing to die if He had power to save Himself. They were believers of satan's doctrine, "All that a man hath will he give for his life" (Job ii, 4).

37. "And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost." Notice also the loud voice of verse 34. He was in His full strength, but died of a broken heart, as was foretold in Ps. lxix, 20, and manifest in John xix, 34. So it was finished, and commending His spirit to God (Luke xxiii, 46) He died. Compare Acts vii, 59, and believe that "absent from the body" means "present with the Lord" (II Cor. v, 8) if only we are redeemed by His blood.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, May 7.—There was no quorum in the senate. The senate advanced several bills on the calendar and adjourned. About sixty members were present in the house. A number of petitions favoring the passage of Merriam's "anti-Catholic" bill were presented. All the house bills on the order of first reading were advanced to second and the house adjourned.

SPRINGFIELD, May 8.—Several bills were advanced by the senate, and then the Siegel, Cooper & Co. case came up. It was finally decided that Frank H. Cooper be required to state how much business his firm did last year, the vote being a tie and the presiding officer (Gill) voting aye. Cooper refused to answer, and was given into the custody of the sergeant-at-arms, who says he will not put him in jail unless the legislature passes an indemnity resolution. In the house the question of adjournment was postponed for a week. Many members expect to be in session later than June 15. A number of bills were advanced.

SPRINGFIELD, May 9.—Fitspatriok in the senate called for the ayes and, noes when the chair decided there was no question before the senate and refused to recognize him. Fitzpatrick refused to take his seat until the chair ordered the sergeant-at-arms to seat the senator, when he sat down denouncing Gill's ruling. The only legislation done was the advancement of a few bills. The house killed the bill making train robbery a capital offense on the plea that it was really aimed at strikers. The senate committee on charges that distillery and brewery slops were unfit for cattle feed reported sustaining the charge and asking prohibitive legislation.

SPRINGFIELD, May 10.—The senate defeated a resolution ordering Frank H. Cooper incarcerated in the jail here until he agrees to reply to questions as to the business of Seigel, Cooper & Co., of Chicago. The bill regulating child labor was referred to the appropriations committee. The Littler bill to repeal the trust law was defeated, but reconsideration moved. The bill providing that counties shall pay for treatment of habitual indigent drunkards passed. The house adopted the resolution to submit to the people a constitutional amendment so that three proposed amendments can be submitted at the same time. The revenue bill was discussed.

SPRINGFIELD, May 11.—The Illinois legislature has taken its regular three-days weekly rest. The senate made the reconsideration of the Cooper contempt case special order for next Wednesday, and did little else. The house passed appropriations as follows: 98,000 for the blind asylum at Jacksonville, $309,500 for the Quincy Soldiers' home, $107,000 for the Normal Soldiers' Orphans' home, $302,000 for the Elgin insane hospital, $216,000 for the deaf and dumb asylum at Jacksonville and $158,000 for the asylum for feeble minded children at Lincoln. The revenue bill was postponed to next Thursday and a number of bills advanced, including that for pensions for retired school teachers.

Good Wheat Crop in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, May 11.—The state board of agriculture gives out the following crop report from the state at large to date: Indications for a large crop of cereals are most favorable. Wheat is making fair growth and slightly below the average. Northern Illinois shows 88 per cent. of average; central and southern Illinois show 92 per cent. average; but 4 per cent. of the area seeded was winter killed. The area left for harvest is less than last year, being about 1,800,000 acres.

Silver Conference for Iowa.

DES MOINES, May 13.—A call has been issued for a silver conference to meet here June 6. The call is a 16-to-1 document and declares that the Democratic platform of 1892 is being falsely construed by a minority of the party. The call favors the "restoration of silver to its rightful place * * * as it was prior to the surreptitious demonetization * * * in 1873." Among the signers are ex-Lieutenant Governor Bestow and the editors of eight Iowa papers, including the Charlton Democrat, Ottumwa Sun and Creston Advertiser.

Swore Falsely to His Circulation.

ELDORA, Ia., May 13.—The Hardin county grand jury has found a bill against W. A. K. Campbell, ex-editor of The Ledger, for malicious and willful perjury. Campbell obtained the county printing last January by making oath that The Ledger had 1,024 bona fide subscribers, when it was afterwards found that he had but 600 or 700.

Iowa Women's Clubs.

CEDAR RAPIDS, May 10 —The Iowa Federation of Women's clubs devoted the day to listening to papers by delegates on various subjects. Dubuque was chosen as the place for the next biennial convention and the following officers elected: Mrs. Anna Belknap Howe, Marshalltown, president; Mrs. W. H. Bailey, Des Moines, secretary.

Death of a Prominent Veteran.

QUINCY, Ills., May 7.—Colonel William W. Berry, past department commander through the war of the Louisville Legion, which gave birth to the Army of the Cumberland, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home here. He was born in Maryland fifty-eight years ago.

PURE BLOOD

Is absolutely necessary in order to have good health. The greatest affliction of the human race is impure blood.

There are about 2400 disorders incident to the human frame, the large majority arising from the impure or poisonous condition of the blood.

The best remedy for all blood diseases is found in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Its remarkable cures are its loudest praise. It is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

No remedy has ever had so marked success, or won such enormous sales.

Scrofula in its severest forms yields to its potent powers; blood poisoning and salt rheum and many other diseases are permanently cured by it. For a general Spring Medicine to remove those impurities which have accumulated during the winter, or to overcome That Tired Feeling, nothing equals Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!
"A Prisoner of Hope."

COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.
Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident. In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

THE QUESTION OF THE SENATORSHIP FROM DELAWARE.

The State Legislature Having Adjourned Without an Unquestioned Election—Addicks the Real Victor — Republicans Claim That Dupont Received the Necessary Vote and Declare Him Senator.

DOVER, Del., May 10.—The general assembly of Delaware adjourned sine die at 8 o'clock yesterday afternoon without choosing a successor to ex-Senator Higgins, although the Republicans claim that their leading candidate, Colonel Henry A. Dupont, was legally elected. The matter will probably be taken to the United States senate for a decision. The 211th ballot since the deadlock began four months ago, and the last of the session, was taken a few minutes before 3 o'clock. It resulted: Henry A. Dupont, Rep., 15; J. Edward Addicks, Rep., 4; Edward Ridgeley, Dem., 9; Tunnel, Dem., 1. During the day the Democrats filibustered with the object of preventing balloting, and when the state house clock rang out the hour of three and sounded the death knell of the legislative session of 1895 the clerk was in the midst of a roll call on a dilatory motion made by a Democrat.

Formal Declaration of Dupont.

As soon as Governor Watson (Dem.) who—by reason of the fact that he was speaker of the senate before his elevation to the gubernatorial chair upon the death of Governor Marvil—presided over the joint session, announced the sine die adjournment Speaker of the House McMullin (Rep.) arose and formally declared Henry A. Dupont elected United States senator. This action had previously been agreed upon by the Republican leaders. The Delaware legislature is composed of twenty-one representatives and nine senators, sixteen being a majority on joint ballot. The Republicans claim that when Watson, by virtue of his position as speaker of the senate, succeeded to the governorship upon the death of Governor Marvil one month ago, the number of senators was reduced to eight, and therefore there were only twenty-nine on joint ballot, and that fifteen votes constituted a majority.

Democrats Take Another View.

On the other hand the Democrats and Governor Watson claim that the law distinctly declares that the "speaker of the senate" shall become governor. Therefore if Watson withdraws from the senate he ceases to be "speaker of the senate," and consequently loses the governorship. The senatorial question is likely to occupy a large amount of public attention for months to come. Whether the governor has a right to appoint is a disputed question. If he has, the appointment will be only until the next legislature, which meets in January, 1896, unless sooner called together by the governor. This latter contingency is not probable, however.

Baptists Adopt the Tithing System.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—At the Southern Baptist church convention the report of the committee on tithing recommended that members contribute one-tenth of their incomes to the church. The report was adopted by a viva voce vote.

Through Pullman Sleeping Cars from Chicago To Dallas and Ft. Worth, Texas, via the Chicago & Alton Railroad.

The Chicago & Alton, America's most popular railroad, is universally recognized as the best line between Chicago and Texas. Together with its connections, it forms the shortest line; it offers to its patrons free choice of no less than seven different routes beyond its own termini, and now in order to still further improve its matchless service, it has established a daily line of through Pullman drawing-room sleeping-cars between Chicago and Dallas and Ft. Worth, Texas.

These through sleeping-cars leave Chicago on the "Alton's St. Louis Limited" at 11.00 A. M. daily, and running via the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern and Texas & Pacific Railways beyond St. Louis, reach the following cities at the hours given on the next day after leaving Chicago: Little Rock, Ark., 8 05 A M; Malvern, Ark. (Hot Springs), 9 50 A M; Dallas, Texas, 9.25 P M.; and Ft. Worth, Texas, 10 30 P. M. These through sleeping cars also greatly improve the Chicago & Alton's service to Houston, Galveston, Austin, San Antonia and Laredo, Texas, and the City of Mexico.

The "Alton's" Texas route via Kansas City will remain fully up to the high standard maintained in the past. See that your Texas tickets read via the Chicago & Alton Railroad.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with a l my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement an l elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F B Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of To-day. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing scholasts combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D, Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

THE PASTURE GRASSES.

A Mixture of Several Varieties Gives Best Results—Austrian Brome Grass.

Where one grass succeeds another will not, and it is essential that we should have a great variety on hand. Our list is now quite extended, and if a farmer has a piece of land that will not produce some of these varieties it must be pretty poor land indeed. One of the greatest improvements needed in this country is a proper study of grass mixtures. Grass seeds of several varieties properly mixed for each climate and soil give better results than if only one variety be sown.

Grasses that form the best mixtures so far in this country are such as the meadow foxtail, tall oat grass, meadow fescue, tall fescue. All of these are imported grasses that have become perfectly and permanently adapted to this country. Added to them are the native American and Canadian grasses—Kentucky blue, Canadian blue, red top, orchard grass and timothy. Lately the Italian and perennial rye grasses have been used largely in mixtures in this country, giving great results in most instances. As the perennial will live through a mild winter and the Italian through the severest winter, the two grasses prove of special value when mixed with less hardy varieties. Nearly all the rye grasses are cheaper, and the danger often is to make the mixture consist largely of these, very often to the detriment of the general crop. Another grass that is now coming into vogue in this country as part of pasture mixtures is the Austrian brome grass. This has been used more largely in Canada and in the northwest, where it has been found admirably adapted for pasturage on lands of light or moist descriptions. It produces a heavy, early crop and yields a good aftermath of succulent, leafy roots. So far this grass has proved a valuable acquisition.

But clovers should also enter into the composition of nearly all grass mixtures, and we have now a list of fine clovers sufficient to cover every part of the country. The most suitable varieties are: Alsike, white or Dutch; trefoil, lucern, crimson and red clover. Many of these clovers are invaluable on pasture lands, and one is no longer compelled to feel if the common clover does not succeed that it is useless to try any longer. Some of these varieties are almost sure to take hold and yield a fair crop, preparing the way often for the other varieties. It is not wise to depend upon any specific formula for mixing grass seed, but it is very evident that our pastures could be greatly improved if a more thorough study were made of the art of mixing. We must study the natures of the different grasses and then adapt each to its locality. We have passed that period when a farmer should depend upon one or two varieties of grasses for his pastures. That is just the way to run out the grass permanently. —Prairie Farmer.

Treatment of Seed Oats.

It is now considered as a settled fact that the smut of oats may be absolutely prevented by treating the seed according to the Jensen plan. This is simply to immerse the seed oats in hot water for a short time, by which every smut spore is destroyed and a crop free from disease is insured. No expense is involved and but slight labor. All that is to be done is to soak the seed oats about ten minutes in water at a temperature of nearly 135 degrees—not much more or less—and then spread them where they can drain and dry as rapidly as possible. Use a thermometer to insure the right temperature, which may be regulated by adding hot or cold water, as is required.

One of the best evidences that Ayer's Hair Vigor is an article of exceptional merit is the fact that the demand for it is constantly increasing. No one who uses this incomparable dressing thinks of trying any other preparation for the hair.

Mothers will find "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" the best to use for children while teething. An old and well-tried remedy.

Spring Medicine

Is so important that you should be sure to get THE BEST. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven its unequalled merit by its thousands of remarkable cures, and the fact that it has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier shows the great confidence the people have in it. In fact it is the Spring Medicine. It cures all blood diseases, builds up the nerves and gives such strength to the whole system that, as one lady puts it, "It seemed to make me anew."

If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for your Spring Medicine do not buy any substitute. Be sure to get

"I was all broken down in health, so weak and nervous I was hardly able to be up. I had severe pains in my side, and headache. I would often have to stop when going up-stairs on acoount of palpitation of the heart. I had no appetite and a distressed feeling in my stomach. I resolved to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles and have not had a spell of sick headache for four months, feel well, work all day and eat heartily. My friends remark how well I am looking. I think all nervous, run-down people ought to take it, especially nursing mothers." MRS. S. ASHWORTH, Eaton, Ohio.

SECRET CONFESSION TO A PRIEST: or, THE ROMAN CATHOLIC PRACTICE OF AURICULAR CONFESSION. By Evangelist Leyden, an ex-Romanist. 48 pages, paper, price reduced from 25 cents to 12 cents postpaid.
Sent Free to the sender of one new yearly ubscription to the Cynosure.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE JESUITS, with supplement containing speeches of M. Paul Bert in the Chambers of Deputies, in Paris, France, at the debate (1879) on the Law Relative to the Liberty of Higher Teaching: "M. Paul Bert, who translated Gury's works from the Latin into the French (from which French this translation has in turn been made), was a statesman of great ability, having the courage of his convictions. He saw the harm done to society by allowing the Jesuits to become educators of the French youth, and struggled successfully to have them disqualified by law from management of such education. This book is a terrible exposure of the principles of these would-be teachers of religion. Their religious principles are simply statutable crimes, unnatural and repugnant to all good men; and how we Americans can let them train our children, when the great French nation across the water have decided that they are unfit to control the instruction of its youth, it is not easy to tell. Surely, we should have as much concern that our future citizens be not indoctrinated in crime, as the French.' 612 pages, paper, 60 cents, but now sent postpaid for 40 cents.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers. 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 65 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers. 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

PRINCIPLES OF THE "PROTECTIVES."

Two Paragraphs of Their Declaration Which Refer to Rome.

MILWAUKEE, May 13.—The declaration of principles adopted by the American Protective Association in so far as it refers to the Roman Catholic church is contained in two paragraphs—the third in the preamble and the fifth in the declaration. The preamble says that the organization realizes "that the progress and development of constitutional governments are wilfully and selfishly obstructed by certain organizations claiming universal recognition, and which, through the completeness of their systems of organization, exercise a more or less universal jurisdiction to the detriment and injury as well of constitutional sovereigns and governments as of the subjects and peoples thereof."

Therefore, says the fifth paragraph of the declaration, "All institutions of an ecclesiastical character claiming temporal dominion or the right to define the extent of their own jurisdiction, are inimical to all forms of constitutional government and are a menace to the perpetuity thereof."

ORIENTAL WAR FORMALLY ENDED.

Treaty of Peace Duly Signed by the Two Belligerent Powers.

WASHINGTON, May 10. — An official dispatch from Tokio received at the Japanese legation states that the ratifications of the treaty of peace between Japan and China were exchanged at Che Foo on Wednesday. No change was made in the text of the treaty as originally concluded. Taking into account, however, the recommendations made by Russia, Germany and France, the Japanese government has agreed to renounce the permanent possession of the Liau Tung peninsula on condition that the arrangement regarding the terms and form of renunciation shall be reserved for adjustment between itself and the government of China.

This latter stipulation is construed to mean that Japan will not surrender the peninsula until a suitable indemnity shall have been paid, and that it may have been agreed between Japan and China that the possession of Port Arthur itself will be retained by the Japanese for a term of years extending beyond the date when the indemnity has been paid in full, thus assuring to Japan not alone the payment of the indemnity, but also sufficient time to safeguard herself against anything like a war of reprisal.

WILL NOT ARREST THE GOVERNOR.

County Attorney at Topeka Says Governor Morrill Has Done No Wrong.

TOPEKA, Kas., May 13.—County Attorney Safford has announced that he would not cause a warrant to be issued on the complaint of G. W. Powers, charging Governor Morrill with having obtained money out of the state treasury by false pretenses. He says the vouchers which Powers refers to are evidence to show what they were given for, and the auditor of state had full knowledge of the facts when he approved the accounts, and that there was no concealment by the government and no attempt at deception. Such a complaint, he says, states no cause of action, and he will not be a party to such a proceeding or permit the state of Kansas or the county to be a party to it.

LAW BASED ON THE REPORT.

And Consequently Enacted Hamilton's Views on the Subject.

Judge Vincent remarks as follows upon the foregoing: "Inasmuch as the number of grains in a silver dollar was suggested to be exactly fifteen times the number of grains in a gold dollar Mr. Hamilton's report necessarily recommends the adoption of a bimetallic system at the ratio of 15 to 1, and his reflections are certainly of greater value than those made by others years before that time. Based upon the Hamilton report congress enacted the law of April 2, 1792." Sections 9 and 11 of this law are then given. The first enumerates the coins of the United States, beginning with the eagle and closing with the half cent; of the "dollars or units" this section says each is to be "of the value of a Spanish milled dollar as the same is now current."

Section 11 provides briefly that in United States money fifteen pounds of silver shall be of equal value to one pound of gold, which proportion shall obtain through any greater or less quantity of the metals. Judge Vincent proceeds: "A careful reading of Secretary Hamilton's report and the act of April 2, 1792, cannot fail to convince that congress substantially adopted and enacted all of his views on the subject, as it would be very apt to do when his views agreed with those of Thomas Jefferson." As to the omission of the gold dollar piece, in spite of the fact that Hamilton recommended such a coin "to have a sensible object in that metal to express the unit," and that 50,000 would be enough, the judge says it was omitted because it was too small for practical use, and as Hamilton said: "In small payments no inconvenience can accrue" from the sole use of silver and copper.

Hamilton's idea was to have the value made equal in gold and silver, says the judge, and he proceeds: "It was intended by Hamilton's report and the act of 1792 to have free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver * * * at the ratio of 15 to 1, the then commercial values of the two metals, and both were made legal tender for all debts. It is undoubtedly true that the Spanish milled dollar, as it was then current, was the starting point, and the number of grains to compare a gold dollar was ascertained by dividing the number of grains in the silver dollar by 15, but this does not alter the fact that units were expressed in gold and silver. On the contrary it seems to show that both were made units of value.

"The word 'unit' was employed as the equivalent of 'dollar,'" and the dollar was to consist of either one of two different things—one-tenth part of 247¾ grains of gold, or 371¼ grains of silver—just as equal values may be embodied in given weights of any two given commodities, such as wheat or corn. A unit of value is the unit in which values are expressed; the value of both gold and silver are expressed in the act of 1792; so we had two units of value. If both had not been so expressed we could not have had bimetallism. The unit is simply the starting point in the reckoning of money. * * *

"The language of the proposition submitted for decision is not as clear and satisfactory as might be desired, but I am of the opinion that under the act of 1792 the unit was to be the dollar. The value of this unit was to be measured in both gold and silver, 371¼ grains being the quantity of silver, and 24¾ grains being the quantity of gold, which were to equally express the measure and value of the unit adopted. As I conceive this to be the point at issue, as understood by the parties to the controversy, and which was intended to be expressed in the written statement thereof, I decide in the affirmative of the proposition.

"WILLIAM A. VINCENT."

JACK FROST OUT OF SEASON.

He Arrives on Time, However, as Scheduled by Old Probabilities.

CHICAGO, May 13.—A special bulletin issued by the weather bureau says: The frost area reported yesterday morning was unusually extensive and severe for this time of year, frost occurring in all the fifteen states for which it was forecasted Saturday. In the peach belt of Michigan and the cranberry marshes of Wisconsin the temperature was below freezing, and the frost of a killing nature, as it was also throughout the remainder of those states and northwestern Illinois, Iowa, eastern Minnesota, Nebraska and northern Missouri. Frost more or less severe occurred throughout all the states of the upper lake region, middle and upper Mississippi valley, and east slope of the Rocky mountains.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., May 13.—Specials to The Journal from northwest Iowa and South Dakota report a heavy frost, water freezing at several points. Fruit and vegetables will be damaged considerably, but corn and small grain escape without serious injury.

DETROIT, May 13.—Reports from the fruit region of western Michigan indicate that damage by the frost of Saturday night was confined principally to vegetables and small fruits and low places.

LACROSSE, Wis., May 13.—The heavy frost appears to have damaged everything susceptible to injury. Strawberry plants and grape buds were killed. A great deal of corn is up and will be killed.

WAR ON THE RACE TRACKS.

Hawthorne at Chicago Closed and Ed Corrigan Arrested.

CHICAGO, May 11.—It is cold weather sports at race tracks now, with a law in for New York that spoils the business of the bookmakers, Roby in Indiana shut down by Hoosier law, and, now Hawthorne in this city closed for alleged violation of the statute. This latter came off when 150 deputy sheriffs marched on the ground and proceeded to gather in Edward Corrigan, master of Hawthorne; John Brenhock, his business partner; Joseph F. Ullman, proprietor of the foreign book, and twenty-six smaller fry. The prisoners were all admitted to bail in $300 each.

The officials of the Civic Federation have determined that there shall be no racing contrary to law in Cook county this year, and they declare they will repeat the raids as often as the management of Hawthorne cares to open up.

Steamers in Collision.

MACKINAW CITY, May 11.—The steamers Joseph L. Hurd and Cayuga collided off Skillgalee fog horn during a fog and the Cayuga went to the bottom, the Hurd being kept afloat by her cargo of lumber. George Johnson, cook of the Hurd, was drowned.

Schweinfurth Must Stand Trial.

ROCKFORD, Ills., May 11.—In the circuit court Judge Shaw overruled the motion to quash the indictments against George Jacob Schweinfurth and three angels and they must stand trial. The case may come to trial next week.

The daily papers report that six expeditions of Americans, armed with Winchester rifles, have been landed on the island of Cuba during the first two weeks of this month of May. "They are guaranteed all the plunder they can take." It is to be feared that a desire for plunder, rather than a desire to better the condition of the Cubans, is at the heart of the demonstrations and sympathetic meetings that have been held in Florida recently.

After a heated debate in regard to the matter of the Confederate monument, the "Sons of Veterans" at their meeting held in Chicago last week, by a vote of 51 to 41, afterward made unanimous, adopted resolutions condemning the proposed dedication and declaring that "no patriotic organization could as a body attend such a ceremony." This action on the part of the "Sons" may bring the older organization, the G. A. R., to a better mind.

Dr. P. S. Henson, at the meeting of the Illinois Sunday School Convention held in Elgin, beginning May 14, in a lecture on "The One Book" said: "By the fall of Adam man became sensual and devilish. Human nature became depraved by being deprived. We are children of Adam and not children of God by nature. We are nothing like the creature God created in his own image. The doctrine of the fatherhood of God is a devilish lie and its outcome is Universalism pure and simple." There is much truth in this statement. "All ye are brethren" is true only of those who, by receiving Christ, have "become sons of God." The brotherhoods instituted by Christless lodges are counterfeits.

We had hoped that the day was passed when the Masonic lodge would be called upon to put Cain's offering (corn, wine and oil) on the corner-stone of a Christian church while men in their white aprons and other ridiculous toggary would stand around and sing Hail Masonry divine! We saw this done at an M. E. church South corner-stone-laying more than twenty years ago in California. But a report comes that the corner-stone of the new Baptist church in Olney, Ill., is to be laid by the Grand Lodge of this State of the A. F. and A. M. on June 4th proximo. Will not those who love our Lord Jesus Christ pray that Satan may be defeated in this thing, and that God will turn the counsel of these Ahithophels into foolishness?

Julius A. Palmer, a newspaper correspondent who went to the Hawaiian Islands to investigate the state of affairs there three months ago, believes that there will be a crisis there soon, and that the end can only be the restoration of the monarchical form of government. He says: "The missionaries, as we call most of the political party in power, have claimed to be in favor of annexation, but have never been so really. The annexationists mistrust them now. As to the future? Well, annexation is an impossibility, and all are about agreed on that. A republic seems an impossibility, such a large part of the population are incapable of governing themselves. All things considered there will probably be no harmony until the monarchy is restored, and Princess Kaiulani placed upon the throne."

A recent occurrence at the State Univerity, Mich., would have passed unnoticed by the Cynosure as too revolting to mention but for the fact that the faculty sustained the young men who were guilty of the barbarous treatment of their fellow student, and of other atrocities, and expelled the young man who made public the facts. The Inter Ocean states the case as follows: Quite a sensation was created at the University of Michigan a few days ago by an article that appeared in the Detroit Evening News, telling how a student nicknamed "The Baron" had been forced by brutal jokers to eat human flesh in the anatomical laboratory. Norman McLaren Cameron is the student correspondent of that paper, and a member of the law department. This evening he was asked to substantiate his story, and this he did by bringing forward the man upon whom "the joke" was played. When the members of the faculty found themselves cornered in this way they decided that the article was injurious to the institution, and expelled the correspondent. The faculty vote was divided on the question, some of the members maintaining that the university was a State institution, and anything happening there was public. Mr. Cameron brought other witnesses to prove that flesh throwing and the like went on in the laboratory." It is to be hoped that the Spartan idea that it is no disgrace to sin, but to be found out is a punishable offense, will not prevail in our land!

"The Powers" have instructed the Turk; but the outlook for the Armenians is still far from inviting. Among the measures preliminary to the reforms the note demands the appointment of a high commissioner, generally amnesty for and release of all political prisoners, the revision of certain judgments, and the appointment of a commission, to sit at Constantinople, charged with the surveillance and application of the reforms, and working in concert with the high commissioner previously referred to. The principal reforms demanded are that the Governors and Vice-Governors of Van, Erzeroum, Sivas, Bitlis, Kharput, and Trebizond be Christian or Mussulman, according to how the population of these places is divided. From this it appears that in places where the Christians have been killed off so that only a minority remain they are to have Musselman governors. The judicial reforms proposed by the powers make radical changes in the present system, insure proper trials, the surveillance of prisons, and the total abolition of torture. This would be a hopeful movement if it were carried out, but with a police composed equally of Turks and Christians, promises of reform cannot raise our hopes to the point of enthusiasm. The gendarmie, or police, is to be composed equally of Turks and Christians, and the latter and Kurds are still to be retained in the notorious Hamadian cavalry; but they are not to be allowed to have arms except during drill. Finally, the goverment is to strictly enforce the laws against compulsory conversions to Islam. In many circles here it is contended that the foregoing reforms are quite inadequate and that the abuses complained of by the Armenians will soon re-commence. Poor Armenia!

A remarkable instance of piety among persons of wealth and official dignity came to light at the recent eighth annual conference of the New England Evangelist Association. A number of years ago the wife of Adjutant General McAlpin was converted and devoted her life to practical Christian work, leading a far different life from that in the gay whirl of society where she formerly reigned. She deserted the worldly life for the life of a Christian. After her husband was appointed on Governor Morton's staff she moved to Albany with her husband prepared to uphold the social dignity of his position. Here was her opportunity, and she improved it. The society of Albany was astonished at the stand she took. It was unprecedented. "The first social function she attended was a grand reception at the residence of Governor Morton. What did she do there? She inaugurated the policy of drawing-room evangelism. Before the evening was over she had taken the two daughters of the Governor and talked to them of their souls. Imagine such talk at a society reception! She made a most favorable impression upon the two young ladies, and, indeed, upon the entire family. Not long afterward the society women of Albany were astonished to receive invitations to attend "religious service" in the morning at Mrs. McAlpin's residence. The society women wondered, and then they went, and they kept going. Mrs. McAlpin said: "I tell them that they're lost, and I preach the Gospel to them. If I can't get them to talk with me at my meetings, I get into my carriage and go to them." It is reported that six of these women of wealth and leisure have been converted. Slumming is all right, but there is also much work to do at the other extreme of social life." Frequently this class are as much neglected spiritually as the most degraded.

FREEMASONRY ON TRIAL—A DREAM.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

(Concluded.)

They presented some celebrated names. Among others, George Washington, the father of his country, was brought to the bar. Quite a flutter attended his appearance, and as the spectators saw the apron that he is supposed to have worn, there was a general feeling that there was to be a strong defense. When he came to testify it was to this effect, that he took the first two degrees in the lodge before he was of age. Shortly after his majority he took the Master's degree. On being cross-examined, he said: "I was never the master of any lodge, and for more than thirty years I was not in a lodge more than once or twice." He also said that "Masonry is a benevolent institution that may be used for the best or the worst of purposes."

Among the eminent men summoned was Wm. Wirt, who for twelve consecutive years had been Attorney General of the United States. He testified that he took two degrees in Masonry, and that at that time and for some years after he saw no evil in the system. But when he was made familar with the practical workings of the order, he said: "If this be Masonry, as according to uncontradicted evidence it seems to be, I regard it as at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and of mankind."

A great number of witnesses were summoned by the defense, and though many of them were persons of unquestioned veracity, their testimony was mainly negative. It was not what they had seen. This they declined to tell, but rather what they had not seen. Like the celebrated case before the Dutch magistrate. The prisoner was charged with stealing a watch. Three competent witnesses swore that they saw him take it from the owner's pocket, and here the prosecution rested their case. But the defence brought six witnesses, all men of veracity, who swore that they did not see him take the watch, and the magistrate was asked to acquit him. The defenders of Freemasonry asked an acquittal on precisely this ground. There were more witnesses who had not seen the evils of the system than those who had seen them, though the latter was able to specify and point them out.

When the testimony was all in, the counsel for the state thus summed up the evidence. He said in substance: "Gentlemen of the jury, you are called upon to give a most important decision. Upon your verdict rests the settlement of many questions now pending before this court. Remember your oaths and judge righteous judgment. It has been proved by the admissions of the counsel for the defence that Freemasonry is not ancient, except as all sin is ancient; that neither Solomon or Hiram king of Tyre or Hiram Abiff were Freemasons; nor was John the Baptist or John the evangelist; that Grand Lodge Masonry began in England in 1717, and that it took for its model the old 'sun-worship, of which Freemasonry is a philosophical development.' It has been shown that its claims to benevolence are false; that not one-fifth of all its funds are used for relief, and only then when such relief has been paid for. Its members are not free to tell the truth about the order. They have sworn under death penalty to not tell the truth, though many of them feel quite free to tell lies in its defence. It has been shown that it has often been used in the perversion of justice, and that as a social fraternity it excludes the great majority of mankind, and denies both to the church and state any right to investigate its principles and practices. As a system of religious philosophy it excludes the name of Christ, and is therefore not Christian. As a fraternity that binds it members to special relations to each other and to keep each other's secrets in all cases 'except murder and treason,' it is not loyal to government nor truly republican; and since the oath of a Master Mason makes a distinction between the obligation to obey the Seventh Commandment when the proposed victim is the relative of a Mason and when she is not, it is not moral nor favorable to morality."

To this the counsel for the defence replied in substance as follows: "Gentlemen of the jury, it is with great reluctance that I condescend to reply to an attack upon perhaps the most ancient and honorable of all institutions; certainly one that has included most eminent men both in the church and state. Is it not probable that these great and wise men knew more than their critics? Can you afford to assail them? What is Masonry? It is powerful. It comprises men of all ranks, wealth, office and talent; in power and out of power, and in almost every place where power is of any importance; and it comprises among other classes in the community, to the lowest in large numbers, active men, united together and capable of being directed by others, so as to be the force of cement throughout the civilized world. They are distributed, too, with the means of knowing each other, and in the means of keeping secret, and with the means of co-operation, in the desk, the legislative halls, and on the bench; in every gathering of business, in every party of pleasure, in every enterprise of government, in every domestic circle; in peace and in war, among friends and among enemies, in one place as well as another. So powerful indeed is it at this time that it fears nothing from violence, either public or private, since it has means to learn it in season to counteract and prevent." (Masonic address delivered at Hartford, Conn., 1825.)

The case went to the jury; and what is unusual in such cases, we have been permitted to know the private convictions of the jurors which they had formed while hearing the testimony, and which they talked over while making their verdict.

Mr. Marshall thought that Masonry was "capable of much evil, and incapable of any good, and ought to be abandoned."

Mr. Adams said "a common cannibal would be ashamed of such oaths."

Mr. Seward, Mr. Fillmore and Mr. Spencer thought that Masonry "trampled on every government it could not control."

Mr. Phillips said "every good citizen ought to make war on secret societies."

Thaddeus Stevens said "the trial by jury is transformed into an engine of despotism and Masonic fraud."

Messrs. Sumner, Greeley and G. Smith were equally confident that it was inconsistent with good government and the administration of justice.

Samuel Adams said "I am decidedly opposed to all secret societies."

Mr. Madison said "it is at least susceptible of abuse outweighing any advantage," while Mr. Webster was "in favor of a law abolishing all such oaths and obligations."

With such convictions it is not strange that a verdict was rendered and the culprit consigned to oblivion. May the day of its return to power be most remote.

THANKS FROM FOOCHOW, CHINA.

In this Foochow mission the Lord is wonderfully blessing the educational work. Our schools for higher education have more pupils than at any previous time. Within the past two months more than one hundred day-schools have been opened in places never before worked by the missionary. By the blessing of God and the help of his dear people, we have been able to establish more than eighty of these day-schools, nearly all of which are in and about this great city of Foochow, the recognized hardest place in the mission. To God we give the glory. It is he who is turning the hearts of the people toward us. We wish next to most heartily thank the editor of the Christian Cynosure for so kindly giving space to our article on "Christian Education in China." It touched the hearts of many readers so that I have been enabled to open many schools in their name. I never realized the power of the press so much as since I came to China.

To the dear people who have so liberally responded with cards and money, I wish again in this way to express my hearty thanks for their kindness. I surely shall, as promptly as possible, fulfill all promises made in my letter of last August. Next August I will render a report of the half year's work. Let me just say in passing that a number of schools have opened on faith, and more than thirty applications have been refused. Perhaps we should have had more faith and grasped every opportunity. If we have erred, we hope the Lord will forgive and give more faith in the future.

Any person wishing to help answer our prayers by supporting one of these faith schools is at liberty to do so if they have fulfilled their obligation to the missionary society. Send forty dollars to Dr. A. B. Leonard, 150 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City, requesting that it be forwarded to me to support a day-school, and receive a quarterly report in both Chinese and English, a picture of the school, an idol that has been worshiped, and a letter from the teacher. Smaller sums and picture cards will be thankfully received, and acknowledged accordingly.

The evangelistic work was never more encouraging. The news of souls being saved comes from all points in the mission. The revival that is now in progress at this station is resulting in much good. The Chinese are forsaking their gods of wood and stone and turning to the true God. The war has given us no trouble as yet. The majority of the natives desire a general revolution, and are hoping for better things. There is no doubt but what the outcome of this conflict will result in great good to China. Her leading men acknowledge their mistake and are going to take on new life. It is the earnest prayer of every missionary that the church may realize its opportunity and keep the Gospel abreast, if not in advance, of the modern civilization that is sure to sweep over China. Now is the accepted time; to-day is the day of her salvation. May we all do what we can in this grand work. Please send picture cards direct to me by mail. We can use many thousands to great advantage in our work.

Yours, G. S. MINER,
Foochow, China.

CHRIST, THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD VS. LODGE DARKNESS.

AN ADDRDESS GIVEN AT CONFERENCE AT RAVENSWOOD, ILL , MAY, 1895, BY BISHOP WM DILLON, OF OREGON.

Light is that which discovers and makes visible truths and objective realities. Darkness conceals, covers and hides from sight objects and facts. When Adam was created in the image of God, he walked forth in manly independence. Milton says of him, "There was dignity in every look and in every gesture grace." When the guilt of his condemnatory fall came on him, its first impulse led him to the secretive. Gen. 3: 7: "And Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden."

Jesus Christ was the light of the world, the true light which enlightens every man that comes into the world. When Pilate asked him of his disciples and his doctrine he answered, "I ever spake openly to the world and in the synagogue whither the Jews always resort, and in secret have I said nothing." Jesus had no esoteric teachings, no secret associations. He was as open as the sun, transparent as light. He wanted his truths proclaimed to every land, his doctrines sounded in every ear. Under the reign of lodge darkness the first duty of its devotees is to "always conceal and never reveal;" to hide from view; to divert a conversation and manage it discreetly, so as to conceal the truth. The two are antithetical and directly opposite. The light emanating from Christ came down from heaven and will lift men up to heaven. The darkness from beneath comes up like an ocean fog, to drag men down into the dark. Hear the tent-builder of Tarsus, telling what the Ephesian Christians were, then with the next stroke of his pen what they now are as he wrote to them, then his command what they should be in all time to come: "Ye were sometimes darkness," "But now are ye light in the Lord." "Walk as children of light." This related to them personally. The next stroke of his pen tells their attitude to others, in their fellowship, "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." To fellowship the works of darkness is to suffer blood poison to be communicated to the members of the body. Amputation, excision, is the remedy for mortification; contact is death.

I have seen both man and beast initiated, and inducted into the lodge; the same process is used for both. He that is duly and truly prepared must have the inevitable hoodwink over his eyes, to enter upon the sublimely ridiculous, with his eyes covered and the light shut out. At Kirkwood,

Shelby county, O., I saw a mule initiated. This hybrid animal was needed in an upper story to operate a machine in a wheat elevator. Slats were nailed on the gradually ascending stairway to enable his hoofs to catch, and that his feet should not slide back. But the mule with open eyes was too sharp to make the ascent. Halter pulling would not induce him; oats offered and gradually taken upward would not persuade him. He asserted his historic nature and stubbornly refused to enter or ascend. A bystander who had lodge experience knew how to humiliate and influence the ascent. A bag served as a hoodwink. It was placed over the mule's eyes, the rite of circumambulation was performed to confuse, then the holder of the halter brought the blindfolded mule to the ascent, and he ran up without delay or hesitation to take up his upper-story lodge life among his peers of the light-excluding orders. Lodge darkness degrades the man; it does the same for the beast, and they are alike started in the dark. God commanded the light to shine out of darkness; the lodge commands that the darkness shall obscure the light. The Christian cannot suffer himself to be hidden in lodge gloom without moral death.

The old commoner Thaddeus Stevens said in an address at Hagerstown Maryland: "Organized secrecy in a voluntary society is itself the evidence of iniquity." Jesus Christ said, "He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God." "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds be reproved." Here Christ makes the mode taken to be the index of the act. The strongest words known to our language are employed in the Scriptures to condemn the works of darkness, of which the lodge is chief. John says, "This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. If we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth." Five times the loving John condemns, with this strong triliteral word. This is the first, where men profess to have fellowship with God, and walk in darkness. The profession is so inconsistently absurd that John brands it as a lie upon its face.

Nor do the Scriptures leave us in doubt what light is. Eph. 5: 13: "For whatsoever doth make manifest is light." But whatever conceals is darkness. The thief, the saloon-keeper, the libertine and the lodge love darkness, because their deeds are evil.

We should turn on the lights; illuminate, build a bonfire, lift the curtains, open the blinds; the light will kill the lodge. It is a beetle that will run when the stone is upturned and the light shines in. Darkness fosters the lodge, the light hurts only diseased eyes. Let the sun, moon and stars shine down; let every candle burn brilliantly; let the lamps be lighted; put the reflectors back of them; turn on the electric lights; let the light of the Lord God and the Lamb shine in effulgent splendor on the lodge, and it is as certain to die as if already dead.

HIGH NOON.

Time's finger on the dial of my life
Points to high noon. And yet the half-spent day
Leaves less than half remaining! For the dark,
Bleak shadows of the grave engulf the end.
Battling with fate, with men and with myself,
Up the steep summit of my life's forenoon,
Three things I learned—three things of precious worth
To guide and help me down the western slope.
I have learned how to pray, and toil, and save;
To pray for courage to receive what comes,
Knowing what comes to be divinely sent;
To toil for universal good, since thus,
And only thus, can good come unto me;
To save by giving whatso'er I have
To those who have not. This alone is gain.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, FOR THE YEAR MAY 16, 1894 TO MAY 8, 1895.

Brethren and Sisters of the Association:

At your last annual meeting you elected the following Executive Board: T. B. Arnold, Chicago; C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.; E. A. Cook, Chicago; J. A. Collins, Chicago; W. O. Dinius Chicago; J. M. Hitchcock, Chicago; A. G. Johnson, Huntington, Indiana; H. F. Kletzing, Naperville, Ill.; J. P. Richards, Chicago; Elliot Whipple, Wheaton, Ill., and E. B. Wylie, Chicago.

The same day an organization of the Board was effected as follows: President Charles A. Blanchard, chairman; Mr. T. B. Arnold, vice chairman; E. B. Wylie, secretary.

Committees appointed: Professor Eliott Whipple, Prof. H. A. Fischer, and Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, on finance and auditing: Messrs. T. B. Arnold, E. A. Cook, and W. B. Lloyd, on publications, including the Cynosure; Messrs. W. I. Phillips, W. B. Stoddard, and E. A. Cook, on real estate.

The Board has had meetings throughout the year for transaction of business touching the regular work for which the Association exists. There have been no new phases of the work developed, but thought and energy have been concentrated upon the lines already marked out. There has been a dominant endeavor to conserve and strengthen the main things. Notwithstanding the financial stringency, which has been sorely felt by all concerns which depend in part on money, there has been a good degree of prosperity in being able to support an able corps of agents in the various districts. It should be said that the wise and economical management of the finances is due, with the blessing of God, to the able and devoted committee on finance, in conjuction with the general secretary, Mr. Wm. I. Phillips. Friends of the great reform which is the distinctive work of this Association will in view of this financial management bestow their gifts with confidence. We speak of the material side of the year's work because, while there have been great needs aud even necessary retrenchments in the working force, the financial blessing in these times has been marked.

In general the lives and health of the members of the Association and Board have been precious in the keeping of God. The circle of the Board was broken by the sudden death of Rev. J. P. Richards, who had been a loyal and useful member of the Executive Board since 1889.

July 1, '94, Rev. Henry L. Kellogg was reinstated in the editorial chair of the Cynosure, which he had previously filled for more than twenty years; but in the plan of God he was soon taken to service in the home above, leaving a vacancy which we must look to God to fill again with a man after his own heart.

Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon, who retired from the presidency of the Association at the close of last year, was also called to put aside the armor of conflict for the crown of accomplished victory. The Board opportunely expressed in your behalf a deep gratitude to God that these noble men had been in active sympathy with the great work of guarding the interests of the church and the honor of Christ against the encroachments of the evil of oath-bound secrecy.

The literature of the Association has engaged the attention of the Board repeatedly, and especially the Cynosure. Plans were devised looking to the betterment and circulation of the paper. A committee of three, after much deliberation, recommended as the editorial policy of the paper the following, among other things:

1. That the paper be made to appeal especially to fair-minded and Christian secretists. It should have more of the "come, now, let us reason together" spirit.

2. It should depend upon demonstration of facts rather than upon denunciation.

3. It should magnify the essentials and minimize the non-essentials.

4. It should keep close to the actual rites of the lodges and present more expositions of their workings. There is much which needs to be often repeated, "line upon line." What is needed is a clear forthsetting of the actual doings of the lodges and not so much of philosophizing on them. Anti-secrecy is a gospel which contains Christ. The Cynosure should be chiefly a defender of Christ. But no swords are to be used in that defense. Sharp, bitter things ought never to appear in the paper. Its editor ought not to allow any correspondent to appear with such weapons. Careful, clear, candid, fearless, exhaustive statements of the truth should characterize its columns.

5. As to denominationalism, it should allow different names and respect each while it contends for one spirit and one Lord. Being the organ of a reform that is to become the cause of all evangelical churches, it should be an organ of all such churches in the essentials of religion. It should champion the great principles in which all evangelical bodies agree, and respect the unimportant differences.

6. The Cynosure is sui generis. One north star in the heavens, one Cynosure on earth. No other paper is devoted exclusively to the question of secrecy. Its "one idea" is broad. It must show that sworn secrecy is detrimental to an ideal family, church or state. Questions relating to the best condition of each must engage the Cynosure. Marriage laws, clean politics and a Bible basis for the church are subjects which fall within its balliwick.

7. It must not make mere anti-secrecy a religion. As there are many strong Protestants who are not Christians, so there are pronounced opponents of the lodge who are not Christians. The gospel of the Cynosure must place the Lord Jesus Christ first, and make it clear that all religions which do not recognize him are doomed.

8. As soon as possible a series of articles should be obtained which would have a tendency to bind this year's issues together and which would do for the paper and the reform what the writings of Miss Flagg did some years ago.

9. There should be a generous supply of editorial matter, and this should give character to the paper.

10. The form and dress of the paper should be improved, as soon as the obstacle of the expense is not in the way.

In addition to the foregoing report it may be said that the State conventions during the year have been of the evangelical character. This was especially true of the Iowa and Nebraska conventions. Christ was preached as the Saviour of men—and men were convicted. It will be a glad day when all the workers come deeply to feel that they have a marvelously important message to men's souls. Anti-secret lectures of such a spirit will be welcomed by the pastors of the churches.

So important has it seemed greatly to extend the circulation of the literature and especially the organ of the Association, that a standing committee was appointed to devise means to that end. A partial report was rendered in which it was suggested that the Spirit of God must come down upon the present readers of the paper and endue each with the faculty of making friends for the Cynosure. The efforts of the present readers, coupled with that of special solicitors, ought to double the circulation in one year. It is gratifying that some are giving evidence of that enduement of which our committee reports. The Cynosure is loved, and must be more intensely loved, by its present readers before it shall find its way into the tens of thousands of homes which need the messages of light it brings.

Following the custom of former years this report will have respect to the detailed reports to be made by the treasurer, publisher, general secretary and district agents, leaving to those who have been personally engaged in the work the presentation of their own reports, which we also await with great interest.

In closing this report of our stewardship we feel that tender thanksgiving should be raised from all hearts to God for the many tokens of his favor during the year, and that, while the progress of our work is less than we wish it were, still the reasons are manifold for renewed efforts in behalf of the cause we love. Respectfully submitted,

CHAS A. BLANCHARD, Pres.
EDGAR B. WYLIE, Sec'y.

REPORT OF COLLEGE AGENT.

National Christian Association:

DEAR BRETHREN:—It would have given me pleasure to attend the yearly gathering at 221 W. Madison St., but duty calls me to the distant Northwest, to do missionary work on the frontier.

My winter campaign in the South was fairly successful, although the weather was unusually severe. As a general rule, I was kindly received by the college authorities, and invited on the Sabbath to preach reform sermons in the college chapels. I delivered brief addresses to the students in their class-rooms, and distributed many copies of the Lodge Lamp, enclosing a letter prepared for the occasion and calling attention to the anti-secrecy books placed in the college library. This created considerable excitement in some places, and appeared to be an efficient way of turning divine light upon the thick darkness of secret selfishness. Secret societies have more undivided sway in the South than in other parts of America. The better classes in the old slave States are almost universally in the lodge; and the freedmen who are not under the influence of mission schools, taught by Northern teachers, rush into secret organizations almost universally. They evidently feel that it is needful for them to follow the example of the white people around them in order to use their freedom. But the secret empire is very general in its influence, pervading all parts of the country with a multitude of organizations endeavoring to overrule every department of the nation. It is indeed a constant menace to all departments of the state, in the execution of the law and in law making. It is a peril to the church of Christ—pretending to take Jew and Gentile, Mohammedan and pagan up to eternal glory, without the Saviour and without any pure love to God or man.

I tremble for my country while I survey the innumerable ranks of secret orders, labor unions, strikers, commonwealers, ruled by autocrats, walking delegates, and triangles. The necessity and wisdom of the work of the N. C. A. plainly appears. We must arise and testify. God's people must turn on the clear light of God's truth that the abominations ruling in darkness may be revealed and rebuked. The kingdom of Christ must be upheld and defended against all the cunning wiles of the devil, and the free government of this new nation of the Gospel dispensation must be preserved from the grasp of Grand Kings, and Great Grand Sovereigns, and Past Grand Masters, and Grand High Priests, that all the people may be what God made them, simply brothers of one great family; and the interest of every one equal to those of every other one.

May the dear Lord direct and bless the N. C. A. in its efforts to build up his kingdom and to save mankind. Respectfully yours,

SAMUEL F. PORTER.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Bird Day for Massachusetts.—Work for Boston's unemployed —The Intercollegiate Prohibition Convention.—Roman Catholic music in the Medford schools.—A Boys' Brigade incident.

Massachusetts is considering the subject of having a Bird Day. This is a pretty thought, which I suspect comes originally from the Mercy Department of the W. C. T. U. in connection with Mr. Geo. T. Angell. The scarcity of the blue bird this spring in New England has caused general remark. Mr. R. Ridgway, the curator of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, writes to the Christian Register that thousands of these "harbingers of spring," so loved and protected in New England, may be seen exposed for sale on the game-stalls of the markets of Washington. People who will eat a songbird have no right to call themselves civilized. It is a barbarism pure and simple. The Southern white ribboners had better agitate for a Bird Day in their section and New England farmers whould gain thereby, as they would not have to pay out so much for insecticides; but the South would gain still more in the moral influence which the day would exert. Children who have learned to be kind to a bird will not be likely to kill and torture a fellow-being suspected of crime.

The death of Hon. Julius H. Seelye, president of Amherst College, was doubtless hastened by the recent loss of his son under most tragical circumstances. He was elected to Congress as an independent without receiving the nomination of any party; and if the assertion of the Transcript is true, that the type of independence which Mr. Seelye represented has so nearly gone out of fashion in Massachusetts that no district in this State would to-day think of choosing a member of Congress unpledged to the upholding of party interests, the more's the pity.

The Anti-tenement House League of Boston is agitating a plan to obtain the use of idle tracts of land in the city and suburbs, and dividing them up into patches of one-third of an acre or more for each family, furnishing potatoes for planting, and seed free of cost. It will be a surprise to many, even those who have lived in the city all their lives, that two-thirds of the land of Boston is lying idle, without any profit to the owners. The same thing might be said of a large part of the land in New England, and there is no reason why the plan, if it proves practical, should not be extended, and the labor question in some measure solved. I have seen a woman digging dandelions on some waste land belonging to the Boston and Albany railroad, where it is very possible that something else might have been made to grow. The plan has everything to recommend it. Thriving kitchen gardens are certainly pleasanter to look upon than these waste bits that if they were in the country would be clothed with a wild beauty of their own, but in the city are scrubby, stony, marshy haunts of desolation. In connection with this Mr. William E. Smythe's plan for making the arid lands of the far West blossom with the homes of millions of working people, through the process of irrigation, is worthy of note. Rev. Edward Everett Hale is an interested patron of this movement, as of everything in the philanthropic line. It is a better way to combat anarchy with the hoe and the spade than with Gatling guns.

The Intercollegiate Prohibition Association has just held an interesting convention. Mr. E. D. Burr, pastor of the Ruggles Street church, said some good things on a vitiated physical taste fostered in childhood, sometimes in the lower classes while yet infants in arms, as laying the foundation for drunkards and criminals. He advocated the establishment by the churches of manual training schools to offset the action of the trades-unions which, being largely under the control of foreigners, are crowding American youths out of the shops, with the sad result that they are growing up without learning any useful trade, to become burdens and pests of society. It is difficult to accept his statement that native born Americans form 75 per cent of the convicted criminals in our country; but if true, it is time Christian patriots everywhere aroused and took in the gravity of the situation. The oratorical contest which followed in the evening was not the least interesting part, and showed that the young collegians had done some serious thinking on the prohibition question.

I notice that a Junior A. P. A. has been formed, the effect of which can only be harmful as training young people in the methods of secrecy, at an age when all their training should be in the opposite direction. It would be interesting to know if they are taught like their elders to evade the charge of being A. P. A.'s under the mental reservation that they are "Amoreans."

Medford, though a very quiet place and not celebrated for anything except being the site of the world-renowned rum-distilleries bearing that name, and the home of their proprietor, Eminent Grand Commander Lawrence, head of the Sir Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, is passing through quite an exciting time on the school question. The rehearsal for the annual high school festival included the Roman Catholic hymn, Ave Maria, of which these opening verses are a fair specimen:

Ave Maria! full of grace,
Mother of sorrows bow thine ear;
Withhold not thou thy kindly face,
Our supplications deign to hear.

Benedicta! blessed maid!
Chosen of women, fair and pure;
Support our hearts when sore dismayed,
Let not the world our souls allure.
Ave, Ave Maria!

It is not strange that Protestant parents should protest against such sectarian teaching for their children. When Roman Catholics will scarcely allow the Lord's Prayer in the public schools, it does not become them to introduce their church hymns, and that is a very weak-kneed Protestantism which will not contest such a vital point to the end. To crown all, it is said that the school superintendent has been recommending the teachers to go to a parochial school in Hyde Park to learn how they should teach their pupils to read!

"By all means let us have military drill and instructions in our public schools," says an anti-Romanist paper; and then it adds: "The victorious battles of the Franco-Prussian war were fought by the little school boys who in the earlier sixties or in the latter fifties learned their military drill and marched to patriotic music twice a week from college or school to drilling-place." This spirit in a so-called "patriotic" journal is lamentable; still more the blindness which can institute "Boys' Brigades," and not suppose that like results will follow. Here is an incident sent me by a friend, which came under his own observation, and illustrates too plainly to need any comment the tendency of such things. Three little boys, members of a brigade, were walking ahead of him one day, too much absorbed in themselves to notice him. They each had a toy sword, one strutting along with it up to his shoulder, the other two trailing the point on the ground. That it was all to them an intense reality was soon proved by a single clear utterance, strange indeed from such boy lips, which caused a shudder in the soul of their unseen auditor: "Now we must kill somebody!" The friend who sent me the incident writes: "It ought to be published far and wide, and come before every church and minister in the land." Doubtless many zealous promoters of Boys' Brigades are sincere, but the above ought to show that they cannot put murderous weapons into a child's hands without at the same time instilling into the tender mind the spirit of murder. They cannot sow the thistles of warfare in his soul and reap the fruits of peace.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Mayday festivals.—The Washington Arch.—Columbia College.—The new police commissioners.—Masonic women.

The origin of May parties is lost in the dimness of legendary lore. The May pole is still seen in rural England, France and Holland. Thanks to good old Peter Stuyvesant, the promoter of holidays in old New Amsterdam, the Mayday festival still lingers among us. In his day such assemblages were held every Saturday afternoon on the green lawn at the Battery. Here old Peter would sit under the spreading trees, while he watched the innocent merriment of the youths and maidens. Now the custom has been transplanted to Central Park, where every Saturday in the month, children, often to the number of 30,000, revel in the beauties of sky and field. Here the rich and the poor meet together: private schools and orphan asylums, aristocrats and paupers, the girls in white dresses and gayly-colored ribbons, the boys carrying the May pole and lunch baskets, each group presided over and protected by some careful teacher. Parties have been held in this manner on the Park since 1871. Permits are obtained by applying to the secretary, and by naming the time and place desired. Often children stand fifty deep waiting in order to secure the necessary permit.

The Washington memorial arch at the southern entrance of Fifth Avenue has been duly dedicated and turned over to the city. There was an imposing military pageant and the usual display of oratory. After the exercises had been postponed once on account of rain, the weather on this day (Saturday, May 4th) was perfect. The governor and staff were present, and the speaking was done by Gen. Horace Porter and Henry G. Marquard, chairman of the committee of erection. Mayor Strong received the key of the arch from the president of the park board with an appropriate speech. The corner-stone of the arch was laid on Memorial Day, 1890, and the design is by Stanford White. It is a reproduction in a permanent form of one of the decorations of the centennial celebration of the inauguration of Washington in 1789, which was greatly admired.

Seth Low, formerly mayor of Brooklyn and now president of Columbia College, has recently given a princely gift of a million dollars to the college, to be devoted to the construction and furnishing of a new library building as a memorial to his father, A. A. Low. The act is characteristic of the man and is a noble illustration of the Christian conception of the stewardship of wealth.

The influence of Tammany Hall in the police department is at an end. A new board of police commissioners has been named and they are about to undertake the herculean task of raising the whole department from the depths of mismanagement and corruption into which it has sunk. President Theodore Roosevelt has publicly declared that all appointments will be made wholly without regard to political or religious consideration, and that all the members of the force will be treated purely on their merits in any question of promotion, reduction or dismissal. Col. Fred Grant, Hon. A. D. Parker and Maj. Andrews, the other commissioners, fully endorse these principles; and their eminent standing and previous record in upholding the principles of civil service reform give occasion for great expectations regarding their future administration of this difficult department. People are beginning to see that the Bi-partisan Police bill, which Mayor Strong recently approved and the governor signed, practically provides for a single-headed commission, for many of the executive powers formerly vested in the board, now by law belong to the chief of police, who is the real head of the force and can do what he pleases with his subordinates. The new commissioners are fully aware of this, and are pleased to have in Chief Byrnes a man who will exercise his great power for the good of the city. Measures are now being taken for the reorganization of the Broadway squad, with a view to making it the finest in the city both in physical development and in general capability. The recent trial of Inspector M'Laughlin resulted in a disagreement of the jury, ten rearding him guilty and two standing out for acquittal. After all, the disagreement is a moral victory, for the public has drawn its own deductions and found the inspector guilty. The trial has already cost the county about $30,000, and the next trial is scheduled for May 20.

The New York Herald has recently been investigating the traditional accounts of the single historic Masonic woman, and giving its readers the benefit of its discoveries. There are so many conflicting accounts that it is difficult to arrive at satisfactory conclusions, and so the discussion is still going on.

The Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will hold its 26th annual convention here in a few weeks. This is sometimes called the Women's Mason Order because it is composed mainly of women, and while they are not actually Fremasons they are as near that definition as women can be. The leading officers in this chapter are women, but a few men hold constitutional offices. It might be supposed from this condition of affairs, that the men would have little or nothing to say in running the order, since they are in such a hopeless minority, but this has never been the case. The few men have always run the whole concern to suit themselves. The women get together and pass resolutions and make a show of doing business, and are supposed to be content with such a semblance of authority as the "masculine dictators" are pleased to allow them. There is much wire-pulling in Masonic politics over the offices of Grand Patron and Grand Matron, which are to be filled at the approaching convention. Thus the "wood-shed degree," which was originated to silence and satisfy feminine curiosity, is as big a humbug as any other feature or phase of Freemasonry.

A NEWSBOY'S HOLIDAY.

"Morning papers here," roared the newsboy, as on that restful Sunday morning a man and his wife stepped out of their front door.

"My boy, you ought to have a holiday every seventh day, just as I do. When you have a chance won't you get the newsboys to send a petition to the management of the Sunday newspapers, asking them to put their great issues and attractive supplements on the market Saturdays instead of Sundays?"

"All right," was the reply; and the lady resumed her place by her husband's side with the remark, "How much efficient noise consumers on the Sunday news-venders would lessen the annoyances of city life, and help our city morally!"

CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTERS TO THE ANNUAL MEETING.

TOMAHAWK, Wis., May 4, 1895.

To my co-laborers in the N. C. A., Greeting:—I regret that it is not possible for me to be with you at the annual meeting. God bless you in your labors with that wisdom that is from above. No one in immediate conflict with the empire of darkness, as manifested in the lodge system, and with even a superficial knowledge of facts, but must feel that the work before us requires more than earthly wisdom and power.

In addition to the suggestions in my last article in the Cynosure, I have but one thought I would at this time like to emphasize. It is with regard to work among our women. I do not know whether it be by deliberate forethought, or simply that they are caught in a strong incoming tide, but there can be no doubt of the fact that our women are being rapidly caught in the lodge net. If once they be gathered into the lodge, in anything like the numbers that now throng the lodges of men, I for one shall consider our condition desperate. I speak not only from the argument of principle, but from observation. I would suggest that a strong effort be made by our lecturers wherever practicable to interest the ladies of the W. C. T. U. in this cause. I am convinced with them it is a matter of self-protection. The lodge will practically kill the W. C. T. U. in ten years at its present rate of development among the women. Cordially yours, A. THOMSON.

MENOMONIE, Wis., May 3, 1895.

Dear Brethren:—It would give me great pleasure to be present at the forthcoming convention in Chicago against the abominations of the secret empire, but other duties will render it impracticable. I entertain the same intense antipathy to the lodge system as in other years, and am doing about the same as ever to warn the disciples of Christ against it. I was present when the Cynosure was started, and, as the lamented President J. Blanchard informed me, I sent him the first dollar to encourage him in that enterprise, and it is a joy to me to know that through its influence largely many other papers have long time been turning the light upon those synagogues of Satan. While many have closed their eyes to the light, many others have been rescued, and many more have been kept out of those dens of darkness. Let us give God the praise, and let the good work go on.

Let us not forget what President Blanchard, Sr., used to say about Masonry and Romanism, that "they are tied together at the top." And I am sure that there is nothing nearer the bottom but the devil himself. It is at the confessional that the papacy gives the lie to her public protestations against evil. This is not saying that there are no truly pious people within her pale. What is the notorious Powderly but an emissary of the Romish church? Debs is a Romanist; and notwithstanding the great show of restraint placed upon him, yet it seems he has spent months going as far as the Pacific coast organizing the A. R. U., which, it is feared, will result in a railroad strike that will put the one of last year far into the shade.

The papacy is working with zeal and determination to gain supreme control of our country. And doubtless this is just what Judge Brewer means in his celebrated decision that "this is a Christian country," backing the declaration with the plea that the king and queen of Spain sent Columbus to this country for the purpose of establishing here the Christian religion. The papacy very graciously promises to do for this country what she has done for others. "May the good Lord deliver us" should be our prayer. May he help us to shun the use of the methods and weapons both of Romanism and Masonry, and to wield the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and mightier than all else to transform the sons of men, as individuals and nations. "The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth,"—which in a few years, under the labors of Baxter, transformed the village of Kiderminster from one of drinking and profanity to one of praise and prayer, and has done more than anything else for any nation on earth. May the soon coming Christ rule in the approaching conference and make it fruitful of great good. Love to all the brethren and sisters in the cause.

Yours in Christ, W. W. AMES.

PORT NORFOLK, Va., April 29, 1895.

Dear Brethren:—I would like very much to attend the conference in May, but have not time or means to do it. We have an independent Congregational church at this new place; and I have also begun a school. This is a suburb of Norfolk, just beginning to grow. I am wearied with denominationalism; and whether this work survives as an independent effort or not, it will, while it lasts, be free. Praise the Lord! It is worth considerable sacrifice to stand upon a platform where one is free to speak the truth. You know, at a great price, Wheaton obtained that freedom, but our little church is free-born. So far as I know I am the only voice in this wilderness that is free to witness against secret orders. I do not make this a specialty, because all kinds of iniquity abound, but I do not refrain from a clear testimony. Everywhere this testimony costs me something, but I am glad to resist the devil in this his—I was about to say, greatest enterprise. It is hard, however, to select the devil's specialty in southeastern Virginia. Both white and colored men love the lodge but they do not love each other. I wish you a pleasant, profitable conference. Your friend, CHAS. H. ABBOTT.

FAIRBANKS, Fla., April 23, 1895.

Beloved Co-workers:—How glad I would be to be one among you at the annual meeting. But as I cannot, will tell you how the battle goes on at this end of the line. We have here in our midst four strong powers to fight and overcome—(will put them down in the order as to their nature and influence for evil as they appear to me)—the sect power, the rum power, the secret power and the tobacco enemy—four great hell-born institutions. I put the sect devil ahead because I think in heart he is the worst. The rum fiend next, because he seems to be the worst. The secret enemy third, because he is worse than he seems to be. The tobacco Satan comes on behind, like unto some old smoke pipe of an engine, claiming he is needed to push; but it being the same old deceiver, he pushes the wrong way.

You see at once, I have not only my hands full but my heart is sad, exceedingly sad, at the awful state of things I find here. But, brethren, I find only one way for us to do. That is this: Let each one of us do our best, in working under Jesus, and working together in destroying the works of the devil. Let us work while it is day. With me the sun is "—— sinking fast;

My race is nearly run."

Yours for Jesus only, RUFUS SMITH.

NEWMARKET, N. H., April 28, 1895.

Dear Brethren:—To the annual meeting of the National Christian Association the New Hampshire Auxiliary sends greeting. We are glad to report that our Association is prosperous and growing stronger year after year. We have been organized twenty years. The first ten years our annual meetings were almost wholly taken up with the discussion of the lodge question. This became somewhat monotonous, and gave color to the accusation of our lodge friends that our whole business was to fight secret societies. By general consent, about ten years ago we gradually began to introduce more worship, more Gospel preaching, and all moral reforms as their importance seemed to demand.

Our Association has also been incorporated by the State, and we license and ordain preachers as occasion requires. The lodge-bound condition of our churches rendered the latter step absolutely necessary to our existence. Since broadening our work we have been much more successful in bringing Christian men out of the lodges than before, our meetings have been more largely attended, popular prejudice against us as Christians has been much lessened, revival interest has attended our meetings, and the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit has given greater emphasis to our testimony against organized secrecy and other sins.

When we organized we were obliged to send to New York to get a man who had been a Freemason to tell the truth about that iniquitous system. Now we have a surplus of seceders from all the lodges of any consequence, including Masons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, G. A. R., I. O. G. T., Grange, etc.

Our N. H. C. A. is a Christian association. We seek no help from those who reject Jesus Christ or the cardinal doctrines of his Gospel. We are undenominational, not in name only, but in fact. That is to say, all Christians are treated with impartiality. May the Holy Spirit guide your deliberations and increase the usefulness of the N. C. A. a hundred-fold. Your brother and fellow-servant, S. C. KIMBALL.

THE IMPORTANCE OF TESTIFYING TO THE TRUTH.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 14, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The testimony of Bro. Sutcliffe at the Ravenswood convention seemed to indicate the awful state of an ingenuous soul, sensitive to truth and to God, caught in the coils of a poisonous viper. Doubtless, unless God dealt with him as he did with his servant Job—giving him over to the power of Satan for trial, for a season—there was some spiritual declension whereby his soul was off its guard, or some worldly ambition as the cause or motive for him to join the Masons, or he would not have been lured into the lodge by the seductive wiles of his Masonic neighbors. And we must remember that his allurement into the lodge was before the lodge had been exposed in Wheaton.

We can hardly suppose that such a man as he would have fallen into the lodge snare if he had been warned against it, hence the importance of bearing testimony against these wiles of the devil. We can imagine the awful agony of a soul like that of Bro. Sutcliffe while feeling, as he testified, that not only the Masons would torment him if he broke his obligations to Masonry, but his neighbors would look upon him with suspicion. And there was the spiritual menace against him; for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against wicked spirits. His testimony of the spiritual horrors of his lodge experience ought to incite us to let our light shine on the lodge darkness.

NOT TO TESTIFY IS TO COUNTENANCE SIN.

My visit to Alexandria in Minnesota, a few weeks ago, was not fully reported in the Cynosure. At the close of one of my lectures, invitation was given for replies and testimonies. The invitation was accepted, and one man testified that before he joined the Masons he showed a book exposing Freemasonry to a Mason and asked him if the book was true. The Mason told him that the book was false, and he joined the Masons. But upon returning to his home after his initiation, his wife asked him if the book was true, and he lied like a true Mason also, and told his wife that the book was false, while the lodge ceremonies he had just then gone through with had proved to him that the book was true.

But he has quit lying for the Freemasons and has made himself free from the lodge god by breaking his Masonic obligations. A "demit" does not absolve a man from Masonry and its criminality in the light of God; it does not interfere with the obligation that makes a man a Mason. The candidate is told before he takes the obligation that when once it is taken it can never be repudiated or laid aside. Hence the maxim: "Once a Mason, always a Mason." And, therefore, in order to be free from Masonic bondage in spirit, a Mason must break the Masonic obligation and tell the public what he swore in the lodge that he would not tell. God's Word requires confession of sin in that thing. (See Leviticus 5: 4, 5.) The good of his neighbors also demands the confession.

Readers of the Cynosure may remember that the First Baptist church of this city passed a resolution to suppress testimony against Masonry in that church. The resolution is:

"Resolved, That no member of this church nor any visitor to it shall ever say anything about Masonry in any of its meetings."

Of course it is obvious as to the side on which that resolution is, and its spirit was manifest the other evening when, upon invitation, a 32 degree Mason delivered a discourse in that church in which he glorified Freemasonry and told the people that he was about to take the thirty-third degree. So does a silly, corrupt bride glory in her shame while she advocates the cause of her paramour—Satan.

Yours truly, WM. FENTON.

A FRENCH BISHOP ON MASONRY.

BOSTON, MAY 1, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE: — Monsignore Dussanloup, Bishop of Orleans, France, treats the of subject of Freemasonry from the standpoint of a Christian, and his arguments and facts are pertinent.

Without "mincing the matter" he boldly faces his antagonist with the question, "Can a man be at the same time an intelligent Freemason and a Christian?" To which he unhesitatingly answers "No." After making due allowance for the sincerity of many who are kept in ignorance by designing leaders, he appeals to official utterances and to the constitution of the order and from them brings the proofs upon which he predicates his conclusions. Having traced the record of the lodge from a simple union of operative masons to its maturity, in an order which repudiates divine revelation and the hope of immortality, he shows that this is the logical and the inevitable result of Masonic teachings. "Because Freemasonry, in its true spirit, in its very essence and in its last acts, is the declared enemy of Christianity, and by its fundamental principles an unreconcilable enemy." He then fortifies his position by numerous quotations showing what those "last acts" are, relating to the vital doctrines of Christianity.

Referring to article 125 in the Masonic ritual, which excludes all questions of religious controversy from the lodges, he shows that this belonged to the initiatory stage, when men were not prepared by a systematic training to accept the true doctrine of the mysteries. In brief, that it was the schoolmaster to lead its disciples to the altar upon which they are required to sacrifice every hope of immortality and eternal life. He affirms that the order in Belgium was the first to throw off the disguise and proclaim the real mission of Freemasonry, and that France soon followed. Retaining their professions of "philanthrophy, fraternity, humanity and progress," they openly proclaimed that Christianity "is a used-up formula, a worm-eaten fabric;" that its author was "a bastard" and that "the lying religion of the false priests of Christ" should be "repudiated by every sensible man," and that the Gospel "enchains all progress, stifles all light, and destroys all liberty," so that its ministers "reign quietly over a brutalized population of ignorant slaves" and the "torch of reason" is the only guide to the summit of goodness and greatness." Voltaire was a light in the lodge of his day, and eulogized by the most distinguished Masons after his decease. Brother Jean Mace, eminent in the order, proposed as a toast to this prince of French atheists, "To the memory of Brother Voltaire, that indefatigable soldier; all the battles he fought he gained, my brethren, on our behalf and for our profit." And in further proof of their admiration and gratitude the author adds: "It is a well-known fact that all the Masonic workshops [lodges] of Paris, saving one, subscribed to Voltaire's statue." This is perhaps enough, but I presume to add one further quotation as climactory in this ascending pyramid of blasphemy. "Our final object and aim is, the total annihilation forever of Catholicity and of all ideas of Christianity. WE ARE OUR OWN GODS "

From the plain simple Blue Lodge Masonry introduced into Boston in 1733, the Masonic movement in America has been steadily advancing towards the same goal. And although it has not as yet attained to the bad eminence of officially repudiating all religion and boldly denying God and a future life, it is educating its membership in a Christless creed, and there can scarcely be a question but that the hand that guides, the brain that thinks, and the heart that beats in the Masonic body are shaping the destiny of the lodge to the same bold apostacy against God and all revealed religion. Is it not the duty of every Christian to cry out against such a bloody system before its hellish work is completed and our land deluged by atheism, and rent by merciless and contending factions who, having denied God and immortality, have no moral restraint upon their desires, and whose lusts and passions are circumscribed only by their inability to gratify them? JAMES P. STODDARD.

LITERATURE.

Bro. H. L. Hastings' pen is busy most of the time. He has just sent out a book written in his clear, concise style, of about 500 pages, on the subject of "Higher Critics Criticised." The subject of higher criticism is thrust upon us just now by the enemies of truth, and it is well that there are those who are able and willing to show what the truth is to this class of persons who confuse the minds of the simple, if not their own, while attempting to measure the word and law,—the book of the infinite God—by their six-inch measure! Mr. Hastings says: "The phrase 'Higher Critic' is as indefinite as the term reptile, which may mean either a crocodile, a mud-turtle, a lizard, or a striped snake; or the word animal, which may be a mouse, a mammoth or a Bengal tiger." ...."The field of criticism is world-wide. There are matters which are not worth a critical thought; and there are matters concerning which men should offer criticism with care and respect."...."There is perhaps no more important field for criticism than that which is afforded by the Sacred Books which have come to be regarded in various quarters as of superhuman origin and divine authority. These books....make such demands upon the faith and obedience of men, that it is an obvious duty to scrutinize their claims, and refuse to admit them unless they are solidly established. Of course we must not be left without something, and we wish to know to whom shall we go to find the words of eternal life."...."The Christian Register for June, 1891, a paper fully alive to the merits, and quite in harmony with the methods and conclusions of the higher critics, says: 'Thomas Paine, though stigmatized and set aside as an infidel, finds reincarnation in the modern Biblical critic. Paine pointed out the contradictions in the Bible, which rendered impossible the claim that it is an infallible book. He lived too far in advance of his age. The spirit of modern scientific criticism had not yet come. ....And now it is interesting to find that with a different spirit, and with different tools, and bound by certain traditions from which Paine was free, the professors in our orthodox seminaries are doing again the work which Paine did, and like him, in the interests of honesty and truth.'"...."But they must not ask us to depend on authority when we drop the Bible. We cannot make a fetish of the new books of the higher critics. They must give us evidence, and demonstration, and must bring this evidence down where the common people can read and understand it; and if they will kindly agree among themselves, so that when one of them has settled everything no one else will come along next day and upset the whole, we shall be truly thankful. Especially would we be glad to have them tell us what they believe, and why they believe it. 'Tell me what you believe, I have doubts enough of my own;' is a saying attributed to Goethe. These gentlemen have spent time enough telling us what they do not believe; now will they inform us what they do believe, and also why they believe it? They have showed us how to cut our cable; will they now tell us how to come to anchor, and where we are to find an anchorage ground? Truth courts investigation. Candid men are not afraid to consider difficulties which occur in the Hebrew Scriptures; but when such difficulties are invented or exaggerated, they indicate the errancy of the critic rather than the Book he criticises." The book is one of research and well written. We would recommend it, not instead of the Bible but its perusal with the Bible, to any candid one who has time and inclination to read on the important question "what is truth?" The book is bound in cloth. Price $1.50. By H. L. Hastings 47 Corn Hill, Boston.

A minister once asked a saloon-keeper if his conscience never troubled him respecting his business. The man said: "Come inside, sir." It was the middle of the day. There were none of the usual customers about. My friend walked in. The grog-seller went behind his own bar, and leaning on it said: "Reverend sir: There are times when I stand behind this bar and look at the men who fill this room; I hear their blasphemy and their lewd songs; I see their fighting and their awful misconduct, and I often say to myself, 'If there is a picture of hell on our earth, it is in places like this.'"—Golden Censor.

How the Curves of Waves Are Regulated by the Coast.

When waves advance toward the shore, their circumstances change, in general gradually, from those of oscillatory waves to those of waves of transition, as the depth of the water becomes less and less considerable in comparison with the length of the wave, and it is found by experiment that they break, as it is called, when the depth of the water is about equal to the height of the crest above the undisturbed level.

How to Estimate the Value of a Pearl.

The beauty and value of pearls depend on their color, form, texture (skin), transparency (water) and luster. A pearl to be perfect must possess the following qualifications: It must be perfectly round or drop shaped, have a perfectly pure white color, must be slightly transparent, free from specks, spots or blemishes and must possess the peculiar luster characteristic of the gem. A perfect pearl of one grain weight is worth from 40 to 50 cents, while one of 30 grains is worth from $400 to $500. Round pearls above this weight are so rare that they command exceptional prices, depending on the circumstances of the sale to bring almost any figure. In India and China the yellow pearls are preferred.

How to Make Clothing Semifireproof.

Add one ounce of alum to the last water used to rinse children's dresses, and they will be rendered uninflammable or so slightly combustible that they would take fire very slowly, if at all, and will not flame. This is a simple precaution which may be adopted in families of children. Bed curtains and linen in general may also be treated in the same way.

How to Send Fruit Long Distances.

Ventilation of packages in which fruit is packed for shipping serves no purpose except to allow the escape of surplus moisture. Otherwise the contact with fresh air every moment hastens its decay all the more. The important point in packing fruit is to see that it is dry on the outside as it can be made. Then wrap each specimen in a little cotton, which will serve both to exclude air and to absorb any moisture that the fruit will naturally exhale. This was the way that strawberries were successfully shipped to the World's fair at Chicago last summer. When taken out of the cotton, each specimen was as fresh as when put up and would keep six or eight days. With large fruit a piece of lime put in the package proves an excellent absorber of moisture, which is what is most likely to cause decay.

How to Select Curtains.

In choosing curtains it is well to remember that a bright yellow fabric will light up a north room as nothing else can. Curtains in a dull shade of light green are most suitable for a room furnished in rose color or yellow, as a green light will soften the bright tintings and is always pleasant to the eye. Curtains for bookcases add much to the appearance of a room and are an absolute necessity on a low bookcase containing volumes with unattractive bindings. Inexpensive curtains may be made of the heavy repped cretonne which is now offered in such beautiful colorings. Blue denim, which is made softer than the old fashioned blue jean and is therefore more suitable for embroidering, is also an excellent material for this purpose, provided the other furnishings of the room will permit its use.

The Christian Cynosure.

WM. I. PHILLIPS, PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1895.

Sanctify the Lord of Hosts himself and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread. Isa. 8: 13.

We are glad to promise our readers a full and interesting account of the Annual Meeting Conference, by Rev. E. B. Wylie, next week. Shall we not hear from other members of the Board of Directors?

THE KEELEY PROPOSITION.

There is an effort being made by the Keeley League to get a bill passed by the Illinois Legislature which provides for the treatment of "indigent inebriates medically at the expense of the counties." It is stated in a circular sent to the papers that six States already have such laws, and twelve other States are considering the advisibility of making such a law. The Keeley League is composed of "cured inebriates." The following reasons are assigned by them for the law:

(1) Because every thinking person knows that drunkenness is an evil of mammoth proportions, and we as cured men know it better than any. (2) Drunkenness breaks up and ruins families which are the foundation of the commonwealth. (3) Millions are spent which should go into the legitimate channels of trade; crime is largely due to drunkenness, as statistics clearly show seventy-five per cent of all the sentences passed by the various courts are upon persons who owe their downfall to drunkenness. (4) It populates jails, poorhouses and insane asylums. (5) It is estimated that in this country upwards of one hundred thousand people die or are killed each year by reason of drunkenness. It is because we desire to see this monstrous evil removed that we ask for legislation on this subject.

The principle on which the Keeley cure is established is that drunkenness is a disease, and consequently drunkard should be cared for as a man who had the lung fever or any other disease should be.

That men become diseased by drinking is true. Still the sickness is not the worst feature of his case; and to make him an object of charity, to tax the sober and industrious to enable him to escape the effect of his sin while the sinful nature and tendency is unchanged and the power to gratify the lust remaining, would, in the end, promote the very evil we wish to remove.

Drunkenness is a sin first. "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." Jas. 1: 14,15. "Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunknards.....shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 6: 10. It is right that the way of transgressors should be hard; it is a merciful provision of a loving God.

But it is urged the innocent suffer, families are broken up, etc. All this is true, but the scheme proposed is not to care for the innocent, but to relieve the guilty one who, with his eyes open to the evils with which strong drink has cursed the earth in all ages, deliberately took his first drink.

If the traffic in strong drink were put out of the way we might, with reason, bear the tax cheerfully, but while the present condition of things remains we can only kindly urge inebriates to flee to Him who can "save to the uttermost all who come to God by him." And we would suggest that it were no more than right so long as saloons exist that if any class of persons should be taxed to support and relieve the drunkard, it should be those who have defrauded him of his money, manhood and strength.

POLITICS AND REFORM.

A call for a National Conference on Political Reform, to meet in the University Temple, Prohibition Park, Staten Island, June 28 to July 4, is signed by more than one hundred persons, many of them eminent as reformers, lecturers or otherwise, such as Joseph Cook, ex-Gov. St. John, Miss F. E. Willard, etc. The object of the conference is an interchange of views on the following leading questions:

1. No manufacture or sale of alcoholic liquor for medical or other use except by the State and Federal Government; total prohibition for beverage purposes.
2. The details of the tariff regulated by a national bureau.
3. No monopolies or trusts dealing in the necessities of life and preventing fair competition.
4. The ownership by the government—federal, state, or municipal—of railroads, telephones and telegraphs.
5. Civil Service Reform rigidly applied to non-political offices.
6. Woman suffrage.
7. Tax reform.
8. Bi-metalism.—Monometalism.—Free coinage of silver and gold.—The demonetization of both gold and silver.
9. A national currency issued by the federal government only, exchangeable in gold and silver bullion at the option of the government; in gold bullion at the rate of 25.8 grains (standard) to the dollar, and in silver bullion of an equivalent market value.
10. The election, by direct vote, of United States Senators.
11. The system of proportional representation.

The discussion shall be open alike to those who are friendly or hostile to these various views, believing that the way to reach a closer union is through free speech and a clearer understanding of the views held by all. If possible, without a violation of principle, the friends of political reform should enter the next Presidential campaign united. No harm can come from a frank talk along these lines.

The conference will be a representative one, all political reform organizations being invited to participate; as the Prohibition party, People's party, Socialist Labor party, organizations that advocate civil service reform, single tax, direct tax, Sunday observance, and all other organizations that aim at cleaner politics and a better government.

NUMBER OF DELEGATES.

Local organizations to be entitled to one delegate to every twenty members; representative organizations less than State, five delegates each; State organizations, ten each; national organizations, twenty each. Each delegate will be expected to present credentials signed by the proper officer of the society or organization he represents. Other delegates may be granted the privilege of the floor, but not the privilege of voting.

The resolutions or motions adopted or carried will be expressive of the sentiment of the conference, but will not be binding upon the individual delegates or the bodies they represent.

ASSESSMENT.

Each delegate will be required to contribute one dollar to meet the expenses of the conference. The auditorium, lighting, and much of the general advertisement, are contributed free.

RAILROAD FARE.

It is expected that special rates can be secured on the railroads for delegates and friends. Full announcement will be made later.

Hotel accommodations within the park at $1.00 to $2.00; good accommodations at the Park Hotel at $1.50 per day, or guests who prefer can stop in New York City.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The Board elected at the recent annual meeting met at the Association rooms, 221 West Madison St., May 15, 1895, and organized as follows: Pres. Charles A. Blanchard, chairman; Prof. H. F. Kletzing, vice chairman; Edgar B. Wylie, secretary.

The committees were constituted as follows:

Prof. Elliot Whipple, Prof. H. A. Fischer and Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, on Finance and Auditing of Accounts.

William I. Phillips, W. B. Stoddard, E. A. Cook and C. J. Holmes, on Real Estate.

P. A. Raidabaugh, E. A. Cook, M. A. Gault, T. B. Arnold and W. I. Phillips, on Publications, including the Cynosure.

The Finance Committee, together with Rev. W. O. Dinius and Rev. Dr. J. A. Collins, were made a Committee on Convention and Field Work.

Since the death of Rev. Henry L. Kellogg, a committee appointed for the purpose has sought a successor to the important editorship of the publications of the National Christian Association. Some months ago a proposition was made to Rev. M. A. Gault, who is well known to the constituents of the Association as a man of an evangelical spirit and large experience in various moral reforms. Mr. Gault, after careful consideration, has accepted the trust and will enter upon the duties of the office June 1st. Until then, as for some months past, Mrs. Henry L. Kellogg will act as editor.

Various communications from friends in different parts of the country were referred to the appropriate committees for their consideration and report at the next meeting.

The General Secretary, Wm. I. Phillips, submitted a plan for a convention to be held in the South, which was favorably received and referred to the Committee on Conventions for report at an early date.

The salary of the treasurer and general secretary was made the same as last year, and his bonds were deposited with the secretary of the Board. In view of the eminent success of the general secretary on the field, the Board urged that as much as possible of the details of the office work be put into the hands of a clerk, and that Mr. Phillips devote himself to the field work.

Special and appreciative mention was made of the work of Messrs. W. B. Stoddard, P. B. Williams and S. F. Porter, and the contracts between them and the Board were voted, with much confidence in their ability and faithfulness.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, who sought the blessing of the Father of lights upon the work and workers for the new year. The whole meeting from first to last was characterized by a hopefulness born of faith in God and confidence in the wisdom of the work of the National Christian Association.

With the return of business prosperity the finances of the Association will be strengthened and more aggressive work will be done. Through great sacrifice donations have been made to the work the past year. The loyal friends of the Association will understand that whatever they may be able to do at once will encourage and strengthen the official Board throughout the new year.

CHARLES A. BLANCHARD, Chairman,
EDGAR B. WYLIE, Secretary.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

This subject was considered in a union meeting of the young people's Christian societies of Wheaton, Sabbath evening, May 19. Several of the addresses were especially strong, in that they were scriptural, practical and suggestive.

As a nation we are sowing,—"Sunday newspapers," travel on street cars and railroads, Sabbath-day mail service, grocery and drug business, saloons, games, pleasure-riding, walking and social visits on Sabbath afternoon,—these are the seed; what shall the harvest be? "Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." "For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption: but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Benj. T. Worrell, "though not able to bear testimony against the heathenish practices of the secret empire," writes: "Such practices have not grown less hateful in my sight in the lapse of years."

—Rev. E. L. Harris writes: "My father was a decided Anti-mason, and I hope never to dishonor his memory by forsaking his principles. May God bless your gathering and help you to plan wisely."

—The word from Wooruff Post is: "Be assured you have my prayer and sympathies in reference to the great work in which you are engaged. The Lord be with and bless the members of the association."

Bro. A. W. Parry writes: "I regret I cannot be present at your meeting. I am to speak at Winnebago this week on the topic 'The Relation of the Lodge to the Church and State.' This is by request and an arrangement which I cannot postpone. I am in full accord with you, and though absent in person, you have my prayers, in your work of faith and labor of love and patience of hope. Stand fast in the faith. Quit you like men; be strong."

—Bro. S. F. Proctor writes from Stout, Tex.: "The battle is on here now in earnest. 'Without holiness no man shall see the Lord.' Ten of the twelve said we are not able to possess the land. But I take the minority report and through the strength of Israel's God I do possess the land. Pray that I may go to battle in no other name."

—Rev. R. Cooper Bailey, of Humboldt, Neb., pastor of the Baptist church, has been requested by a large majority of his church to continue with them in that capacity another year. Mr. Bailey was very helpful during the State Convention held in Humboldt, Neb., last February. His sermon on Separation was a strong plea for a church walking with God.

"If my house were in flames, and I could not replace it, I would (next to saving my children) make the greatest possible effort to save my Bible. I come home, open that Book, read perhaps the Sermon on the Mount, and although I am not a Christian, I am a better man for it. The Book holds supreme place in my affections." This said, the practical, patient, prominent politician and pleader-at-law turned to his waiting client.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Southern Baptist Convention.—Its findings.—Liquor to minors.—Epworth League—Board of trade and gambling.

The Southern Baptist Convention completed its work yesterday and its members are on the way to their homes. They had a good time, the cool weather being specially propitious for Washington sight-seeing, and if there was any disappointment over what the convention did or did not do it was not publicly manifested. The convention voted down the proposition for the organization of a Southern Baptist young people's union, condemned many of the amusement features which are common in churches, and voted strongly in favor of the adoption of the Old Testament tithing system—giving one-tenth of your income to the Lord. A report, which was rejected, recommended the establishment of a permanent building board to have general charge of the erection of church edifices within the territory controlled by the convention. According to the report, there are now more than 30,000 Baptist churches in the South, and still there are 3,000 homeless congregations, most of them in the Southwest. In Texas alone there are 1,000 Baptist congregations without shelter. The same authority says there are 10,000,000 people in the South without the Gospel and that 2,000 missionaries are needed. The rejection of the report leaves the erection of churches under the partial control of the Board of Home Missions.

It was made clearly apparent in the address of Rev. Dr. Hawthorne, of Atlanta, Ga., on the history, work and future prospects of the Southern Baptist Convention, that the Southern Baptists were not at this time inclined to go any further towards uniting with their Northern brethren than the plan for co-operation on terms of equality which has been agreed upon by the Home Missionary Boards of the two wings as to missionary work among the Negroes. He also emphasized the statement that there are now more Baptists in the South than in all the rest of the world added together and stated his belief that a union of Southern and Northern Baptists was not desirable. He also used the following language upon a subject more or less interesting to members of all denominations: "There is another ancient principle, laid down by as good a man as the apostle Paul, that, I think, it will be long before we desert. It relates to the place of woman in the church. I tell you that the blizzard that blasted the hopes and the crops of our Southern States in the past winter will be a mild summer zepher in comparison to the blast that awaits the Baptist minister who shall suggest in a Baptist conference to ordain to ministerial orders the woman who has usurped the discarded habiliments of her subjugated husband."

If any incentive were needed to keep up the work against those saloon-keepers who sell liquor to minors it is furnished by such cases as this: A sixteen-year-old boy, son of respectable parents, was arrested in a boisterously intoxicated condition, for disturbing a meeting held by the Salvation Army. He positively refused to tell the names of the saloon-keepers who furnished him whisky, but said that some of them had given him liquor for nothing. Poor, misguided boy, he seems to think that these human fiends who gave him whisky for nothing were doing him a kindness, and is utterly unable to comprehend that in making him a drunkard they are his worst enemies.

Last Sunday was celebrated by appropriate services in a number of the Methodist churches as the sixth general anniversary of the Epworth League. A feature of the services at Wesley church was an address by Rev. F. L. Wilkins, president of the Baptist Young People's Union, who referred feelingly to the great and noble work that was being done by the young people's church organizations.

A special meeting of the Washington Board of Trade was held last night for the purpose of discussing and devising ways and means of breaking up the gambling dens on the Virginia side of the Potomac. A number of ministers attended the meeting by special invitation. Every speaker emphasized the necessity of ridding the national capital of the demoralizing influences which these gamblers are exercising over the young men of Washington. Prominent business men and ministers, who personally visited the two race tracks, which are the headquarters of the gambling and criminal element, described what they saw, and they did not see things at their worst, as by an error on the part of somebody their visits were announced to the gamblers before they were made and the surroundings were made as respectable as possible. But enough was seen to convince the visitors that the places must be broken up. *

The Reformed Presbyterian says: "Why are so few from the world joining our churches? Because so many from our churches are joining the world. Parents who are halfhearted in religion soon find their children whole-hearted in worldliness. Our young people are vanishing from the churches like snow in a spring thaw. It is the swell thing to give 'Sunday' afternoon teas now. I notice with pain that many church-going people attend these Sunday afternoon teas.' We would class with these teas the Sunday morning paper, and the afternoon drive to the park. The tide of the world has a fearful suction power, and many are going seaward, worldward, with the tide."

REFORM NEWS.

W. B. STODDARD IN PITTSBURG.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 17, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE.—I reached this city last evening. Find the hotels filled with ministers, and things moving generally. The General Assemblies of the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian churches are held here. The Reformed Presbyterians (New School) are holding their General Assembly meeting at Darlington, Pa., near by. I hope to look in on all of these bodies and call attention to our work as the way may open. En-route for this city I stopped with friends in Ohio, visiting Cedarville, Clifton, Columbus, and Steubenville.

At Cedarville I was permitted to listen to an interesting account of the mission work being done by the Covenanter church in Syria. The address was given by Miss Edgar, a returned missionary. In presenting the field and its needs she is hoping to enlist greater aid in enlightening those benighted ones. The church there is run largely on the Masonic plan in this country, the men alone being admitted. The women are looked upon as mere animals, having no souls, and unable to keep the secrets of their husbands' church.

I spoke last Sabbath to an audience of some 300 in the United Presbyterian church at Clifton, Ohio, Rev. Davidson, pastor. There are several readers of the Cynosure in this congregation. I am always sure of a welcome here from pastor and people.

Friends at Cedarville renewed for Cynosure and contributed to the furtherance of our work as usual. They believe in the perseverance of the saints down there, and try to practice what they preach.

Is there not some friend in Ohio who could give time for lecture work? There are some funds in the treasury, and more would be secured to back a live worker. Write to W. R. Sterrett, Cedarville, O., State Treas., or Rev. S. P. Long, 1238 Wesley Ave., Columbus, O., Chairman of State Executive Committee. I trust the Lord may move some one to take hold of this much-needed work in Ohio. There are plenty of loyal friends who will help the right man.

I write in the United Presbyterian book-rooms. Preparation is being made for the tearing down of this building and the erection of a nine-story structure as the headquarters of this growing denomination. May the Lord bless our United Presbyterian brethren and keep them ever true on the lodge and all reform questions.

Doors are open and opening for work here. Home Hotel, Pittsburg, will be my address for a week or more. W. B. STODDARD.

TIME TO CALL A HALT.

The spread of the so-called liberal thought, sometimes called the higher criticism, or advanced Christianity, is greater than the casual thinker would imagine. Especially is this true on the Pacific Coast. In fact, on the one hand it is disgusting to the true Christian; on the other a source of sorrow and deep regret. Beyond it all, however, there is a brightness which is very encouraging. It is in the fact that our Christianity is divine. Nothing else could carry such a load of stuff and push through, as our blessed religion does. Yet it does seem to me it is time to call a halt to the course pursued by some very prominent pastors of the truly orthodox churches, as they appear Sabbath after Sabbath, preaching anything and everything except "Christ and him crucified."

One of the most popular preachers of the coast recently preached a discourse for thirty-five minutes without mentioning Christ, God, Gospel, salvation or religion. He is now putting in his Sabbath evenings discoursing on Lincoln and Grant. He takes the position that there is no personal devil, nothing more than our evil dispositions. The "wish," I presume, is "father to the thought."

Another of our very popular city pastors preached last Sabbath evening that Christ's body never rose from the tomb. It was but his spirit that rose and ascended on high.

If these expressions came from ignorant men, we might overlook them. But coming from these prominent doctors of divinity, it is time to enter our protest. So long as good men and women will listen to such stuff, and pay their money for it, they can have their ears tickled. The time will come when men and women will get their eyes open, we hope, to see the folly and sin of such teachings, and turn away.

How far the lodges and lodge relations are responsible for this sort of preaching is a question for thought. What right have such men to exalt and extol Lincoln and Grant as great heroes, when they (the pastors) are cowering before moral evils. What such men need to do, is to stop praising the heroes of the past, and become heroes themselves, to dare and do what the heroes of the past dared and did. Even greater things are needed. They convert their churches into "play houses," and they and their backslidden members become of the world. All we can do, however, is to protest. When the tide of evil is against us until it would almost overwhelm us, protest; have the courage of your convictions, and protest against evil anywhere and everywhere. Let us keep a good conscience, a conscience as steady as the needle to the pole. Always know our duty and do it. Knowing our message and telling it, whether men "hear, or whether they forbear. Because "they forbear" is no reason why we should; but let us always ask, "would Christ do so?"

P. B. WILLIAMS.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, to Friends in 1794, Quoted by Myron Holley: "The real people occasionally assembled in order to express their sentiments on political sentiments, ought never to be confounded with permanent, self-appointed societies, usurping the right to control constituted authorities, and to dictate to public opinion. While the former was entitled to respect, the latter was incompatible with all government, and must either sink into general dis-esteem, or finally overturn the established order of things."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 26. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Christ's cross. My cross.—Mark viii, 34-38.

It cannot but be interesting and instructive to study and compare Christ's cross and our crosses. It is only in the light of His cross that we can understand our own, and nothing inspires us to bear our crosses so much as the thought of His. In the light of His cross, then, we may learn what it is to have a cross, how it is to be borne and in what it is to result.

1. Christ's cross required self denial. So will mine. Christ denied Himself of many things that were rightfully His, in order that He might take up His cross. He denied Himself of heaven, of his Heavenly Father's association and fellowship. His life upon earth was a constant self denial, and at last He denied Himself of life itself. To us He says, "Whosoever will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross." To take up our crosses we must deny ourselves. We must deny ourselves of all that is sinful, of all that would bring injury to ourselves or to our fellow men, of all that is condemned of God. To give up all for Christ may sometimes seem a hardship, but by constant practice even self denial for Christ becomes a positive pleasure, and, as by comparison, we see how insignificant our cross of self denial is to His, how willingly we should deny ourselves for Him.

2. Christ took up His cross. So should I. To die on the cross Christ had to carry it to the place of execution, and He did it, and even when Simon was compelled to assist Him, still He bore the heavier end of it. He not only bore the real cross, but all the sorrows and burdens typified by the cross. As Christ bore His cross, so should I mine. "Let him deny himself and take up his cross" are the words of Christ Himself. We must take up our crosses. We must carry the burdens and tribulations that come to us as Christians, comforted and sustained by the fact that He will assist us. As He carried the heavier end of the cross for Simon, so Christ bears the heavier end of the crosses of all His disciples.

3. Christ's cross led to His crown. So will mine. "He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, wherefor God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name." Christ lost His life that He might save it; He died that He might live; He bore the cross that He might wear the crown. The same law governs our lives. If we would save our lives for eternity, we must lose them in time; if we would reign with Christ, we must suffer with Him; if we would be exalted, we must humble ourselves; if we would live, we must die; if we would wear a crown, we must carry the cross; to enter heaven we must come up through great tribulation.

French Endeavorers.

The Christian Endeavor society of the American church in Paris is very energetic nowadays. Since its annual meeting in the latter part of October it has accomplished a great deal.

The society holds its third prayer meeting every mouth in connection with the church missionary service, and a special mission field is discussed.

The attendance upon the society meetings averages about 100. Our young people render efficient service in connection with the pastor's receptions. Altogether the work here is prospering with an enthusiasm worthy of the country of its birth.

Work of the Tract Society.

Ninety-five years ago the Religious Tract society was founded. Since then it has printed the gospels in 201 languages. It has issued the "Pilgrim's Progress" in 87 languages. Its New Testament commentary has appeared in Chinese, Arabic, Syriac, Mahrati, Bengali, Tamil, Urdo, Hindoo, Canarese, Cingalese and Karen. Last year it sent out 67,000,000 publications.

Keep Up the Interest In Missions.

A New York Endeavorer suggests that members of the missionary committee take turns in bringing to each prayer meeting of the society some brief thought or fact about missions. There can scarcely be a prayer meeting topic with which missions cannot accord.

Christian Endeavor Clippings.

"I cannot conceive of any good reason why the principles of Christian Endeavor should not take firm hold on our beloved Protestant Episcopal church," writes an earnest Episcopalian Endeavorer.

Some Endeavorers were praying earnestly for months that one of their society might be led to enlist in foreign missionary work. Before long two Endeavorers from that society declared their intention to go to the foreign field when the way opened.

The Waco (Tex.) Christian Endeavorer suggests that the Boston convention and the state convention should be continually kept before societies by the information committees, who could report from week to week the progress that is being made by the convention committees.

A Plucky Woman.

Miss Nannie Robinson, aged about 20 years, since the death of her father, George Robinson, last fall, has been running their farm, on Back Oak ridge, six miles north of Hancock, and a sawmill besides. She is assisted only by her brother Charles, aged about 15 years. About nine months ago her father, mother and sister, Letitia, a schoolteacher about 18 years of age, were all stricken with typhoid fever. The father and daughter died within a few days of each other. The mother is still lingering, and is in the constant care of Allie, the oldest daughter. A water power sawmill on the farm has been kept going since the father's death.

With the assistance of the boy, Miss Robinson cut down trees and hauled the logs to the sawmill, where they were converted into timber. Four months were consumed in logging, and Miss Robinson cut down most of the trees herself. She put the logs on the mill and personally superintended the sawing. Most of the framework of the large warehouse of E. P. Cohill, now in course of erection at Hancock, was sawed by her. Lumber from her mill has been purchased by dealers in Hancock. Miss Robinson is a stout young woman and a very energetic worker. She is a splendid horsewoman. Besides doing all this, she attends to the farm work.—Hancock (Md.) Dispatch.

Florence Nightingale Seventy-five.

On the 15th day of May Florence Nightingale celebrates her seventy-fifth birthday—as great a woman and as great a public benefactor and as much of a heroine as she was 40 years ago, when she went forth from her comfortable home in England, not as a mere nurse to attend to the wants of the wounded and dying British soldiers in the Crimea, but as a fearless organizer of a great field hospital system, which the British war office authorities, staff officers and generals had looked upon as a mere matter of afterthought in the preliminary arrangements of one of the most difficult campaigns in the history of the civilized world, writes Fitz Roy Gardner in a sketch of "Florence Nightingale at Seventy-five" in The Ladies' Home Journal.

No one had thought of the physical sufferings which would have to be undergone by the brave soldiers who were sent out with the prospect of a long winter campaign before them, without any adequate hospital arrangements having been made. When the great mistake was realized, it was a woman who came forward to rectify the terrible blunder, and it may easily be imagined that obstacles were thrown in her way. But public opinion was soon aroused, and when Miss Florence Nightingale arrived at the Crimea with her band of nurses she had the whole British people at her back.

A Woman Sexton.

Many women in New York have mastered the art of embalming and are employed as undertakers' assistants in much the same way as a doctor calls on the services of a nurse. There are several women undertakers who sell coffins, provide shrouds and attend to other details of their gloomy calling. These last are not necessarily embalmers and are in most instances the widows of undertakers, carrying on the business which their husbands established. They assume charge of a dead body and prepare it for burial, but invariably call on some friendly man undertaker to conduct the funeral and ostensibly appear in charge. Brooklyn boasts a woman who is not only an undertaker, but the sexton of a church as well, successfully discharging all the duties that pertain to both callings, except the personal conduct of a public funeral.—New York Tribune.

The Women of Baltimore.

The women of Baltimore have formed a good government club, with 70 members. The purposes announced are to look after the economical and efficient management of city affairs, to promote cleanliness, health and beauty and to establish cooking schools for the training of young women. This is cutting out a good deal of work for any club, and excellent work, too, and would furnish the most salutary employment for people of leisure, and who find that time hangs heavily on their hands. We don't see anything in these objects that should detract from feminine grace or render women less competent to fulfill their part in the world.—Boston Transcript.

German Degree to a Woman.

Miss Grace Chisholm, an English woman, has just taken the degree of philosophy at the University of Gottingen, with the express permission of the Prussian minister of education.

This is the first degree ever taken by a woman at Gottingen since it became a university. The emperor has hitherto opposed the admission of ladies to the imperial universities, and it is supposed that the conferring of the degree upon Miss Chisholm indicates a change of policy in regard to the higher education of women.—Berlin Dispatch.

A Busy Invalid.

Mrs. Stewart, wife of Hon. Gideon T. Stewart of Norwalk, O., although an invalid for many years, is interested in all suffrage and temperance work, and many of the meetings are held in her large parlors. She not only looks after her household, but also has a large farm under her direct supervision.

Battleball.

The feminine version of football as played at Boston university and called "battleball" seems a fit counterpart for the genuine article. A dislocated finger, another finger sprained, a chandelier broken and a glass door cracked in the first game make a noble record.—Boston Journal.

Women School Trustees.

The commissioners of the District of Columbia have just appointed two women school trustees—Mrs. Louise Reed Stowell and Mrs. Mary Church Terrell. Both are college graduates, one from the University of Michigan and the other from Oberlin college.

Mrs. Frances Lybrand.

Mrs. Frances Lybraud of Ohio has been on the examiners' corps in the civil engineering department of the patent office at Washington for about ten years. She is a majestic looking woman, with a force of character that would ennoble her to construct a railroad, if need were, and she has the knowledge to do it.

This extension of municipal suffrage to women is a right and not an expediency.—Waltham Free Press.

There are a large number of retired teachers among the successful women fruit farmers of California.

ALCOHOL IN FRANCE.

ACADEMY OF MEDICINE PROTESTS AGAINST THE ABUSE.

Statistics Show That Fifty Per Cent of Hospital Patients Suffer From Alcoholic Poisoning—Use of Absinthe Increasing. A Strong Indictment.

It will not be the fault of the doctors and other men of science in France if the public conscience is not aroused to the dangers threatened society from the abuse of alcohol, writes the Paris correspondent of the New York Tribune. In the last few days the Academy of Medicine, the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences and the superior council of the public assistance have listened to important and interesting reports on the subject by noted specialists in tuberculosis, insanity and the other diseases which follow on alcoholism. Experts on criminal and social statistics have also given their testimony. So formidable an indictment has not been drawn up since M. Claude, senator of the Vosges, presented to parliament in 1887 his monumental report on the consumption of alcohol in France, and never have there been so contemptibly weak answers from the politicians who defend free alcohol for reasons of their own.

At the Academy of Medicine the speaker was Dr. Lancereaux, who has made a special investigation of a habit which is becoming characteristically Parisian—"absinthism." The doctor began from a fact in his own general experience. In his hospital service he has found that out of 20 patients ten are regularly suffering from some form of alcoholic poisoning, in the proportion of five from wine and the ordinary distilled liquors and five from absinthe or similar "bitters." Naturally, he asks, if this is the case, what is to become of the people of Paris? To satisfy himself fully as to the extent of the danger, he made inquiries of the director of direct taxes, and the statistics of the state entirely confirmed his own observations.

From 1885 to 1892 the amount of absinthe and similar drinks coming under the observation of the excise authorities of the city was more than doubled. Not only that, but the rate of increase at the end of these seven years had itself doubled, the yearly increase being now nearly 500,000 gallons. The total annual consumption is about 3,630,000 gallons, or more than two gallons for each member of the adult population. These exact figures, it should be noticed, concern only those "bitters" distilled with essential oils, which act far more powerfully than even the impure simpler alcohols in producing epileptic and tuberculous heredity and criminal insanity and in the extinction of the family itself.

According to the same statistics, the consumption of ordinary alcoholic liquors increases more slowly. It had risen, however, in 1892 to a total of 35,325,246 gallons. This represents, not the ultimate amount of liquid, but the alcohol of 100 degrees proof actually consumed by Parisian drinkers. Altogether it amounts to at least 15 gallons yearly for each adult. The liquor sellers acknowledge that, so far as absinthe and the like are concerned, women come in for a large proportion of this enormous consumption.

Dr. Lancereaux sums up the results on the population at large as a mortality greater than that from the gravest epidemics, the ruin of labor, the steady diminution of the riches and—what is already startlingly evident in France—of the very population of the country.

At the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences, M. Theophile Roussel treated of certain dangers arising from the present state of legislation. On the one hand, juries are obliged to acquit criminals who are declared insane as being irresponsible for their acts. On the other hand, experience shows that a large proportion of this criminal insanity is simply an advanced stage of alcoholism, which is soon cured to all outward an-pearances by the abstinence enforced in the asylum to which the irresponsible criminal is committed.

When this happens, the law orders that he be discharged and left free for the next manifestation of his madness, which is almost sure to come. At Sainte-Anne, the Paris asylum for the insane, there are irresponsible criminals of this kind who have been under treatment 20 different times after as many trials before a jury. Zola, in "L'Assommoir," brought out this fact many years ago. His alcoholic workman is made to speak of this enforced sojourn in the asylum as "going to the country." The serious side of the matter comes from the horrible tragedies—murders and the like—which are constantly occurring in Paris and presumably elsewhere from just such alcoholism merging into madness.

Rum Responsible.

Warden George of the Frankfort (Ky.) penitentiary makes the thought stirring statement in his annual report that of the 500 convicts received during the last year more than 400 claim to have been drunk when they committed their offense. Comment is unnecessary in the face of such an object lesson.

An Excellent Suggestion.

There is great need in this state of a law providing that when a fire breaks out all saloons within a radius of a quarter of a mile shall be closed until it is extinguished. Such a statute would greatly improve the efficiency of fire departments, especially volunteer ones. —Kingston Freeman.

Liquor Never Elevates.

An indulgence in intoxicants of any sort has never helped a man to any social position worth the having. On the contrary, it has kept many from attaining a position to which by birth and good breeding and all other qualifications they were entitled.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Glad Tidings.

From lands across the ocean wide,
From our own states so free,
From every hill and vale and plain
And islands of the sea
Glad tidings come of battles won,
Of onward moves each day,
Achieved by Templars brave and true,
While pressing on their way.

While glad news comes of good deeds done,
And lives from ruin brought,
Let us remember that this work
By patient toil was wrought;
That we cannot obtain results
That will uplift our race
Unless we work and humbly pray
For God's strong aid and grace.

Oh, may our order onward go
And combat more and more
The dreadful curse of every land
Than it has done before!
May we resolve to win the day,
And never to retreat,
But ever fight until the foe
Is crushed beneath our feet.

Then let us now new courage take
And firmly let us stand,
United by our love and aim,
A strong, determined band.
Fear not, for God is on our side,
Success will surely come,
And all the nations shall then be Forever freed from rum.

Crime Due to the Saloon.

In a recent speech on the subject of Sunday saloons the Hon. Noah Davis of New York formerly chief justice of the supreme court of New York city, said: "From my 30 years of judicial experience I pronounce that eight-tenths of all crimes are due to the saloon. The saloon is something on which virtue must make eternal warfare. What was my astonishment to find the liquor men, immediately after election, demanding more liberal excise laws! What right have the liquor interests to ask the right to do business on Sunday?"—Exchange.

A KAFFIR PROHIBITIONIST.

Chief Khama Is Making a Noble Effort to Keep Rum From His People.

In the person of Chief Khama the "dark continent" furnishes an example of Christian heroism that may well challenge the admiration of the world, for whatever the view taken of the liquor question in South Africa or anywhere else both "Christian" and "heathen" can but admire the courage and persistence with which the Kaffir chief is endeavoring to protect his race from the curse of strong drink. "Christian" and "heathen" alike must in their hearts do homage to the nobility of character which, amid the most powerful opposing influences, remains true to God and to conscience, even if that nobility be enshrined in the dusky form of a "benighted" Bamangwato chief.

Khama's reply to the question, "Why abolish native beer, which does more good than harm?" contains the kernel of prohibition philosophy. It is Christian temperance in a nutshell, "Because people always get drunk when the beer is made." Stripped of all the sophistries which the governments of England and America have thrown around the liquor question, this truth stands out so clearly that even the barbarian of South Africa may read. As long as intoxicating beverages are manufactured so long will "the people get drunk," American and English people no less than Kaffir people.

We doubt not that the brave stand taken by Chief Khama will tend to awaken Christian nations to the iniquity of the "rum and missionary" policy and cause them to recognize the right of native Africans to resist the approach, upon the heels of civilization, of that evil which is already in such marked degree draining their own lifeblood.—Union Signal.

THE FOUR TRAVELERS.

An Impressive Temperance Lecture Delivered In a Strange Way.

The following true story is related by one of the participants in the remarkable incident:

Not long since in a certain New England city four commercial travelers met for the first time at the table. With that genial bonhomie peculiar to the craft they were soon engaged in conversation. In a few moments one of them said:

"Gentlemen, suppose we begin, being all strangers, with the gentleman opposite me, to introduce ourselves and our firms' business."

This was unanimously agreed to.

Said No. 1, "I am ——, and I represent the house of X. Y. Z., selling glass bottles."

Said No. 2: "Well, gentlemen, perhaps it is no chance that I come next, for I represent P. D. Q. I am ——, and I sell the stuff that goes into bottles. I sell wines and liquors."

There was a moment's silence as No. 3 said: "That, gentlemen, does seem a little strange, but perhaps there is a fatality about this. I am —— of the firm of W. U. S., dealers in undertakers' goods."

No. 4 now remained silent and suggested that it would be well not to pursue the subject further, and that it had been well never to have started it.

After much urging to complete the chain he said: "Gentlemen, it is indeed a fatality. I am —— of D. B. E., and I am taking orders for gravestones." Was there ever a temperance lecture compressed into so few lines?—Selected.

ALCOHOLIC BARBARISM.

Excessive Drinking In Belgium Increases Insanity and Crime.

Our Brussels correspondent writes under date Feb. 13: "The discussion that took place in the chambers yesterday upon the subject of alcoholic liquors revealed the existence of an alarming increase in the consumption of spirits in Belgium. M. Lejeune, former minister of justice, declared that the nation was reverting to a new form of barbarism, which could only be described by the term alcoholic barbarism.

"From statistics furnished by him it appears that the revenue from excise, which amounted to 4,000,000 of francs in 1851, has now attained 33,000,000; that during the same period the number of public houses has increased from 53,000 to 175,000, and that the annual consumption of spirits is at the rate of 12 litres per head for the entire population, or 48 litres per adult; further, that from 1851 to 1888 criminality increased at the rate of 200 per cent and insanity at the rate of 138 per cent, and that of every 100 deaths among the male portion of the community 80 may be traced to alcoholic causes. M. Lejeune attributes this disastrous state of things to two causes. The first is the insufficiency of the food procurable by the working classes, and the second the poisonous quality of the spirits purchased by them."—London Times.

A Model Temperance Town.

The town of Harvey, Ills., is established on a solid temperance basis and has proved that manufacturers can be more prosperous when their employees are prosperous and are free from the saloon curse. It has been fully demonstrated there that men can do better work in foundries and iron and steel works without beer than with it. They have just located three additional industries. One hundred and sixty-eight new houses are under contract, and there is great activity in this manufacturing town. Harvey is without a saloon, and the restrictons are such on every lot that saloons cannot come in the future.—Christian Work.

Drunkards Will Be Photographed.

A photograph album will be required in the saloons of New Zealand if the proposed local option bill is carried into effect. A clause of this bill provides that every one convicted of habitual drunkenness shall be photographed at his own expense, and every saloon keeper in the district where he lives must be supplied with a copy.—Exchange.

Adulterated Liquors.

Ohio's food and dairy commissioner is authority for the statement that for every gallon of genuine liquor there are manufactured 100 gallons of adulterated drinks made of alcohol and flavoring oils.

Notes About Drink.

The "poor man's beer" helps to keep him the poor man.

Every man who drinks a little drinks a great deal too much.

In 1893 Chicago people drank only 2,761,741 barrels of beer, 32 gallons each, while New Yorkers drank 4,838,960 barrels.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON X, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 2.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xvi, 1-8—Memory Verses, 6, 7—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 34—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And when the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices that they might come and anoint Him." In Lev. xxiii, 10, 11, we read that a sheaf of the first fruits of the harvest was to be presented to the Lord and by Him accepted for the people, "on the morrow after the Sabbath." In I Cor. xv, 23, we find that the resurrection of Christ was the fulfillment of that type. The women mentioned in this first verse of our lesson were some of those who followed Him and ministered unto Him. They loved Him devotedly, but they were lacking in faith, for had they believed His words that He would rise again the third day (chapters viii, 31; ix, 31) they would not have thought to anoint His dead body on the third day. Without faith it is impossible to please Him.

2. "And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulcher at the rising of the sun." How sad they must have felt! Who can tell their thoughts? After all His wonderful works and teaching concerning the kingdom, to have it end this way was a disappointment indescribable. Oh, if they had only believed Isa. liii and the words of His own lips, what sorrow and darkness they might have been spared! Mary of Bethany believed His words and anointed Him beforehand, and evidently expecting His resurrection, as He had said, was not found with the others at the tomb. What darkness would be dispelled from sorrowing hearts if those whose friends have died in Christ would only believe (Phil. i, 21, 23; I Thess. iv, 16-18), and what sums of money might be saved for better use which are vainly spent for the dead body!

3. "And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher?" It was a real difficulty from their standpoint, yet they moved on as if it would some way be removed. Love is not hindered from acting by apparent difficulties. When it is a work of faith as well as a labor of love (I Thess. i, 3), then all is well, but faith should be first, lest love perform unnecessary labor, and there can be no faith apart from the word of God (Rom. x, 17).

4. "And when they looked they saw that the stone was rolled away, for it was very great." Difficulties vanish as we go forward. How often we have found it so! In Math xxviii, 2, we find that the angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it, for seals and soldiers were nothing to him. The angels who excel in strength, that do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word (Ps. ciii, 20), know no difficulties, and nothing is hard to them. Read the angel stories in Acts xii and Isa. xxxvii, 36, and rejoice that they are still ministering spirits who minister unto the heirs of salvation (Heb. i, 14).

5. "And entering into the sepulcher they saw a young man sitting on the right side clothed in a long white garment, and they were affrighted." If we believed in the ministry of angels, and that they are ever with us serving unseen and unthanked, perhaps we would not be afraid if some day one or more should appear to us. It is true that most of the people in the Bible record to whom they appeared seem to have been afraid, but we do not read that either Abram or Elisha were afraid, and Elijah was not afraid to have them come for him with a carriage that day that he went home. Notice that this angel, who must have been several thousand years old, is called a young man—oh, the joys of eternal youth! If spared to the day on which this lesson shall be taught, I will be 51 years old, but I am sure I feel more like 15 than 51, and I am perfectly sure that I shall feel younger still 10,000 years hence.

6. "And He saith unto them! Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth which was crucified. He is risen. He is not here. Behold the place where they laid Him." The angels always say, Fear not (Gen. xxii, 17; Luke i, 13, 30; ii, 10), and so does the Lord Himself from Gen. xv, 1, to Rev. i, 17. His thoughts to all His people are peace and not evil (Jer. xxix, 11). Therefore let our hearts say, "I will trust and not be afraid" (Isa. xii, 2). In Math. xxviii, 6, the angel said, "He is risen, as He said," as if they might also have said, "Why did you not believe Him?" Let us have a simple, childlike, unwavering faith in every word of God, and thus He will be glorified in us.

7. "But go your way, tell His disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee. There shall ye see Him as He said unto you." Oh, how Christlike to have a special message for poor Peter, who must have felt, because of his awful conduct, that he was no longer worthy to be one of them. But the Lord loved this erring one, and he alone of all the disciples is mentioned by name in the resurrection message. "He is risen," "Go, tell!" may well be called the watchwords of Christianity. If He be not risen, our faith is in vain, we are yet in our sins, and all who have trusted in Him and have died have perished (I Cor. xv, 14-18). If He be not risen from the dead, then His spotless life and His death on the cross all go for nothing, as far as the work of redemption is concerned. But He is risen, God hath raised Him from the dead and given Him a seat at His own right hand, and, as He said to John in Patmos, He is alive forevermore and has the keys of hades and death (Rev. i, 18). The present business of every believer is to tell out the fact to all the world, as far as each individual may, that through the risen Christ is proclaimed the forgiveness of sins, and all who believe are justified from all things (Acts xiii, 38, 39).

8. "And they went out quickly and fled from the sepulcher, for they trembled and were amazed; neither said they anything to any man, for they were afraid." Matthew says that they departed quickly with fear and great joy and did run to bring His disciples word (Math. xxviii, 8). They would speak to no one by the way, but filled with joy because Jesus was alive and awed by the facts, the angel's message and their own now manifest unbelief, they hastened to tell the disciples. There is nothing inconsistent between this kind of joy and fear. See Phil. ii, 12 and similar passages. We may have great joy in the Lord, and withal a fear of grieving Him.

How to Please an Author.

Mark Twain tells us that there are three "infallible ways of pleasing an author: 1. To tell him you have read one of his books. 2. To tell him you have read all of his books. 3. To ask him to let you read the manuscript of his forthcoming book. No. 1 admits you to his respect. No. 2 admits you to his admiration. No. 3 carries you clear into his heart."

LICKED UP A MILLION

ST. ALBANS, VT., LOSES HEAVILY BY A CONFLAGRATION.

The Blaze Cuts a Swath Through the Town, Leaving Nearly $500,000 Worth of Property in Ashes—Gate City, Ala., Has a Scorch That Costs Three Lives,

ST. ALBANS, Vt., May 20.—A disastrous fire swept St. Albans yesterday afternoon, destroying dwellings, business blocks, public buildings and a large amount of other property. The fire broke out in the lumber yard of W. B. Fonda, and in a short time several large piles of lumber and business offices had been ignited. There was a heavy wind blowing at the time and the fire spread rapidly and before it was stayed 440 homes and store bulldings had been destroyed. Among these was the government building on Kingman street. Most of the papers, furniture, etc., were saved.

Loss of Nearly Half a Million.

The fire after leaving Fondas lumber yard pursued a northerly course along Catherine street, cating up many wooden buildings nearby, then going along Kingman street. From Center street on one side to Hoy street on the other a wall of fire swept through the entire district, to and across Main street, which for several blocks was laid waste, including a number of tenement houses. Fully thirty families are homeless. The hotels are using kerosene and candles, as the gas and electric light service are cut off. No serious accidents are reported. It is impossible to give the insurance on the burned property, as the underwriters are unable to ascertain what the figures are. The total loss, as far as can be figured, is above $492,000.

Called on Neighbors for Help.

During the fire the wind increased to a miniature hurricane and burning embers were carried in every direction. Swanton and Burlington were called on for help and soon responded. It was found impossible to prevent the main street blocks from burning, and a dozen buildings were soon on fire. The first Main street structures that ignited were the stores of W. S. Bailey and F. B. Morton. The Wallace Printing company's building, the stores of Lombard & Winthrop, Marceau & Vincent and Fuller's livery stables were soon in ashes. Shortly before 6 o'clock the entire Burlington fire department arrived and all companies joined forces in an attempt to stop the fire on Main street. The attempt was partially successful, and the fire was checked about 6:30 o'clock, in time to save the more valuable blocks on Main street.

CLOSE CALL FOR A HOLOCAUST.

Three Men Supposedly Cremated and One Body Recovered.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 20.—Fire broke out in George Mitchell's grocery store at Gate City and burned an entire block before it could be checked, destroying Mitchell's store, J. C. Fant's boarding house, Jake Wise's grocery, Pierson's meat market, Mrs. Horsefee's residence, Gate City high school, and two other buildings. Fant's boarding house was upstairs over Mitchell's store, and the rooms were occupied by fifteen rolling-mill men. They had been drinking the night before and it was with great difficulty that any of them were saved.

Rescuers dragged some from their beds, while others jumped from the windows, clad only in their night garments. Three men are missing and are supposed to have been burned to death. James Smithson's charred corpse has been recovered from the debris. The other two missing men were strangers and their names are unknown. Rich Long had a leg burned off, and others received slight injurles.

HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA, SCORCHED.

Government Property to the Value of $300,000 Goes Up in Smoke.

HALIFAX, May 20.—Halifax has been visited by a $300,000 fire, and there was not a cent's worth of insurance on the property destroyed. The flames started on the Intercolonial railway's long wharf in the cattle shed. Both the wharf and the shed, in which were sixty cattle, were soon consumed, as well as the freight and immigration sheds. The fire then swept the immense coaling pier, trestle work and wharf of the Dominion government, on which were a number of loaded coal cars.

The property was mostly owned by the dominion government and consequently was not insured. The big iron ship Ancyna, which was loading at the wharf, narrowly escaped. The fire is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. The other government terminus was destroyed by fire some time ago and the loss of this one means great inconvenience to shipping and commercial circles.

POWELL ELECTED COMMANDER.

He Defeats McNulta in the Illinois G. A. R. Encampment.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., May 16.—Nearly all the Sons of Veterans and many members of the Grand Army have left Bloomington. Rain fell all day and the weather was chilly and disagreeable. Owing to the desire of the delegates to get away the election of officers was brought up and General W. H. Powell, of Belleville, elected commander. The vote was: Powell, 453; McNulta, 319, and it was made unanimous. C. T. Coleman, of Canton, was elected senior vice commander, and B. D. Hubbard, of Neoga, junior vice commander.

The matter of selecting the location of the encampment next year comes up today. It will probably be left to the commander and a committee, and located wherever the best railway rates can be secured. Cairo still seems to be in the lead for the honor. It is conceded that Commander Powell will retain Fred W. Spink, of Chicago, as adjutant. This fact figured in the election. Schroeder's Opera House was crowded last night on the occasion of the camp fire by the Prisoners of War association. There was a reception at the Windsor hotel in honor of the president and staff of the Woman's Relief Corps.

Two Brothers Instantly Killed.

MILFORD, Ills., May 15.—While operating a circular saw on their father's farm Hiram and Frank Schumburg, aged 17 and 20 years respectively, were instantly killed by the flywheel, which burst. The machinery was operated by a thrashing engine and so great was the velocity that the imperfectly cast wheel could not stand the speed. One boy was disembowled, while the other was struck on the left side of the head. The father and two brothers witnessed the accident.

Fish Dying of a Strange Disease.

ELGIN, Ills., May 20.—Thousands of fish, mostly suckers, have died in Fox river within two or three days of a strange disease. State Fish Commissioner S. P. Bartlett was here investigating and secured samples of fish to send to Washington. He says the disease is some sort of fungus never before seen by him in fish in running water. Experts in pisciculture are expected here in a few days. The city gets its water supply from the river and some apprehension is felt.

TIRED WOMEN

Should stop and consider the dangers which threaten them because of their weakness, languor and lack of ambition. Thousands of women find their strength unequal to the demands of duty. And yet there is no escape from the incessant round of care and toil. They must have strength. How shall it be given? By building up their systems through purified, enriched and vitalized blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla will give them strength because it will make their blood pure and enable it to feed the nerves upon their proper nourishment. It will give them strength because it will create an appetite, tone the stomach and invigorate every organ. Hood's Sarsaparilla is exactly what tired women need.

MISS FLAGG'S
LATEST NEW BOOK!
"A Prisoner of Hope."
COMPLETE IN ONE LARGE HANDSOME VOLUME.
Price, $1.25.
We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, May 15.—The senate received messages from Governor Altgeld vetoing bills requiring the consent of a majority of property owners on a street before gas pipe, street railways, etc., can be laid and preventing elevated and street railways crossing at grade, etc. Consideration of the same was postponed. The bill to give Mrs. John H. Logan and others $30,000 for work in collecting the direct tax in 1861 was passed. A bill was introduced to prevent gambling in wheat, etc. In the house the governor's vetoes were made special order for tomorrow. The revenue bill was taken up, several amendments adopted and the bill ordered to third reading. The garnishment bill was defeated.

SPRINGFIELD, May 17.—The house has adopted a resolution for final adjournment June 14. In the senate action on the governor's vetoes was postponed to next Wednesday, and the house amendments to the two normal school bills were concurred in. Two bills regarding husband and wife and estates of deceased persons, a bill to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among animals, and a bill to prevent extortionate charges in chattel mortgages were passed. The Aspinwall pool selling bill was postponed for two weeks. The house passed the senate bill to appropriate $65,000 for monuments on Chicamauga, Lookout Mountain, and Missionary Ridge battlefields.

Fired on the Pickets.

POCAHONTAS, Va., May 15.—Governor O'Ferrall has returned to Richmond. He made a thorough investigation of the troubles here and is satisfied that the presence of troops is necessary to preserve order, and says they will remain as long as the condition now existing continues. His persistence in keeping the military here is bitterly contested by local men. West Virginia miners are closely watched, an firing on the picket lines has increased. Rioting is reported at Thackers, W. Va., and operations were suspended there.

Costly Blaze at Steven's Point.

STEVEN'S POINT, Wis., May 20.—Fire broke out in the basement of the Wisconsin River Paper and Pulp company's mill located at Whiting, a few miles from here, and nearly destroyed the same. The pulp mill alone was saved. The mills were owned by George Whiting, of Menasha, and William Whiting, of this place. The loss will reach $150,000, with insurance of about one-half. About 120 people were employed by the mill.

Not Even Fit for a Thief.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., May 16.—Governor Altgeld has pardoned Frank Fogelsong, of Stark county, out of the county jail. He was sentenced for seven years in December, 1894, for larceny. The governor speaks of the shocking condition of the jail, and declares it unfit for human habitation.

Woundod by a Saluting Gun.

COLUMBUS, O., May 15.—When a special Toledo and Ohio Central road car arrived at Corning, en route to Gauley bridge with the Columbus city council and other officials on board, somebody fired a small cannon from the rear of the train, wounding Frank Love, of Corning, in the face, making a disfigurement for life.

The Washing of the Feet gets to be a weighty matter, in these days when colored stockings will shed their colors. Pearline does this work beautifully. It's not only thoroughly effective, but it's healthy.

Doctors recommend Pearline as a soak for rheumatism. Try it in the bath. It will give you a new idea of cleanliness. Bathing with Pearline is a perfect luxury.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 432 JAMES PYLE, New York.

"Was hat die Kirche mit der Loge zu thun?" (What is the relation of church and lodge?)

BY PROF. GEO. J. FRITSCHEL.

This is a valuable tract of forty pages which should be widely scattered. The Litteraturblatt of Reading, Pa., says:

"On so few pages we have hardly ever read so much material of correct explanation concerning the lodge question. A better guide, than this which says about all and warns in such a fatheriy way, can scarcely be offered." We recommend it to our German readers.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F. B. Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of Today. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D. D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, functions and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question on both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D., Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

Tired Women

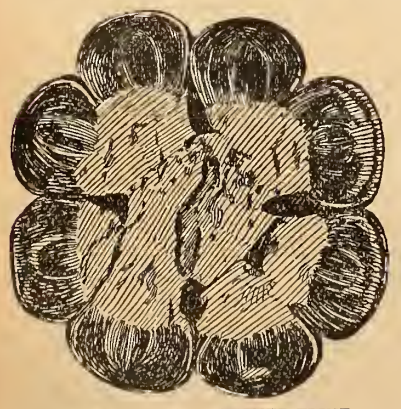
Should stop and consider the dangers which threaten them because of their weakness, languor and lack of ambition. Thousands of women find their strength unequal to the demands of duty. And yet there is no escape from the incessant round of care and toil. They must have strength. How shall it be given? By building up their systems through purified, enriched and vitalized blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla will give them strength because it will make their blood pure and enable it to feed the nerves upon proper nourishment. It will create an appetite, tone the stomach and invigorate every organ. It is what tired women need.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the Only

True Blood Purifier

Prominently in the public eye today. It feeds the nerves on pure blood.



Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

FARM AND GARDEN

EARLY FIELD CORN.

A Brief Report of a Test of Some of the Best Varieties.

Last season an effort was made to find out the earliest field corn on the farm of Editor Carmen of The Rural New Yorker. The varieties tried were Waterloo Extra Early, Whitecap Early Dent, Joe Waite, Early Butler, Smoked Flint, White's Mammoth, Iowa Beauty, all from Philadelphia; Bristol 100 Day, from Philadelphia, and the Conqueror, from Minneapolis. All except the Conqueror were planted in drills on May 17 four feet apart and about a foot apart in the drills, the soil being an impoverished clay loam. At the rate of 1,000 pounds to the acre of potato fertilizer was broadcasted before the last harrowing.

CROSS SECTION OF SMOKED FLINT.

The first named began to glaze on Aug. 27. Bristol 100 Day began to glaze on Aug. 28. Whitecap Early Dent was a few days later. Joe Waite was ripe on Aug. 30. Early Butler was no earlier to mature than the preceding. White's Mammoth began to glaze on Aug. 30. Iowa Beauty developed two objections. It is late, and the ears are borne so high that the plants would lodge during ordinary storms.

Smoked Flint proved different from any corn heretofore grown by Mr. Carmen. The main stem is slender, growing from six to seven feet. But there are six or more shorter leafy stalks growing only two feet high—all from one seed, forming a sort of dwarf bush, with a taller central stem. There are from two to three ears to every plant, and these are borne near the soil or in the bush portion of the plant. The ears are long—12 inches or over—about eight to ten rows, which are often more or less separated. The kernels are of medium size, broad, but not deep, of a yellowish color and 58 to 60 to a row. The cob is too small and long to be shelled without breaking. It is the earliest of any to mature, being fully ripe on Aug. 23, or 106 days. It strikes Mr. Carmen that this Smoked Flint ought to be a most valuable variety for ensilage.

The Conqueror is another variety which Mr. Carmen suggests be given a trial in a small way. The claim is made that it is "earlier than Pride of the North and a much larger yielder; gives double the fodder; has outyielded Leaming; early as Minnesota King; ear much larger, averaging nine to ten inches long and having from eight to fourteen rows." In the test under consideration it began to glaze 106 days from the time of planting.

A similar trial was made on the same grounds many years ago, resulting in favor of the two named variety, Pride of the North, so introduced by Hiram Sibley, and Queen of the Prairie, so introduced by B. K. Bliss & Sons. This variety of Yellow Dent has since bobbed up under many other names as a novelty, "the earliest dent ever introduced, and for the earliest the most prolific." But the authority quoted has not found that they were material improvements upon the old Queen of the Prairie.

Pulmonary consumption, in its early stages, may be checked by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It stops the distressing cough, soothes irritation of the throat and lungs, and induces much-needed repose. Hundreds have testified to the remarkable virtues of this preparation.

Lack of vitality and color-matter in the bulbs causes the hair to fall out and turn gray. We recommend Hall's Hair Renewer to prevent baldness and grayness.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry by Avery Allyn contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, Several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, the Orange and Odd-fellows Societies. Price in cloth $5.00.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated," the first book on catalogue. Price in cloth, $2 50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Containing the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual. Price in cloth, $1.25; Paper covers, 75c.

Look to the East. A Ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Price in cloth $2.00. Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or The Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

INDORSED BY COL. LAWLER.

Grand Army Commander-in-Chief on the Confederate Monument.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Colonel Thomas G. Lawler, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has given to General J. C. Underwood what is a practical indorsement of the dedication of the Confederate monument in Oakwoods cemetery. The following was penned on the back of a photograph of himself personally given by Colonel Lawler to General Underwood:

"I admire your zeal in the noble work of marking the last resting place of brave men. We were all Americans.

"Yours respectfully,

"THOMAS G. LAWLER,

"Commander-in-chief Grand Army of the Republic, 1894-5."

SIDNEY, O., May 20.—Commander E. E. Nutt, department of Ohio, G. A. R., has issued a circular concerning the dedication on Memorial Day of a Confederate monument in Chicago. It says in part: "In memory of comrades who fell in the nation's cause we protest that to give equal honor on the same day to those who fought desperately to destroy the nation, placing them on a parity with those who fought to prevent them from their deadly purpose of destruction—I say diversion of the day from its purpose, is an insult to the Grand Army and to loyalty and an attempt to turn the day we hold sacred into a farce and a mockery."

PLUNGED OFF A BRIDGE.

Trolley Car Accident in Which Two Persons Are Fatally Hurt.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., May 20.—Trolley car No. 16, of the Citizens' Schuylkill Valley Railway company, plunged off an overhead bridge crossing the Trenton Cut-off branch of the Pennsylvania Railway company in Plymouth township, fatally injuring two persons and seriously injuring four others. The fatally injured are: Motorman Charles Naylor and Conductor Frank Smith, of Norristown. The seriously injured are: Mrs. Frank Birmingham, Norristown, cut about the face and body; Mrs. Harry Haas, Norristown, cut about the face and shoulders; Mrs. Johnson, of Gulf Mills, injured internally; Francis Baxter, of Norristown, ternally injured.

Just how the accident occurred is not definitely known, but President Shepp claims that the supports were taken from under the bridge by the railway company, thus weakening the structure.

BROOKLYN, May 20.—A serious collision between trolley cars occurred here. Among those most seriously injured are: Adolph Fluger, Joseph Williamson, William Messerschmidt, Robert H. Furman and James Behermann. They were all either bruised about the body or injured internally. Of the hundred or more passengers on the two cars the great majority received bruises of a more or less painful nature.

FREIBURG GIVES UP HIS BONDS.

Turns Over His Whisky Trust Holdings for What He Gave for Them.

CHICAGO, May 20.—As a sequel to the bill filed by Receiver McNulta charging that Greenhut, Morris, Freiburg and others had sold to themselves whisky trust bonds at 50 cents on the dollar W. J. Freiburg, of Cincinnati, has offered to sell to the receivers all his holdings of that sale for the price paid, and Judge Showalter has agreed that the receiver may accept the offer, the reorganization committee supplying the money. The bonds have been transferred.

Attorney Edwin Walker, for Greenhut and Morris, later filed a bill for their clients to foreclose on the trust's property on the petition of the Central Trust company of New York, which is the trustee under the $1,000,000 bond issue. The effect of the bill is to partially turn the tables on the receiver and the reorganization company, and change the positions of Greenhut and Morris from that of the defensive to that of aggressive. When the hearing on the application for the foreclosure takes place before the court the questions and charges raised in the receiver's bill will be revicwed.

WANT THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

Sugar Men Trying to Secure Control of a Great Railway.

TACOMA, Wash., May 16.—News was received by letter from New York that Havemeyer and Searles, the sugar trust men, are working with Rockefeller to secure control of the Northern Pacific, soon to be reorganized by the second and third mortgage bondholders. Mr. Searles, who is secretary and treasurer of the trust, was on the sound two weeks ago and since then a sugar magate has been here looking over the situation. People here who are on the inside believe that "sugar and oil" are to control the Northern Pacific destinies and are glad of it. It means, they say, that the road will be operated as a purely business enterprise.

Nicaragua Pays the "Smart" Money.

LONDON, May 17.—In compliance with the agreement under which the British men-of-war were withdrawn from Nicaragua on condition that the "smart" money, amounting to $75,500, demanded by Great Britain be paid in London within fifteen days, that amount of money was yesterday covered into the treasury of Great Britain on behalf of Nicaragua by Senor Chrisanto Medina, minister to London for Salvador.

INCREASED THE WAGES.

Employes of the Carnegie Company Get an Advance.

PITTSBURG, May 15.—The board of managers of the Carnegie Steel company decided last night to advance its 25,000 men 10 per cent., the raise to take effect on June 1. The notices which were posted in all the mills this morning read as follows: "Notwithstanding the existing contracts between the Carnegie Steel company and its employes, fixing the rate of wages for 1895, this association has decided that the present business outlook will justify higher rates, and accordingly takes pleasure in notifying its employes at the Edgar Thomson furnaces, Edgar Thomson Steel works, Duquesne Steel works, Homestead Steel works, Lucy furnaces, Keystone Bridge works, Upper Union mills, Lower Union mills and Beaver Falls mills, that from June 1, 1895, and until further notice the scale rates paid to all tonnage, day and turn men will be increased 10 per cent.; this without prejudice to the 1895 wages contracts still in force."

This action is entirely opposed to what members of the board gave out after Saturday's meeting on the demand for an increase made by the furnacemen at the Edgar Thomson furnace. It is claimed, however, that Frick cabled to Andrew Carnegie in England, and that the increase was first suggested by Carnegie. It is not known what effect this action will have on the fight of the Amalgamated association in other mills. Outside manufacturers claim that in many instances the Carnegie scale is 50 per cent. lower than the Amalgamated scale, but this cannot be determined accurately by reason of the fact that the improved machinery of the Carnegie company's mills gives the men much greater earning power than in other mills. This is the first advance since the reduction of 1892.

Not So Warlike in Cripple Creek.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., May 15.—Jack Smith, leader of the Bull Hill miners during the Cripple Creek war last summer, who was shot by Marshal Kelly, of Altman, Monday evening, is still alive, but cannot live long. His companion, George Papst, although seriously wounded, may recover. Smith refuses to make any statement. Papst says he was not shot by Kelly, but by Deputy Sheriff Benton. Kelly says he shot both men. Public sentiment in the camp is in favor of the officers, and no further trouble is anticipated.

The Dole Reply to Gresham.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 16.—The steamer Australia from Honolulu May 8 brings the following: Minister Hatch has handed Minister Willis his answer in regard to the recall of Minister Thurston, which will go forward by this mail. It is a lengthy document and makes a general denial of the charges against the Hawaiian minister. The latter's course is upheld in every particular. Gresham is informed that Thurston will not be returned to Washington, but his successor is not named.

Death of Admiral Almy.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Rear Admiral John Almy, U. S. N. retired, whose death, which had been expected for several days has occurred, was 81 years old, and sixty-three of those years he had served his country faithfully and well, rising from midshipmen through all the grades of service to rear admiral and earning all his honors. His actual service at sea was twenty-seven years and ten months, the longest time on record in the American navy.

CONTROL OF THE CHURCH COLLEGES

Debate on That Question the Feature of the Presbyterian Assembly.

PITTSBURG, May 20.—Assembly control of the seminaries has possession of the Presbyterian general assembly, even if the assembly has not the possession of the seminaries, which it desires. At the close of the Saturday session adjournment was taken till today, when the debate on the proposed plan of gathering the seminaries into a close and guarded fold was resumed. The net result thus far attained has been to divide the assembly into two clearly marked parties, and it is judged that the line of cleavage is near the numerical center of the body. It seems probable that the vote of 4 to 1 that was recorded last year will be wiped out in large part and the disproportion greatly reduced.

There is a plan on foot to secure the adoption of an alternative report, replacing that of the committee. It is proposed to recommend that in view of the answers made by the directories of the existing seminaries setting forth their unwillingness to make any charter changes, these seminaries be let alone, and that the restrictions that have been devised by the committee shall be applied only to institutions that may hereafter be chartered. This plan will have strong backing, and will meet with good support. Those who have had experience of previous assemblies, however, entertain some doubts of its adoption, but it is certain that the support which it will get will astonish the conservatives forces.

Union seminary in New York is the bete noire of the conservative elements in this assembly. This was shown when it was referred to as the cause and occasion of all this disturbance. Dr. Briggs has scarcely been mentioned, and the odium which attached to him has been transferred to the seminary directors in New York. One of the speakers declared that when they repudiated their agreement with the assembly they took out valuable endowments which belonged properly to the church as such.

Obliterated the Color Line.

CHICAGO, May 20.—The Chicago Woman's club has obliterated the color line. Character and character alone, backed by intelligence, is now the only condition of membership in that organization. Race, color, creed, political leanings are all pushed aside by an amendment to the constitution.

Trouble in Minnesota Ended.

DULUTH, May 15.—The trouble at Virginia is practically over. While the miners have not declared the strike off as yet, the Franklin mine started up this morning with a new crew under the protection of the deputies and there is no apprehension of further trouble.

All may speak at once! Bro. I. R. B. Arnold offers to visit a dozen different towns or cities in the interest of the N. C. A. work during the month of June. He does not ask salary but a collection will be taken. Who will furnish hall and entertainment. It is best to hold two evening meetings in each place. Do you want the "Floating Chapel" evangelist to visit you with his stereopticon and illustrated lectures?

The report comes from Shanghai that the island Formosa has declared itself a republic, the flag being a yellow dragon on a blue ground. The governor, Chang Ting Sung, is made president, and has notified the foreign representatives.

"Liar! Liar! Liar! What is the biggest lie you ever heard? Write it down in 200 words or less and send it to the Sunday Times-Herald." The above, cut from the Times-Herald Friday morning, is suggestive. What sort of Sabbath reading can be expected in response to such a request. And yet we really think that is the right sort for a Sunday paper.

The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen has just held its second biennial session at Galesburg, Ill. Secretary Sheahan, in an address to this body of men, referring to the great Pullman strike of 1894, said: "I do not pretend to say that the cause of the Pullman Company was just, but I am obliged to admit that the strike against the railroad companies, and particularly those with which our membership and that of other railway labor organizations had contracts, was wholly unjustifiable. I am satisfied that those members now see the error of this action, but at the time it was impossible to convince them that strict compliance with the law and their contracts with the companies was the only proper course for them to pursue. The effect of the strike will be beneficial in the end to organized labor. It has taught the lesson that in order to win a fight of any consequence you must be in the right." We believe that Secretary Sheahan is right in a sense. Men cannot, ought not, to expect to win ultimately if they are in the wrong; but the hope of winning, or fear of defeat ought to have no place in determining our course. Are we willing to suffer, to give up our life if necessary, rather than do wrong? If not we have no claim to be called true or honest; we are simply discreet.

In New York City it is proposed to have a grand review of the boys on Decoration Day. The boys are flattered with the title, "The American Guard." The newspapers say the movement has been carried on almost secretly in order to create a great surprise on Memorial Day. The work has gone forward quietly and effectively, and there is not a grammar school in the city that will not parade from two companies to an entire regiment of the size of the National Guard regiments. There is to-day a force of sixteen full uniformed and drilled regiments of school boys between the ages of twelve and eighteen years in this city who are equal in drill and soldierly bearing to the best militia, and almost as capable of performing efficient duty in case of sudden emergency. Does this movement bode good or ill to our country? "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

The International Sabbath Observance League held a meeting Sabbath afternoon, May 26, at Sacrameto Ave. M. E. church, to promote better Sabbath observance. The principal address was delivered by Rev. J. W. Fifield, who urged the closing of the saloons on Sunday. He said the root of the iniquity was the taproom. The Sunday Observance League, the speaker said, wants to enforce the laws and preserve the Christian Sabbath. Outside of the fact that the desecration of the Sabbath was the violation of the law of God, it was a violation of the laws of the State of Illinois. Saloons violate the law when they do business on Sunday, and Sunday ball games are illegal. It is the desire of the league to stop the Sunday ball games at the West Side Ball Park by a permanent injuction. Rev. W. C. McNaul, the next speaker, said that when he came to Chicago he was struck with the great amount of thorough-going godlessness which appeared on the surface. He was told that he would get used to it in time. The trouble with the members of the churches and all the Christian people of the city, he said, was they have got used to it. If the people of the churches were aroused, much of the vice and desecration of the Sabbath would soon be stopped. Montalembert said, Without a Sabbath, no worship; without worship, no religion; and without religion, no permanent freedom."

Chief Justice Fuller says: "The Constitution divides Federal taxation into two classes—first, direct taxes; second, imposts and excises," and that "direct taxes must be apportioned among the several States in proportion to their representation in the House of Representatives." Apparently the logical result of this opinion is that all Federal taxes, except duties of import (that is to say, taxes collected under the tariff laws), must be apportioned among the States according to their representation in the House of Representatives. The act of Aug. 27, 1894 (the Wilson bill), section 48, provides: "There shall be levied and collected on all distilled spirits, etc., a tax of $1.10 on each proof gallon." The statutes of the United States levy a tax of 6 cents a pound on tobacco, etc. It seems clear that according to this opinion of Chief Justice Fuller they are direct taxes on personal property, and not being apportioned among the several States according to representation, they are unconstitutional and void. If this view be correct, the Supreme Court has not only wiped out the income tax, but has practically repealed the internal revenue laws as they affect tobacco, whisky, brandy, etc. We believe the income tax was just. If a man is protected in holding immense sums of money or other valuable property it is right that he should help bear the expense of such protection; but if by losing the income tax, we as a nation are relieved of the reproach of being supported by a tax on the vices of the lower classes; if the "internal revenue laws as they affect tobacco, whisky, brandy, etc., are repealed" by that act, it will by a happy loss. If we as a nation would fear God and keep his commandments; if men would be sober, just and pure, there would be no lack of money. "Happy is the nation that is in such a case; yea, happy is that people whose God is the Lord."

According to the dispatches from Charleston, that politico-volcanic Southern center, it is a long time between rebellions, and she has resolved to add to the gaiety of the Republic by starting a brand new one. Her grievance now against the general government is an incident of her "dispensary law," under the operation of which she undertakes to regulate the rum traffic. She has gone into the saloon business, and is so much in love with it that she is resolved to make it a monopoly. A citizen of Charleston imported a barrel of beer, a lot of whisky from Baltimore, and a few cases of wine from Savannah, notifying the Governor of South Carolina that he was laying in a private supply of the beverages, so grateful to the palate of the Governor of North Carolina, and that they were intended for his own private consumption. He defied the soveriegn authority of South Carolina to seize them, and it prompt ly accepted the challenge by carting off the beer, the whisky, and the Savannah decoction labeled wine. Appeal followed to one of the Federal courts on the ground that this was a gross viola tion of that provision of the fundamental law of the country regulating commerce, liquid and solid, between the States. The Federal Judge saw the constitutional point of the beer, whisky and wine contention right off, and issued an injunction restraining the constables of South Carolina from moving the beverages. Governor Evans was equal to the emergency. He has declared that the injunction shall not be obeyed, and the war may be said to be on. It is the second whisky rebellion in our history. George Washington put down the first one, which was in Western Pennsylvania more than one hundred years ago. The issue of the second is still doubtful.

THOU ART THE WAY.

O Father, when the tempest comes,
The tempest fierce and wild,
And all the path that we should walk
With tangled drift is piled;
When lost among the grim, cold rocks,
And in the dark defiles,
Where torrents roar with icy wrath
Among the homeless wilds;
Then let me hear thy whispered word
In gentlest accents say:
"I am the living way."

When thus perplexed with many things
I know not what to do;
When two opposing duties seem
Both equally in view;
When Worry comes with brow of care
And all her nettles sows
Within the garden where should bloom
The lily and the rose;
When night comes with her pirate flag
Where bright should beam the day,
Then Father show the way.

What am I, Father, in thy sight,
But just a little one,
Whose only hope for life and truth
Is resting in thy Son.
And not in work that I have done,
Or aught that I can do,
For all of mine that pleases thee
Thy mercy led me to;
Yet am I safe because I trust;
And joyously can say,
Thou, Saviour, art my way.

THE ANNUAL MEETING CONFERENCE AT RAVENSWOOD, MAY 8, 9.

Said an English traveler to an American audience: "You are in no danger as yet of becoming intoxicated by antiquity as we are across the water, but you are already intoxicated by vast territory." The same may be said of the city of Chicago. It intoxicates its visitors by its extent of reach to the south and west and north. The only hindrance to enlargement toward the east is the bounds which God placed for Lake Michigan. Some years ago the city proper took in the city of Lake View on the north, so that the northern boundary extends some twelve miles from the court house, which marks the center of the city. The beautiful station of Ravenswood is north on the Milwaukee division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, and is about six miles from the center of the city. It is a residence section of the city and is removed from the smoke of factories and the commotion of heavy traffic. Ravenswood and the cluster of stations about it, including Cuyler, Bowmanville, Argyle Park and Summerdale, are well supplied with churches. There are four Congregational, three Methodist, two Catholic, one Baptist, one United Presbyterian (5th in the city), and one Christian church. Some of these are small mission churches, but are doing faithful work along the usual lines of Christian enterprise. When it was determined to hold the conference at Ravenswood, it was reasonably hoped that the earnest people of the various churches would evince an interest in the question considered. The section was carefully canvassed and some five thousand eight-page programs were distributed. The programs contained testimonies of D. L. Moody, Dr. Pentecost, the late Dr. A. J. Gordon and others; but the response was not what was hoped for. A local paper in referring to the convention said that the attendance made up in intelligence what it lacked in numbers. The program, as published in the Cynosure of May 2, was very largely carried out and with marked ability. The half hours for prayer at the beginning of the sessions were very helpful. Rev. Frank E. Weston, the earnest and able pastor of the Ravenswood Baptist church, led the devotions of Thursday morning in place of Rev. Ralph Atkinson of the United Presbyterian church, who found it inconvenient to be present at that time, though he and the leading elder were present the evening before and met the members of the convention with cordiality. The United Presbyterian church enforces its rule touching affiliation with secret societies, and is fast becoming a powerful agency for good in the city. It has the largest Sunday-school in this section of the city.

Wednesday evening Rev. W. Blanchard Stoddard, the Washington (D. C.) agent, delivered his first address to a Chicago audience. Mr. Stoddard portrayed the religious character of Masonry in an address worthy of the most intelligent and refined people of Ravenswood. He showed a spirit of earnest sympathy which those who are ignorantly dishonoring their Saviour in the lodges would do well to imitate, and by carefully selected quotations from standard authorities in Masonry clearly established the proposition of his address.

Mr. Stoddard was followed by Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard on "The Duty of the Church Respecting Lodges." Said Bishop Milton Wright at the close of the address: "How convincing that argument was." The report of Pres. Blanchard's address at St. Paul, published in Cynosure of May 16, presents very substantially the line of argument pursued at Ravenswood. The Thursday morning session was of intense interest. Not all the readers of the Cynosure have heard William Fenton, though he has been read and admired for years by all. One speaker, referring to his address, pointed out the personal resemblance between Mr. Fenton and the traditional appearance of Peter or Paul, only he is a better looking man than Paul makes himself to be. With the keenest logic Mr. Fenton reasoned as Paul did at Mars Hill. There was no effort at oratorical effect, but adjusting himself to the audience his reasoning was more suggestive than exhaustive, and yet it was conclusive. No one could follow and do more than emphasize what he had said: "Modern Masonry is ancient sun worship. The sun-god of the Ancients was Satan. Modern Masonry is a worship of the god of this world. Masonry is not merely negative, i. e., anti-Christian, but also and principally positive, i. e, Satanic." And all this was said as a mathematician might demonstrate a proposition in geometry. Mr. Fenton's use of the chart was very effective.

The address by Bishop William Dillon was incisive and scholarly. The readers of the Cynosure are promised the reading of it. It was a delight to meet Bishops Dillon and Wright, men of beautiful spirit and calm faith in the working together for good of all things. While in the city Bishop Wright was entertained at dinner by Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Goodwin.

Several years have passed since the voice of Edmond Ronayne has been heard on the platform of the Association. Though sixty-three years of age, he has lost none of that Irish oratorical facility which has always marked him. Thursday afternoon Mr. Ronayne spoke for well nigh two hours on the "Oaths and Death Penalties of Freemasonry." At the close of his address a Mason present asked some questions, which were easily answered by one who was free to speak the truth. The questions were propounded in a gentlemanly manner; and no doubt great good could be done at such conventions by encouraging participation on the part of members of lodges. On this occasion there was not time for the most effective discussion, and some overzealous members of the audience, when the questions were offered, showed too much spirit to encourage free expression from opponents. Candor toward candid men should characterize these conventions.

The address by Rev. N. W. Deveneau showed the speaker to be a man of pronounced convictions and fearlessness in the face of wickedness in high places. As an evangelist he is accustomed to enumerate secretism among the evils to be shunned and opposed. He sees no reason why he should not speak as freely about secret societies as about the saloon power or the errors of the Catholic church, of which he was once a member. It is agreeable to meet a man who, possessing a balanced mind, calmly examines all matters for himself in the light of the Holy Spirit, and as calmly gives utterance to the substance of his discoveries. Such a man is a light in the world, and will shine under the effulgence of God's approbation in the world to come. Last but not least came a triumvirate in the evening. Rev. M. A. Gault spoke briefly and considerately, and gave way for Mr. J. E. Wolfe and Rev. Samuel H. Swarts. In the few moments of Mr. Gault's address he spoke on the damage done to the Sabbath by the secret societies in the way of Sabbath excursions and parades. We felt that we would hear him further on that subject; and with the columns of the Cynosure at his command, we shall look there for what he said and what he did not have time to say.

The closing addresses were a fitting climax to the convention. Mr. Wolfe has as his motto John 3: 16, and he believes in a complete salvation and as complete a separation from the worldliness of the old life of sin. He considers secret societies as a part of the great apostasy which will occur in the last days. His advice to all is: "Stand from under." Mr. Wolfe has had experience with secret societies in the Indian Territory, where they dare to show their assassin nature. In his work there he is sustained by the truth that supported Savonarola in his ecclesiastico-political reform in Italy in the fifteenth century. Though the present life is within the reach of those disposed to take it, the life to come is "hid with Christ in God" far beyond the reach of any man or devil.

The evening rounded out with the address of Rev. S. H. Swarts, giving his objection to secret societies. It was the writer's privilege to hear Mr. Swarts at Birmingham last fall where he gave substantially the same address. The chief characteristic of truth is that it never tires—is always new. The address stood the test of truth. The objections advanced are sound and were put forth in a brotherly manner. Said a young man at the close of Mr. Swarts' address: "He is a fine man," and that was said because the truth was spoken in love. It is evident that all such conventions should be followed by a systematic local distribution of a printed report of the proceedings and addresses, for these reasons (1) many are unable to attend and would like to read; (2) many will read who would not come to hear if they could. If the mountain will not come to Mohammed, Mohammed must go to the mountain.

Secretary Board of Directors.

ANNUAL REPORT OF GENERAL SECRETARY.

[The General Secretary, W. I. Phillips, made a verbal report at the annual meeting concerning the field work, which we give below as nearly as as it could be reproduced.]

The time of holding our annual meeting, just one week after the close of our financial year, has its disadvantage in the necessarily hurried character of the reports which must be prepared. Notwithstanding the difficulties, always many and great in every large undertaking, it is more profitable to look at our blessings than at the obstacles. Chief among the things to be thankful for is the evangelical character of the work of the past year. More and more are the workers seeing that our chief business is to exalt the Lord Jesus Christ as the only way of salvation, and to contrast that true way with the Cainite altars of the secret lodge.

There have been encouraging deliverances from the power of the secret empire during the last twelve months; and wherever the conventions and conferences have emphasized the fact that now is the day of salvation, along with their faithfulness upon the various popular hindrances to entering into the way, consciences have been quickened and the manifestations of God's blessing have been apparent. Your attention is especially called to the remark of the New Hampshire secretary, Elder S. C. Kimball, to this annual meeting on the revival interest which has attended his efforts, since the preaching of the Gospel has been made prominent in their conventions. Since this change, he says: "The Holy Spirit has given greater emphasis to our testimony against organized secrecy."

THE WORKERS.

While it is true that the fields "are white already to harvest" and laborers are few, yet, let us thank God for what has been wrought. Rev. P. B. Williams has gone up and down the coast from Seattle, Washington Territory, to Los Angeles, California; and while ringing the golden bells of testimony from house to house and car to car in his travels in three States, he has given on an average over five set addresses for every week in the year.

It is only necessary to name the Stoddards, father and son, the fame of whose work is more widely known to-day than that of any other persons connected with this Association. They have held four successful conventions during the year, and substantial progress has been made towards a permanent headquarters in Boston for New England. Rev. Wm. Fenton, of Minnesota, has been constantly preaching Christ in the streets and in the churches, and has borne testimony against the church of Hiram Abiff in Minnesota, South Dakota, and Iowa, as well as in Illinois.

Then there is that aged saint, Father Porter, over 80 years of age, but fulfilling his vow of over 60 years ago that, if it pleased God, he would "die in the harness." Preaching to churches in the far North in the summer, and laboring in the colleges of the South in the winter, God has accepted his early consecration vow in a wonderful manner. Kentucky, Tennessee and portions of other States have been blessed by his visits during the past year.

Secretary Kimball writes that when they held their first meeting in New Hampshire they were obliged to send to New York City for some one who had seceded from the lodge to tell the people what was done in the inside; but that now there are many seceders from many different secret lodges testifying for Christ in all parts of the State, and warning against the false worships of the lodge. He has kindled anew the reform fires in the State of Maine, and been instrumental in the reorganization of the work in that State and the election of a new set of State officers.

Rev. F. J. Davidson was employed for three months, or during the vacation granted by his church, and labored with his accustomed energy and faithfulness in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi. The faithfulness to God and his truth, which Bro. Davidson has shown among his colored brethren, and the persecutions which he has endured, ought to make him greatly beloved by the brethren.

Nor must we forget our colporteur evangelists, Rev. C. Powers in Tennessee, and Bro. Jasper Tucker in Michigan, and Rev. S. F. Proctor, who labored first in Arkansas and of late in Texas.

It is not probable that I can now recall the names of all who have come in touch with the N. C. A. work in one way or another during the past year, but a few come to my mind as they doubtless are also in your own. Pres. Blanchard, Rev. T. N. Chalmers, Rev. S. H. Swarts, Bro. M. N. Butler, Rev. O. T. Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Powers, Bro. I. R. B. Arnold, of the "Foating Chapel," Rev. D. S. Faris, Rev. J E. Wolfe, Rev. W. O. Ferris, Rev. M. A. Gault, and others.

CONVENTIONS AND CONFERENCES.

While it may not seem very much to say that one convention has been held for every month in the year, yet considering the stringency of the times and the fewness of the agents, this number is one for which to give thanks. Massachusetts, the Pacific Coast, New Hampshire, Maine, Illinois, Nebraska, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and New York have had one or more conventions or conferences during the year.

These gatherings are of the greatest importance, not only to the cause in general by attracting the attention of many who do not attend them to the truth, but especially to the communities in which they are held, since there is always a pretty thorough seed-sowing of anti-secret testimonies from house to house along with the distribution of programs. But the greatest blessing comes doubtless to the evangelical pastors and churches of the cities in which the conferences meet. Many churches will not brook a word from their pastor on this subject. Most pastors realize that these irreligious secret lodges keep men from Christ. The people are ignorant, the ministers unable to give them the facts, and the lodge triumphs; hence the importance of the convention work which is done by the Association for these churches in the various cities. If the pastors are wise they will do all they can to encourage the N. C. A. agents in these efforts for the redemption of the young men of their parishes.

FINANCES.

It has been a hard year to meet current expenses. Cannot some new plans be inaugurated at this annual meeting to enlist more heartily our corporate membership in supporting the financial interests of the Association? Such able men as M. N. Butler, the Rev. S. O. Irvine and others well posted, are willing to give their whole time to the work if they can see any possible way to provide for their families while they are absent from them. This should appeal strongly to our constituency to do more, if possible, the coming year than ever before for the evangelization of our cities and villages through the N. C. A. agents. In the providence of God, I have been permitted to write a number of wills during the year, in which provisions have been made for the future enlargement of our work. May God's blessing rest especially on all those who are thus planning for future work.

THE CYNOSURE.

Some 200,000 copies of the Cynosure have been sent out during the past year, but the paper has not been quite so well supported this year as last There are doubtless reasons for this state of things; but are we doing all that we can, notwithstanding these difficulties, for the support of our organ. The New York Witness acknowledges, after having published some facts reflecting upon the lodges, that it cost them hundreds of subscribers. What the newspapers fear and dread, individuals, merchants, mechanics and laborers also fear, and this should lead us to pray that we may not count our lives dear unto ourselves but resolve that at all hazards we will sustain this most necessary agency of this important work.

To all who have justly criticised our organ, we commend the words of a Wisconsin pastor, who wrote: "All friends of our reform may well pray God to bless the Cynosure, for after all it is the great light-giver in the question of the secret empire." Let any one go through the files for the past year and select simply those articles which are of permanent value and which are indeed to become the future library of reference when the hour strikes when all men will be inquiring, "What are the facts about this awful secret empire?" Notice, for instance, Miss Flagg's "Deep Things of Masonry;" Rev. J. C. McFeeter's address of welcome, which was a gem of its kind; the address by Rev. J. S. Thompson; addresses by Prof. F. W. Farr, and articles of great value by Josiah W. Leeds, Prof. Simpson Ely, E. Ronayne, and others. These are samples of what this paper is doing year after year for the future, when an encyclopedia from which pastors and evanglists are to draw their facts shall have become a necessity.

Our tractlet, the Lodge Lamp, is now a child of ten months; it has been sent out largely to a new constituency, and has been one of the most important enlargements of the past year. The circulation has amounted to some 85,000 copies. There have been many tokens of its usefulness.

OUR FUTURE WORK.

For the present year there will come before your Board of Directors nothing specially new. The same general questions will have to be considered, but with this advantage, that we have new light because of added experience with which to answer the questions. (1) How best to reach the churches. (2) How to present to the members of each denomination more thoroughly than heretofore the testimony of their own great men. (3) How to secure a fuller recognition in the denominational press. (4) How to secure a fuller representation at our annual meeting of delegates from churches, synods, conferences and other associations than heretofore. (5) How may our agents more efficiently exalt Jesus Christ, (as did Peter and John, Acts chapters 3 and 4) win souls and show that these secret lodges are crucifying Jesus and destroying souls? These questions, by the grace of God, must be answered

It is encouraging to see in our present meeting representatives of nine different denominations, and delegates from so widely separated portions of our country.

The roll of those who have fallen asleep is impressive, not only as to numbers but especially as to character. Rev. H. L. Kellogg, one of the original charter members, and for many years one of the editors of the Cynosure; Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, our president for 1893–4; Rev. J. P. Richards, a corporate member and a member of the Board of Directors at the time of his death; Judge W. W. Farwell, attorney for the Association at its organization and for many years; Rev. A. D. Freeman, Nathan Callender, L. Taylor, corporate members; Rev. J. E. Ambrose, one of the speakers at our conference in 1890, and one of the first as well as the oldest Baptist ministers in this State; as well as others whose entrance upon their rest from earthly labors has been noticed in the Christian Cynosure. It seems as though God has been speaking as in no other year to each of us,—"What thou doest, do quickly."

THE NEED OF BETTER SABBATH OBSERVANCE BY ITS PROFESSED FRIENDS.

BY REV. CHAS A. BLANCHARD, WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL.

The importance of the Lord's day rest to men, communities and nations can scarcely be exaggerated. The body of man cannot stand the strain of ceaseless toil. It becomes prematurely old and suddenly breaks down if subjected to it. The mind in many instances shares the wreck of the body, and softening of the brain, paralysis of the intellectual powers, or madness testify to the fundamental character of the Sabbath law. Men's manners and morals are also involved. Truthfulness, integrity and purity do not characterize cities or States where there is no weekly rest day. On the contrary, profanity, lying, licentiousness, dishonesty and murder are always associated with indifference to the day of rest and worship. Social, financial and political interests also share the fate of the Sabbath. When it is honored they are secure; when it is trampled under foot they are imperilled or destroyed. The nations which now set good examples in civil polity, which dominate the world's commerce and furnish the highest types of social life, are those which most fully recognize man's need of the Lord's day and God's goodness in its establishment. It is safe to say that the nation which will not observe the Sabbath, as set forth in the Bible, will be damaged in physique, deteriorated in mind, degraded in morals and injured in its social, financial and political institutions. A comparison of Asia and Africa with England and the United States makes this so evident that argument is needless.

But though all this is true, it is equally evident that for years the Sabbath has been losing ground in the United States. At the present time the barriers seem giving way on all sides and there are many who boldly declare that the American Sabbath has no rights which foreigners are bound to respect. The Sunday newspapers, the street car line, the railway, and the mail service lead in a movement which has for its logical terminus three hundred and sixty-five days' labor in each year for every wage worker. These are re-enforced by barber shops, bakeries, butcher shops, factories and mills, so that at the present time there are more than two millions of men chained to this wheel of ceaseless toil. These two millions of men represent a population of eight or ten millions, who are being paganized in the midst of churches and prayer-meetings.

In addition to the cruel wrong done to these toilers and their families there is also to be considered the reactive injury to those who use their labor. The Sunday newspaper, which in the making keeps hundreds from rest and worship, in the reading injures hundreds of thousands who are kept from church, or rendered incapable of understanding and appreciating a sermon by the load of politics, business, sports, theatrical news and society gossip which is thrown into the mind. The street car, so far as used by church-goers, damages those who ride to the centers and the outlying congregations which need the very people who are taken away. The railway train is a murderer of engineer, fireman, conductor, brakeman, operator, train-dispatcher and gateman, but it also destroys the conscience of business men and pleasure-seekers, who rush along to death and judgment careless and unconcerned. There is a true solidarity in our race and it is not possible for us to degrade and destroy our fellowmen without suffering a vengeful reaction ourselves.

The worst feature of our national Sabbath-breaking is that professed Christians are often leaders in it. It is probably impossible to name one form of desecrating the Lord's day in which members of churches do not participate. They go to the postoffice and handle their mail on the holy day. They ride on street cars and railways, sometimes on religious work, often on mere secular employments. They own stock and hold offices in corporations which are hiring thousands of men to labor on the rest day. They read the newspapers all through the week and then take up the biggest one for Sunday morning. They read while reporters, compositors, pressmen, and editors sleep after the long night's labors. They often patronize shops on Sunday which they might just as well reach on Saturday, and, at times, mills and factories which they control compel men who have labored six days to turn out for a seventh working day when God's law and common humanity demand a day of rest for them.

It is some relief to believe that multitudes of church members, who have thus shared in these occupations which wear out the body, overtax the brain, destroy the family, depopulate the church and loosen all the bonds of society, have done so not maliciously but carelessly; nevertheless the sin is grievous to note. It is more an occasion of thanksgiving that we can recover our lost ground if we are so disposed. If the ministers and officers in our churches will "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," the members will largely follow their example; even unconverted but self-respecting men will do so. No evil in our land can stand against the honest and persistent protest of the churches of Jesus Christ. Especially is this true of an evil like Sabbath-breaking, which is so evidently ruinous to men that even atheists and infidels cannot frame a plausible argument for its defense. If we do not set a Christ-like example and utter a true testimony on this vastly important subject, our brethren will perish and their blood will be required at our hands.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Two old New England worthies.—An ancient law against big sleeves. Evangelist Wm. F. Davis on Boys' Brigades.—A stringent anti-gambling law.—Lodge Sabbath-breaking.—Unitarian preaching on the Common.

Just 204 years ago (May 20), in old Colonial Roxbury, with birdsongs and scent of blossoming apple boughs in the air and the same strange, undefinable dreamy sweetness which through all the centuries has made a day in May like no other in the year, as if it held concentrated in itself the essence of all the springs that have been or will be, John Eliot, the saintly, the beloved apostle to the Indians, lay dying; he to whom Richard Baxter wrote: "There is no man on earth whose work I think more honorable and comfortable than yours. The industry of the Jesuits and friars, and their successess in Congo, Japan, China, etc., shame us all save you." This was a hundred years before William Carey aroused English Protestantism from its inglorious slumbers with his appeal for the perishing millions of China. That the missionary spirit should die out of the church for nearly eighteen hundred years, except as it flashed forth in a few sporadic instances, like the evangelization of Ireland under St. Patrick, is one of the strangest things in the history of Christianity. But it makes a brighter halo around the name of Eliot, who could not rest in the comparative ease and comfort of his Roxbury pastorate, while he heard in his soul the cry of his red brother, "Come over and help us." He did not work for fame, yet no name in New England annals will go down through the ages with a purer lustre than his.

A contemporary of Eliot's, though born more than forty years later, was Sir William Phips, a kind of Yankee Dick Whittington, with as strange and eventful a story as his prototype of Bow Bells. It was the sea, however, that sang in the ears of the youngster—the youngest of 21 boys in a family of 26 children—and made him weary of his humdrum employment of tending sheep, and long for the life of a sailor. So he left his native Maine forever behind him, learned the trade of a ship-carpenter, and came to Boston, unable to read and write, though he was 22. But Massachusetts' future governor meant to be a power among his fellowmen, and the first thing he did was to remedy the defects of his early education, or rather lack of education. His next step was to marry a rich widow. History is silent on the dozen or more years which followed, but when the opportunity of his life came Phips was ready to seize it. Immense wealth was transported in Spanish galleons to the Old World, and as these vessels were sometimes wrecked, wonderful stories were told of the treasure sunk to the bottom of the sea, or imbedded among the coral reefs on which they stranded. This shrewd son of Maine anticipated the trusts and monopolies of three centuries later, and formed a company with a patent from the king giving him and his associates the exclusive right to all wrecks that should be discoverad for a number of years to come. More than half a century before a richly-laden Spanish vessel had been wrecked near Port de la Plata. The story of Phips' persevering efforts to obtain this treasure, his repeated failures, and final discovery of a fabulous amount of gold, silver, and precious stones, reads like a romance. It bought him his baronetcy, and made him a power in the colony; but one's mind goes back to the old Roxbury parsonage, and the life of this colonial crœsus with all the fame and honor to which he attained, pales and dwindles beside the higher glory of a life, so pure, so unworldly, so Christlike as John Eliot's, who counted the soul of one of his Indian converts a greater prize than the most richly-laden galleon that ever sailed the seas.

Now that we are on antiquarian subjects, it may please those who consider the present style of exaggerated sleeves neither tasteful nor economical, to know that the old town of Dedham, so far back as 1639, tried to reduce their size,—from which we infer that the Puritan maids and matrons were no more indifferent to fashion than their fair descendants. The enactment reads that "hereafter no person whatsoever shall make a garment for woman or any other sex with sleeves more than half an ell wide in the widest part and so proportionate for bigger or smaller persons." "Any other sex" looks as if the women were not the only sinners in the way of "immoderately great sleeves and some other superfluities," but leaves the reader in a state of some bewilderment as to the number of sexes in those early days. This sounds very funny, but perhaps no funnier than the modern attempt to reduce the size or rather the height of women's hats may seem to a coming generation.

Evangelist Wm. F. Davis does not mince matters in giving his views of the Boys' Brigade. He characterizes it as "men's measures for manufacturing boy murderers by the wholesale. The Sunday-schools are being made recruiting stations for the Dagon of war." Still the craze goes on—a madness in which there is no method. The Boston schoolboys who paraded last week before admiring crowds doubtless think that a military life must be a fine thing, and if the present trend continues they may have a chance to learn that it does not consist entirely in wearing a smart uniform and carrying swords and muskets. There is a military spirit in many of the addresses delivered at so-called "patriotic" gatherings which does not make for peace, but is certainly calculated to stir up a belligerant temper in our Catholic fellow-citizen unless he is much more lamb-like than the average Protestant.

I notice that in a neighboring city there are a number of estates to be sold at auction for unpaid taxes, which shows the result of the hard times and makes one question anew the wisdom of the recent income tax decision. Why should not these proprietors of small estates who have little or no income be exempt from taxation, and the burden placed on those with an income of three thousand dollars and upward? Under our present system every thing seems done to crush out the small proprietor, and help the rich to grow richer.

Massachusetts has passed a very stringent anti-gambling bill, which is so worded as to leave no loophole of escape. Under the words, "gaming," "illegal gaming," or "unlawful gaming," everything that partakes of that character is rigorously excluded. It makes possession of any gambling implement, or even an attempt to conceal it, prima facie evidence upon the trial of any complaint or indictment. The bill prohibits in very stringent terms any betting or horse-races, or any contest of skill, speed or endurance of "man, beast, bird, or machine;" also betting on elections or nominations. This will stop—if the law can be enforced—these most demoralizing practices.

Two hundred Patriarchs Militant parading through the streets to the music of a band last Sunday evening on their way to take the boat for Philadelphia where they will participate in the dedication of the new Odd-fellows' Temple, was another illustration of the readiness of the lodge to desecrate the Sabbath, which ought not to pass without comment by those who are seeking to secure a better observance of this sacred day.

The Unitarians have taken a new departure, and inaugurated a series of open-air meetings on the Common, with the Rev. Edward Everett Hale for leading speaker. This is something out of the usual line for our liberal brethren, and shows that they are awakening to the fact that the poor need something besides bread. They have been too exclusively humanitarians, ignoring entirely any spiritual needs; but Rev. E. E. Hale, both in his writings and his spoken words, has blended the two with a rare beauty and peculiar helpfulness which makes him by far the most popular man in the Unitarian pulpit to-day. It is doubtful whether he will have many followers. He is too decidedly individual, yet his spirit cannot fail to influence the denomination, and permeate it with the idea that "Christianity," in the words of President Tucker of Dartmouth College, "is more than a religious or even social question; it concerns our whole economic life."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Greater New York.—Suicides.—Light without heat.—The Legislature —Parkhurst on civil liberty.

The Legislature has adjourned, and the Greater New York bill was defeated on the last day. Although defeated, it is only deferred, for the relation between the cities is so intimate that their union is only a question of time and would probably be a greater advantage to Brooklyn than to New York. A union forced upon an unwilling population, however, would be no union at all. It is no injustice to the half of the people of Brooklyn who desire political unity to compel them to postpone that desired end until they can persuade a larger proportion of their fellow-citizens that the change is desirable; but it would be a distinct injustice to compel the other half to become part of the great metropolis on so short a notice and against their protest. The Greater New York after all is not a mere aggregation of cities in this immediate neighborhood, but rather the new life of the metropolis expressing itself in art, in institutions of learning, in educational facilities and in a revival of the civic spirit. There are many evidences that New York has entered upon a new stage in her life. The rise of splendid and imposing structures in all parts of the city, the new homes for art association, the fine houses already provided for music, the enlarged system of public parks, all bear witness to it. Existing side by side with these causes of thanksgiving and pride are the usual causes for humiliation and shame. The recent census showed that in the district bounded by Fifth, Canal, Essex and Mercer streets, having nearly 95,000 residents, there are seven churches and 563 liquor saloons, or one church to 80 saloons.

There has been another recent epidemic of suicides, the paper reporting about half-a-dozen every morning. Occasionally the attempt is unsuccessful, and then the would-be suicide finds himself in the hands of the law. Recorder Goff last week sentenced a man to one year in the penitentiary who had attempted to take his own life, but had not succeeded. This is supposed to be the heaviest sentence on record for a case of that kind. The craze for committing suicide has even appeared among the brute creation, and the New York Herald recently gave an extended account of the suicide of a sparrow at the Gilsey House on Broadway, through despondency, because painters had destroyed her nest, hanging herself with a piece of string before a large crowd of spectators.

A young New Jersey electrician claims to have discovered the secret of the firefly, and that he can now make light without heat in accordance with a new principle of molecular vibration. He proposes to emulate the glow worm, and instead of having the present red-hot filament in the ordinary incandescent light, he will make the whole surface of the glass glow with a brilliant illumination. Theoretically there is no more reason why we cannot have light without heat, than there is why we cannot strike a chord on the piano without striking all the chords, in order to have music. The inventor claims to be able to separate the several divisions of energy and employ only the illuminating elements. He employs the ordinary current of 110 volts and asserts that a one-volt current is enough to accomplish illumination. He expects one of these days to sell sticks of light about the size of a stick of candy, that will burn forty-eight hours. They will be a sort of storage battery, and a man can carry them around in his waistcoat pocket. At night all that is necessary to be done is to press a little button, and you will have a bright light.

Under the present incandescent lamp lighting the heat amounts to ninety-nine per cent of the energy. Under this new system nearly all this would be saved, and the cost of the lamps correspondingly reduced.

The Legislature which has just adjourned has been a great disappointment. It was chosen and called a "reform" legislature, but the name has been a sad misnomer. The various reform measures have fared badly at its hands. It has been found impossible to get a bill favorably reported on unless it met the approval of the party bosses and came through the regular machine. The will of the people has been, most insolently and repeatedly, set at naught; and unless the people have shorter memories than they are usually credited with possessing, the next election will bring deserved retribution.

Dr. Parkhurst preached a ringing sermon last Sunday on the obligations of liberty, and among the many good things that he said were the following: "We have been born into freedom. We have inherited it from men and generations who have earned it and paid for it by their sufferings and their life. History has been one long war of emancipation. If we had earned our liberties ourselves, then the discipline required in earning it would ensure all the necessary vigor to be put forth in its defense. We did not earn it and we have not had the discipline of earning it, and in that exactly is our peril. The enjoyment of inherited prerogatives is inherently debilitating. It is the beginning of slavery not to feel that you are being enslaved. This is the condition upon which autocrats and dictators feed, and our American life is full of them. It is a matter of unutterable amazement how much in the way of depotism a man whose civil liberty is only an inherited liberty will put up with, before he begins to get out his armor and gird on his sword." F. W. FARR.

What is lodge worship? At first, the doctrine that Masonic ceremonies were devil-worship brought us a multitude of reproofs. Now the statement is become so common that it is received as settled ordinary truth that worship not paid to Christ is paid to Satan.—Jonathan Blanchard.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GREEN MOUNTAINS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Less has been accomplished during my first visit to Montpelier and Barre than is desirable, but a beginning has been made. The opposition has been located and some knowledge of his strength has been obtained. A number of friends have been enlisted and literature put into homes and given to parties who will read and use it to advantage. I attended and took part in two week-day prayer-meetings, and besides assisting at a communion service on Sabbath morning, the way opened for me to preach in the afternoon and evening. My last work was at Barre, which is reported to have more lodges than Montpelier. One gentleman gave fifty as the number. Another said: "Anything in the line of lodges imported or invented in Boston is at once shipped to Barre, marked C. O. D." The city and its granite industry are developing rapidly, and a weekly distribution of ready cash among so many workingmen is favorable to lodge growth. I was told that skilled labor commands $2.75 per day, and that probably nine-tenths of the operatives were of foreign birth. The most desirable material is obtained some four miles from the center and brought down either on wagons or on the "sky railroad" to the shops where it is worked and made ready for shipment. The largest block ever taken from the quarry was recently removed to the factory.

Rev. J. A. Wright, of the Free Methodist connection, conducts Sabbath services at the quarries in the public school house. Obtaining permission to use the house for an evening service, he announced that I would speak there on Monday evening, the 5th inst., giving a Bible view of secret societies. We were met on our arrival by the gentleman from whom the house had been obtained, and kindly informed that the town was in a commotion. It had been reported that the secrets of their lodge were to be exposed, and if a meeting was attempted he feared trouble. Personally he would be glad to open the house, but as the custodian of public property he must forego personal wishes and protect the persons and property of the citizens. A crowd from the village had gathered, and several coming from a distance were waiting on the steps for admission. The situation was rather anomalous for a Vermont village, though it would doubtless have been familiar in Dixie. We had violated no law of the State, nor had we threatened violence to the person or property of anyone, but suddenly we were confronted by a mandate from the secret empire asserting the supremacy of lodge above civil authority. A room some mile or more distant was offered, but after a brief consultation it was decided to hold an open-air service on the lawn in front of the school house. I spoke briefly and the people seemed interested. Carradine's sermon, "Folly Expense, and Danger of Lodges," Lodge Lamps and a few copies of "Danger Signals" were distributed, and the people quietly dispersed while I returned with Bro. Wright to the city. Up to this time I had supposed the whole affair a simple spasm of mistaken zeal among the young miners, and like many boyish pranks deserving but little attention. When I learned later, however, that it was known in Barre before hand, and that remarks had been made to the effect that if I attempted to speak there would be trouble at the quarries, it put the affair in a different light. Instead of being a spasmodic effervescence of youthful indiscretion it assumed the appearance of a deliberate purpose on the part of the lodge leaders to suppress any expose of their pretended secrets, even by mob violence, if necessary. I prefer no charge against the average membership because it is their duty to obey the orders of their superiors, but I fail to see any good reason why they should threaten a disturbance, and jeopardize the security of public property in their own village unless incited to acts of lawlessness by outside parties. The only rational solution of the threatened demonstration of the quarries is that the "Worshipful Masters" and "Sovereign Princes," the "Noble Grands" and "Worthy Chiefs," meeting in secret conclave, had decreed that henceforth, so far as the right of free speech is concerned, the civil law should be subordinate to lodge dictation, and that the Green Mountain State should be one with her Palmetto sister in denying to citizens, neither accused or convicted of crime, the right to assemble, and in an orderly and peaceable manner discuss such questions as they deem proper and expedient. If I am mistaken I shall be glad to be undeceived and to return and give a course of three or more lectures in Barre in some suitable church or hall without fee or reward, and free to all who may choose to attend. Would not friends in Vermont favor a convention some time during the summer at the capital city to discuss the merits of the secret system, and if it seemed expedient, to organize for more systematic and vigorous work throughout the State. Will not any who are interested in such a movement write me at 218 Columbus Ave., Boston?

JAMES P. STODDARD.

AFFAIRS IN MANITOBA.—The Presbyterian synod in Canada has come out in favor of the Manitoba legal enactments of 1870 versus that of the Catholic for his religion in the public schools. In the resolution passed the synod has expressed "their strong conviction that Manitoba should be left alone under her own immediate legislators." Canada is fighting the same battle against the church and state principle that must be fought here. If Americans stand true to the principle of no union between church and state, well. If not, then farewell to our dearly bought civil religious liberties.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE BIBLE IN THE LODGE—A REMINISCENCE.

BY EZRA A. COOK.

For several years, when publisher of the Cynosure, I received an annual pass over the Iowa division of the Northwestern railroad in payment for advertising.....This gave me an opportunity for short trips over that road. I often took a sleeping-car from Chicago at night and waked up in the Hawkeye State, when after four or five days' canvassing I returned. When returning from such a trip I observed a gentleman in clerical dress in the next seat who seemed interested in me; and he at last addressed me, stating that he was an M. E. pastor stationed, I think at Geneva, Ill.; and he asked where I was from. I answered by handing him my business card, when the following conversation took place. I will designate the Rev. Freemason as Rev. F.

Rev. F.—"Are you the publisher of that Anti-masonic paper?"

Cook—"Yes, sir, the Christian Cynosure."

Rev. F. (in a loud tone)—"I told one of your Cynosure crowd what I thought of him the other day. He had the face to tell me that he knew one Masonic sign correctly, for he had tried it on a conductor and he let him ride free. I told him he was a scoundrel and ought to be arrested. He tried to explain, but I refused to hear a word from the self-confessed swindler."

Cook.—"Quite likely he wished to tell you that after proving that the grand hailing sign of distress would bring a free ride, which Masons like yourself usually refuse to admit, he afterwards gave the conductor his fare. I know from observation that Masonic signs do bring favors from all kinds of officials."

Rev. F.—"A man that is not a Mason knows nothing whatever about the institution. The Bible is the great light of Masonry."

Cook.—"You mean, I suppose, to state that the Bible is one of the three great lights of Masonry, for your monitors state that "The three great lights are the Holy Bible, square and compass."

Rev. F.—"True, but the Bible alone contains any information or instruction. The square and compass say nothing. Therefore, as I said, the Bible is the great light of the order."

Cook.—"Freemasonry is found all over the world, I believe, and is the same in Europe and Asia as in America, is it not?"

Rev. F.—"Yes, Freemasonry is found in every land, and is the same everywhere."

Cook.—"But in Mohammedan countries they use the Koran instead of the Bible; and as Freemasonry is everywere the same, you say the Koran is the great light of Masonry. In another country the Zend Avesta is the book used; and that is the great light of Freemasonry. Your lodges are full of Jews, and it is forbidden to use the name of Christ in your lodge prayers."

Rev. F.—"Oh no, it is not. I have often prayed in the name of Christ."

Cook.—"How many degrees have you taken?"

Rev. F.—"Seven. I am a Royal Arch Mason, and I know what I am talking about. The name of Christ is used in Masonic prayers, for I have so used it myself."

Cook.—"If so, you know very well that your use of the name of Christ was un-Masonic, and had there been a Jew present it would have been the duty of the Worshipful Master to rebuke you. If you are a Royal Arch Mason you must know that in the Scripture reading in the Mark Master's degree, the name of Christ, which occurs twice, is stricken out both times. I defy you to quote one single Masonic authority in conflict with what I have stated."

Rev. F.—"I care nothing about Masonic authorities, for I acknowledge none. I know of my own knowledge what Freemasonry is. It is much older than the New Testament, and hence the name of Christ is not mentioned, but I have used his name in the lodge repeatedly."

Cook.—"Such pleading will not do. In taking those degrees one or more monitors or manuals were used. The authors of these books have virtually made Masonry in this country, and they are its exponents. They are and have been the Grand Masters of their Grand Lodges. Confessedly the Masonic Bible is but a mutilated Bible. The great age of the order is but a fiction. No one questions the age of stone-masonry, but Freemasonry or Speculative Masonry started in 1717 with but a single degree. The mutilated Scripture quotation in the Mark Master's degree to which I have referred is taken from the New Testament. But even your mutilated Bible is of no authority whatever in the order, and is but a piece of lodge furniture."

Rev. F.—"But I refuse to accept as authority what others may choose to say about the order. I am as much entitled to my say as they are to theirs, and what I have seen myself I know."

Cook.—"Your refusal to accept and acknowledge Masonic authority simply shows that you are contumacious. The Worshipful Master of a local lodge represents the sun; and as you have heard it recited scores of times, "As the sun rises in the east to open and govern the day, so rises the Worshipful Master in the east to open and govern his lodge." Morris says his sway is as despotic as the sun. These Worshipful Masters and Past Masters form the Grand Lodge of each State, and they make the laws of Freemasonry. Against the statement of these Masonic leaders, that not even the Ten Commandments from the Bible are of force in Freemasonry, you insist that the Bible is the great light of the order. Geo. W. Chase, author of "Digest of Masonic Law," quotes the decisions of the Grand Lodges on the subject, and sums up those decisions by saying, "Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was it would not be Masonry; it would be something else."

During the latter part of our conversation this Reverend Freemason got considerably excited. We had the undivided attention of the occupants of the car, and they came in from other cars; even the conductor of the train, who wore the jewel of a Knight Templar, stood listening most of the time. The passengers laughed at the discomfiture of my antagonist who, in his excitement, allowed himself to be carried several stations beyond his home, much to his chagrin; and the conductor with an oath called his brother Mason a fool after he had left the train.

A few weeks afterward we met in the corridor of an office building in Chicago, when he exclaimed: "You are the man that abused me so in the cars," when he hurried away without giving me a chance to answer him other than with a smile. The truth is, I treated him with deference until he utterly refused to allow that the teachings of Masonic leaders, or even the decisions of Masonic bodies, should have more weight than his unsupported assertions, when ridicule of his position seemed necessary, but everything on my part was said good-naturedly.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

FAIRBANK, Florida, May 15, 1895.

TO GOD'S REFORMERS OF AMERICA:—A call for a conference in New York City of reformers to be held from June 28th to July 5th next, is of God, sure. It is time, certain, for those who claim to be reformers to find the great secret of success in any work. I can see, though way down here in Florida, there is danger ahead. Old Satan intends to be there. I know just what he is bound to do. Simply continue his work. Create and continue divisions. I think God wants me to be there; and to be on the lookout for the old fox. I am learning of his many tricks, traps, and snares, South. He is a great hand to get into ministers, conferences, etc. I will tell you an alarming truth. He has more in number who claim to be reformers than God. But that does not bother God's reformers, because one can with ease handle a thousand and two set ten thousand aside. So my beloved, let us be on hand and on time in the great city, and aid to start a movement that will make all the hell powers of earth fear and quake, and all the heavenly powers shout glory to God.

RUFUS SMITH.

LODGE DARKNESS SCATTERED IN TENNESSEE.

MCNAIRY. Tenn., May 11, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am encouraged by results to persevere in making manifest the evil nature of organized secrecy; for some do and will accept the truth when fairly presented. Yet there are an interesting variety of ways used by lodgemen to ward off the force of truth. One minister with whom I conversed, endeavoring to enlist him in the reform, said: "There are some things worse than Masonry." I asked him what they were. He replied: "Life insurance." Another said: "I don't believe in making a hobby of anything." Another minister signified that "Modern Masonry" does not reject Christ as the Masonic books would make it appear. I had cited some sentences from them. At Liberty Grove I gave a lecture setting forth the two religions of the Bible, the true, and the false, and used the Brahma worship of the Hindoos as at present practiced, and the secret worships of Freemasonry to illustrate the false religion or sun-worship of Bible times, when Baal, so much spoken of in the days of the prophets, was regarded as the sun-god. I set forth the fact that Masonry, by its standard writers, is a religion, and claims to save men, at the same time rejecting the Lord Jesus Christ. Liberty being given for remarks, the Baptist minister replied that "Freemasonry is not a religion. It is just a social fraternity for mutual benefit, and is not a religion at all." I re-quoted the authors and assured the congregation that Masons generally acknowledge these books to be good authority in Masonry. The minister rejoined that he had been a Mason twenty-seven years and he knew. Yet before we closed our exchanges he acknowledged that he had not read those authors. I then briefly gave out some of the inside work of the lodge, including some of the obligations with the horrid penalties, and closed with a consciousness that the truth, which is light, had made manifest some of the hidden works of darkness.

C. POWERS.

A NEW VOICE IN THE WEST.

MAY 17, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—It has been on my mind and in my heart for some time to write you a line letting you know that the good work in which you are engaged has many friends and is progressing slowly but surely out on the Pacific Coast where the people are almost wholly given over to the lodge idolatry.

I have been well acquainted with your work for a number of years and have watched every move with more than ordinary interest. We spent three years in school work at Spotsylvania Court House, Virginia, where the lodgeites make such bold and unfounded assertions of George Washington being an affiliating Mason.

I am well acquainted with Mr. Stoddard of Washington, D. C., having shared the kind hospitalities of his Christian home more than once. The thoughts of the many kindnesses received from Brother and Sister Stoddard are most refreshing. God bless and prosper them.

Your agent on the Coast, Rev. P. B. Williams, is doing a noble work. Rev. Williams delivered the first lecture on the "Evils of Organized Secrecy" that we have had in Seattle Seminary. The lecture was masterly and was well received by the large audience that listened to it. Some of the secret order men were out, and the pointed truth from their own standard authorities made them squirm a little, and yet they all felt that Mr. Williams was correct. One lodgeman was heard to remark that the speaker told so much truth and was so courteous about it that it was hard for anyone to become offended. He handled his subject without gloves.

Bro. Williams delivered two other lectures in Seattle, both of which were very successful. He has made many warm and influential friends in Seattle who will give him a welcome at any time he may choose to visit us in the future.

I find the Cynosure to be full of information and interest. Every one who wishes to keep up with the times should read it. Yours for the work.

ALEXANDER BEERS,
Pastor Second F. M. Church, Seattle, Wash.

THE SABBATH IN GREECE.

BATSE, ANDROS, Greece, May 1, 1895.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Last Sunday, April 28th, elections took place throughout the kingdom of Greece, and the churches are the places where the ballots are cast. A great deal of disturbance took place at this time. At Patros, one of the ports from which a great many raisins are exported, a regular war took place between the parties, and it was as though there was a war between Greeks and Turks. Many were killed and a great many were wounded. We do not know what happened in other places, for we have not heard yet. The party of Mr. Deleyane won by a very great majority, and we hear by telegraph that Mr. Treeconpes, the late premier of Greece, was not even elected congressman. The reasons for this awful failure of Mr. Treeconpes are these: The national debt has become so great that the nation is almost bankrupt, and he had to put very heavy taxes on things to keep up, and that disappointed the people, for the Greek people as a general thing do not want to pay taxes. For many years, whenever there was a deficiency, instead of levying taxes on things to make it up, they would borrow money from some of the nations of Europe, and now the debt has become so great that it is impossible to keep up either by means of taxes or in any other way. They blame Mr. Treeconpes for many things; but we do not see that anyone is to blame except the people. They have become very ungodly and blasphemous. With the least little disappointment between one another, one will curse the God and Christ of the other one, and both have the same religion too. Even the little children blaspheme terribly.

The Sabbath is so desecrated that you can hardly find anyone in the church on Sunday; but very many start off early in the morning for the market and stay there all day and get drunk and fight, and in the evening when they go home their pocketbooks are empty. So Greece has no Sabbath. Sunday is the worst day.

The three congressmen who were elected from the island of Andros called on us before the elections and wanted to have our influence; and Mr. Zaraphonithes spoke to me and asked me to play and sing for them a hymn to the tune of America, but the words are, "Our King from heaven, look upon us," etc. And he said to them, "May God look upon you, and bless you, so that you may be a blessing to this nation." And also he said to them, "May God be with you so that some of you may stand up before congress to speak about the Sabbath, that it may be kept holy, and that the day for the elections be changed from Sabbath to another day, and that the Sabbath be kept sacred as it is kept by other Christian nations." And they said amen to it. Now we ask the Christian people of America to pray for this, that God will give courage to some one to stand up in congress and put this great question of the Sabbath before that august body.

Last election day we had an all-day meeting at our mission building. We had a house full, and had an opportunity to speak to many different crowds who collected about the door in the street. The subject of all our talks was the observance of the Sabbath. Mr. Z. told the people that it lies in their power to interest their congressmen on this subject and make it a national question. The people said among themselves that the Sabbath ought to be kept holy.

Mr. Z expects to take Bibles and make a tour about this island and on other islands as soon as the Lord will open the way. The Bibles are ready and waiting, but the means with which to travel have not made their appearance from anywhere yet.

We saw by the Cynosure that the father of dear Miss Flagg has been released from his sufferings, and we wish to extend to her our hearty sympathy, and we pray that God will be with her in her loneliness and help her to bear up under this affliction. With Christian love,

MR. AND MRS. A. D. ZARAPHONITHES.

How to Make Saratoga Potatoes.

After paring six large potatoes slice them very thin and put them into 3 quarts of cold water. Let them stand all night in a cold place—in the ice chest if possible. In the morning pour off the water and put in some that is fresh as well as a large piece of ice. When the potatoes are brittle, drain about a pint of them, and putting them into a frying basket lower them into a kettle one-third full of boiling fat. Cook for ten minutes, lifting them with a spoon from the bottom of the pan two or three times while they are frying. Drain the potatoes well and turn them into a dish lined with soft brown paper. Continue cooking the potatoes in this way until all are done.

How to Make Toilet Water at Home.

For violet water put a quarter of a pound of fresh picked sweet violets, together with their weight of pure alcohol, into a large bottle, cork and shake the botttle every day for one week; then add a quarter of a pound of water. Filter and bottle for use. Lavender water is made by slowly steeping for one hour in a covered farina boiler a pound of fresh lavender with a pint of water. On its removal from the fire add 2 quarts of alcohol, filter and bottle for use. One of the most delightful homemade waters is cherry laurel water. Bruise an ounce of bay leaves and add to them a half pint of water. Steep for an hour in a farina boiler, take it from the fire and add a quart of lavender water. Filter and bottle for use.

How Firing of Heavy Artillery Causes Rain to Fall In the Vicinity.

Whatever lowers the temperature of the air at any place below the dew point is a cause of rain. Various causes may conspire to effect this object, but it is chiefly brought about by the ascent of the air into tho higher regions of the atmosphere, by which, being subjected to less pressure, it expands and in doing so lowers its temperature. These ascending currents are caused by the heating of the earth's surface by the sun's rays, or, in fact, by anything which raises the temperature of the superincumbent air, and it is very obvious that the continued discharge of large pieces of ordnance will have a considerable effect in raising the temperature of the air lying on the earth's surface, which will ascend, expand and discharge its aqueous particles in the form of rain, for the reasons given above.

How to Prepare Salted Almonds.

Pistachio nuts, peanuts and almonds are the nuts chiefly salted. The process is so simple that any housewife can easily perform it. First, the nuts are "bleached" by dipping them quickly into boiling hot water. This serves to remove any particles of chaff or dirt and to soften up the exterior of the nut. After being partially dried they are then placed in a bath of hot salted olive oil or butter and allowed to remain a minute or two. The olive oil is better than butter, but it is more expensive. On being dipped out the nuts are placed in an oven and baked or else crisped in a roasting pan. The process originated in Paris about 12 years ago. Probably the best salted nuts are Jordan almonds from Spain. They cost about 80 cents a pound.

How to Make Asparagus Omelet.

Cut cold asparagus in inch pieces and set it in a covered earthen dish in hot water to be heated thoroughly through, but not to cook. Season it slightly again. Make a nice omelet with four eggs, put a cupful of the heated asparagus in it, fold it and serve it at once. Make as many omelets as the asparagus requires, but do not attempt to make any larger ones than four eggs will make.

The Christian Cynosure.

WM. I. PHILLIPS, PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1895.

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Isa. 55: 7.

A subscriber in Pennsylvania sends the names and addresses of five friends to whom he would like to have sample copies of the Cynosure sent. This is a good idea. If there is a number that you would like to have friends see, that you think will do good somewhere, send us word, please.

Those who "call the Sabbath a delight" will read with pleasure the article "The need of better Sabbath observance by its professed friends," by President Blanchard, on the third page. This essay received the second prize from the Philadelphia Sabbath Association last year. The subject is of vital importance to us individually as Christians, and to our nation.

CORRUPTERS OF OUR YOUTH.

We are in receipt of a monthly paper called The Star, devoted to the interests of a new secret society known as the C. M. A. (the Coming Men of America). Any boy under 21 years of age can be admitted free of charge and duly instructed in the secret work, including signs, grips and passwords, provided he signs a pledge of perpetual secrecy, subscribes and pays for the paper, and buys a badge. He is also instructed in a system of secret sign writing.

The paper says: "Nearly every man over 21 years of age belongs to some secret society, such as Masons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Honor, etc., but none will admit any one under 21 years of age." It proposes, in short, to become a training-school for all of these orders.

We can scarcely conceive of a more pernicious movement, or of one fraught with greater danger to our youth and to the nation. We deplore the enticements of the saloon, the wiles of the "strange woman" and the snares of the gambling hells. Their victims are many, and their way is "the way of hell going down to the chamber of death." But all these are under the ban of public opinion, and there is at least a partial protection of our youth from their snares. But here is a scheme, led by men of apparent respectability, to cultivate in our boys those qualities that will lead them, if followed out, into the grossest sins and the most grievous departures from God. It begins its work by teaching children the arts of dissimulation in keeping pretended secrets from their parents and guardians by teaching them a system of favoritism not based on merit, and which is liable to be used to screen each other in wrong-doing; and it holds out the false promise of great personal benefits to those who will but commit themselves to that system of lodge rule which robs men of true freedom and absorbs a vast amount of treasure, for which it gives no adequate return.

It is true that this society makes no pretension to religion. This may be just as well for religion, but is bad for the boys who, most of all, need its restraining and ennobling power. It is true that it excludes the girls. This is well for the girls, but is a practical consent to the impurity of life and words which would not be possible in a mixed society. We have seen no plan for the general corruption of our youth that seems so skillfully devised as this society of so-called Coming Men of America.

GOOD TEMPLARS.

The aim of the Good Templars in starting was to "unite in one grand organization" all the temperance orders. Ignoring Christ's command, "If any man serve me let him follow me," these societies claim to serve him in rescuing the fallen and in promoting temperance and brotherly kindness; but they not only do not follow Christ, they do what Christ said he never did: adopt secret methods, and if they have any light they put it under a bushel. Christ is left out of their religious creed after the Masonic example. But to blind Christians on this point two of its ten prayers are Christian in form and three others allude to Christ. A belief in the "existence of Almighty God, the Ruler and Governor of all things," is required of a candidate as he enters the lodge; and "The omission of Christ from its creed at the door is the omission of Christianity from all beyond. The creed itself is that of the pagan, Mohammedan, Jew, deist and Freemason." Hence the God of the Good Templars is not God in Christ, the true God.

This fact is seen further in the un-Christlike methods pursued in the Good Templar order Christ ever spake openly to the world. He commanded his disciples, "What I tell you in darkness that speak ye in the light." Matt. 10: 27. This order is in principle and often in practice a foe to the home. It obligates, in some instances, husbands to conceal from their wives or wives from husbands. Parents from children, but oftener children from parents. Thus it confuses the ideas of the young as to who are the God-appointed persons to receive their confidence and friendship, and leads youth to feel that there are closer ties than those which bind families to each other and to God.

Since we are indebted to Christ for the pure home and a free country, it is easy to see that an order worshiping a false god (while it pretends to pray to the true one); that an order which forbids in many instances the confidential relations of parents and children, is a foe to a healthy home and civil government. But it is also an enemy in that it breaks down in the minds of the members of the order the capacity for perceiving the pernicious character of the oath-bound secret orders.

Thus the order of the Good Templars is an incipient power for the dethronement of Christ, the destruction of Christian homes, and the subversion of Christian government.

THE END DOES NOT JUSTIFY THE MEANS.

A mother desiring to prevent her husband from drinking liquor conspired with her children to tell him a lie. Her object was worthy; the means she used for its accomplishment devilish.

"Shall we do evil that good may come?" Shall we, in order "to save the fallen and prevent others from falling," bind pure daughters and innocent brothers into a secret league with hypocrites, liars, profane swearers, fornicators, unclean persons and weak drunkards, who go from their temperance vows in the lodge to a saloon, as the secret temperance orders do? Let us be kind to all these sinners; invite them to attend our prayer meetings, to hear our hymns, our prayers and our Bible readings; let us present to them Christ a Saviour from sin. But let us "abhor" that institution which, being contrary to Christ's teaching and example in precept and practice, shuts out from its fellowship those who are prayerfully striving to follow him.

Let us keep a good object before us, and also let us encourage and use only pure and holy methods for its promotion.

WILBUR F. CRAFTS IN WILLARD HALL.

An instructive as well as interesting course of lectures was given under the auspices of the Chicago Central W. C. T. U., May 20–24, by Rev. W. F. Crafts, in Willard Hall, at the noon hour. His subject was "Practical Christian Sociology:" Monday, "From the Standpoint of the Church;" Tuesday, "From the Standpoint of the Family and Education;" Wednesday, "From the Standpoint of Capital and Labor;" Thursday, same concluded; Friday, "From the Standpoint of Citizenship."

The Tuesday lecture seemed to us to be of special interest, The lecturer began with the proposition that purity is more important than property. He represented purity and the home as the root and flower of the family, which is the unit of society. Mr. Crafts said, "The family is an integral part of the state." Families are the life blood of the nation. Whatever purifies and strengthens the home life builds and strengthens the nation; and whatever weakens the home ties or corrupts the family must tend to destroy our national life.

Monogamy and purity in the home are characteristic of, and essential to, a Christian nation. Wherever the Bible is recognized these two essentials to [illegible] home life are found. But where the Bible [illegible] not found, even where the most cultured and [illegible] philosophical religions prevail, things are exalted as a part of religion which are here driven to back streets and alleys.

One great enemy of the home and of our nation is the ease with which divorces can be obtained. It is a matter that requires faithful Christian legislation. Boarding of families was mentioned as one thing that tended to weaken the home tie.

The fact, that as the opportunities for girls and women to obtain a livelihood increased, more girls remained unmarried, the lecturer said he did not consider a bad sign, for he thought while it prevented girls from assuming the sacred duties of wife and mother simply as a convenient way of getting a home, it did not prevent the union of pure and loving hearts and lives. The effect and cure of this tendency, he thought, would be to elevate men and make them more worthy of the love and life-companionship of pure and noble women. Men, he said, refrain from marrying because they cannot maintain women in the life of ease and luxury such as the majority desire to live.

Social clubs were mentioned as being inimical to the home life. "The number of lodges and other societies," Mr. Crafts said, "is three times as great as the number of churches. A man frequently has time for every society you can imagine except the society of his wife and children!" Christianity turns the heart of the father to the children. There are three great elements in the education of children. Heredity, training and conversion. The greatest of these is the last-named —conversion; but training is a greater factor than heredity. We see that where the best conditions have prevailed for children bad training makes them bad; and where children have had the misfortune to inherit a downward tendency, they have in response to good training become good and useful members of society. Children must learn to obey. It is not enough for them to do what is pleasant and nice because it is nice to do that way; but they should be taught that there are things they must do, and there are things they must not do, simply because it is right.

To show his opinion in regard to woman's suffrage, he told a story about Mrs. H. B. Stowe. "Mrs. Stowe," he said "could not drop a ballot into the ballot-box, but she dropped a book that outweighed a majority of all the ballots which all the men of her day cast! On one occasion, after the war, in her Southern home, a colored man came to carry out the ashes from her fireplace who, by the way, had a legal right to vote. "Sambo," said she to the man, "Don't you think I ought to be allowed to vote?" The poor ignorant man looked at her and said, "Why, really now, missus, you don't s'pose a woman would have sense enough to vote, dose you?"

But the most dangerous foe to our national life is irreligion in the family. No amount of wealth or culture can atone for a deficiency in this regard. And nothing could so bless and help us as a nation as to repair, in the nine tenths of the homes of our land, "the altar of the Lord which is broken down."

THE BIBLE IN SCHOOLS.

Rev. J. L. Withrow touched a chord that will find response in many a mother's heart in his sermon May 26, from the text "The entrance of thy Word giveth light."

Following the example of Cincinnati and New York, the Bible has been ortracised in our Chicago schools since 1875. Now for several years there has been an organization working as wisely and effectively as possible for its restoration. We do not know whether Dr. Withrow knew of or had any reference to the Woman's Moral Educational Union, but that society and all Christians may well rejoice in having the truth set forth so clearly. We must take with the text the promise, "My word that goeth forth out of my mouth.... shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55: 11.

Mr. Withrow said: "The publisher of the Inter Ocean has done a timely service by raising the question, 'Shall the Bible be restored to the public schools of Chicago?'

"This is proposed not as a political question, but because 'the youth of this city [illegible] being raised without sufficient moral instruct[illegible] Previous to 1875 the Bible was used in [illegible] public schools.

"LET THE CHILDREN HEAR.

"It is questioned whether a mere reading of a chapter in the Bible would better things. We answer: Not in a day. But during the next twenty years let there be reverently read and with proper elocution such mighty Scriptures as 'In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth,' and 'God spake,' saying: 'Thou shalt not steal,' 'thou shalt not kill,' 'thou shalt not commit adultery,' 'thou shalt not bear false witness'—lie. Let the rising generation hear such Scriptures every day, and we will not breed a race of atheists and anarchists.

A number of members of the board who voted to evict the Bible spoke deferentially of its value. Even the inspector, who seemed to lead the attack upon the old book, paid it a passing compliment while hurrying to complete its expulsion. As when they cried out for the crucifixion of Christ, Pilate asked: 'Why, what evil hath he done?' so might the friends of the Bible have asked the school board, 'Why, what evil hath it done?'

"The most rabid opponent of the Bible declares we should have morals taught in the schools! But what code shall it be? Morals based on what? We do not teach a child morals by telling him not to steal lest the police lock him up. That imparts terror of punishment only. And moral character cannot be based on anything but the principle that it is wrong to do wrong, although no human eye should see, or ear should hear, of the act forever. And this cannot be made the basis without belief in a living, all-seeing, all-knowing God. It is the spirit of paganism and apostate Christianity to hold only that to be sin which gets found out. The Bible [illegible] up before us the tempted young man, Joseph, [illegible] resists solicitation to sin by help of a conscience in him which voiced itself thus: 'How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?' But during the past twenty years no such majestic truths from God's book have been allowed in our public schools. And statisticians tell us crime is increasing more rapidly than population. In some communities the increase is four-fold faster than population. A commercial newspaper of Chicago recently said editorially: 'Anybody who has been but a casual observer of events in this country must have been forcibly impressed with the recent growing tendency to dishonesty and downright villainy in politics, official life, corporate responsibility, and private business obligation.' That silly bird which they say buries its head in the sand to escape the hunter hurrying after it is not more foolish than are they who shut their eyes to the facts which are here mentioned. Let twenty more years roll round with not a Bible, nor a word from it being heard in our schools, and then what will be the condition? Already the city hears with only a little astonishment of millions of dollars of public funds being misapplied, and pay rolls and contracts being given with defiant indifference to the law.

"But so stupefied and paralyzed is the public conscience that no one expects retribution to reach any culprit unless it be some scrub or scab of the slum strata, whose punishment stands for nothing."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Extra session of Congress unnecessary.—Care for the Messenger Boys.—Anti-"Crap" society.—Liquor at the grocery.

The general topic of conversation in Washington is the decision of the Supreme Court, annulling the income tax. There is more or less wild talk on the subject, and some of it comes from those who ought to know better; but the general impression is that the decision will be accepted as final, and that nothing will come of the talk of a proposed amendment to the constitution providing for the imposing of a Federal income tax, although the proposition will almost certainly be submitted to Congress and will be made much of by a certain class of professional agitators. That the loss of the revenue which would have been produced by the income tax will be more or less embarrassing to the government is freely acknowledged by officials, but they much prefer the last decision to the first one, which excepted incomes derived from state and municipal bonds and rents, and which would have caused endless trouble and litigation. Officials say the decision will not make the calling of an extra session of Congress necessary, and that unless something now unlooked for shall prevent, the government will have money enough to meet all proper claims until after the meeting of Congress in regular session.

Those who have had the widest experience in all branches of moral reform work are practically unanimous in declaring that the best and most lasting results are obtained by winning over the young, bending the twig as you would have the tree grow. For that reason I think two movements begun here within the last week will produce important results. The first of these movements was begun by the W. C. T. U., ably assisted by one of our daily papers. It seems that it has been a custom for the boys employed by the local Messenger companies—ranging from twelve to sixteen years of age—who have either gone after or carried messages to the immoral houses of the city, to enter those houses, and some revolting stories have been told of the scenes these boys have thus become accustomed, to and in some cases in which they were persuaded or compelled to take part. The publication of these facts brought about a state of indignation which has already resulted in action on the part of the authorities, and yesterday an order was issued by the Chief of Police, that no messenger boy should be allowed under any circumstances to enter one of these houses; and the W. C. T. U., is now trying to get the Messenger companies to take their call boxes out of these houses, and also proposes to look after the moral welfare of these boys in other ways. The other movement, which is for the benefit of the colored boys, was originated by Prof. Geo. W. Cook, of Howard University, and is supported by a number of our most prominent colored citizens. Its object is the enrollment of the colored boys in a law and order league, each member pledging himself not to gamble or countenance gambling in any form, especially the game of "craps," to which the colored newsboys and bootblacks are so generally addicted. Prof. Cook inaugurated the movement by inviting a large number of colored boys living in the vicinity to take lunch with him at the University mission. After the lunch he gave them a practical talk and invited them to take the pledge against gambling and join the league. More than sixty joined. Weekly meetings are to be held. This is a field that certainly needs working, as any policeman will tell you that the boy "crap" players of to-day are the men criminals of the future. Prof. Cook deserves and will receive every encouragement in the work he has undertaken.

The latest move of the Anti-Saloon League was the adoption of the following resolution: "Resolved, That we, the Anti-Saloon League, earnestly request all people in sympathy with the cause of temperance to patronize those grocers who do not deal in intoxicants." The idea is to force the grocers who sell liquor, by the loss of patronage, to give up the cursed traffic, and there is no doubt that it would work well if "all people in sympathy with the cause of temperance" would live up to that resolution; but, if it be fair to judge by previous experience in similar attempts, they won't. That's the trouble. The average man who privately believes in and practices temperance himself cannot be made to see the good that might be accomplished by his publicly and aggressively advocating what he believes in. When some method of making him see has been discovered a knockdown blow will have been struck the liquor traffic. *

W. B. STODDARD'S REPORT.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS OF THE N. C. A.—The following is my report for the year ending May 1, 1895:

Number of lectures and addresses given, 96. Approximate number of calls made, 1,754. Number of Cynosure subscriptions obtained, 394. Collections and receipts per Cynosure subscription, $836.51. Incidental expenses, $315.39.

In addition to the above I secured over $300. This was largely expended in defraying the expenses of State conventions, and the balance was put into the State treasuries.

Reviewing my work and the condition of the field in which I have labored, I see much to praise God for and no reason for discouragement. I have not secured as many subscriptions to the Cynosure as some years. Cash collections have been much the same as last year.

During the first of the year I met with a serious, and what came near being a fatal, accident, which kept me from active work for two months. Since that time I have been able to prosecute the work with my accustomed energy.

The interest manifest at conventions, held in New York City, Xenia, Ohio, and Philadelphia, Pa., show a live growing sentiment. As reports have appeared in the Cynosure together with some of the addresses, I need not here speak of these gatherings in detail. Suffice it to say that as a rule the friends stood by the truth firmly. Our list of friends and co-workers increases with the increase of the knowledge of the work.

The assistance given by Bro. Phillips in sending special Cynosures and tracts from the home office has been considerable. He has called the attention of many to our conventions who would otherwise have had no knowledge of them. The coming of Bro. and Sister Powers from Boston to labor with us, has enlarged our sphere of usefulness in the capital city. Pleasant rooms overlooking Pennsylvania Ave. are kept by these friends. Many have received their first knowledge of the inside of the secret lodge system by attending parlor meetings that are there held. We have conducted our work on the same general plan as heretofore, working through and out from the churches sympathizing. The attendance, if any different from other years, has been larger. Collections in some instances quite light, but generally good. My field is too large for thorough cultivation. Shall we not pray that God will send forth more laborers into this department of his vineyard? Very respectfully,

W. B. STODDARD.

ANNUAL REPORT FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 13, 1895.

To the National Christian Association:

MY DEAR BRETHREN:—May grace and peace be multiplied to you all. You will find the following a synopsis of my work on the Pacific Coast district from June 1, 1894, to March 31, 1895—ten months: Anti-secrecy addresses, 120; other addresses, 131; total, 251. These addresses were delivered at 108 different places. Expenses, $345.70; collections, $199.28. Seventy-six are known to have left the lodges through our efforts. We hope many more. I have a large field, extending from the British possessions to the Mexican border, north and south, and from the Rockies to the Pacific Ocean, east and west. This necessitates much travel and great expense. Railroad fare here is from four to five cents per mile. Do the very best I can, it seems impossible to keep my expenses down to what my collections and Cynosure receipts amount to.

The interest in our cause is increasing. My visit to California has aroused the friends of reform mightily. There is a demand for an organization in that State in the near future. I wish (if in your province) that you would decide whether it is best to organize the State of California separately, or work it in connection with our association. Had we a man for that field, I would know at once what to do.

Our annual convention meets in Portland, Sept. 25, 26, 1895. A number of ministers have already consented to be present and speak, if the Lord wills. We have only a partial program thus far. We are expecting the largest gathering of any yet held on this coast. Pray that the Holy Ghost may greatly bless us and help us in this most difficult field.

I had hoped to meet with you in this annual convention, but circumstances will not permit it. While you are in session there, I will (D. V.) be battling for the cause here. I shall pray the divine benedictions upon you all in your deliberations. May you so deliberate as to glorify God and save souls. Amen. Your brother in Christ's cause,

P. B. WILLIAMS.

THURLOW WEED: "I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the Anti-masonic excitement by a sincere desire, first to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of secret societies."

GRACES OF RELIGION.

CULTIVATE THEM, SAYS REV. MADISON C. PETERS.

The Christian Must Have Force of Character—Gentleness Can Be Overdone—What Is Necessary to a Pure Life—Charity the Noblest Virtue.

The subject of Rev. Madison C. Peters' sermon at the Bloomingdale Reformed church, New York, Sunday, May 26, was "The Christian's Addition Table." The text was II Peter i, 5, "Add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity." The preacher said, in part:

We are not to content ourselves with a single grace. Give all diligence, make good use of every Christian advantage and secure as high attainments as we possibly can. The graces of religion are as susceptible of cultivation as any other virtues. We are to have an accumulation of virtues and graces. It is our business to add on one after another until we have become possessed of all.

Faith is mentioned first because it is the foundation of all Christian virtues—faith in Christ, and not a mere intellectual belief in the general existence of God, which may be said to be a universal religious sentiment. The devils believe and tremble. The belief in God is an ineradicable instinct of man's religious nature. It is incorporated in the structure and functions of his moral being. A belief in God's existence is inevitable, and there is nothing praiseworthy or meritorious for a man to believe on God.

Neither is there anything praiseworthy in a general belief in the historical existence of Jesus Christ as recorded in the gospels. An intellectual acceptance of the mere facts of Christ's life and death is not saving or gospel faith. Every man who believes in history at all is obliged to believe in the existence of Christ, whether he wishes to or not. There is no escaping it, except by a universal historical skepticism.

"Add to your faith virtue." Virtue here has reference to the common meaning of the Greek word, as referring to manliness, firmness and independence. Many men's gentleness is the gentleness of weakness. The Christian must have strength of conviction and force of character. Gentleness can be overdone.

We can be explicit and open and honest and withal courteous and considerate of the feelings of others. We can add to fidelity brotherly kindness. No one was ever more plain in speech, more faithful and certain in reproof, than Christ, but his love infused every warning. We can be strong characters, men of remarkable decision, inflexible purpose, aye, even be stirred with the anger that is as majestic as the frown of Jehovah's brow—the anger of truth and love—without renouncing the meekness and gentleness which were in Christ.

"And to virtue knowledge." The knowledge of God and salvation through the Redeemer. It is the duty of every Christian to make the highest possible attainments in knowledge. We should know as much of Christ as it is possible for us to know. The greatest object of Paul's desire was to know Christ, to become as fully acquainted as he could with his character, his plans, with the relations which he sustained to the Father, and with the claims of his religion. To know Christ is the greatest privilege of the Christian.

"And to knowledge temperance." The word temperance here refers to the mastery over all our evil inclinations and appetites. "Temperate in all things"—in sleep, in food, in drink, in speech, in business, in pastime, in everything. We are to confine everything within proper limits, and to no propensity of our nature are we to give indulgence beyond the limits which the law of God allows.

The temperance cause should not be based upon a philological argument over a disputed word, nor on the debatable ground that drinking pure wine is a sin in itself. The wine that Christ made and drank was not the fiery and poisonous compound of modern distillation and manufacture. The wine of Palestine was light, pure wine.

"And to temperance patience." I do not take patience in this connection to mean simply enduring trial without murmuring, complaining or rebelling in order that the effects of affliction should produce in the soul the results which trials are adapted to accomplish. We are to exercise our opportunities for the play of good nature. We are not to be irritable, huffy, sensitive. We should not lose our temper. We live only by the forbearance of God. We are to repeat in our lives, as his children at least, something of this patience.

"And to godliness brotherly kindness." Kindness is the sun of life. Give no pain. Say not a word, give not the expression of the countenance that will offend another or send a thrill of pain to his bosom. Kindness is the charm with which the Christian should captivate and the sword with which to conquer. How true it is that

A little word in kindness spoken,
A motion or a tear,
Has often healed the heart that's broken
And made a friend sincere!

Cherish a bright, sunny, cheerful temper and disposition.

"And to brotherly kindness charity." Charity is the brightest star in the Christian's diadem. With Cotton, let us pray:

Fair charity, be thou my guest,
And be thy constant couch my breast.

Charity "thinketh no evil." With an unwilling ear and sad heart it hears bad news. It glories in no man's misfortune. It rather holds down its head and partakes of his shame. It rejoices in the belief that everybody is sincere. Where it cannot succor want it will condole.

Soft peace it brings wherever it arrives;
It builds our quiet, latent hope revives,
Lays the rough paths of nature smooth and even,
And opens in each breast a little heaven.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning June 2. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—A living Christ; Christlike living.—Gal. ii, 19, 20; v, 22-25.

1. A living Christ (Gal. ii, 19, 20). Christ may be said to be a living Christ in two senses. He lives in Himself. Though having died, yet He still lives at the right hand of God, having risen from the grave and ascended into heaven, where He liveth evermore. But Christ also lives in those who are His followers. Paul states this fact in the first topical reference: "I am crucified with Christ. Nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," or, as the American revisers more correctly put it, "and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." Christ living in us! This is true Christianity. We die that we may live. We are crucified to self, but rise to Christ. We give ourselves up entirely to Christ, so that the ruling power in us is no longer self, but Christ. We crucify the old self, and yet we do not die. New energies spring up from the grave of the old life. This new life is Christ's life. It derives its power and its support from Him, and it is fashioned and patterned after the model of His own life.

This life Paul says is lived by faith. "The life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God." It was Paul's faith in the Son of God that made him able to destroy his old self and to become the ruling principle in his life. If we want Christ to live in us, we must have faith in Him. It is by faith alone that we can be crucified with Him, can die to self and live no longer, but Christ live in us.

2. Christlike living (Gal. v, 22-25). In these verses Paul sets forth some of the characteristics of true Christlike living, as it may be called. 1. Christlike living should bear fruit. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." If the Spirit of Christ dwells in us, it will produce results. Every branch that abideth in Him bringeth forth fruit. This may be made a test of Christ's living in us—"By their fruits ye shall know them." Do our lives prove that Christ, by His Spirit, dwells in us? This is an important question for us to consider. A living Christ in us will produce a Christlike life. It could not be otherwise. 2. A Christlike life is devoid of self. We have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts if Christ lives in us. This is another test of Christ's living in us. 3. A Christlike life requires obedience. "If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit." Christ in us will not only transform our dispositions, crucify our sinful desires, but lead us to obey the laws of God. We die to sinful ways and live to God's ways. "If ye love Me, keep My commandments."

On Leading a Meeting.

Do not carry the service yourself. Lead it.

If the meeting has not been on your heart, your heart will not be in the meeting.

One word fitly spoken is better than an erudite address.

Do not "make a speech." The prayer meeting is the place for the communion of saints, and not your eloquence, but your heart experience, is wanted.

Have a definite plan, but let it be so flexible that it can be altered at any moment if the spirit of the meeting makes a change desirable.

Watch for the guiding of the Holy Ghost. Let Him lead the meeting.

Never speak or sing or pray merely to fill up the time. That is sacrilege.

Have several of the most spiritual members promise to continue in silent prayer throughout the service for the presence of the Holy Spirit.

Lead the meeting, but be willing to let the meeting lead you.

Be ready with a verse of Scripture to direct the service should thoughts wander.

Secure an organist who is a good musician, but a better Christian.

Do not exhaust the subject with your opening remarks. Better that a dozen members should discuss the subject poorly than that the leader should preach about it ably.

Try something new. See what God can do with a consecrated ingenuity.

Be humble. If you seek to make a reputation for yourself, you will make no reputation for Christ.

Go in the spirit of prayer if you would stand in the spirit of Christ.

Be yourself. Let your true nature speak. Only arrows from the heart's quiver ever reach the mark.—Golden Rule.

ONE OF ILLINOIS' ACTIVE WORKERS IN THE CAUSE OF WOMAN.

Miss Cecilia Beaux—Mrs. Cleveland as a Writer — Gentlewoman Housekeepers. A Code of Honor For Women — The Pocket Problem—Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

Mrs. Mary E. Holmes, who was recently elected president of the Equal Suffrage association of Illinois for the tenth time, has been in active work as an educator and reformer for many years. She was for several years a teacher and always took advanced grounds in introducing the latest and newest methods. She taught in Peoria, Ills., and in Berlin and Oshkosh, Wis.

Mrs. Holmes and her husband, Rev. D. E. Holmes, were members of the first faculty of the Oshkosh Normal school. A failure of Mr. Holmes' health made a change to a business life a necessity, and Mrs. Holmes widened her sphere of usefulness by beginning the reform work that has occupied so much of her time for the last 20 years. Her home was in Galva, Ills., where her husband was engaged in the lumber business until about three years ago, when the family moved to Chicago to obtain better educational advantages for the children. Mrs. Holmes was for some years a temperance worker and was superintendent of the franchise department of the Woman's Christian Temperance union of Illinois. She was a member of the "government reform" committee of the woman's branch of the world's congress auxiliary, and also represented the National American Suffrage association at the World's fair as the committee from Illinois.

Mrs. Holmes is also an active member of Plymouth church and has a large Sunday school class of men and women, which meets in the auditorium of the church. She is president of the industrial school connected with the church. But the greater part of her time and strength has been given to the development and elevation of woman. She believes that woman should be enfranchised that she may represent the home. She has great confidence that mothers would legislate in the interest of family life. She expects women to eventually purify politics and make the world a purer and sweeter place in which to live. To do this she believes woman must have the opportunity to express her convictions of men and measures in the only way possible in a republic—by the ballot box.

Mrs. Holmes has seen the equal suffrage sentiment grow from indifference and scorn to respect and popularity since she has been president of the state association, and she believes that the present interest is the beginning of the end.—Chicago Post.

Mrs. Cleveland as a Writer.

Mrs. Cleveland is every now and then in receipt of requests to write articles in behalf of charities or enterprises of this nature, all more or less worthy doubtless, but which, if acceded to in each case, would keep the spare time of the president's wife pretty well filled, to the exclusion of everything else, says an exchange. Occasionally there comes a request from a magazine asking Mrs. Cleveland to write upon a special subject, but to each and every offer, even those of the most flattering description, a refusal is returned.

Mrs. Cleveland writes to her friends, and that is the only way in which her signature is ever to be found attached to any bit of handwriting of her own. These letters are generally brief and to the point, as in the nature of things it would be impossible for many lengthy letters to be written by the mistress of the White House, especially when, as in the present case, there are constant demands made upon her time and thoughts by two young children in addition to the official duties necessarily devolving upon the wife of the president.

Gentlewoman Housekeepers.

The millennium of the housekeeper has come when she is promised a real, live gentlewoman to "brush the hearth and put the plates away." A new society has been formed for the elevation of the cook stove, not that it is to surrender its old place in the basement—at least that has not been promised—but that its operator shall be lifted to the same standing, social, economical and professional, as a professional nurse.

In order to accomplish this, to establish a standard of gentility from the beginning, it is the purpose to exclude any one who has the unhappy preparation of a "previous condition of servitude." She is promised to "milady," in all the virginal purity of the reduced gentlewoman, who has "never had to work for her living before."

The society has begun life with the name of Society of Gentlewomen Homemakers. It offers prizes in the way of badges of honor to the first 100 gentlewomen who take positions in families as homemakers.

The society will have a cooking and training school for the benefit of those who know something of the work, but are not entirely competent.

"Women's work for women" is the motto of the society, and to all who send a request it will issue a list of proofs which will convince the most skeptical of ambitious women as to the desirability of woman's work over business. By this means it expects to rid the long suffering housewife of incompetent cooks who demand high wages, and provide her with a jewel of a cook who traces her ancestry back to the colonial dames. The new society means business. —New York Herald.

A Code of Honor For Women.

A discussion has lately arisen respecting a code of honor for women. The advanced woman needs one. If she is to compete with men in men's work she must adopt the code which men have found effective and practical. She must learn to hold her tongue, to respect other people's business, other peoplo's secrets, other people's letters. She must not pry, or tell white lies, or do little mean underhand actions In fact, a man's honor must be a woman's. This will necessitate a complete change in woman's prejudices, opinions and conduct. For while in quiet heroism, in steady performance of dnty, in unselfish sacrifice, even in moral courage, women bear the palm, they decidedly have not that keen sense of honor, that conviction that certain courses, not necessarily wicked per se, would be accounted dishonorable, which possesses the soul of a public school man.

Miss Nightingale's Advice.

The Young Woman publishes the following autograph message to the girls of Great Britain from Miss Nightingale: "My 'message' to girls would be: (1) Train yourselves to your work, to your life. The last 25 or 30 years have recognized beyond everything this necessity of training. (2) Have a higher object than the mere undertaking in all you undertake. When we fail or are disappointed, we lose heart and perhaps 'strike work.' But if we have recognized ourselves as (I will not say only) a wheel or a tool in the hands of that Almighty highest and truest and best, we have that blessing of being a part of the whole, and whatever our own failures are never cast down. (3) As one of the best women workers of our day says, 'The' talk now is of rights, not right.' Let that not be our case. I am myself always a prisoner from illness and overwork, but all the more I wish you godspeed."

English Woman Suffragists.

The English woman suffragists have collected and published in the London Echo opinions from many eminent divines, English, Scotch and Irish, in favor of extending full parliamentary suffrage to women. The list includes the bishop of London, the dean of Durham, Dr. James Martineau, Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, Canon Wilberforce. Dr. Newman Hall, the bishop of Edinburgh and many others. The Boston Transcript says, "This does not look as if the 200,000 women in Great Britain who already possess the municipal suffrage had made a very bad use of it."

Artistic Homes.

The Princess de Polignac of Paris, daughter of Isaac Singer of sewing machine fame, is about to open a shop in the French capital for the sale of articles of household art. Her object is not financial gain, but to teach Parisians the artistic arrangement of their homes. Prizes will be awarded for the most successful creations and models in the various departments.

Ellen F. McCarthy.

Miss Ellen F. McCarthy received one of the best averages in a recent examination for internes, and she will have the distinction of being the first woman interne in any of the hospitals in Cincinnati. She will graduate this month from the Woman's Medical college, which she has been attending for three years, and will then take her position as interne in the City hospital. Her home is in Titusville, Pa. Miss McCarthy is not yet 23 years of age and is described as a pretty little woman who ranks as one of the brightest students in her college.

A Rumor About the Chignon.

The latest rumor in regard to hairdressing is that the waterfall or chignon is about to return and render the heads of womankind the monstrosities they were a generation ago. Even the accompanying net is threatened. The only comfort is that this is a "go-as-you-please" era, and it is not at all likely that a fashion so ugly will prevail to any great extent. A more immediate prophecy is that the demure parting is about to depart and the pompadour will take its place There is no style so charming for a low, broad forehead as the loose, softly brushed pompadour. The hard, clearly defined roll is inartistic, and the hair can easily be made to stand up on crimping pins or with the waving irons with half a dozen prongs which come for the purpose.—Paris Correspondent.

To Make a Daisy Chain.

This is almost picnic time, and it will be a novelty for the girls to know how to make flower wreaths for their hats, so that they may spend one day doing as their favorites about whom they read always do. First, be careful how you pick the flowers. Break them with as long stems as possible. Make the stem into a loop, slip the head of the next daisy through it, draw the loop tightly, loop the next and keep on looping and slipping in flowers and tying until you have a string long enough to fasten aronnd your hat. Another way to make daisy chains is to slit the stems close to the flower and slip one stem through another, thns making a close set wreath.

SATAN'S BEST FRIEND

RUM DEMON, PARENT OF ALL CRIMES AND ABOMINATIONS.

Cuts Down Youth and Vigor and Fills the World With Weeping—Blasts Hope and Breeds Pestilence—Robert G. Ingersoll's Terrible Arraignment of Alcohol.

The following wonderful piece of word painting has been frequently published, but is good enough to be worth many repetitions. Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, in addressing a jury in a case which involved the manufacture of alcohol, made the following terrible arraignment of the demon:

I am aware that there is a prejudice against any man who manufactures alcohol. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worm in the distillery until it empties into the jaws of death, dishonor and crime, that it demoralizes everybody that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe anybody can contemplate the object without being prejudiced against the liquor crime.

All we have to do, gentlemen, is to think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity, of the ignorance, of the destitntion, of the little children tugging at the faded and withered breasts of weeping and despairing mothers, of wives asking for bread, of the men of genius it has wrecked, the men struggling with imaginary serpents, produced by this devilish thing, and when you think of the jails, of the almshouses, of the asylnms, of the prisons, of the scaffolds upon either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this damned stuff called alcohol.

Intemperanco cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, old age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachment, blights parental hope, brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans, fathers fiends, and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime. It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots. It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims for your scaffolds.

It is the lifeblood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman and support of the midnight incendiary. It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligation, reverences fraud and honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue and slanders innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife and the child to grind the parricidal ax. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God, despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and stains judicial ermine. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislature, dishonors statesmen and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation and unsatiated havoc. It poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputations and wipes out national honor, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does all that, and more. It murders the soul. It is the sum of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy.—Banner of Gold.

Like Consuming Fire.

This alcohol poison is like a consuming firo. It is not necessary that I should waste valuable time to recapitulate to you the dire effects of alcohol upon the human system; that the brain, the most beautiful portion of the human system, is in consequence of its fine and intricate construction the first point to give way, to be burned up, and then other organs following in the order of their beanty and snsceptibility. The brain is possessed of great recuperative powers, is enabled again and again to make resolves to give better protection to the diseased body, yet as often fails in nervous force as disease comes on and overpowers the worn out forces.—Dr. Mary A. Seymour.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON X, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 9.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 13-32—Memory Verses, 25-27—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 32—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

13. This lesson, like the last, refers to the day on which He rose from the dead. He appeared first to Mary Magdalene: then to the other women; next, probably, to these two; afterward to Peter; and in the evening to ten in the upper room in Jerusalem with others who were with them.

14. As they walked they talked, and Jesus was the topic of their conversation, but it was not a risen Christ they talked of. The one whom they had loved and followed as the Messiah of Israel was dead, and they knew not what to think.

15. As they communed and reasoned He of whom they spake joined them and walked with them. It is still true that He takes a special interest in all who speak of Him (Mal. iii, 16, 17). If we knew Him better, we would be always talking of Him. How careful we would be of our words if we believed that we should have to give account of every idle word (Math. xii, 36).

16. He is often with us, and we do not know it. He has said, "Lo, I am with you all the days" (Math. xxviii, 20, R. V. margin). He often seeks to get our attention that He may speak to us or show us somewhat, but, unlike Moses and John, we are too busy to turn aside to see the burning bush or hear the voice that speaks.

17. He is grieved when we are sad and would have us tell Him all our own troubles. He desires to fill us with joy and peace. See the way in Rom. xv, 13. He overhears every conversation and reads all our thoughts (Ps. cxxxix, 1-4; Ezek. xi, 5.

18. They do not recognize Him and think He must surely be a stranger in the city if He does not know what had taken place during the last two days. Mary took Him for the gardener. They think Him a stranger. His enemies counted him a glutton and a winebibber. How unknown and misunderstood He consented to be!

19. He knew, but He would have them tell Him. He likes to have us tell Him all, as His disciples did when they had been out teaching (Mark vi, 30). They had evidently been talking of the mighty deeds and words of Jesus of Nazareth, and now God had approved him, and the people had received Him and looked upon Him as the long promised Deliverer.

20, 21. But the strangest thing was that the chief priests and rulers had crucified Him, and now He was dead and had been for three days, and the redemption of Israel which they had expected He would accomplish was now as unlikely and as far off as it ever had been. They evidently had their heart upon the redemption rather than the Redeemer and upon their thoughts rather than His words.

22, 23. They had heard the report of the women who had been at the tomb, and that angels had said that He was alive, but they did not quite receive it—at least they could not understand it—and it was all a great mystery to them? They were in great perplexity.

24. Some had even gone to the tomb to see if the story of the women was correct and had found it as the women said, but then they had not seen Him, and if He was alive where was He, and why had He not come to them? So they did not know what to think.

25. Now He speaks to them and shows them their error. If they had only believed the prophets—that is, all that they had said, they would have understood everything and would have saved themselves from all this unnecessary darkness. But, not believing, they had acted as foolish persons. Consider some other fools in Ps. xiv, 1; Prov. xiv, 9; I Sam. xxvi, 21; Luke xii, 30; I Cor. xv, 35, 36.

26. The prophets had in their own personal history as well as in their writings plainly foretold that the Messiah of Israel would suffer and die and rise again. All is clearly written in Isa. liii, and his death is stated also in Dan. ix, 26. "Messiah shall be cut off, but not for himself," or, as in the margin, "Shall have nothing."

27. He went back to Moses, without saying one word about the supposed mistakes of Moses or that Moses did not write this or that. He took up portions in all the Scriptures and made no reference to two Isaiahs or any such wonderful knowledge as many wise (?) men seem to have today. And doubtless from the coats of skins of Gen. iii, 21, down to the fountain and shepherd of Zech. xiii, 1, 7, He taught how His sufferings had been foretold. All our Sunday school scholars should be made to understand that when a teacher or a preacher makes light of any portion of Scripture, such as the story of Jonah, or seems to be wiser than our Lord, that such people are no followers of Christ and must not be listened to.

28. Having arrived at their destination, He made as though He would have gone further, for He will not intrude Himself upon any. If we prefer not to have His company, we need not fear that He will come where He is not wanted. His word is "Ye shall seek me and find me when ye shall search for me with all your heart" (Jer. xxix, 13).

29. It is not difficult to constrain the Lord or his angels to abide if we really mean it. See Gen. xviii, 5; xix, 3; Judg. vi, 18. Contrast the Lord's "abide" in John xv, 4, 7; John ii, 28, and see I Sam. xxii, 23. Think how Peter took Him home from the synagogue (Mark i, 29) and say whether you want Him always with you, or do you get enough of Him at church and prayer meeting.

30. What He did in that house He has been ever doing; giving us His broken body, saying, "I am the bread of life." "He that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me." Therefore make Me your daily food and life and all, and so live till I come again. While He breaks to us the bread we shall surely have enough and of the best, and be "satisfied with favor and full with the blessing of the Lord" (Deut. xxxiii, 23).

31. For the first time since He joined them that day they know who He is. "He was known of them in the breaking of bread" (verses 35). Let us open our Bibles and have Him break to us the bread of life, and quickly He will open our eyes that we may see (Rev. iii, 18). As He walked and talked and vanished, so shall we do in our resurrection bodies, for we shall be like Him even as to our bodies. (I John iii, 2; Phil. iii, 21.)

32. If we will let Him open to us the Scriptures, we, like them, will have such a burning at our hearts that we shall be constrained to tell it out, even though we walk many a mile to do it (Ps. xxxix, 3; Jer. xx, 9; Job xxxii, 18-20). Let us avoid their folly and give good heed to all that the prophets have spoken, lest we walk in the dark, ignorant of coming events and unacquainted with the great restoration soon to come upon our earth (II Pet. i, 19; Acts iii, 19-21).

SILVER CONVENTION.

CARLISLE ADDRESSES THE DELEGATES AT MEMPHIS.

Synopsis of the Arguments He Brings Forward Against the Free Coinage of the White Metal at the Old Ratio—Representative Catchings Presides.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—The "sound money" convention was a success, considered in both its aspects—numbers or enthusiasm. There were 3,000 people in the hall when it was called to order, and it was full before the organization had been effected. Representative Catchings was permanent chairman and all the speeches were anti-silver mono-metallism, and generally characterized the silver movement as a "craze" that like a prairie fire would soon burn itself out. The leaders were men who had taken up in succession all the political and economic heresies that had been before the poople in the past decade. When a speaker eulogized Cleveland and Carlisle. The convention broke out in hearty and protracted applause.

Remarks of the Chairman.

The above remarks were made in proposing Representative Catchings as the presiding officer, a proposition that was unanimously approved, and Catchings in returning thanks for the honor said: "Believing that the free and independent coinage of silver at the 16-to-1 ratio would be disastrous to all private and public interests we have laid aside our private affairs for the time to counsel together how best to prevent it. We have been charged with entertaining views which we scorn and disdain. It is said, for instance, that we are monometallists. Let us here and now place the lie upon that charge. [Applause.] It has been said again that we seek to so contract the currency that prices will fall. Let us stamp that also as a lie. Let us pass a series of resolutions that will be our declaration of faith, and then challenge any man to put other words on our lips. * * *

CARLISLE'S VIEW OF FREE SILVER

Mocks at the "Double Standard" as Absurd and Impossible.

When Carlisle rose to speak he faced nearly 10,000 persons—substantial business men, for the most part. He was loudly cheered as he stepped forward, and as soon as silence was secured began his address with the statement that the free silver at 16-to-1 proposition was an attempt to revolutionize our money system, destroy our national credit, violate all contract obligations, unsettle all values, reduce laborers' wages—a proposition in fact that challenges the intelligence, patriotism, and commercial honor of every man in the country.

Of course the silver men did not really desire to see these things come to pass and for this reason he appealed to them to review their position and correct a possible mistake on a subject so important to everybody in this country. He showed next how small a percentage of coin was used in the business of any civilized country and how improvements in methods of exchange, clearing houses, bank paper and other facilities for business had really increased many fold the actual duty of every dollar in coin in the civilized world. He said that with a gold standard in this country we only had $600,000,000 in gold coin.

The actual stock of gold bullion and coin amounts to only one-third of our currency. He said: "Our gold, full legal tender silver, old United States notes, bank notes and subsidiary silver coin aggregate $1,804,707,763, exclusive of the minor coins, and every dollar of this vast amount is kept equal in value to the standard established by law. This is the financial condition which the advocates of free coinage at 16-to-1 now propose to revolutionize by a change in the standard of value, so the whole mass of circulation for the use of the people would be reduced to about one-half the purchasing power it has now."

Coming to the "double standard" advocated by so many—both free silver men and so-called gold men—the secretary said he could not understand it. These people who wanted to abolish the single gold standard we had been doing business on ever since 1853 and establish what they called bi-metallism were evidently "too deep" for the secretary and he admitted it. He could not conceive, he said, how it is possible to have two different legal measures of the same thing at the same time. How could we have two pound weights, one containing 16 ounces and the other 8 ounces?

The secretary evidently had not heard of the "option" which it is claimed was intended to be given to a de that to pay his debts in "cheap" money if he could obtain it, for he did not mention that important point in the course of his remarks, except to say that the result of the proposed free coinage would better all who are indebted to us would have the privilege of paying in silver, while all to whom we become indebted are to have the privilege of requiring us to pay in gold.

Three Young People Drowned.

EFFINGHAM. Ills., May 24.—Many sorrowful faces are seen in this city caused by the drowning of two young women and one young man at Knagga pond, one and a half miles from here. Katie Johnson, Maud Myers, Sadie Oakley, and Bertha Shinn of this city, and Charley Wiley, an Austin college student, were floating on a raft, when it capsized. Sadie Oakley and Bertha Shinn were rescued, but Katie Johnson and Maud Myers both caught Wiley, pulling him under and drowning all three.

Bryan Replies to Carlisle's Speech.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—Ex-Congressman W. J. Bryan of Nebraska arrived here from Van Buren, Ark., and was given a cordial reception by representative free silver men of the city, who escorted him to his quarters at the Peabody hotel. He spoke at night at the Grand Opera House in answer to the speech delivered by Secretary Carlisle before the sound money convention. He devoted most of his time to a comparison between Mr. Carlisle's present views on the silver question and those which he is alleged to have held in 1878.

The Better Way.

Anti-toxine for diphtheria is all the craze now, as a specific to cure this terrible disease. All honor to Behring and his associates in Koch's laboratory in Berlin, whose experiments have extended for years; also to Dr. Roux and others in Paris, whose experiments at the Pasteur Institute have covered similar ground. The experiments are startling in their claims, and while all humanitarians and physicians earnestly hope the expected success may be realized, yet the effort is still largely problematical, and we watch and wait. Isn't it better to bar the door before the strong man enters? Pure blood and a vigorous organism offer no foothold to the disease germs, the seeds of the giant evil. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify the blood. This medicine is not new, or its action doubtful, for thousands testify that Hood's has purified the blood.

No one in ordinary health need become bald or gray, if he will follow sensible treatment. We advise cleanliness of the scalp and the use of Hall's Hair Renewer.

A GERMAN TRACT.

"Was hat die Kirche mit der Loge zu thun?" (What is the relation of church and lodge?)

BY PROF. GEO. J. FRITSCHEL.

This is a valuable tract of forty pages which should be widely scattered. The Litteraturblatt of Reading, Pa., says:

"On so few pages we have hardly ever read so much material of correct explanation concerning the lodge question. A better guide, than this which says about all and warns in such a fatheriy way, can scarcely be offered." We recommend it to our German readers.

Price, $1.25.

We heartily commend this new work, by Elizabeth E. Flagg, to all our friends. The narrative originated in her personal experience, two or three years ago, when she sought relief and restoration from the results of a painful accident, In that search she availed herself of a unique healer in New Jersey, whom she graphically described, at that time, in her weekly letters to this paper. The ideas created in her mind by that experience form the basis of this well-told story, and thoughtful readers will peruse it with interest. While all may not agree with its deductions, ministers of the Gospel, students in seminaries and intelligent home circles will find it pleasant food for thought. We sell it for $1.25 per copy, postage prepaid.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF HAPPENINGS OF NOTE.

Work of the State Lawmakers at Springfield—Bills and Resolutions Introduced, Etc.—Other State Items of General Interest to Our Readers.

SPRINGFIELD, May 22.—The senate reconsidered the order sending Frank H. Cooper to jail for refusing to answer questions about his store in Chicago. This, however, does not end the matter except probably for Cooper. Littler's anti-trust bill reached a vote on reconsideration and failed to pass again. In the house another bill was introduced in place of the Miller bill, vetoed by the governor last week. A bill was introduced appropriating $10,000 to aid Fred A. Cook in a south pole expedition. The resolution was adopted instructing the superintendent of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Quincy to prosecute all saloonkeepers selling liquor within the forbidden limit of the home. Bills on third reading were then taken up and a number disposed of.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., May 24.—The special senate bridge committee reported that the St. Louis bridge companies were in a combine and have returned to extortionate rates for the use of the bridges, and are in open violation of law. It is recommended that the facts be laid before the authorities. The labor arbitration bill was referred to the appropriations committee. The slop-feed report was postponed. The bill was passed providing for annual inspection of county officers' accounts, and a number of bills were advanced. The house passed the revenue committee's revenue bill, the bill to regulate grants of rights and privielges by cities—an improved Miller bill referring to gas and street railway rights, etc., and several other bills and advanced a number.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., May 25.—The weary statesmen of the Illinois legislature have quit work practically until Tuesday next. There was hardly a quorum in the senate and little business was done. The house bill fixing the standard of weights for grain was advanced to third reading. The house passed the ball to prevent the theft of dispatches from wires. A couple of bills of local interest to Chicago were also passed and the bill to abolish days of grace read the third time and made special order on its passage for Wednesday next.

A STRIKING LIST OF NEW BOOKS

This list, repeated from last month, has proved to be of exceptional interest. Mostly published since January 1st, a very considerable proportion have already required second editions. "Practical and Helpful" are the terms by which they have been uniformly described.

Revival Sermons in Outline. With Thoughts, Themes and Plans. By Many Eminent Pastors and Evangelists. Edited by Rev. C. Perren, Ph. D. Buckram cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

This work comprises (Part I.) eighteen short chapters on methods, plans and suggestions regarding revival work by different writers, and (Part II.) a large collection of the best outlines of sermons by a score or more of the most successful Pastors and Evangelists.

St. Paul and Woman; or, Paul's requirement of Woman's Silence in Churches reconciled with Woman's modern practice. By Rev. Wm. De Loss Love, D. D. 12mo., cloth, 75 cents.

My conviction is clear and strong that the manuscript should be published.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

Strikes the keynote of the mystery of this subject * * For one I thank the author with all my heart, and I commend the work to every one who seeks light and knowledge on this most interesting subject of woman's true relations toward the mental and moral advancement and elevation of our race, in the whole field of human progress.—Hon. Noah Davis, (Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.)

The Priest, The Woman and The Confessional. By Father Chiniquy. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Its author has done good service in the cause of Protestantism, and he speaks from a personal experience in the workings of the Roman Catholic Church where he held high position.

The Ministry of the Spirit. By Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D. 235 pages, 12mo., cloth, uniform with the author's earlier works, $1.00.

Certainly no man was better qualified than Dr. Gordon for writing on this subject. His sweetness of spirit has brought him in touch with Christians everywhere, and his special qualifications for writing on the office work of the Holy Spirit, will assure to them the most thorough treatment of this subject yet published.

Life Power; or, Character, Culture and Conduct. By Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

A practical work of counsel and suggestion in Character building.

The Holy Spirit in Life and Service. Introduction by Rev. A. C. Dixon. 12mo., cloth, 75c.

Addresses delivered before the Conference on the Ministry of the Holy Spirit, held in Brooklyn, Oct. 1894.

Pleasure and Profit in Bible Study. By D. L. Moody. 12mo., paper, 25c; cloth, 50c. (March 12.)

In this volume Mr. Moody has gathered together a vast amount of practical suggestion as to various methods and plans for Bible Study.

Essential Christianity. By Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, D.D. New and cheaper edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

This deeply spiritual volume is devoted to enforcing the truth that Christianity is not primarily or essentially a system of ethical precepts, or of moral rules, nor a scheme of humanitarian relief, nor belief in a historic person or event; but it is a conscious and vital intimacy with a living Christ.—Advance.

Topical Outlines of Bible Themes. Being an Illustrative Scripture Reference Book. By Rev. G. S. Bowes, B. A. 12mo., cloth, 410 pages, $1.50. (In press.)

The aim of this work is to present a complete scriptural treatment of the most important themes of the Bible, with teaching, illustration, application, etc., wholly Biblical.

Jeremiah: Priest and Prophet. A new volume of the "Old Testament Heroes." By Rev. F. B. Meyer, B. A., uniform with other volumes of the series. $1.00.

Speaking of this author Rev. F. E. Clark in the Golden Rule says: "Mr. F. B. Meyer whom all American Christians love"—rarely has an author had such a tribute.

Demon Possession and Allied Themes, an inductive study of Phenomena of Today. By the late Rev. J. L. Nevius, D. D. 12mo., $1.50.

In addition to the exhaustive study of the subject, to which the late lamented author had given the closest attention during nearly forty years sojourn in China, the value of the work is further enhanced by the most complete Pathological, Bibliographical and general Indexes.

The Prayer that Teaches to Pray. By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D. 16mo., clo., 75c.

This exposition by the gifted Scottish professor holds first place in the literature on the pattern prayer.

The Cartoons of St. Mark. By Rev. Robert F. Horton, D.D. Second edition. 12mo., buckram, $1.50.

A series of familiar yet carefully studied expository discourses, still alive with the glow of actual delivery. In a remarkable degree they illustrate what good expository preaching is. This is preaching such as people always are ready to listen to. The likening of the chapters of the gospel to cartoons also is a felicitous introduction and far from involving any great stretch of the imagination. The reader will find his heart touched and drawn toward Christ, while his intelligence is stirred and informed at the same time.—Congregationalist.

The Tongue of Fire. By Rev. William Arthur. 16mo., paper, net 35c.; cloth, 60c.

A new edition at moderate price of an accepted religious classic.

Christ and the Church. Essays concerning the Church and the Unification of Christendom. Introduction by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, D. D. 12mo., cl., $1.50.

The papers comprising this volume were delivered as lectures before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, at Chautauqua, July, 1894. The subjects were selected because of the great and growing interest in the unification of Christendom both in this country and England.

Pictured Truth: A handbook of Blackboard and Object Teaching. By Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce. Introduction by Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.25. Very fully illustrated.

The increase of object teaching and "chalk talks," from both pulpit and platform has created a demand for suggestive help which this volume attempts to supply. Prepared by an author of large experience in this attractive method of imparting and emphasizing important truth, it is believed the work will become at once popular.

Primer of Medical Missions. By Rev. John Lowe. Paper, 20 cents.

A clear statement of their claims, progress, function and value, with many illustrations from actual experience.

Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. By Father (Rev. Charles) Chiniquy. Forty-third Edition. 12mo., cloth, 832 pages, $2.25.

There is no book upon the Romish controversy so comprehensive as this. It is a complete picture of the inner workings, aims and objects of Popery. It is from the experience of a living witness and challenges contradiction.

The Neglected Continent. A mission study of South America. By E. C. Millard and Lucy E. Guinness. Small quarto, very fully illustrated. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

An account of the mission tour of Rev. G. C. Grubb and party through South America, together with a historical sketch and summary of missionary enterprise in these vast regions.

Joseph Hardy Neesima, A sketch of his life. By Rev. J. D. Davis, D. D., Professor of Theology in Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan. With numerous illustrations. 12mo., cloth, $1.00.

Was there ever a more wonderful romance in real life than the story of Joseph Neesima?—Golden Rule.

No man or woman can read this book without a positive addition to heart-wealth.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Radical Criticism. By Prof. Francis R. Beattie, D. D. Introduction by Prof. W. W. Moore, D. D. 12mo., cloth, $1.50.

"He is thoroughly in earnest and uncompromising in his opposition to the errors of a destructive criticism, but his tone is not at all that of a man who is trembling for the ark; we venture the assertion that his discriminating and dignified papers will do more good among intelligent people than all the objurgation and rhodomontade of our slashing sciolists combined."—Union Seminary Magazine, Hampton, Va.

The Divine Indwelling. By Rev. E. Woodward Brown. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

A carefully prepared exposition of the work of the Holy Spirit. The thirty-six chapters cover all the various aspects of the question ou both its divine and human sides.

David Livingstone. The Personal Life of. Chiefly from his Unpublished Journals and Correspondence in the Possession of his Family. By W. G. Blaikie, D.D. With Portrait. 508 pages. 8vo., cloth, $1.50.

This work has always been the recognized final authority on all matters connected with the life of the great explorer and missionary. This new and unabridged edition is published at a greatly reduced price.

The Teacher and the Class. A Symposium on Sunday School Teaching. By Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., Rev. R. F. Horton, D.D., Bishop J. H. Vincent, Rev. James Stalker, D.D., Archdeacon Farrar, B. F. Jacobs, Ralph Wells, and others. 16mo., cloth, 75c.

The following is a partial list of the valuable papers included in this volume: The Teacher's Heart-Life, The Teacher's Qualifications, The Teacher out of School, The Teacher's Preparation, The Teacher's Ideals, The Teacher's Work, The Teacher's Responsibility, The Teacher's Helpers, The Teacher's Reward.

God's World, and Other Sermons. By Rev. B. Fay Mills. Second edition. 12mo., cloth, $1.25.

It must have been some such sermons as these of which Lord Melbourne complained the preacher insisted that men must apply their religion to their private life. . . These are good sermons because they are sermons that have worked.—Interior.

Peculiarly interesting for two reasons: first, because of the supremely important truths which these sermons bring into boldness of outline; and second, because of the preacher.—Advance.

Strong gospel teaching forcibly set home.—Standard.

FARM AND GARDEN

FARM ROLLERS.

Two Homemade Implements Described For Which Many Merits Are Claimed.

The value of a farm roller as an aid in preparing ground for planting or sowing is not sufficiently realized. The function of the roller on most farms is to go once over a piece of grain that has been sowed with an accompaniment of grass seed, to put the ground into smooth condition for future mowing. This use of a roller is all right, but it is extracting only a small part of the value that can be got out of it. Nothing is better for making fine the soil and getting an admirable seed bed than a thorough rolling, followed by a thorough harrowing. The roller breaks up lumps and clods and firms the soil so it can be thoroughly pulverized by the subsequent harrowing.

The Farm Journal says that a roller ought to be made in two sections so that one may roll back and the other forward in making a turn; otherwise a bad gouging of the surface occurs at every turn. The authority quoted illustrates what is claimed to be the best manner of constructing a roller. Two pieces of plank are halved together at right angles for ends, and pieces V shaped are fitted in at the four corners. These ends should be 24 or more inches in diameter, making the roller 28 inches in diameter. The ends are covered with narrow strips of plank, with edges sawed somewhat beveling. This can be done at the mill. These strips are spiked to the ends, and over each end a stout iron hoop is put on hot and allowed to shrink into place, as a wagon tire is put on. This makes a solid job.

Thomas Greiner, in his "New Onion Culture," illustrates a roller and worker combined. This is an ordinary wooden garden roller, such as any one can make of a piece of chestnut or oak log, 3 or 4 feet long, with iron pins driven in the center on each side and a simple handle attached by means of two pieces of old wagon tire. Bore holes into the face of the roller one foot apart and put in pins.

To use this tool as a marker, make each of these pins hold a small rope, encircling the roller by driving the pins into the holes beside the end of the rope. More than one row of holes can be used to change distances if required for other vegetables. Strips may be tacked lengthwise of the roller to mark places in row for setting plants.

Seeding Clover on Grains.

No. 34 bulletin from the Minnesota station is of interest to farmers in the spring wheat regions. The first part of this bulletin deals with seeding with clover on different kinds of grains. The results show the superiority of wheat over oats as a nurse crop for clover, a difference of a ton per acre in favor of the clover seeded with wheat.

According to this bulletin, clover hay cut at the time of full bloom contains the largest quantity of nitrogenous materials in the most valuable food forms, while clover cut at the end of the flowering contains the largest quantity of dry matter, which is poorer in the valuable nitrogenous compounds.

Artichokes For Rough Land.

At the Oklahoma station artichokes yielded at the rate of a ton per acre. Few plants are so productive with little or no attention whatever. As they are not injured by the mild cold of this section, they will not be dug, but in the spring hogs will be turned in to complete feeding experiments made with other cheap foods. Farmers having rough lands in the bends of creeks should by all means try a patch of artichokes in such places.

Food, when it sours on the stomach, becomes innutritive and unwholsome. It poisons the blood, and both mind and body suffer in consequence. What is needed to restore perfect digestion is a dose or two of Ayer's Pills. They never fail to relieve.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Tuesday, May 21.

Seven Americans who have been exiled from the Hawaiian islands have written United States Senator Davis, of Minnesota, regarding the Dole government, which they say while "masquerading under a republican label is the veriest despotism of modern times."

Wheat went to 74⅞ cents a bushel at Chicago, and there was a great time on the board of trade. The cereal closed at 73¼.

Wednesday, May 22.

The United States having refused to permit Groat Britain to land a Pacific cable on any of the Hawaiian islands the cable will be built to Fanning island. It means 800 miles more of line, but every station will be on British territory.

The pacific overtures of Marshal Campos to the Cuban rebels having failed officers skilled in guerilla warfare will be put in charge of the Spanish troops and the most vigorous measures adopted to stamp out the rebellion.

Thursday, May 23.

Sheepmen have been forbidden the freedom of the Bar River valley in Colorado —by a "mass meeting of citizens." The sheepmen depend on protection by the state. "A war is imminent," says the dispatch.

The Illinois State Medical society is in session at Springfield with 200 doctors in attendance.

Snow to the depth of one foot is nature's summer resort decoration just presented to Creede, Colo., and vicinity.

Colonel Noble Smithson, a prominent lawyer of Tennessee, has carefully prepared an opinion that the income tax decision repeals the internal revenue laws.

Friday, May 24.

The Peltz anti-betting bill, which is now Pennsylvania law, prohibits betting on horse races and kills racing in the state. The track owners say there was little or no money in race tracks with betting privileges; without them they will be a dead loss.

Saturday, May 25.

New York politicians are putting Governor Morton in front for the presidential nomination next year. Ohio men are just as active for McKinley. Indiana boomers are keeping Harrison's name in view, and Maine hears of no one except Reed. It is the time of the "favorite son."

The Jefferson county (Ky.) grand jury has refused to indict Gordon for butchering his wife and her paramour in a Louisville hotel.

Queen Victoria was 76 years old yesterday and the anniversary was celebrated wherever the British flag flies.

Monday, May 27.

Wheat hangs close around 80 cents a bushel at Chicago, and there are plenty of men who predict "dollar wheat" before the boom stops.

THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLIES.

PITTSBURG, May 24.—In the United Presbyterian assembly, which opened its session yesterday, Rev. D. J. B. McMichael, of Monmouth, Ills., was elected moderator by acclamation. The moderator announced the various committees. The most interesting matter that came up was, as in the old school body, seminary control, but no action was taken. A number of committee reports were made, and a committee from the old school body, headed by General Beaver, was received. speeches being made in favor of union, which were applauded.

PITTSBURG, May 27.—The stated clerk of the Presbyterian general assembly announces that the assembly will adjourn sine die this afternoon. An attempt to obtain reconsideration of the vote by which Union theological seminary was practically declared out of the pale of the chuch was defeated, less than 100 voting for reconsideration. The situation consequently is that the New York presbytery is enjoined to bar out of the ministry all students in Union. A resolution was adopted rebuking congress for holding a session on Sunday.

REPORTS OF A SHORT CROP

The Cause of the Persistent Rise in the Price of Wheat—Gotham Excited.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Unmistakable confirmation of the reports of damage to growing crops and shortage of visible supply not only in this country but in every other country where wheat is grown got under the market and gave it such a boost as it has not had during all these weeks of excitement. Even before the market opened the advance had begun. At closing Tuesday evening the price for July was 73⅝ cents; yesterday morning it was in the neighborhood of 75 cents, but it was on the rise and and did not stop until it reached 77 cents. There had not been so much excitement on the board since B. P. Hutchinson ran the price up to $2, while the bears stood around "cussing" him.

The advance may be explained as the result of a strengthened belief in a short crop. For weeks reports have been coming in from all portions of the northwestern and central states of damage by frost and insects. From South America and Europe and Russia also reports came of short crops and limited supplies. All this was verified by the national crop report and that of Crop Expert Inglis. They both agreed that the damage done to wheat in Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and even New York had been underestimated, if anything. So wheat went up.

Prices on the curb after the close of the day's business rose to 79½ and 80.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Intense excitement prevailed in grain circles here, the transactions in wheat alone footing up to 34,000,000 bushels, making over 103,000,000 bushels for three days. As the market neared the close July wheat touched 80 cents. This price was greeted with loud cheers from the bulls. The market closed at top prices.

QUANTITY OF METAL MONEY.

Greater Now Than at Any Time in History —The Platform Adopted.

As to the quantty of gold and silver used as money now the secretary said, and gave authorities therefor, that there is now more gold and silver in the aggregate and more of each one of them in use as full legal tender money than ever at any other time in the history of the world. The gold in use amounts to $3,965,900,000, the full legal tender silver to $3,435,800,000, and the limited legal tender silver to $619,000,000. The policy of maintaining, or rather attempting to maintain, the so-called double standard never succeeded in keeping so large an amount of full legal tender silver in circulation in the world as there is at this time. And in the gold standard countries the stocks of money are greater per capita than in the silver standard countries.

The secretary closed with the statement that what we wanted now was for the government to go out of the banking business entirely by the withdrawal of its arbitrary compulsory issues of notes, and afford the people an opportunity to supply their own currency based upon their means and credit, thus enabling every community to utilize its resources when necessary, and adjust the circulation from time to time to the actual demands of legitimate commerce.

At the conclusion of Secretary Carlisle's address there was another noisy demonstration. And after speeches by Representative Patterson, of this city, and others adjournment was taken to 8 p. m. When the convention reassembled the platform committee was ready to report and the resolutions were read. They indorse a uniform and certain standard of value as necessary to the proper development of the country, and the maintenance of all our money—gold, silver and paper at a parity.

In short on this point the convention declared that "each dollar shall have equal debt-paying and purchasing power with every other dollar." The bi-metallic standard is declared impossible of maintenance where the legal ratio is different from the market ratio of the two metals, and in this connection a brief review of the fluctuations of the two metals from 1792 until now is given. Real bi-metallism would be an excellent thing, but it is impracticable. This country should be always ready to join with other nations in an effort to secure real bi-metallism, but cannot do it by itself.

It is proposed that all notes other than silver certificates shall be withdrawn of the denomination of less than $10, those withdrawn being reissued in denomination of $10 and upward. A change in the banking system so that it shall be more "elastic" is also favored—on the lines proposed by Secretary Carlisle. The resolutions close with a commendation of President Cleveland in his efforts "to protect the national honor and to maintain the public credit during a period of great financial distress and under conditions which threatened danger to both."

The convention concluded its business by authorizing the appointment of a committee of one delegate from each state represented to superintend the distribution of proper literature coming under their control, the chairman of the committee to be a resident of Memphis. The convention then adjourned sine die.

EX-SECRETARY M'CULLOCH DEAD.

Passes Away at the Ripe Age of Over Eighty Years.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Hon. Hugh McCulloch, formerly secretary of the treasury, died shortly before 3 o'clock this morning. With him when the end came were his two sons, a married daughter, and a grandson. Death was calm and peaceful, the patient being for some time previous in a comatose condition. Mr. McCulloch was over 80 years of age.

Troops to Go to Pender, Neb.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The secretary of the interior has requested the secretary of war to send troops to Pender, Neb., to quell the trouble that has arisen over leased lands there between the Omaha and Winnebago Indians and the Flournoy Land and Improvement company. Secretary Smith's action is taken at the request of Indian Agent Beck, who says the Indians are thoroughly aroused. Beck says that the leases are clearly illegal and the courts have so declared them. The cases are now in the United States supreme court.

Strike To Be Declared Off.

PITTSBURG, May 27.—Secretary Warner, of the Miners' union, has announced that the strike in the Pittsburg district would be declared off today. He said the miners were starving and had to work at any price.

SCHEME THAT HAS BEEN TRIED.

Free Coinage a System That All Nations Have Experimented With.

Proceeding to tell what other nations had done Carlisle said free coinage was a system that nearly every civilized nation had experimented with, and every one had failed to make it work. The results in this country were only repetitions of those in other countries. One effect of the "oscillation" of silver and gold under free coinage was to drive out half the "redemption" money each oscillation—that is, when gold was undervalued it left the country and when silver was undervalued it disappeared. A man who had 1,000 silver dollars that were worth, bullion value, say 1,030 gold dollars, would sell the bullion for gold dollars before he went to market or paid his debts.

Then he took up the strong point of the silver men—that there has been a fall in the price of products since 1873 coincident with the fall in the price of silver, which fall is chargeable to an increase in the value of gold. On this he said: "The assertion that the fall in prices since 1873 is due to the appreciation of gold alone is based upon the assumption that the relations between supply and demand have not changed; that there has been no diminution of the cost of production and distribution; that the facilities for effecting financial exchanges have not been improved; in short, that the world has made no progress in the conduct of its industrial and commercial operations for more than twenty years. The assumption is so inconsistent with well-known economical and historical facts that it seems scarcely worth while to give it serious consideration."

During the debate on the tariff in 1891-3 in the senate a senate committee was at work on a matter that covered this subject perfectly although it was not intended to do so. The committee, strange to say, reported unanimously as to the facts, but drew different conclusions therefrom as to the tariff. The investigation covered a period of fifty-two years and embraced all the occupations in which our people were engaged and the fact unanimously found was that the wages of labor were higher in 1891 than in '72 or '73. Wages were nearly 64 per cent higher than in 1860, which was thirteen years before the silver legislation and more than 8 per cent. higher than 1873 when that legislation was adopted.

Illinois Sunday School Convention.

DECATUR, Ills., May 23.—About 400 delegates to the state Christian Sunday school convention have arrived. Rev. H. M. Brooks of Paris opened the convention. George Hall of Decatur made an address of welcome. W. W. Weedon of Taylorville made the response. Rev. J. W. Alled of Chicago made an address. Committees were appointed, and President S. S. Jones of Danville made his annual address.

Bucket Shop Proprietors Indicted.

QUINCY, Ills., May 27.—The grand jury has indicted all the bucketshops and commission houses, including J. W. Christy, Frank T. Evans, and A. L. Kull, who are Chicago operators with former branches here. There are ten indictments, and the grand jury threatens to follow up by indicting the owners of the buildings in which the bucketshops are operated.

Neglected to Draw His Salary.

KANKAKEE, Ills., May 27.—As the result of an expert's investigation of the records of the county for ten years back it has been discovered the county is in debt over $1,500 to ex-County Clerk Kenaga because of his neglect at three different times to draw his quarter's salary. He held office for thirty years.

Growth of the Tinplate Industry.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Metal Worker says: In less than four years, from nothing the American tinplate industry has become an established industy of large proportions, which already gives employment to some 15,000 hands. There are now in actual operation twenty-eight tinplate works proper, rolling their own black plates. Ten more are building, a majority of which are expected to be in operation by July 1.

Fatal Trolley Accident at Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 27.—A South Chicago electric motor drawing a trailer crashed into a wagon containing five persons at Seventy-ninth street and Yates avenue last night. The wagon was demolished, one woman killed, another woman probably fatally injured, and a third slightly injured, and two young men also slightly hurt.

Notes of the State.

Harry Stevenson, a young man of Fairview, Ills., was killed by being run over by an Iowa Central train.

Fire did $8,000 damage to the village of Plainsville, Ills. Among other buildings destroyed was the office of The Weekly Observer.

Mrs. Grace Hines of Beardstown, Ills., was bound over to the grand jury at Monmouth, Ills., for abandoning her 3-month-old babe. She left the babe in a depot outhouse, where it was found half dead a few hours afterward.

William Ribeau, an old resident of Peru, Ills., killed himself by shooting. Ill-health was the cause.

William O'Brien, James McCarthy, John Welch and John C. Ruggy pleaded guilty to sending and receiving a prize fight challenge and were sentenced to four months in the county jail at Monmouth, Ills., and fined $100 each.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16

Commencement at Monmouth College will be June 9.

What an incentive to missionary effort is the fact that two-thirds of the human race for whom Christ died never heard of him.

The reform work that tells, is continued and united effort. A fitful attack upon a great evil is often worse than no attack at all.

Prejudice is the worst opposition the reformer has to overcome, because mal-information is more difficult to remedy than non-information.

Commencementat Amity College, Ia., will be held June 13. President Littlejohn is to be congratulated over a prosperous year for the college.

A large number of Covenanter ministers and elders passed through this city this week on their way to attend the annual synod which meets at Denver, June 5th.

The Iowa Supreme Court has decided that the mulct saloon-keeper must furnish proof that his petition is signed by a majority of voters. It is said this decision will close nearly all the saloons in Des Moines.

Twenty-three students graduated at Geneva College, Pa., last week. This is the largest number the college has ever graduated at one time. In many respects it has been the best year in the history of the college.

The Wesleyan Methodists of Indiana hold their annual camp meeting at Fairmount June 6 to 16. This denomination has ever been so loyal to the anti-secret cause that we hope to secure some representative of our movement who will present some plan for co-operation at this important meeting.

Rev. C. Powers has secured signatures of quite a number for a Christian Reform Conference to be held in Jackson, Tenn., commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., July 17, 1895, and closing on the evening of the 18th. Several speakers are already engaged. A further notice will be given next week.

Trying to do Christian work if your heart is not in it, is like trying to move a ship on land. In order to work easy the labor must be congenial. We excuse an occasional fit of the "blues," but when the disease becomes chronic either the condition of the heart or the health needs looking after.

The Lord has greatly blessed the orphanage at Gwenn Dale, Indian Territory, which he led our Bro. J. E. Wolfe to establish, and which now shelters about thirty under its roof. Increased facilities would give increased results. Who desires to share in the work and its rewards? Letters may be addressed to Bro. Wolfe, in care of this office.

The opening sermon of the U. P. General Assembly which met in Pittsburg May 22–27 was by the retiring moderator, Prof. John A. Wilson, D. D. A few years ago while pastor at Wooster, O., Dr. Wilson preached a strong sermon against college secret societies which was published in pamphlet form and caused quite a stir in university circles.

The right man in the right place is our Pacific Coast secretary, Rev. P. B. Williams. He is holding revival services in Mondovi, Wash., and writes: "The Lord is with us here. Five saved last night. Will send a nice list of subscribers to Cynosure at close next Monday. Three have been led out of their lodges, and have renounced their secret society obligations.

Nowhere have we heard of higher ground on Sabbath observance being taken than at the union meeting of Christian Endeavor societies in Wheaton College chapel, Sabbath evening, May 19th. A number of excellent addresses were given. On another page we give the substance of the one by Miss Harder, which is a sample of the practical points made by the other speakers.

The victory of the North over the South was celebrated at Cascade, Ia., last Sabbath afternoon in the Opera House, Protestants in general taking part in the celebration. Is it not time for the war to be forgetten—especially on the Sabbath? "From whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts, that war in your members? ye lust and have not: ye kill and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not." James 4: 12. Christ is "the Prince of peace."

The Lord has directed the steps of Bro. J. E. Wolfe, evangelist, to Wheaton, and has sealed with his blessing the preaching of his Word, which has been "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." Skeptics are confounded, sinners are converted, and saints are comforted by the truth he so fearlessly proclaims. Meetings will continue (D. V.) in the large tent and all welcome.

In his sermon in Wheaton College chapel last Sabbath, the pastor, Rev. W. H. Chandler, discoursed on the importance of faith. He said when our Lord comes again he will doubtless find much Christian organization, such as the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Y. P. S. C. E., the W. C. T. U., the A. B. C. F. M., the W. F. M. S. But the important question is when he comes will he find F–A–I–T–H on the earth?

We once heard Dr. Talmage say with great emphasis in his own pulpit, "When you find a man who loves any place better than his own home, then look out!" intimating that he had crossed the danger line. It is on this line that the lodge works the greatest mischief by separating, as most lodges do, husband and wife, so that most of the husband's spare hours are spent in the lodge room rather than with his wife and children.

The growth of secret societies in this country during the last quarter of a century has been marvelous. There is scarcely anything now that is not under their control. It is conceded to be in vain to seek any office of honor or employment without becoming identified with one or more of these secret associations. It seems to us that the church is to blame for this condition of affairs. If its ministry and membership had been faithful in testifying against this evil it could not have flourished so extensively, if at all.

Dr. J. P. D. John has resigned the presidency of De Pauw University. Some of the trustees do not sympathize with his devotion to the "new education." Dr. John is an evolutionist of the advanced school. We heard him preach the Baccalaureate sermon for the Indiana University at Bloomington last year, in which he discriminated rather severely against the Psalms of the Old Testament, and even the Decalogue. The Psalms, he said, with few exceptions breathed an unforgiving spirit, and were mostly imprecations by the writers upon their enemies. The Decalogue was largely negative and destructive, and was designed to tear down rather than build up.

The death of Secretary of State Walter Q. Gresham, on the morning of May 28th, removes one of the most prominent figures in our national politics. How comforting it is to read that during his last hours his wife read to him favorite texts from God's Word. His aged mother, who resides in Lanesville, Ind., a little hamlet off the railroad, when notified by a messenger of her son's death, wept in an agony of grief, exclaiming: "Wat is dead! My poor boy is dead!" He was buried in Chicago on Thursday. We are in hopes he had no lodge membership, as they did not officiate at his funeral. During his administration as Postmaster General, he attracted national attention by his determined fight against the Louisiana State Lottery, which up to this time had edjoyed the privileges of the mails for conducting its business.

REPORT OF THE N. E. ASSOCIATION.

BY SECRETARY J. P. STODDARD.

We are sowing the good seed, leaving the harvest with Him who shall garner the wheat and burn the chaff. The multiplication of secret lodges renders their pernicious influence all the more palpable to such as are not "blinded by the god of this world," and so will hasten their ultimate and complete destruction.

To account for the zeal of some "professing godliness," I am constrained to believe that we are in that state of apostacy where, under strong delusions, men "believe a lie." Of this sad condition we have complete proof. How else can the fraternal union of Tremont Temple Baptist church with De Molay Commandery Knights Templar, in celebrating Easter, be explained? If "Satan himself is transformrd into an angel of light" then "it is no marvel" that one coming out from the midnight orgies, where wine is drunk, not "from vessels of gold and of silver," but from human skulls, should pose as boon companion of the most noted rum distiller in America. What but a revelation of the "man of sin" is the exhibition of Rev. Sir Knight George C. Lorimer, D. D., and Samuel C. Lawrence, Right Eminent Grand Commander of Knights Templar and distiller, exalting themselves in the "temple of God?" If such a federation of divinity and drunkard making is not the "anti-Christ," it is certainly a "covenant of death and an agreement with hell." The chief actors in such desecration of the Sabbath and sanctuary of God, might safely challenge the enemies of Rome to deny them and equal right with the pope to citizenship in Mystery, Babylon the Great; "the habitation of devils." Have they not the credentials of citizenship, while making the people literally and spiritually drunk with wine, and what Paul declares to be the worship and the "cup of devils."

This is a specimen of "spiritual wickedness in high places," against which we have to contend; but even worse than this is the apathy of many who are at "ease in Zion," and have a horror of being disturbed. When Dr. Lorimer announces that if he had to separate from the church or the lodge, he would go with the lodge, thoughtful men ask why. And when he yokes up with a destroyer of the bodies of men, and assigns the place of honor on the platform in Sabbath service to a distiller of rum and his staff, and composes odes, and pronounces eulogies upon the brotherhood that knows no distinction between a preacher and a distiller, the spiritually minded note the incongruity, and are repelled from a man and a movement that have no higher regard for character and conduct. Such preachers are seldom quoted by pious people in justification of the lodge, but the minister who is silent —who says nothing about the lodge in his pulpit, and seldom mentions it anywhere—is the more dangerous and difficult man to deal with.

Conservative New England has a surplus of this class of ministers, who are closing the avenues by which the people may ordinarily be reached and instructed and who are doing more to strengthen the lodge than all the spectacular exhibitions and encomiums of Dr. Lorimer & Co. There are honorable exceptions, and their number is increasing, but the choke damp of the lodge is still appalling. So far our work has been carried on very largely by means of the press and by personal conferences. There is only an occasional opportunity to address audiences in New England. At our conventions there is very much less difficulty in obtaining good speakers than in getting the people to attend in any considerable numbers. Until the cause of anti-secrecy is more popular and the lodges less powerful, we must reach the people as individuals and be content with small audiences in New England. The New England Christian Association has printed 43.000 tracts during the year. Over 30,000 of these have been put into circulation with very encouraging results. Persons frequently call to obtain information who have learned of our work or become interested through a leaflet put into their hands, or given them by some friend.

Boston is a city of conventions of some kind in almost perpetual session. People come from all parts of the land to attend these gatherings and thus a means is furnished for giving to our literature a wide circulation among people of very diverse views. The bulk of matter thus distributed is never heard from, but occasionally a man will write to express his indignation, and more frequently others write words of encouragment and ask for tracts. We have sent out 2,000 copies of Home Light each month during the year, which has proved seed sown upon fruitful fields in many instances. There is a marked advance in the sentiment of leading W. C. T. U. workers on the line of our work, and the monthly visits of the Home Light has done its full share in producing this result. This little monthly, though not owned or controlled by the New England Christian Association, has nevertheless an intimate connection with its field work.

Our first venture in the way of publishing anything beyond tracts was an issue of 5,000 copies of "Danger Signals," or "Secret Lodges Illuminated." There have been many calls for this little volume from all parts of the country, and from a class of readers who, as religious teachers, will have a lasting influence. Nearly or quite one-half the issue have gone out on their mission and are uttering a voice of warning wherever they are read. We held two conventions during the year in New England under the auspices of our association, with fairly good attendance and results. I have assisted at four anti-secrecy conventions in other States, and addressed a number of camp meetings and religious conventions in this and other States. In financial matters we have been compelled to practice economy, but so far have kept out of debt, and it is the settled policy of our Board to keep strictly within our means.

Our great need is a suitable hall or class-room, where from fifty to 100 persons can be accommodated and the lodge system systematically explained and exposed. To be used also as a reading-room, where books of reference will be always at hand, and where a weekly or daily prayer-meeting can be held without any restrictions upon those who wish to express their views upon the lodge or any other reform question. We are looking forward to the possession of such a place, favorably located, when it shall please God and the good people to whom he has intrusted the means, to add to what is already in hand, sufficient to purchase a home and headquarters for the work in this city. The almost fabulous prices asked for real estate in any desirable location is a serious obstacle, but one which, by the blessing of God upon persistent prayer and determined efforts, may be overcome in time. Our present quarters in the fourth story of Hotel Howland are not favorable to meetings, but callers are frequent and some go away to return with friends, and a number after listening to an explanation of the system have become active workers.

It would give me great pleasure to attend and meet my brethren and sisters in this your annual gathering. The thought of such a meeting revives sacred memories and recalls the fact that the major part of those who, in earlier days "sowed in tears," "having died in faith" are reaping in joy. As their divinely appointed successors, may you prove worthy of the honor and the service and the cause committed to your hands.

If in your wisdom you can suggest in what way the New England Christian Association, or its agent, can be more effective in work and more helpful in seconding your efforts, I am confident that my associates, without exception, would be very grateful for your counsels, and as heretofore, ready to co-operate to the extent of our ability.

May the God of all grace, by his Holy Spirit, give you power to cast out devils in Christ's name, and make this your annual meeting to surpass all that have preceded it in wisdom, strength and unity.

WHO ARE WEAK CHRISTIANS?

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Some time since I attended a large church prayer meeting, on which occasion the topic was "How to deal with weak Christians." The lessonwas, of course, Rom. 14th. After reading and a few prayers the time was occupied in practical exegesis. Much that was said was timely and quite in keeping with the general tenor of the Scriptures—that we should be forbearing towards those from whom we conscientiously differ—that we are to sometimes abstain from things that to us seem just and desirable, and that self-denial and cross-bearing for the sake of the weaker brethren of Christ is a part of our obligation to him as well as to them. We were all quite agreed that "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother is stumbled or is offended or is made weak."

But when, by way of illustration, we were told that those who conscientiously abstain fron dancing, card-playing, theater-going, tobacco, and Freemasonry are the "weak brethren" with whom we are to be forbearing, it seemed to me that there was a serious misapplication. The case cited by the apostle, where men ate herbs and observed certain days, were not examples of emminent conscientiousness, but rather of clinging to old superstitions. It was because there was nothing intrinsically wrong or specially harmful in such practices that they were to be condoned.

But manifestly it is not the "weak Christians" who conscientiously abstain from the dance and the lodge. The compassionate forbearance of the theater-going and card-playing church members is as little called for as the pity of the brethren. It savors of superciliousness and arrogance. Take out of any local church all the members thus classed as "weak brethren" and what would become of the prayer meetings? Who would labor in revivals, respond to the call for foreign missions, or give of their substance for the spread of the Gospel? No; it is not the self-indulged and pleasure-loving who are the strength of the church. They are rather its weakness—the burden it must bear. The worthy pastor did not "rightly divide the word of truth" when he reversed the order of these two kinds of Christians.

THE WORLD AND THE SABBATH.

AN ADDRESS BY HELEN L. HARDER, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

The world in general regards the Sabbath as a day of rest from everyday toil, and as a day of pleasure. Very few of the people of the world believe in working on the Sabbath, yet they do not hesitate to spend the day in drunkenness and pleasure-seeking. They say, "The Sabbath is the Christian's day of rest, but we are not bound to observe it as they do. Let the Christian worship his God if he will, and we will keep the day as seems best to us."

If you have ever spent the Sabbath in a large city, it will not take you long to find out how the Sabbath is desecrated by the world. Noisy newsboys waken the overworked citizen about six o'clock Sabbath morning by the needless crying of newspapers. Later the shrill whistle of the train carrying the Sunday mails, as our laws command, or perhaps carrying a load of excursionists going out to some country grounds to spend the day in dancing, feasting, drinking and what the world calls pleasure. The clattering of the Sunday street-car carrying crowds of people to the parks, base ball games, picnic grounds, theaters, political meetings, yea, and saddest of all, Christians to church.

Greatest of all, the saloons are a source of Sabbath desecration and help many to waste their money and precious time. In Chicago alone seven thousand saloons have their doors open in direct violation of law.

Now the question comes to us as Christions, are we not somewhat to blame for all this Sabbath desecration?

In regard to Sunday mails, Christians, as well as the world, argue that some letters about sickness or death might be detained if the mails were not handled on the Sabbath. But this argument melts at the touch. Letters delivered on the Sabbath must have been posted not later than the previous day, so that telegrams forwarded on Saturday could have been delivered on the selfsame day. People say business makes the Sunday mail a necessity. What good will it do a man to get a business letter on the Sabbath? His place of business is closed, or ought to be, so he cannot attend to it till Monday, and it is just as well for him to receive his letter Monday morning. Even if it is better for his business, the harm done in other lines far exceeds the benefit he gains.

Do you know that not less than one hundred and fifty thousand people are unnecessarily deprived by the government of their right to Sabbath rest, and the much-needed culture of spiritual life, while millions more are prevented from mental rest by the Sabbath mails, simply that your curiosity to get your mail may be satisfied, and business may be accelerated a little. What can we expect from a nation whose government set the people such an example?

The argument some Christian people use in regard to Sunday street cars is that they are a necessity because they carry people to church, especially in large cities. Do you realize, my Christian friends, that some of those men who are working for your sake never get a chance to attend church on the Sabbath? How do you expect their souls are ever going to be saved? Do you talk to them about Christ while you are riding to church? And how much do you think they are going to believe in a Christianity that shows such almost diabolical selfishness? Do you know that street car drivers and conductors are among the hardest classes for Christian workers to reach because they carry so many Christians to church on Sabbath? I believe it is true that every Christian who rides on a Sunday car endangers at least two souls, and the better the Christian the worse it is. Do you think that the conductor will believe that you believe in an endless eternity of good or evil for his soul or anybody's when you don't care any more about it than to take away his chances for learning the way to heaven, just to save yourself a little physical weariness? This argument, as well as many others which I have not time to mention, only opens the way for an excuse for the world to desecrate the Sabbath. They say Christians use the cars to ride to church on the Sabbath, and why cannot we use them for our pleasure? Many a Christian reads his Sunday paper through before going to church instead of preparing himself for the sanctuary. Some of our Sunday papers contain twenty-six pages full of gossip, politics, advertisements and sensations.

The pulpit's teaching often falls on pre-occupied ears when the hours between breakfast and church have been spent on the newspaper. How can we expect the world to do any better than a great many of our Christians are doing? The world watches us with the keenest eyes, and as long as there are Christians who do things which they know are against the laws of God and the teachings of the Bible, how much will they believe in Christianity?

Sunday visiting is another thing in which Christians often indulge, and thus set an example of Sabbath desecration, and give the world an excuse for their actions. Of course the fact that Christians do these things is no excuse for the world, and we should not for one moment take the blame for the world; but how can we expect them to honor and respect the Sabbath if Christions do not?

A great many times our Christians, while they ride to church in their handsome carriages or on the street cars, leave their servants at home to prepare Sunday dinners. They forget that the Fourth Commandment says: "Thou, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant." President Hayes and President Garfield are said to have walked to church on Sabbath in order that their men-servants might rest and worship God, as well as themselves. A hostler once told a minister in New Haven that Christians drove out so much on Sabbath that he could not find time to attend church; it was the busiest day of the week for them. Let us remember that "the Sabbath was made for man": for the postman, the railroad man, the newspaper man, the street-car man, the livery man, the servant man—for all. God expects every one to do his duty in securing it to them.

On Sabbath afternoons, in violation of law, immense crowds gather to view the illegal Sunday ball-playing. On Sabbath evenings, in defiance of the law, the theaters are open. What can be done to check the violation of human and divine law? Some Christians think that the Sunday newspapers have come to stay, and so they should be made as refined as possible. Has not sin come into the world to stay? But it is to be hoped not in Christian homes and hearts. A century ago it looked as if slavery had come to stay, but it has ceased, and certainly Sabbath breaking is not more unconquerable.

In the first place the Bible tells us, we should be separated from the world and should keep ourselves unspotted from it. Then for our own sakes as well as for the fact that the world looks to us for an example, we should not indulge in these worldly things. We should be like Paul, who says, "If meat maketh my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." Then we should work for reformation and not be like the priest and the Levite in the parable of the Good Samaritan who passed by on the other side. Some priests and pastors look the difficulties of Sabbath reform in the face, and pass by on the other side, too cowardly to rebuke the popular modes of Sabbath desecration which are represented in the pews, or too indolent to give the subject that thorough study which it requires. Wilbur F. Crafts says, "Indeed, the greatest peril to the Sabbath to-day is from these wounds inflicted by its professed friends."

It is time for another reformation. The world's ideas get into a rut, and stay there until a Luther comes forward, and with mighty power puts the world on a different track. Shall not this united Christian Endeavor be the power? The million and a half of Endeavorers, shall they not take a stand? You young men vote for prohibition and close the saloons every day, and that will be the best way of closing them Sabbath. Let Christians reform the Sunday mails, Sunday newspapers, enforce the laws in regard to base ball games, theaters, races, and all these evils which are ruining our Sabbath. If only the Christians of this land could realize that Sunday labor is increasing; that our rum shops are multiplying; and that we are in danger of losing our Sabbath; they would arise and be doing. Fellow Endeavorers, let us warn these Christians; let us unite like a strong army sent against a mighty foe; and let us fight Sabbath desecration. We cannot put down these evils unless we rise against them. We claim to be a Christian nation; let us have a Christian Sabbath. Then we can go out into the world and claim the world for Christ, as is our motto, if only we would strike our best blows for Sabbath observance!

CHURCH PROPERTY UNTAXED.

General Grant, when President of the United States, warned the people of the danger of discontent possibly to be settled not without "blood" if the untaxed church property of churches was allowed to increase with the growth of our country. The amount exempted in 1850 was said to be $87,000,000 and might be $3,000,000,000 in the year 1900 if not checked.

What will our readers think when in our Illinois Legislature a bill has just been brought in to prevent such accumulations, and that in the discussion it was said that the value of the property exempted from taxes in our one State, owned by one church (the church of Rome), is declared to be $65,000,000, only $20,000,000 less than was exempted for all the churches in our country forty-five years ago. Why has Grant's warning been unheeded? Did he know how to settle a great question "not without blood?" Was he not a good President and a great general? Have the people been asleep? T. H.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Can the church fellowship them or receive their members into her communion? Are they for Christ or against him.

These questions press upon our minds as we press our way onward and upward toward the heavenly gate through which our Forerunner has already entered, elbowing our way through vast multitudes of these societies who have been and are still endeavoring to impede our march, because we will not consent to take their route and reach our destination via the lodge below to the lodge above.

I have always from my childhood been under the impression that the so-called lodge above is really situated very far below; that the only chart guiding to heaven is the Holy Bible, and that any other guide assuming to outline the way would lead to sure destruction.

My attention is freshly called to the above questions by an article written by J. H. Laughlin, of Fort Randol, South Dakota, in which he undertakes to defend the lodge against the recent edicts of the Church of Rome. The writer says: "I am a Roman Catholic, born and bred, and do challenge any man of that faith to be able to instruct me in the precepts of my church." The next sentence is: "I am also a Mason, an Oddfellow, a past officer of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the regular army and navy of the United States of America; all of which are secret." Hence, he is, or should be, competent to speak upon this question. First, he seeks to mislead by claiming that the orders are really fraternal, and that the only real secret societies are such as the Hibernians, the Clan-na-Gael and the Mafia; but no evidence is offered in support of this view and we presume he has been reading some of Bishop Weaver's testimonies. He justly takes the ground that Rome, which organizes and fosters in its bosom numerous secret orders, can not justly place under its ban other like societies organized upon the same plan, with the same principles and the same general objects in view as those she fosters.

Mr. McLaughlin then makes these statements: "While we thus require a decided assent to the great doctrine of God's existence and fatherhood, we do not ask such belief in any sectarian sense, nor consider our different lodges ecclesiastical organizations. We are antagonistic to no religion, least of all to any which holds the belief in God as the Father of us all. It is unjust, therefore, for the Roman Catholic church to deem us, and term us anti-Christian, because we admit men of all religions into our orders"

Is there anything in these declarations that would lead us to believe that these orders are therefore Christian, and can claim the privileges of Christian fellowship, or are they anti-Christian, as charged? Who does not believe all that is here required respecting the existence and Fatherhood of God? Are all who believe this great doctrine Christians, and therefore fit subjects for membership in the Christian church? Jesus said: "The devils believe this and tremble."

If the lodge is not an ecclesiastical organization, why then does it appropriate to itself the duties, obligations and functions of the Christian church? Why the Bible, the altar and worship? Why the priest, the ritual, the burial service, the promise of happiness in the lodge above, etc.? "We are antagonistic to no religion." Jesus said: "Resist the devil." The prophet declared that the stone cut out of the mountain, the kingdom of Christ, should break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms. Paul says: We wrestle against spiritual wickedness in high places." Can the lodgeman tell us how an organization that does not antagonize false religions can be Christian? But if not Christian, they are surely anti-Christian.

"We admit men of all religions into our orders." Is not that conclusive? "He that is not with me is against me." Again he says: "True, we have a religious test. We have forms of worship. No lodge or encampment can be legally opened without the presence of the Bible; and we frequently read valuable lessons from that sacred volume and draw from it our moral code, etc. So far we are a religious body and have religious faith for the basis of our fellowship, and to unite us in religious duty. But we are religious, each for himself, uniting in heart and form only as far as judgment, conscience and affections can unite in belief and worship, as a man of any sect worships in the congregation of a different sect, and we hold our religious creed only as a common fundamental principle, on which every one for himself may build, with mind and heart, whatever he deems necessary to believe or profess."

Can anything be found more inconsistent or farther from the teachings or spirit of the Gospel of Jesus Christ? There is no need of farther review. Any jury, with this plea in one hand and the Gospel in the other, would pronounce such a system anti-Christian and its adherents unfit for membership in the church of Christ. Many other strange statements we pass over for lack of space. But is it not remarkable that a man so high in the church and the orders, in a long and carefully written article to teach mankind the true relation of the lodge and the church, fails completely to even once refer to the name or person of Jesus Christ.

Can he convince men that the systems he defends are not anti-Christian without proving that they are Christian? But the strangest of all is his final declaration: "I would not give up my connection with any of the lodges to which I have the honor to belong for any church teaching." All this in the face of the plainest teachings of Christ and his apostle. Separation from the world and unity of faith in Jesus Christ. Until the advocates of the secret lodge can prove that they believe in Jesus Christ, and depend alone on the merits of his atonement, I, for one, must believe them anti-Christian, and unfit for membership in the church of Christ our Lord. I am persuaded that the angels will soon complete their task of gathering together the tares into bundles to be burned, and then will the wheat be gathered into the storehouse. Meanwhile let us be active, separating the wheat from the tares. God bless those engaged in true moral reform.—L. E. Cole, in Christian Conservator.

COLONEL WARING AND THE G. A. R.

"I never appoint a veteran, however good, without telling him that I do so with regret, for the reason that I cannot get rid of him if he proves unsatisfactory. If veterans were the men now they were in 1861, they would be willing to stand on their own feet and take their chances on their merits." When still further pursued about the matter Colonel Waring said: "My statement concerning the Grand Army of the Republic was deliberately made. The organization has, in my judgment, sold itself for cash to the claim agents of Washington. Because of its nefarious action the workingmen of this country are now paying annually $100,000,000 more in pensions than they ought to be paying." Colonel Waring is a Union veteran and he can, therefore, discuss this subject without liability to having his loyalty to the government called in question.

One looking on from a safe distance, and not having the fear of the G. A. R. before his eyes, might perhaps risk the statement that Colonel Waring had hit the nail on the head. When the soldier left the ranks he should have become a citizen. But the braves who were second in war and third in the hearts of their countrymen are undoubtedly first in pursuit of the fleeting dollar. The cry "on to the treasury" is not less inspiring to them than that of "on to Richmond" in the olden times. The pension system had two reasons for the present stage of its existence. It was meant as a bribe to a certain class of voters to stick to the party, if for revenue only. The other purpose was to get rid of the treasury surplus without reducing the tax on beer or foreign goods. Thus they sought to gather in three birds with one stone. These were the manufacturers, the pensioners and the liquor dealers. The country has no use for secret orders of any kind, and especially for those who try to manipulate parties for private ends.—Prof. J. M. Coleman, in Christian Nation.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A Frenchwoman's view of Boston.—The Congregational ministers espouse the cause of Pastor Dyer and his church.—Rev. Philip S. Moxon.—A just decision of the Maine Supreme Court.—A breeze in the city council —Patriotism true and false.—Crime in our country districts.

Mme. Blanc, the Frenchwoman who has been writing such pretty things about America and Americans, says she "admires more and more the public spirit shown on every occasion by Boston women." They deserve the compliment. Pre-eminently may it be said of the Boston woman that whatever touches humanity touches her. And there are not many questions discussed to-day that do not somewhere and somehow touch on humanitarianism. A Boston woman who withholds her name has come forward with an offer of a quarter of a million to the Emergency Hospital, which has been so straitened for lack of funds that there has been some fear that it would have to close its doors. The offer is conditional on $50,000 more being raised by the citizens, which ought to be easily met, considering the importance of the institution in cases where waiting an hour for a surgeon may make all the difference between life and death. It is no wonder that Madame Blanc felt drawn with all her warm, impulsive French nature to a womanhood so bright, so gracious, so large-minded and whole-hearted. Only the gods can know the gods, and it takes the highest types of one nationality to thoroughly appreciate and understand the best that is in the other. But in fact, Madame Blanc finds something beside its culture and philanthropy to admire in the Puritan city. Is not this a delicious bit in which she describes the panorama which met her eyes the morning after her arrival:

"Beneath a cloudless sky, deeply tinged with rose, one of those American skies which seem so much loftier than those of France, stretched the wonderful Charles river, sparkling as if sprinkled with diamonds, broad as an arm of the sea.... The water flowed up to the wall of the garden beneath my window, washing on one side the semi-circular quay, bordered by straight, red lofty roofs, and on the other, one of the Cambridge bridges. Opposite, beyond the long bridge, flung boldly between the two sister cities, which are in constant communication, wooded hills were outlined in the atmosphere of singular purity. I could almost fancy myself in Venice .....But Charles river sunrises are as nothing compared to the sunsets."

There is nothing like looking at our country through the eyes of a cultured foreigner to whom our most familiar scenes may be a revelation of surpassing beauty, to lift those scenes out of the atmosphere of the commonplace, and make us realize to what a marvelous inheritance we have been born.

The General Association of Congregational churches which has lately met at Lynn, did some good things. It tabled the Norwegian bill, and passed some ringing resolutions in favor of the Medfield pastor, Rev. Nathan T. Dyer (whose persecution by Col. E. V. Mitchell, was referred to in a former letter, and which it will be remembered had its origin in the action brought by the former against a rum-selling hotel of which the latter was proprietor), offering the boycotted church and clergyman "their heartiest sympathy," "urging them to stand firm for their rights," and calling attention to the effort being made "to interfere with the freedom of speech, and intercourse of trade and of worship." Public opinion ought to be strong enough to teach this liquor oligarchy a lesson. One noticeable presence in the association was that of Rev. Mrs. Amelia A. Frost of Littleton, said to be the only woman Congregational preacher in the State, and who must have had a slightly queer feeling like a black swan or a white crow, sitting there alone among her clerical brethren.

The call of Rev. Philip S. Moxon to that Presbyterian church in New York where Jay Gould worshiped, and Mr. Russell Sage is one of the chief pillars, seems a little strange in view of the fact that he has a strong leaning to socialistic ideas, and has not hesitated at times to give them expression. Moody was asked on his first evangelistic trip across the water "if he was willing to preach to the miserable poor of London." "Yes," was his quick rejoinder; "and the miserable rich, too." Dr. Moxon will certainly have the grandest opportunity of any man on the continent to preach to "the miserable rich." His salary of $10,000 is not any too much considering the difficulty of the task before him.

The Supreme Court of Maine has decided that a man who uses profane or indecent language can be put off a train by the conductor. This rule ought to be adopted in every State, and made to include men who are the worse for liquor. In this connection it may be added that the large number of non-smokers who daily patronize the electric cars will have to submit to the old conditions consequent on the tobacco nuisance which the officers of the West End seem to have no inclination to stop. It is a curious fact that in a matter like this the few have the privileges, and the patient many must suffer in silence.

A very lively breeze was recently stirred up in the city council through the objection made by one of its members, Mr. E. S. Crockett, to appropriating the city's money on the 17th of June for the use of private and sectarian organizations, especially the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Mr. Crockett spoke like a man and an American, but his remarks, though fair and moderate, stirred up the angriest excitement among the Irish members, who rather unreasonably felt that he had insulted their race, especially when he declared himself an A. P. A. The young man whose name was scarcely known before is now the hero of the hour in patriotic circles.

There must be a great deal of certain kind of patriotism in Boston to fill Music Hall and the People's church every Sabbath with such crowds; but whether it is the true kind is a question which does not seem hardly debatable. As at present conducted, these meetings strike at the very foundation of citizenship, which is a regard for the Sabbath. Let Rome have a monopoly of Sabbath desecration if she will, but Protestants, men who profess to be fighting for the principles our fathers died to maintain, should have a care not to nullify them by practice so opposite as to make all they say on this head a mere glittering "generality." A correspondent of the American Citizen advocates for the public schools "the discarding of all religious exercises," patriotic songs for the girls to be sung at every session, "with a free display of 'Old Glory.'" For the boys "a military training with the rifle," the advantages being that "it will teach them obedience to the laws and officers of the country," "give the natural leaders a chance for advancement, who could be called on in time of need," reduce "desertions from the army and navy in time of war, etc.;" everything as will be seen with an eye to a future conflict which, if "the wish is father to the thought," they are certainly doing all they can to precipitate. Romish aggressions on our free institutions must be fought, but it is of supreme importance how we fight her—whether with the sword of the Spirit, or her own weapons of satanic forging; though I recently heard a "patriotic" speaker say that methods in this warfare did not matter provided the end was gained. I do not really suppose that the good man—he was a clergyman and a D.D.—really meant to endorse an order of Protestant Jesuits, but this is exactly the trend of such mischievous teachings.

The Massachusetts Society for the Promotion of Good Citizenship is an organization which is working in the right direction. Rev. Edward Everett Hale, who is now the foremost living exponent of New England thought, and is looked to for an opinion on every subject involving the public welfare, gave some startling statistics at a recent meeting of this society, which are calculated to make thoughtful minds change the question, "What shall we do with the crime and vice in our city slums?" to "What shall we do with the vice and crime in our country districts?" Out of 33 murders in Massachusetts 22 were committed in the western part of the State, and the murderers were generally of foreign extraction, without the checks of education or even that wholesome fear of law which in the larger cities overawes the human brute to an extent we could only realize should the restraint be removed. On every side we are surrounded by ominous conditions, and it is these open organizations like the one mentioned above, and the Patriotic League, a kind of political chautauqua which knows no distinction of sect, race, or color, that will under God solve the problem, and show us a better way to fight Romanism than by secret organizations and the training of schoolboys to carry rifles, and strut in all the mock "power and circumstance of glorious war." OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The Brooklyn Sunday-school parade —A converted priest.—Disbanding of the Committee of Seventy.—Travel by electricity.—A sad object lesson against secretism.

One of the most pleasing and at the same time inspiring sights that the whole year affords, is the annual parade of the Sunday-school children of the city of Brooklyn. On Friday, May 25th, an army of 70,000, with fluttering banners, flowers and songs of rejoicing swept through the streets and were reviewed in Prospect Park by ex-President Harrison, Prince Francis Joseph, of Buttenburg, and Sir Bruce Burnside and other distinguished guests and visitors. The whole city was in holiday attire, the weather was perfect; and both General Harrison, to whom the horrors of war are familiar, and Prince Francis, who has seen the maneuvers of the Austrian cavalry, said they were never more impressed than they were by these peaceful troops of Sabbath-school children as they marched past the reviewing stand. They made the usual addresses of courtesy and congratulation.

There arrived in New York from Venezuela

last Saturday a converted priest, Senor Ferranda, as he is now called, accompanied by an attache of the United States Legation, who had promised to escort him to safety here. He fled from South America, believing that his life was in danger from the Roman Catholics, who bitterly resented the fact that he had recently renounced allegiance to Rome, and intended to become a Protestant minister. He brought letters of introduction to Rev. Jas. O'Connor, of Christ's Mission, where he is now staying, and where next Sabbath he will publicly relate the history of his conversion and escape. He was a member of the Capuchin Order, and has labored as a missionary among the Indians of South America. He was brought into the light through the Presbyterian missionaries and agents of the Bible society. He is a member of the old Castilian nobility, has a fine education and possesses brilliant abilities.

The famous Committee of Seventy, whose patriotic efforts contributed so largely to the recent overthrow of Tammany Hall and the revolution of municipal politics, are about to disband. An impression exists that its dissolution will be partly due to dissatisfaction with Mayor Strong, whose recent approval of the Bi-partisan Police bill displeased many of the members. The chairman has only said, however, that there seems to be no reason for the continued existence of the Committee now that the legislation has adjourned. Such concerted movements are of great value in times of political crisis, in helping to create public sentiment, influence politicians and stimulate better legislation.

The New York and Northern railroad has been experimenting with a new motor system, which is claimed to be superior to anything similar, and which they are soon to put in operation between New York and Yonkers. The New York Central and Hudson River railroad also contemplate adopting the system on the line from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, and it is probable that this will be the first line to be in operation. The cars are only half as large as those now in use, and each car will generate its own electricity.

There has recently been a sad object lesson against the folly and iniquity of secret societies. A man was committed to Bellevue hospital violently insane, who imagined he was being initiated in all manner of secret societies and was being tortured in every variety of ways through the different degrees. Who ever heard of a man becoming insane on the question of joining a Christian church and imagining that he was being tortured to death by receiving the right hand of Christian fellowship? Comment is needless. Such facts have only to be mentioned to enforce their own lessons. F. W. Farr.

FOES OF SABBATH AND TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Not the living alone, but the dead are disturbed by the subway under Boston Common. For a time the papers reported a traffic in human bones unearthed by the workmen. The latest ghastly installment was "fourteen skulls," but their accompanying skeletons were unfit for use in the Odd-fellows' initiation, which probably accounts for their omission in the market reports. Possibly the cheapness of skeletons has some connection with the unwonted activity of the three-link fraternity of late. Parties who have recently examined the skeleton in the Odd-fellows' temple here, report it in good condition, but I suppose country lodges order supplies through the Grand Lodge, which of course has a monopoly on the "mysteries."

The six working days are not sufficient, and so we had a Sabbath parade of a hundred and seventy "Patriarchs Militant" on the 19th inst. Enroute to Philadelphia, they passed directly in front of our window with the pomp and circumstances of a gala day before real battle begins. It was really amusing to see the fellows "swell and strut" to make an "impression." It was evident that, like a clown in a circus, they were attempting to amuse the crowds, and furnish a "big show" with a very small capital of common sense. And as to reverence for God and respect for his Sabbath it was quite evident that they were "not in all their thoughts." Reporters accompanying them on their pilgrimage sent back word that the "patriarchs are having a splendid time" in New York and Philadelphia theaters, and that "Chaplain Edward A. White is taking good care of the morals of Shawmut canton." They do not tell us who is caring for God's holy day, or for the morals of the crowds who witness its desecration by these frequenters of New York and Philadelphia play-houses. Whatever may have been the bearing of "Chaplain White" or other professed Christians toward the "widows and orphans"—girls that furnish attractions in city pleasure resorts—they would scarcely have the affrontry to claim that they were "avoiding the very appearance of evil," or that when parading our streets they were "remembering the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

The drift seems not to be heavenward, but in the opposite direction just now in Boston. We have a great amount of churchanity and lung patriotism by which the meeting house is transformed into a forum, and the pulpit into a rostrum, and what should be congregations of solemn and reverential worshipers, its boistrous and unreasoning assemblies. Some hold fast to their old mooring, and refuse to drift with the currents; but too many have cut their cables, and spread their sails to catch the popular breeze.

Wednesday, the 22nd, was field-day for the Pythians, and some seven or eight hundred Knights of the "Spike Brigade" were on duty. Of course they were brave men, for they had passed the ordeal of leaping with bare feet upon Indian rubber spikes, and what could be more heroic than such a chivalrous feat. As to appearance, it matters very little what the business, the morals or the record of the Knight may be, so that the helmet, the visor, the toga and the military men are according to Grand Lodge dictum. The brewer of Medford rum, the saloon-keeper who deals it out, or the bunko-steerer, may rival the minister, the deacon or the class-leader in the street parade and appeal for admiration and applause. Who, for example, shall decide whether Geo. C. Lorimer, D. D., the preacher, or Samuel C. Lawrence, the rum-maker, gave the finest exhibit of Knightly endowments, as they appeared in loving fellowship in Music Hall Easter service? Indeed it is quite possible that the distinguished disciple of "Gambrinus" outranked that other disciple? Modern Knighthood is something put on and not into the man, and the frame that bears the panoply most gracefully, is the beau-ideal of Knighthood.

Chapter No. 3 transpired at Didly Street Baptist church, where Rev. A. S. Gumbart, D. D., addressed the Sir Knights on Ascension day. After the religious program was rendered the pious (?) brotherhood adjourned to their hall for a banquet; but the reporters does not inform the public how much of Bro. Lawrence's Medford rum was consumed, or whether or not they substituted for the orthodox benediction the accustomed dance. Perhaps it was not "ladies' night" and so the dance was omitted.

Yesterday was memorial Sabbath and special services were announced in just twenty-five churches. At some of these the veterans appeared in uniforms with side arms and attended by the Women's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans. Of course there were street parades and the general running to and fro that is the inevitable attendant upon such desecrations of God law. No seer can foretell the time when the end will come, but God has told us plainly what that end shall be. "Shall I not visit for these things, saith the Lord; and shall not my soul be avenged upon such a notion as this?"

REFORM NEWS.

WORK AT PITTSBURG AND VICINITY.

125 Flavel St., Pittsburg, May 23, 1895.

Dear Cynosure:—I learned from a friend attending the United Presbyterian General Assembly here that the Worshipful Master of the Masonic lodge in Xenia, Ohio, was arrested for gambling during the last evening of our State convention held in that town. A young man who had just started up the Masonic ladder was rebuked for gambling by some of his lodge brethren. He could not see why it was such a sin for him to gamble, as the "Worshipful Master" was doing the same. Perhaps the difference is in the degree. Should he ever be worshiped by his lodge brethren he might be permitted more liberty in that direction.

The Thirty-seventh General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church opened in the Sixth church, this city, last evening. The spacious edifice, said to be the finest in the denomination, was crowded. Dr. Wilson, the retiring moderator, preached an excellent sermon. The attendance of delegates is large. Many warm friends of the Cynosure and its friends are here.

Since my last writing I have visited Beaver Falls, New Brighton, Rochester and Midway, Pa. I spent Sabbath at Rochester, speaking in the Free Methodist church morning and evening. The house was well-filled Sabbath evening. The Monday evening lecture was to an audience perhaps larger at the beginning. As a majority were lodgemen, as fast as they were weighed they passed out. Bro. Brodhead, the pastor, is true-blue, and will stand firm for the truth.

The attendance at my lecture, given in the U. P. church, Midway, Tuesday evening, was not large. A good number of the young people gathered and gave close attention. I learned of some who said after hearing the address, that they never should unite with a secret society. I was shown every kindness by the pastor, Rev. Graham, who has generously promised his horse and carriage for a trip several days in Washington county.

I shall (D. V.) preach for Rev. Timmons at McConnell's Mills next Sabbath. Bro. Timmon's success in opposing lodgery is well known to friends in this section. Must go to the U. P. General Assembly now. W. B. Stoddard.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

Mondovi, Wash., May 22, 1895.

Since writing last I have spoken in Portland United Brethren church, Sabbath, May 5th, to a full house. This address was by special request of the trustees of the church, which to succeed here must be aggressive in declaring and defending her principles. If secret societies are wrong we should say so and give the reasons in an intelligent Christian manner, and good will result. On the second Sabbath I spoke twice at Otterbein church near West Portland. In the evening we had a very good audience, which gave excellent attention to the truth.

Of course, a few lodge friends did not receive the address with great kindness, yet, I am sure it caused them to think, and we hope that it may open their eyes. I am greatly interested in this community. I had been their pastor three years, and have preached to them a number of times since. Four persons subscribed for the Cynosure here, and I received five subscriptions at Portland.

I failed in my appointment at Castle Rock on account of not getting the hall in which to speak. Afterwards I received a letter from a prominent gentleman, saying: "When you can come, let me know. I will rent the hall for you, and bill the town at my own expense."

I came to Mondovi, Wash., on the 17th, where I am at present, assisting in a camp meeting, on the out and out line of separation from the world. I am in the company, and am assisted by such ministers as Dr. J. Kenoyer, of Guy; Elder J. A. Kenoyer, of Colfax; W. P. Griffin, of Mondovi, and J. Ells, of Colfax, all staunch anti-secrecy men. Dr. Kenoyer, though near seventy-six years of age, is one of the very strongest Gospel preachers I have ever heard. He preaches the Gospel with old time plainness and power. His son, the presiding elder, has his father's fire, zeal, devotion to principle, and is following in his footsteps. He is greatly beloved by all the people of his district. He is almost certain to be re-elected.

Rev. W. P. Griffin, the pastor, came to this Big Bend mission nine months ago. There were no members, but a very small neucles around which to rally. Now he has two good societies organized and the work is increasing. At the quarterly conference last Saturday one man was licensed to preach. Thus far, during the camp meeting, three have been saved and eight have united with the church. Rain has greatly hindered us, but it proves a wonderful blessing to the farmers. Four have signed for the Cynosure. Several subscriptions have been taken for the Lodge Lamp. I go from here to Spokane, and from there to Tyler to assist in another meeting, then to the annual conference at Elberton.

P. B. Williams.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INFLUENCE OF THE LODGE ON MANKIND.

GLIDDEN, Ia., May 24, 1895.

While reading in a recent issue of the Lodge Lamp an article entitled "Christian Burial Misappropriated," my mind reverted to a scene enacted in a Western town, and dignified by the name lodge burial.

The deceased had been a prominent member of two secret societies. They took charge of the services, which were held in one of the churches of the town. The members of the two societies were attired in all the regalia of their respective orders. The day was the Sabbath; and two societies marched through the streets to the church, two-thirds of which had been reserved for their use. This desecration of God's holy day by the marching through the streets of bodies of men banded together, not for the purpose of giving honor to Christ or for the observance of his day, but for the performance of rites instituted and upheld by worldly orders the fundamental principles of which deny his name, is grossly profane.

The funeral proceeded with all the ceremonies customary in lodge obsequies. The prayers at the grave were read, not by a minister of God's Word, but by the chaplains of the two lodges. One of the men was a member of the church, but the other was not even a professor of religion. While there was nothing in the prayers themselves that would jar upon the conscience of the observer, yet their utterance by men who were not Christians but officers in worldly organizations was an exhibition which to a Christian observer would make the deepest impression. It is this outward show of piety, blended with their secrecy, that allures men from the paths which Christ has mapped out for erring humanity. Seeing this outward show and ritual, men are led to believe that the inside workings of the fraternity are as pure and promotive of good as outward appearances would indicate.

Once in the lodge, there is for them no withdrawal; for they have not the moral courage to retreat from their position, and brave the ridicule and derision of their companions. If they feel any compunctions of conscience they are frightened into a compliance with the customs of the order by the oath or pledge which they have taken. Thus men who would resent any imputation of their honor as the grossest of insults, are enticed to enter upon a life of continual prevarication. It is a well-known fact that a good member of a secret society denies statements as to the inner workings of his lodge, thereby living a constant lie. Most of them are bound to support members of their orders whether in the right or wrong, and to give preference to the dictates of the lodge rather than to the commands of God.

Oh, that the power of God would descend and utterly annihilate this system of secret societies whose poisonous breath is so destructive of all the attributes which go to make up the Christian, and the patriot, and unfits them for obeying the divine command, do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you; and finally unfits them for heaven.

J. H. BASS.

REASONS FOR OPPOSING SECRET SOCIETIES.

KENT, Ill., May 27, 1895.

The Christian Cynosure, so far as I have seen and read it, expresses my sentiments on secrecy. I do not uphold secret societies and can not belong to them. But when a person says he does not believe thus and so, he ought to be able to give some reason for his belief or unbelief. The question that comes to us all, in all stages of life, in everything we do, is, Why? When a person makes a statement similar to the one I have made, immediately the question arises, Why?

Why am I opposed to secret societies? To this question there are so many answers I will not try to give them all at once. But would say, first: Conscience will not allow it. Is conscience a safe guide? To this we must answer: Not always. It depends some on education. If I am educated up to a certain thing my conscience will condemn me if I fail to live up to what I have been taught. But we may safely say, conscience is a safe guide when enlightened by the Word of God and by the Holy Ghost. So I feel that my conscience is a pretty safe guide, for the Holy Ghost has been given me. I cannot conscientiously join a secret order.

It is unscriptural to join secret societies. Now I have no right to make such a statement without proving it, or at least trying to prove it. If I join a secret order I unite with irreligious people. Many of them are out of Christ. Some of them are in the most damnable business on earth. I become their brother, must treat them as such, must support them and stand by them when it is in my power to do so. My Bible says: "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Come out from among whom? God's people? His church? No! but the world! Some offer this excuse, that Paul said: "I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some." Then Paul means, if I want to win a drunkard, I must be a drunkard; if I would win a Sabbath breaker, a robber, a murderer, or a gambler, I must be these things in order to do it.

Who can conceive of Paul meaning anything like this? But do not many make this interpretation of this Scripture? They say to gain these, one must be one of them. If it holds good in a secret order it does in sin and vice of every kind.

Then again, it is a worldly institution, not a religious organization. For this reason I must stay out of it. It is for the world and run by the world. Again, men sacrifice everything else for the lodge. I have had church members leave the prayer meeting for the lodge meeting. I heard recently of a minister leaving his people on prayer meeting night and going off to join a lodge. This is more than I can bear. God pity all who for such a small morsel sell their birthright.

Now I have scarcely begun to give the reasons "why" I am not a lodgeman. But these are enough for me if there were no more. I am for God and not for the world. Jesus Christ is my Saviour and not Masonry.

P. G. L.
Pastor M. E. Church.

SIDE-TRACKING THE CHURCH.

[As the tendency of the lodge in many churches is to monopolize funeral services it will not be out of place to republish, by request of an old subscriber, an article by Prof. Simpson Ely, of Fairfield College.—EDITOR CYNOSURE]

FAIRFIELD, Iowa.

Last Lord's day there was buried in our city cemetery a man who had belonged to the Christian church, and to five different orders. He was a Freemason, Knight of Pythias, an Odd-fellow, a Workman and a Woodman! The time of his funeral service was so nearly upon the time of the church services in town (1 o'clock P. M.) that many could not attend both. Almost all the seats in the auditorium were occupied by the men who belonged to the above orders. His brethren and sisters of the church were almost entirely crowded out. Many women had to stand through the whole service.

At the grave the lodges took full possession, and the Christians had to stand back. Many members of the lodges were ungodly, sinful men —men who have no interest in Christianity. Although a member of the Christian church, the funeral was conducted by the pastor of the Congregational church, and in his house of worship. This was contrary to the wishes of the widow of the deceased, and others of the family. His own pastor was not invited to have any part in the exercises, nor even to a seat in the auditorium.

The preacher who conducted the memorial service is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and wore his "lamb-skin apron" during the progress of the service. The representatives of the various orders were more or less uniformed. Some of them carried spears and a few had swords at their sides, and some wore the gorgeous but ridiculous plumes upon their hats. What child's play! What flummery! Oh, for a Don Quixote to burlesque this foolishness until it would hide its face in shame and bury itself so deep that the trumpet of the resurrection will not arouse it from its sleep!

In his sermon the preacher said the deceased had not been a very active member of the church. This was true. How could it be otherwise? How could a man divide his time, money and interest between five secret orders and have much left for the church? He had to give five parts to the human orders, and one part to the Divine organization. The preacher said he had gone through the various degrees that led up to a Sublime Master Mason and now he had entered upon the highest possible degree in heaven. He spoke of God as the Sublime Master of the universe, or words to that effect. Now I protest against this attempt to resolve heaven into a lodge and make God its Grand Master. It borders upon blasphemy.

Members of the church abandoned their duties to train for the funeral. An elder in the church to which the deceased belonged, abandoned the Lord's Supper that he might go to the hall and train for the funeral. Jesus said: "Do this in memory of me;" but said elder disobeyed his Lord's divine command that he might conform to the demands of a human institution. He said by his example that the lodge is superior to the church. Is it any wonder that members of the lodge substitute lodgery for religion, when officials in the church give the lodge precedence? The same elder went the following week to attend a meeting of his order at the State capital. I wonder if he ever attends the State missionary conventions of his church?

I cannot think of these lodges as otherwise than sinful. They rob the cross of its glory and Christ of his allegiance. They have the same burial service for the wicked as for the good. They are clannish and selfish. They dissipate the means and energies that should be devoted to the promotion of the Gospel of Christ.

HOW TO HELP THE CAUSE.

WEST UNION, Ia., May 27. 1895.

Let every enlightened Christian enclose suitable tracts with all his correspondence. We can in this way do much reform work. Take advantage of the local press, in short and pointed contributions, and thus get the subject before the people who do not read the Cynosure. Diligently collect local facts concerning secret society "influence" and Masonic office-holding, and forward to the Cynosure for publication. Recommend such educational institutions as prohibit Greek fraternities and warn students who are so unfortunate as to be obliged to mingle with Greeks, against their unmanly principles.

Consider the rank and file of secretists as dupes, and the high officials either as arrant cowards or arrogant knaves; but always keep good natured, as the secret societies are in the world for the same reason as the saloon—to be exterminated by Christianity. It is a victorious war. No one need fear to press it nor doubt the result.

H. L. F. GILLESPIE.

"I would do almost anything in my power to help on the work of rescuing all Christian men from the 'grip' of Masonry and all other secret and un-Christian societies. I believe that Masonry is an incalculable evil and essentially anti-Christ in its principles and influence."—From Dr. George F. Pentecost's Letter to Conference of Christians on Secret Societies, Chicago, 1887.

How Vaccination Was Discovered.

When Dr. Jenner was at Sudbury, he was surprised one day at hearing a country woman say that she would not take the smallpox because she had had the cowpox, and upon inquiry he learned that it was a popular notion in that district that milkers who had been infected with a peculiar eruption which sometimes occurred on the udder of the cow were completetly secure against the smallpox. It occurred to Jenner in 1780 that it might be possible to propagate the cowpox, and with it the security from smallpox, first, from the cow to the human body, and then from one person to another. The experiments and confidence in them were uncertain for a year, but after that time success was assured. Dr. Jenner worked all his remaining life to benefit mankind and spread the knowledge of his most wonderful discovery, and benefited the human race in every civilized country.

How to Care For Matting.

Matting should never be washed with anything but salt and water—a pint of salt to half a pailful of soft water moderately warm. Dry quickly with a soft cloth. Twice during the season will probably be enough for a bedroom, but a room much used will require it somewhat oftener.

How to Make Potato Pudding.

Mix well together 6 tablespoonfuls of nicely mashed potato, a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful orange marmalade, 2 ounces butter and 4 well beaten eggs. Pour the mixture into a buttered pie dish and bake half an hour.

HALF FARE TO CHATTANOOGA AND RETURN.

FOR THE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONVENTION IN JUNE.

On June 25, 26 and 27, 1895, the Monon Route will sell tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip from all points on its line to Chattanooga and return on account of the SECOND INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE. These rates and tickets will be open to all. Tickets will be limited to return fifteen days from date of sale, but can be extended fifteen days by depositing with agents of Q. & C. or Nashville & Chattanooga R'ys before June 30.

A choice of routes via Cincinnati, the Blue Grass Regions of Kentucky and the mountains of Tennessee, or via Louisville and the Cave Regions of Kentucky, with side trips to Mammoth Cave at a nominal expense, makes the Monon Route the most desirable line between Chicago and Chattanooga, Tenn.

The day trains of the Monon Route both via Louisville and Cincinnati, carry parlor cars and dining cars, serving meals same as at a first-class cafe. Patrons can order what they want and need only pay for what they get.

The evening trains carry luxurious palace sleeping cars from Chicago to Cincinnati or Louisville. The sleeping car rate from Chicago to the Ohio River, or from the Ohio River to Chattanooga, is $2.00 per berth, whether occupied by one or two persons.

Parties wishing to view the mountain scenery of the South should leave Chicago on the evening trains, so as to make the trip from Cincinnati or Louisville to Chattanooga by daylight, arriving at Chattanooga for supper. Those wishing to visit Mammoth Cave should leave Chicago at 8: 32 P. M., arriving at Louisville for breakfast, and at the cave for dinner, remaining at the cave until next morning, leaving at nine o'clock, and arriving at Chattanooga for supper.

The side trip from Glasgow Junction to Mammoth Cave will cost but $1.25; hotel bill and cave fees will be very reasonable. The guides go into the cave between two and three o'clock P. M., and at eight o'clock in the evening, thus giving those who wish a chance to make two trips in the cave the same day.

Further information with time tables, maps and pamphlets, will be furnished on application to any agent of the Monon Route, or by addressing

FRANK J. REED,
General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - EDITOR.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1895.

LODGE MEDICINE.

Many a Christian has a similar experience with Rev. W. J. Gladwin, a Methodist missionary in India, who was once a member of the Knights of Honor. After fourteen years of church membership he was soundly converted. It was after long fasting and continuous prayer, ending with an all-night wrestling with the angel, that God graciously brought him into the light.

At this time the question of the lodge had never occurred to him as wrong. But the first lodge meeting he attended he came out of it with the loss of the sweet consciousness of Christ within. But that night he said after much prayer God restored him peace of mind. He repeated this experience the two following lodge nights, until he perceived the cause of his darkness. The Spirit then showed him that he could not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers and retain the sunshine of God's countenance.

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP.

The Wheaton College Chapel was well filled with students and others Thursday evening, the 23d, while Rev. W. F. Crafts lectured on citizenship from a Christian standpoint. He said:

"'The powers that be are ordained of God.' To a Christian nation that ought not to seem a new doctrine," said he; "but when Rev. Dr. W. J. Robinson stood with me in the Pennsylvania house of representatives in defense of the State Sabbath law, and, with the solemnity of a bishop addressing a group of young ministers, reminded the legislators before him that they were civil ministers 'ordained of God,' called to serve him and humanity by applying the law of Christ to civil affairs, it was manifestly to them, and even to some Christians present, a novel view of politics.

"When a United States Senator declared that 'Politics owes no allegiance to the Decalogue and the Golden Rule,' the indignant public retired him from politics to prove that the law of Christ had not been so retired. Many who think it unimportant to acknowledge the supremacy of the Divine Law in the National Constitution, were outraged by the denial of that supremacy, as in the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, that the Bible was a sectarian book and the Judge Stine World's Fair decision, that this was not a Christian nation.

"Lawlessness, rather than legislation, claims first attention.

"The increase of crime, as shown by statistics, was referred to, and he turned to the speak-easies in the national capital, the illegal sale of liquor at the World's Fair, especially on Sabbath, and the obscene dances there.

"The Sunday press was scored, and he severely denounced officials who become apologists or defenders of law-breakers. The leaders in the reform movement demand freedom from saloon domination. It will not save a city to kill its Tammany, for the saloon is the tiger. The evils of too easy naturalization were pointed out, and he urged the pulpit and that part of the press which is not afraid of the foreign vote to create such a public sentiment as will remedy this as well as all the other ills of government in this age."

MORAL SUASION.

The Michigan State legislature has just passed a law styled the "Anti-treating Law," which makes it unlawful for any person to buy liquor for another, or to give it to him or to treat him to an alcoholic beverage in any way. The News Record comments on the new law as follows:

In theory the law meditates a change which ought to have been encompassed by measures of social reform. The treating custom is peculiarly American, and to its prevalence this country is indebted for part of the malign effect of the liquor traffic. Why the desire of one man to take a drink should be made the occasion of a "round" of drinks for as many other men within speaking distance as the man may happen to know is a mystery which a large number of foreign visitors have never solved. No doubt, but for the fact that it is the custom the drinking men themselves would as lief abandon the practice. To treat involves a tacit obligation to "treat back," the result being that each man of any party of drinkers has to burden himself with as many drinks as there are men in the party or else risk being regarded as discourteous.

The difficulty with the Michigan law is that it aims to reform by public legislation a custom which cannot be reached except through a social reform. The authorities can hardly expect to enforce the law. Given a man anxious to treat and another man possessed of a sufficient thirst, and it will be hard to prevent the two from coming to some basis of negotiation.

The doctrine that moral suasion should be used we all agree to; but that moral suasion without legal suasion is inoperative is plainly shown by experience. And the statement that "the authorities can hardly expect to enforce the law" is a mild and kind way of saying that the liquor traffic is a concern that defies law and it had better be let alone. No one doubts that the liquor business is a lawless and wicked business; but that so far from being a reason for not passing laws for its suppression is a reason for faithful legislation. With Christ's promise, "Every tree that beareth not good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire".... "the crooked shall be made straight and the rough ways shall be made smooth; and all flesh shall see the salvation of God."

"To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—We are sorry to hear that Rev. A. M. Milligan has offered his resignation as pastor of Jordon's Grove U. P. congregation. He was an active man in our reform work, and if he leaves southern Illinois will be much missed from that field.

—Dr. H. H. George has been lecturing at various points in and around Denver, arranging for a National Reform convention, which met in that city on the 3d and 4th. The questions discussed were Labor, Temperance, Education, the Sabbath and Marriage.

—H. G. Hanson, of Claytonville, cheered us with a call and liberal contribution to the cause last Wednesday. He has long been a standard-bearer in the Cissina Park U. B. church, and held that congregation steady on the old battle-line of anti secrecy during the recent conflict of that body with liberalism.

—Rev. J. D. Nutting is doing important missionary work by building up a Congregational church in Salt Lake City, almost in the shadow of the great Mormon Temple. Our first acquaintance with Bro. Nutting was in '78, when he was publishing an anti-secret paper, the American Freeman, at Albany, Mo.

—Rev. D. B. Willson, D. D., professor of theology in the Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Allegheny, Pa., made the Cynosure office a friendly visit last Thursday. He has for many years been one of the editors of the Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter. He is a radical leader in the church and a strong friend of our movement.

—We notice that Bro. B. Baldwin and wife, of the U. B. church, with whom we had the pleasure of laboring in the Gospel at Petoskey, Mich., last summer, have recently held a successful revival in a barn on Mill Creek circuit. They were locked out of the U. B. church by the liberals, and so had to resort to the barn. But even those who locked them out were being converted at their meetings.

—We are sorry that Rev. D. S. Kennedy, D. D., has been compelled to cease preaching for a time because of throat trouble. He is one of the strong men of the U. P. church. While he was pastor at Somonauk we visited him twice in the interests of reform and to no pulpit in his denomination did we receive a more cordial welcome. We are glad he has removed to Chicago, and that he has been appointed to an important municipal office. It indicates that the spirit of reform in Chicago officials is not yet dead.

—Rev. E. Hildreth, corporate member of the N. C. A., and son-in-law of Philo Carpenter, whose wise gift furnished the headquarters for this reform, is spending some time in Boston, and of course is more or less in touch with Secretary Stoddard, with whom he used to labor in Chicago. Mr. Hildreth contributed generously to the first edition of "Danger Signals." Bro. J. P. Stoddard writes that he shall have another booklet out by and by—"Danger Signals No. 2." He hopes also to return to Vermont soon and to have W. B. Stoddard with him.

—Rev. W. W. McMillen died at 9 o'clock on the morning of April 26, at his home in Olathe, Kan. Rev. C. D. Trumbull and Rev. D. H. Coulter conducted the funeral service on the 27th. Friends of the anti-secret cause in the West remember him as one of the most devoted and untiring workers in our conventions in years past. In his death the cause has suffered a great loss. May God raise up others who will take up the mantle he has laid down. He was a graduate of Bloomington, Ind., University and served a long and faithful pastorate over the Covenanter church in Olathe.

—T. H. Gault, Esq., elder in our First church, Chicago, is the attorney for the Society for the Prevention of Crime. He had been in court conducting successfully a case for the destruction of gambling machinery, and while the officers were demolishing the machine he started to his office. A crowd had been attracted on the streets, and a sneaking fellow came up behind the elder with a club and struck him heavily on the head. He followed this quickly with another blow, and when Mr. Gault turned to seize the fellow, he was running. After the surprise of the unexpected blows, Mr. Gault was not able to seize him. The blood that flowed from Mr. Gault's wounds was genuine United Presbyterian blood, with a little dash of the Cameronian in it. Mr. Gault's silk hat saved him from the full effects of the assassin's blow. He was at church next morning with a new hat, and ready to continue the crusade against crime. The pastor and people united in thanking God for their brother's preservation.—U. P.

JASPER J. TUCKER, S. S.

It is common to-day to have a title. Mine is S. S.—"saved sinner." I have thought for some time that it would be to the glory of God for me to put my experience with Freemasonry in print, that others my keep out of the trouble which I got into.

In the fall of 1867 I was living in the township of Hanover, Jackson county, Michigan, about five miles from my present home in Spring Arbor. I was not satisfied with my condition; and taking in the fact that many of those that held offices under our government and prominent places in society were members of the order, and that it also included preachers of the Gospel of the Son of God, I was led to form a good opinion of Freemasonry and sent my name in to Concord Lodge No. 30, and was accepted.

A Freemason who was a member of a church in that village came to notify me of the night when I was to take the first degree. He told me not to say anything about it to my neighbor who lived near by, who was a member of the same church with himself.

I asked, "Why?"

"Because he is very much opposed to Freemasonry."

"What is there wrong about it?"

"Nothing. It is a good, moral institution; and if it is lived up to, it is good religion."

I wanted religion, so I went to the lodge and bought seven dollars' worth, and was so sick of my bargain that I could have stopped right there, but the Freemasons said that I had to take three degrees before I got much light. So I thought I could stand what others had stood, and on I went.

I took the third degree in the spring of 1868. I had moved to my present home where the Free Methodists were holding meetings and Bro. E. Mathews was the preacher. He preached against Freemasonry, and it made me so mad that I felt like getting the Masons to help me tar and feather him, but I thank God for not permitting me to carry it out.

In 1878 the Free Methodists were holding revival meetings at Spring Arbor, and another preacher preached against Freemasonry. As I listened to him, I thought I would stay away from the meetings thereafter. I went home mad. I went to bed about ten, and about twelve God showed me my lost condition. He showed me heaven and hell. He showed me that I was trying to climb up to heaven, and all that I had to do was to stop breathing to be forever in hell. I had a name for what I saw. I called it a vision. A vision and a dream are somewhat alike, but a vision is more real. That caused me to seek after God; but I did not want the kind of religion that those Free Methodists had, for I knew if I came out under their preaching, I should have to give up Freemasonry. So I went seven miles away to another revival; but I did not get religion there, and I thought, "The Free Methodists cannot hinder me from getting religion, and when I have got it, I will join the Methodists under a Methodist preacher." But, praise the Lord, I did not get that kind of religion, but before God would pardon my sins, I had to give up Freemasonry. When the work was done, hatred toward Bro. Mathews was all gone, and I hated no one, thank God. The church I had hated so much, I now began to love. Yet I wanted to know from the Lord more definitely about Freemasonry, and took it to him in prayer. I did not know God was going to let me know, but I did believe he was able to make it clear, for he had answered my prayer so distinctly before on other things.

The next day I was in the field at work, when something seemed to say as plain as anyone could speak: "Fifty-second chapter of Isaiah." At that time I had not read Isaiah, though I had been reading my Bible in the New Testament night and morning for about two weeks at the family altar. I soon went to the house, and as I took the Bible down it opened to Isaiah, and I laughed for joy.

"Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city; for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Shake thyself from the dust; arise, sit down, O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion."

If instead of "bands" I had read rope or cable-tow I would have understood it better. I continued to pray for more light, and the Lord made me understand by his Spirit what Jesus Christ meant when he said in his Sermon on the Mount:

"Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths: but I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne: nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. NEITHER SHALT THOU SWEAR BY THY HEAD, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."

Also regarding the law as given by Moses:

"Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these. And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that."

This was proof enough to me of how God looks upon Freemasonry. Then I did not want to join any church that allowed its members to belong to any lodge, for the Bible plainly condemns them all.

Bro. Mathews, that I hated before I was converted, gave a lecture at Spring Arbor about this time against secret societies, and many Masons from the lodge of which I had been a member, and from two other adjacent lodges, were present. He spoke at considerable length, and when he had finished I confessed my sin and sanctioned what he had said. Then the Masons went for me; but praise the Lord, he had brought me to the place where I no longer feared man. If they had been there with loaded guns, I would not have feared them. God made me understand what our Lord Jesus Christ meant by his words as recorded in Luke 12: 2–5:

"For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known. Therefore, whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops. And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him."

Right here I wish to speak of some other portions of God's Word that have been helpful to me. Paul says by the Holy Ghost in Eph. 5: 11–14:

"Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret. But all things that are reproved are made manifest by the light; for whatsoever doth make manifest is light. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from [among] the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

And again, in 2 Cor. 6: 14–18:

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Shame on such preachers as belong to any lodge that God's Word condemns! Professed followers of God calling the Bible the first great light in the order! That preacher does not live who can take the whole Bible and from it sustain Freemasonry. It is a false religion, It professes to save a man in that grand lodge above.

I am glad so many have obeyed God's Word, as made plain to them by the Holy Ghost, and have come out from among the dead. May the Lord bless this testimony to the leading out of others on to the Lord's side where he can use them to the pulling down of the works of Satan, and the setting up of the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.
